£300. 10s., and the rectorial for £520 per annum. The Revs. J. H. and E. B. Sparke are lessees of the latter. The Town Estate, which has been vested in trust from an early period, comprises a farm of about 81 acres, let for £320, applied in the service of the church, and for other purposes of utility to the inhabitants, including a sum for coals distributed to the poor. The Wesleyan Chapel was built in 1835 at a cost of £600; and the Primitive Methodist Chapel in 1850, at a cost of £260. The Public School was erected a few years ago out of the Charity funds of the parish, at a cost of £1100, and is now attended by 75 girls and more than 100 boys. It is under Government inspection, and is a handsome flint building, in the early English style. Attached to it are a library and a residence for the master. In pulling down an old cottage at a place called "Gravel Pits," in this parish, in 1841, an ancient but very elegant box of yew was found in the outer clay wall, and is now in the possession of James Copeman, Esq. This curious specimen of medieval art was probably intended for a pilgrim to carry about some relic or other valuable deposit, and appears to have been attached to his girdle; the holes for the straps still remaining. On the front panel, St. James and St. John are represented, and the back panel is ornamented with foliage.

MUNDHAM, a pleasant village, $9\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. by S. of Norwich, has in its parish 282 inhabitants, and 1547A. 1R. 6P. of land, mostly the property of G. S. Kett, Esq., and lying in his manor of Dickleburgh-Manclere. Here is also a rectorial manor, belonging, with the great tithes and the advowson, to the Trustees of the Great Hospital, Norwich. (See page 233.) Jonathan Farrow, Esq., and Messrs. Edward and Henry Clarke have estates here. The Church (St. Peter) is a small fabric, consisting of nave, south porch, north aisle, chancel, and square tower with three bells. The chancel contains a piscina, and the north and south doorways are fine specimens of Norman architecture. The aisle was built in 1863, and gives 50 additional sittings. Here is an epitaph to William Harborne, who was ambassador to Queen Elizabeth. The benefice is a perpetual curacy, now in the incumbency of the Rev. John Toll Burt, M.A., of Seething. Here was another church, dedicated to St. Ethelbert, and some of its ruins are still extant. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £442. 10s. per annum, of which £125 go to the incumbent, and the remainder to the impropiators. The Poor's Allotment, 3A. 2R. 16P., was awarded at the enclosure in 1813, and is let for £10 a year. The poor have also the yearly rent-charges of 20s., left by Thomas Spooner in 1680, and 10s. left by an unknown donor. Post from Norwich, via Brooke.

SEETHING, a well-built village, $9\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. of Norwich, has in its parish 431 inhabitants, and 1571 acres of land, mostly belonging to G. S. Kett, Esq., of Brooke. The Church (St. Margaret) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and round tower with three bells. The nave is thatched, and the chancel slated. The east window was filled with stained glass in 1861, at the expense of the rector, and contains figures of three of the Apostles. The base panels of the chancel-screen were once richly gilt. The font is octagonal, and bears carvings of the seven sacraments and the baptism of our Lord. In the chancel is a piscina. The church was restored and re-seated in 1861. The living is a perpetual curacy, now in the incumbency of the Rev. John Toll Burt, M.A. The trustees of the Great Hospital, Norwich, are the patrons, and also impropiators of the great tithes, which were commuted in 1839 for £383, of which £125 a year go to the incumbent. Near the old hall is a white brick pedestal, surmounted by a crocketed pinnacle and cross, and said to stand on the site of a chapel destroyed by the Danes in A.D. 584. About 18 years ago, several human skulls and bones were dug up near it. The Fuel Allotment is 2A. 1R. 18P., awarded at the enclosure in 1814, when the old Poor's Land was exchanged for 3R. 26P.; and the rents, amounting to £10. 10s. per annum, are given in money, coal, and bread to the poor, who have also three yearly rent-charges, viz. :—£3, left by Thos. Brooke in 1674; £1. 10s., left by Thomas Spooner in 1630; and 20s., left by John Kerrison in 1753. Post from Norwich, via Brooke.

SISLAND, or Sizeland, 10 miles S.E. of Norwich, has in its parish only 76 inhabitants, and 466A. 2R. 27P., of land, belonging to various owners, and lying in the manors of Charles and Brooke. Lord Berners is lord of the former, and G. S. Kett, Esq., of the latter. The Church (St. Mary) is a small thatched fabric, comprising nave, chancel, and low wooden tower with one bell. It formerly had a north aisle, of which part of the wall is still standing. The east window is partly filled with stained glass representing the Holy Spirit, St. Peter, and St. Paul. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £126, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Hobson, B.D., who has 18 acres of glebe, a substantial white brick residence, built in 1816, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £138. 15s. The common was enclosed in 1813. The other chief residents are John Spalding, parish clerk; and Harriet Branch, John Goddard, George Knights, and Edward and Robert Tibbenham, farmers. The two last are landowners, and Osmond Clarke, Esq., has also an estate here. Post from Norwich, via Brooke.

THURTON, $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. of Norwich, has in its parish 257 inhabitants, and 771A. 3R. 28P. of land, belonging chiefly to Sir Thomas Proctor-Beauchamp, Bart., who is also lord of the manor, impropiator of the tithes, and patron of the perpetual curacy, now valued at £70 a year, and in the incumbency of the Rev. William Hobson, B.D., of Sisland. It was augmented from 1767 to 1824, with £1000 of Q.A.B. The Church (St. Ethelbert) is a small thatched fabric, consisting of nave, chancel, south porch, and square embattled tower with three bells. The north and south doorways are fine specimens of Norman architecture, and the east window is filled with beautiful stained glass, representing the Eucharist, Christ carrying the Cross, and the meeting with the Centurion. This glass was brought from Rouen Cathedral by a former Lady Beauchamp, at the time of the first French Revolution. There are fragments of stained glass in all the other windows of the church. Thurton Hall is an ancient building of Elizabethan architecture, and contains a massive oaken staircase and some finely wain-scotted rooms. The tithes have been commuted for £220 per annum. In 1707, several Roman coins were found here of Gallienus, Victorinus, Tetricus, Quintillus, &c. The Fuel Allotment, 6A. 2P., awarded at the enclosure in 1801, is let for £6 a year. The poor have also 20s. a year left by Thos. Spooner, in 1630. Post from Norwich via Bergh-Apton.

THWAITE, in a picturesque dell, 12 miles S.S.E. of Norwich, has in its parish 136 inhabitants, and 676A. 3R. 27P. of land, lying in several manors, and belonging to the Trustees of Sir W. F. F. Middleton, Bart., the Executors of St. Andrew St. John, Esq., and a few smaller owners. The Church (St. Mary) was partly rebuilt of brick in 1738, and is a small building, comprising nave, chancel, and square tower with two bells. It is chiefly of early English architecture, but the south doorway is a fine specimen of the Norman style. The east window is filled with painted glass in memory of Mrs. Dreyer, wife of the late rector, and her sister, Mrs. Glover. The building was restored and reseated in 1861. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £4, is in the patronage of the Duke of Norfolk and incumbency of the Rev. Robert Cobb, B.A., of Ellingham, who has here 30 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £179, awarded in 1841. The parish clerk has 13s. a year left by unknown donors. In 1832, Harriet and Fanny Gamble gave 19 guineas each, the interest to be applied in keeping in repair the monuments of the Gamble and Solly families and the gravestone of Mr. Barnham, and the residue to be given to the poor. George Mackerell is parish clerk, and the farmers are Robert Playford, Thomas Hindle, Thos. Gower, Geo. Stores, Jas. Root, and John Appleton. Post from Bungay.

TOPCROFT, a scattered village, 12 miles S. by E. of Norwich, and 5 miles N.W. by W. of Bungay, has in its parish 418 inhabitants, and 1875A. 1R. 7P. of land, including 90A. of wood. John Isaac Hunter, Esq., owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manor, in which the copyholders pay fines certain; but Alfred Massey, Esq., Samuel N. Delph, Esq., Sir Robert Shafto Adair, Bart., and others, have estates here. The Church (St. Margaret) comprises nave, chancel, south aisle, south porch, and tower. The latter is round at the base and octagonal above, and contains three bells. The building was restored and reseated in 1861, at a cost of £750, and contains 260 sittings. The seats are open benches, and the pulpit and reading desk are of oak. Here are tablets of the Smyth, Cooke, Frost, and Wilton families. There are also a piscina and a small organ. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 13s. 4d., is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich. The Rev. Edward Wilson is the non-resident incumbent, and has here 48 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £411, awarded in 1839. The Rectory House is occupied by the curate. The Independent Chapel is a neat brick building, which was rebuilt in 1850, and is under the ministry of the Rev. Frederick S. Basden, of Denton. It is also used as a British School, and attended by 50 children. The National School was built in 1847, and has about 40 scholars. The poor have 1A. 2R. allotted at the enclosure in 1807, and 3A. left by Robert Goodwin, in 1659. The rents amount to £18 a year.

WOODTON, a pleasant village, 10 miles S. by E. of Norwich, and 5 miles N.W. by N. of Bungay, has in its parish 531 inhabitants, and 2124A.

2R. 8P. of fertile land, belonging to several proprietors—the largest of whom are Robert Fellowes, G. S. Howman, and C. W. Unthank, Esqrs. The Hall, which was long a seat of the Suckling family, was pulled down about 25 years ago. The Church (All Saints) is chiefly in the early decorated style, and comprises nave, chancel, south aisle, north porch, and tower. The latter contains six bells, and is round at the base and octagonal above. Here is a curious alms-box on which is the date 1691. In the chancel is a piscina, and also a monument with a kneeling marble effigy of Anne, wife of Robert Suckling, Esq., who died in 1653. Here are also several tablets of the Suckling, Bone, and Yellooly families. The east window contains fragments of painted glass. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., is in the gift of King's College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Richard Waldegrave Packer, M.A., who has a good residence, built in 1832. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £621 per annum, and the glebe is 24A. The Town Lands, which have been vested from an early period, for the repairs of the church, &c., consist of 10A. 1R. 29P. in Brooke, let for £13; and 26A. 3R. 8P. in Woodton, let for £23. The latter was received in exchange at the enclosure in 1814. Here is a Wesleyan Chapel, built in 1836. In 1705, Henry Moyse left for the relief of the poor at Woodton, a house, barn, stable, and 20A. of land at Ellingham, now let for £45 a year, which is distributed in bread and money at the church. The poor have also two yearly rent-charges, viz.:—6s. left by Nicholas Wilton, in 1665; and 10s. left by one Bardwell, out of land at Geldeston. Post from Bungay.

HENSTEAD HUNDRED

Is skirted on the north by the river Yare, and on the west by the river Tas. It is about nine miles in length, and varies from six to three miles in breadth; being bounded, on the north, by Blofield; on the east by Loddon and part of Clavering; on the south by Depwade; and on the west by Humbleyard Hundred, and the south of the city of Norwich. The Great Eastern Railway crosses its north-western corner at Trowse, where there is a station; and two branches of the same railway run parallel with its northern and western boundaries, but in the adjoining hundreds. Near the centre of it was formerly an extensive heath; but it was enclosed under an Act passed in 1800, and the whole Hundred is now in a high state of cultivation. It was possessed by the Crown, until granted out to the Priory of Norwich, and the families of Clavering, Cornwallis, &c. Its Petty Sessions are held at the Rummer Inn, Stoke Holy Cross, every alternate Friday; and George Elward Simpson, Esq., of Norwich, is clerk to the magistrates, and also to the commissioners of taxes for this Hundred. The following enumeration of its 20 parishes shows their population in 1861; the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the county rate in 1843, and their territorial extent in assessable acres.

+ Great and Little Poringland are united for the support of the poor.

* Those parishes marked thus * are in the Liberty of the Duke of Norfolk.

HENSTEAD UNION comprises 37 parishes, embracing the whole of Humbleyard and Henstead Hundreds, except Yelverton, which is in Loddon and Clavering Union. It extends over an area of 65 square miles, and had 11,290 inhabitants in 1861, consisting of 5608 males and 5682 females, living in 2430 houses; besides which there were 107 empty houses and four building when the census was taken. The average annual expenditure of the 37 parishes from 1832 to 1835 was £10,231. In 1838 it was £8880; in 1839, £6931; in 1840, £5118; and in 1842, £4784. In 1862, their expenditure, solely on the in and out poor, was £5785, and their total expenditure £7334. The UNION WORKHOUSE is at Swainsthorpe, in Humbleyard Hundred, and was built in 1835, at a cost of £6200, and was enlarged in 1858. It has room for 250 inmates, but had only 73 when the census was taken in 1861. George Elward Simpson, Esq., of Norwich, is union clerk; Mr. James Oxley Turner, is superintendent registrar and master of the Workhouse; the Rev. John Bailey, M.A., of Stoke Holy Cross, is chaplain; and Mrs. Sarah Turner, matron. Mr. Ezra Parr, of Swardeston, is registrar of marriages for the whole union; and he and Mr. Thos. Buttifant are the relieving officers and registrars of births and deaths; the former for Humbleyard and the latter for Henstead district. The union surgeons are F. W. Merry, A. M. F. Morgan, Chas. Drake, and John B. Pitt, Esqrs.

ARMINGHALL parish, 3 miles S.E. of Norwich, has only 75 inhabitants, and 609 acres of land, of which 330A. belong to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, the lords of the manor, appropriators of the tithes, and patrons of the perpetual curacy, which was certified at £80, and augmented from 1780 to 1810 with £600 of royal bounty. It is now worth £20 a year, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Farmery Pridham Epworth Luscombe, B.A., of Norwich. The tithes have been commuted for £229 a year. The Church Virgin Mary) is a small dilapidated structure, comprising nave, chancel, and square tower with one bell. The walls, the north and south doorways, and several of the windows are early English, but the east window is a perpendicular insertion, and the tower is decorated. There is a low side window on the south side of the chancel, and near the north door is the holy water stoup. Some of the old open seats with richly carved heads, still remain; and here is also a piscina. A large marble tablet, dated 1697, records the death of Maria Herne, whose family was long seated at the Hall, a curious Elizabethan house of timber and moulded brick, with sunk panels, pillars, &c., of that period. Cotman mentions a tradition that some of the materials of this house were brought from Carrow Abbey. The entrance doorway of the porch is of rich decorated character, with two figures in niches on each side, having ogee canopies, pinnacles, crockets, and finials. Another doorway at the back has very bold foliage of the vine sculptured in the jambs; the lintel is of wood, carved in imitation of the stonework: there is similar foliage in the large doorway. The doorway under the porch is perpendicular, with the original oak door, having carved upon it "Pray for the soul of William Ely, 1487." Over this doorway is a sunk panel filled with sculpture representing the disobedient prophet pulled off his ass by a lion. This house is now the property of F. N. Primrose, Esq., and is occupied by a farm bailiff. The Manor House, a large ancient building, partly surrounded by a moat, is now a farm house. In 1722, Francis Herne charged a tenement here with £2 per annum for the poor, who have also an allotment of 2A. 1R. 25P., let for £7. 12s. 6d. per annum. A yearly rent of 20s. out of a gravel pit is applied towards the repair of the roads. The chief residents are—George Sheldrake, gardener; Robert Saul, blacksmith; Wm. Hagon Spinks, parish clerk; and Geo. Wm. Parker, and Edward Waters (Manor House), farmers. Post from Norwich, via Framingham.

BIXLEY parish, 2½ miles S.S.W. of Norwich, has 161 inhabitants, and 639 acres of land, of which 160 acres belong to the Corporation of Norwich, and nearly all the rest to Francis Neal Primrose, Esq., the lord of the manor. Bixley Hall, a handsome mansion with three fronts, is now occupied by Mrs. Martin. The Church (St. Wandragesilius the Abbot) was built by Wm. de Dunwich, in 1272, and is a small plain building, comprising nave and chancel under one roof, and a western tower with one bell. Most of the windows and the south door are early-English, but the east window and some others are perpendicular insertions, and the tower is of the same date. Here is a fine marble monument to Susan, Countess of Rosebery, who died in 1771. Here are also several fine monuments of the Ward family: one of them, dated 1583, represents Edward Ward, Esq., his wife, and nine sons and three daughters. The church was restored in 1863, and fitted with open seats, pulpit, reading desk, lectern, and chancel screen of oak; and a neat stained-glass window was placed in the south wall of the nave by Samuel Base, Esq., at a cost of £35. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £5, and now at £600, with that of Framingham-Earl annexed to it, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Charles David Brereton, M.A., who has here 25A. of glebe. The chief residents are—Samuel Base, Esq., Lodge; Charles Clare and Sons, millers; Mrs. Martin, Hall; Mr. James Sowter; John Sowter, gardener; James Moggs, farmer; and Robert Stroyen, farmer and cattle dealer, Park farm. Post from Norwich, via Framingham.

BRAMERTON, a small village and parish, 4½ miles S.E. by E. of Norwich, has 229 inhabitants, and 728A. 3R. 29P. of land, belonging to J. J. Blake, Esq., Mrs. Miller, J. N. Waite, Esq., and several other proprietors. The Hall, which was the seat of the Corys from 1400 to the middle of the last century, is now the property of J. J. Blake, Esq., but is occupied by Mrs. Sophia Blake. Hill House, the seat and property of Wm. Wilde, Esq., is a pretty building in the Tudor style, situated on an eminence above the river Yare, and commanding an extensive view. The Church (St. Peter) was rebuilt in 1462, and is now in the decorated style. It comprises nave, chancel, north transept, south porch, and square tower with one bell. The north window of the chancel contains some modern stained glass; and here is a mural tablet in memory of the late John Blake, Esq., whose widow and son built the transept in 1860, at a cost of £200. An organ was bought by subscription in 1861, at a cost of £60. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6, and now at £258 a year, is in the patronage of Robt. Fellowes, Esq., and in the incumbency of the Rev. Edmund Blake, M.A., who has a handsome brick residence, built in 1839, at a cost of £1400. Here are about 22 acres of glebe. The National School, a neat brick building, which was erected in 1853, by the late J. Blake, Esq., is attended by about 50 children. The town land, 5A. 2R. 20P., is let for £6, which is distributed in coals. This parish has £5 every fifth year, for apprentice fees, and 20s. yearly for the poor, from Cock's Charity. (See Hillington.) In 1711, the Rev. Wm. Berney left £100 for schooling poor children, but the interest has not been paid since the death of Sir John Berney.

CAISTER ST. EDMUND, or Caister-next-Norwich, is now a small village of detached dwellings, on the east side of the river Tas, Taes, or Tesse, 3 miles S. of Norwich. Its parish contains 162 inhabitants, and 1020A. of land, nearly all the property of Mrs. Harriet Dashwood, who has a neat mansion here, and is lady of the manor and patroness of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £9, and is now worth £461 per annum, with that of Merks hall annexed to it. The Rev. John Arthy, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a commodious Rectory House, with pleasant grounds. The Church, dedicated to St. Edmund, king and martyr, stands within the walls of the Roman camp, and is a small edifice of mixed styles, comprising nave, chancel, north porch, and square tower with three bells. The chancel has early-English lancet windows and a low side window, but the east window and the chancel arch are perpendicular, and the windows of the nave are insertions of the same period. The doorways are decorated: the north one has good mouldings, the hood mould terminated by heads with the costume of Edward III.: the south is bricked up. The tower is also of the fourteenth century, with plain windows of two lights. The font is a rich specimen of perpendicular work, panelled, and bearing on its eight sides the emblems of the Holy Trinity and the four Evangelists, the instruments of the Passion, and the arms of the East Angles, West Saxons, and Bury Abbey. It stands on two steps, the top one panelled; and is said to have been made by Richard de Castre, a native of this parish, who was vicar of St. Stephen's, Norwich, from 1402 till his death in 1419, and was so beloved by the people that pilgrimages were made to his grave. The upper part of the east window is bricked up, but the windows of the nave and belfry have been recently restored by Mrs. Dashwood, at a cost of £70. Some of the old seats remain, with curiously carved heads, and here are tablets of the Dashwood, Warren, and Arthy families. Caister, though now an inconsiderable village, is said by some antiquaries to have been at an early period the most flourishing city of the Britons, if not the residence of the Icenian kings. The Romans built a fortress here, and doubtless this was one of their most important stations; but it has never been conclusively settled whether this or Norwich was the Venta Icenorum, though the evidence appears more in favour of the latter place. No remains or foundations of ancient buildings have ever been found beyond the bounds of the camp, so that it is probable the Romans merely erected here a castrum-stativum or fortress, such as they usually erected after conquest for the use of their garrison and colony, and that Norwich was the Venta, or city of the Britons, being a position marked by nature for the stronghold of a people less advanced in the art of war than the Romans, who often chose a situation abounding in good water in preference to one of natural strength, relying for protection on their walls and military discipline. The Caister camp was deserted after the departure of the Romans in 446, and its ruined walls appear to have furnished a valuable supply of building materials for Norwich. (See page 145.) Though the walls are gone, sufficient vestiges still remain to show the shape and military characteristics of this once formidable fortress, which occupied an area of nearly 35 acres, about a furlong south-west of the village, and having a gentle descent to the Tas or Taes, where that river formerly joined the great estuary into which the Wensum, the Taes, and the Yare discharged themselves in the time of the Romans. The encampment is in the form of a parallelogram with the corners rounded off, like those of Burgh and Dorchester, and consists of a single fosse and vallum. It was also surrounded by a strong wall, as an additional rampart, built upon the vallum. The interior area occupies 27 acres, by which it appears that this station was of greater magnitude than any other in this part of England, being capable of containing 6000 men. The north, east, and south sides exhibit large banks, raised from a fosse of considerable depth, and the west side has one formed on the margin of the river. In these are the foundations of four gates, the principal of which was the porta prætoriana. At each corner was a raised mound, on which stood bastion towers. The fosse and vallum in some parts are 140 feet wide, and in others not more than 90. On the margin of the river is the foundation of a massive solid tower, composed of layers of Roman tiles and flints, embedded in a strong cement. Within the area of the camp, near the south-east corner, stands the parish church, which is evidently constructed partly with the ruins of the rampart walls, as it exhibits many Roman tiles, intermixed with flint. The whole is now cultivated. Many Roman urns, coins, and other antiquities have been found at various periods. The coins, many of which are preserved at Norwich, are of various emperors, from Nero to the time of the lower empire; but they are principally of Constantine. About forty years since, the bronze figure of a satyr, and another in the shape of a foot, were found, and are supposed to have been used as lamps. In 1821, the remains of two bodies, with the teeth in a perfect state, were found on the west side of the encampment; and at the distance of more than two furlongs to the north-west, at the top of a natural elevation, four beautiful cinerary urns were dug up in 1815; and many others were afterwards discovered near the same spot. A coin of pure gold, bearing a fine impression of Nero, was picked up in a turnip field in 1844. In 1855, a small but beautifully executed bronze bust of the Emperor Geta was found in a field near the rectory; and not far from the same place a fine terra cotta fragment, representing the head of Diana, was dug up, and is an admirable specimen of Roman art. A curious object of clay, hollow within, and bearing a rude resemblance to an animal's head, was found within the camp many years since. Two horn-like projections at the top, with a hole between them, apparently for the mouth, and three holes in front for the fingers, suggested that it might be a cowherd's whistle. Four distinct and not unpleasing notes were produced by blowing into the upper aperture, and closing and opening the others with the fingers. In 1857, a Roman mirror, or speculum, was found here, of a circular form, nearly 4 inches in diameter, and having a perforated edge. Among other objects of interest discovered here are a bronze figure of Bacchus, an iron key, a bronze Phallus, several fibulæ, &c. After the Romans had left Caister, it was still regarded as a place of defence, and as such was held by Saxon and Danish kings till Edward the Confessor conferred it, with other possessions, on the abbey of St. Edmund's Bury; but the Conqueror gave it to one of his followers, and it is now in the liberty of the Duke of Norfolk, who has a paramount jurisdiction here. In 1787, the Rev. John Freeman left two old houses in Norwich for schooling poor children of Caister; but they have long since fallen down, and their site is only let for £3 per annum. The poor have the following yearly rent-charges, viz., £5. 10s. out of land at Shimpling, left by Thomas Pettus in 1618; 3s. 4d., left by Thos. Neale in 1597; and 3s. 4d. by William Middleton in 1673. They have also a Fuel Allotment of 23A. 3R. 6P., awarded at the enclosure (40 George III.), and now let for £26. 10s. a year, which is distributed in coals. In 1854, Mrs. Warren left £20 three per cent. annuities, the interest to be given in flannel to poor widows of Caister and Markshall. The chief residents are—Mrs. Harriet Dashwood, Hall; Rev. John Arthy, M.A., Rectory; John Cogman, blacksmith and parish clerk; John Sutton, carpenter and wheelwright; and Edward Dawdy (Old Hall), Thomas Norman Culling, George Hewitt, and James King, farmers. Post via Norwich.

FRAMINGHAM-EARL, a small parish of scattered dwellings, 4 miles S.E. by S. of Norwich, has only 136 inhabitants, and 611A. of land, belonging to several proprietors, the largest of whom is G. B. L. Knight, Esq., who has a neat mansion here, with a woody lawn; but the Earl of Rosebery is lord of the manor. Mr. Knight's estate belonged to the late eminent Edward Rigby, M.D., who died in 1822, after practising as a surgeon in Norwich since 1769, and publishing several excellent medical works. The Church (St. Andrew) is a small edifice of very early character, with several curious features, and comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and round tower with one bell. The chancel has a decorated east window and a piscina, and in its north and south walls are two small round windows, not more than nine inches in diameter, widely splayed both within and without. In unblocking one of these in 1853 a portion of a wooden frame, pierced with eyelet holes in different directions, was found, and appeared to have been used for the purpose of affixing some kind of lacing as a substitute for glass. The chancel arch is of good Norman work, enriched on the west side with zig-zags and the embattled moulding, and having squints on each side, cut through to the floor. The nave has a plain round-headed window on each side, splayed within and without. The doorways are Norman; the south door small and narrow with a rich head and imposts, one covered with the star ornament, the other with the billet and cable. The north doorway is larger than the south, the arch moulds ornamented with the billet, and the imposts enriched with the star ornament. The tower has a conical roof and small round-headed windows, and in the porch is a holy water stoup. In 1859, the building was re-roofed and well restored by the late rector, at a cost of about £600. This church is thought by many to be of Saxon foundation. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £3. 6s. 8d., and consolidated with Bixley, as noticed at page 497. The glebe here is 12A., and the tithes were commuted for £137 per annum at the enclosure in 1800, when a Fuel Allotment of 13A. 25P. was awarded to the poor, and is now let for £20 a year. A National School for Framingham-Earl and neighbourhood was built in 1841 at a cost of £300, and is now attended by about 65 children. The chief residents are—Geo. Blyth, gardener; Kimuel Blyth, parish clerk; Rev. Chas. David Brereton, M.A., rector of Bixley-cum-Framingham-Earl, Rectory; Josiah and Mary Chaplin, teachers, National School; Robt. Coleman, vict., Railway Inn; John Gedge, gardener; Benj. Goodrum, blacksmith; George Browne Leak Knight, Esq.; Christopher Rudderham, pork butcher; Walter Wright and Son, plumbers, &c.; and John Spruce and James Waits, farmers. Post Office at J. Chaplin's. Letters despatched, via Norwich, at 5.40 p.m.

FRAMINGHAM-PIGOT, a small scattered village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. by S. of Norwich, has in its parish 312 inhabitants and 630 acres of land. The Bishop of Norwich is lord of the manor, which was given by Roger Bigod, Earl of Norfolk, to the Pigot or Picot family. Framingham House, a handsome residence of brick, with Ancaster stone dressings, built in 1863, and surrounded by well-wooded grounds, is a good specimen of Tudor architecture, and is the seat of George Henry Christie, Esq., who has rebuilt most of the neighbouring cottages in a handsome manner. The Hall, a large mansion, on an eminence commanding one of the most extensive and varied prospects in the county, is now the seat of Charles Jecks, Esq., having been purchased by him in 1848, and since considerably enlarged and improved. Its extensive sylvan grounds contain a fine avenue of beeches. The Church (St. Andrew) has recently been entirely rebuilt by G. H. Christie, Esq., at a cost of £4,500, and is an elegant building of flint with stone dressings, in the decorated style, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, western doorway, and tower. The latter is at the north-west angle, and has an octagon lantern, surmounted by a broach spire rising to the height of 114 feet and forming a beautiful feature in the landscape. It contains three bells. The shafts of the doorways are of polished Cornish marble, and over the west door is a beautiful piece of sculpture, representing St. Andrew. The seats are open, and of handsomely carved oak; and the organ is placed under the tower, where there is a richly carved stone screen. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £3. 6s. 8d., in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich and incumbency of the Rev. William Henry Plume, B.A., who has a good residence, built in 1844 at a cost of £900. The glebe is 24A., and the tithes were commuted in 1842 for £221. 17s. 6d. A new School, in the Tudor style, was built on the glebe land, in 1859, by G. H. Christie, Esq., at a cost of £350, and is attended by about 50 children. Here is a Baptist Chapel, built in 1808. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1800, is 7A. 3R. 2P. let for £15 a year. Post from Norwich.

HOLVERSTONE, 5 miles S.E. by E. of Norwich, has in its parish only 28 inhabitants, and 345 acres of land, mostly belonging to Jno. Marcon, Esq. of Swaffham, and all in one farm, occupied by Jesse Andrews. The Church (St. Mary) was dilapidated some centuries ago, and no traces of it are now extant. The rectory is in two medieties, united to Rockland Saint Mary and Burgh-Apton. A small rent-charge is paid in lieu of tithes. Post from Norwich via Framingham.

KIRBY-BEDON, a village on an acclivity overlooking the vale of the Wensum, 3 miles S.E. of Norwich, has in its parish 277 inhabitants, and 1363 acres of land. Robert John Harvey Harvey, Esq., is lord of the manor, and owner of a great part of the soil, and the rest belongs to J. W. Woolsey, Esq., the Rev. W. Millett, J. N. Waite, Esq., and several smaller proprietors. The Hall, which was the seat of Sir Hanson Berney, Bart., was taken down in 1841. The parish was formerly divided between two Churches, but that dedicated to St. Mary has been in ruins several centuries, though much of its walls remains. Its round tower is nearly perfect, and seems to be transition from Norman, with a decorated belfry added, with brick jambs, arches, and mullions to the windows. The original belfry windows below are early English; and the rest of the church seems to be transition from Norman to early English, but none of its windows are perfect. St. Andrew's Church is a small low thatched edifice, with nave, chancel, south porch, and tower. The latter contains three bells, and is of wood, resting upon the base of the old round tower. The south doorway is Norman, with the original oak door and ironwork, and inside it is the holy water stoup. The chancel arch is transitional Norman, and the windows are all plain perpendicular, and mostly square-headed. Here are a piscina, a good decorated font, several tablets of the Brooke, Day, and Foster families, and a monument with kneeling figures of R. Shephard and his wife, dated 1600. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 4s. 9½d., and now having £250 per annum, awarded in 1842 in lieu of tithes. The Rev. Ambrose Steward is patron, and the Rev. Edward Day, B.A., has been rector since 1821. The school is attended by about 30 children. Post via Norwich. Here is a wall letter-box, which is cleared at 5.15 p.m.

PORINGLAND (GREAT), or East Poringland, commonly called Pauling, is a pleasant village, 4½ miles S.S.E. of Norwich. It is united with Little Poringland for the support of the poor, and the two parishes contain together 510 inhabitants, and 1521 acres, of which 46 inhabitants and 623A. are in Little, and the rest in Great Poringland. The Earl of Rosebery is lord of the manor of Framingham-Earl, in which this parish is included, and the soil is held by many copyholders, subject to arbitrary fines. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, south porch, chancel, and tower with one bell. The chancel is decorated, and has recently been restored by the rector, at a cost of £150. A new east window was inserted in 1857, at a cost of £21. It contains some ancient stained glass, and has externally niches on each side, and one over it with the remains of a figure. The north and south doorways are also decorated, but the nave has a perpendicular clerestory added, with an open but plain roof. There is a stoup-niche inside the south door, and a small one in the east jamb of the priests' door. The font is octagonal, panelled, and enriched with bold sculptures of the symbols of the evangelists. The seats are open, and have poppy heads. The tower is of flint, round, and plain early English, with a small window and tower arch. The octagon belfry is a decorated addition, with stone quoins, and four windows of two lights, foliated. The nave has been lately repaved with tiles, and furnished with new seats, pulpit, and reading desk. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 2d., is in the patronage of Henry Birkbeck, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Leonard Calder Wallich, M.A., who has a good residence. The tithes were commuted for £250 a year at the enclosure in 1800, when 17A. 11p. were allotted to the poor of Great, and 12A. 2R. 1p. to the poor of Little Poringland. These allotments let for about £54 a year, which is distributed in coals. The poor have also 20s. a year, left by E. and J. Skoyles. PORINGLAND, (LITTLE) or West Poringland, is a churchless parish, adjoining East Poringland, with which it is united for the support of the poor; but it repairs its roads separately. It has only 46 inhabitants, and 622A. of land, mostly belonging to the Rev. John Holmes, the lord of the manor. The Church (St. Michael,) was dilapidated before the year 1540, and its curacy consolidated with the rectory of Howe. The tithes have been commuted for £205 a year, of which £42 go to the rector of Bixley. The farmers are John Burrell, Geo. Edwards, Chas. Hubbard, Mrs. Mary Seago, and Robt. Shorten. Post from Norwich, via Framingham.

ROCKLAND ST. MARY is a scattered village, extending from $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. by E. of Norwich, on the south side of the open vale of the Yare, near a rivulet which expands into a lake, or "broad," of 60 acres, navigable to the river. Its parish contains 476 inhabitants, and 1276A. 2R. 30P. of land, belonging to several proprietors, the largest of whom are Rt. Gilbert, sen. and jun., and Hudson Gurney, Esqs.; but Sir C. H. Rich, Bart., is lord of the principal manor. It was anciently in two parishes, called Rockland Major and Minor, or Rockland St. Mary and St. Margaret, and had two Churches in the same burial ground. St. Margaret's, which had no tower, was dilapidated several centuries ago, but part of its ruined walls still remains, covered with ivy. St. Mary's, the present parish church, is a small edifice, with nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with three bells. The windows of the nave are perpendicular and those in the chancel early English. New open seats were purchased in 1845 at a cost of £150; and here are two marble tablets of the Cook family, and a well-restored font. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and has a mediety of Holverstone rectory annexed to it, in the patronage of Queen's College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Dewe, B.D. The glebe here is 30A. 2R. 29P., and the tithes were commuted in 1841 for £412. per annum. The rectory house, a pretty Elizabethan building, was erected in 1840 at a cost of £1500. The rector has only a rent-charge of £5. 5s. from Holverstone. The parish is noted for an excellent bed of clay, of which great quantities of bricks are made. Here is a National School, built in 1840, and attended by 60 children. The Fuel Allotment, 8A. 1R. 24P., was awarded at the enclosure in 1809, and is let for about £16. The Town Land, 2A. 2R. 32P., is let for £5, which is equally divided between the church, the rector, and the poor. This parish has the yearly sum of 20s. for the poor, and £5 every third year for apprentice fees, from Cock's Charity. (See Hillington, page 488.)

property of John Steward, Esq., and all lying in his manors of Saxlingham Netherall, Overhall, and Thorpe-Hall, (fines arbitrary.) John Gordon, Esq., Miss Steward, Edw. Steward, Esq., Robt. Fellowes, Esq., and the Rev. J. L. Johnson, have estates here, and the former has a neat mansion, with a valuable collection of paintings. The Lodge, a large white brick mansion at the extreme end of the parish, adjoining the London road, is the seat and property of the Rev. J. L. Johnson, M.A., who has lately enlarged and improved it. Here is a common of 107 acres, two-thirds of which belong to this parish, and the rest to Saxlingham-Thorpe, which also includes a small part of the village. The Church (St. Mary) is an ancient and interesting structure, consisting of nave, chancel, and square tower with six bells. The chancel and parts of the nave are early English, with later alterations. In the south-west corner of the former is one of the interesting lychnoscopic lancet windows of the period, with the ancient iron framework of the casement, through which lepers, it is said, joined in the service from without. The east window is perpendicular, and all the windows in the chancel are filled with rich stained glass of great interest, much of it of early date. Those of the nave are late perpendicular insertions. The north door is, according to Mr. Bloxam, a very rare specimen of early-English woodwork. The font is of the octagonal pattern with emblems, so frequent in Norfolk churches. Here are marble monuments to the Very Rev. John Baron, D.D., Dean of Norwich, and the Ven. Archdeacon Gooch, both former rectors, the latter of whom built the Rectory House. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £13. 11s. 8d., and has annexed to it that of Saxlingham-Thorpe, in the gift of John Steward, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. S. W. King, M.A. The Rectory House is a spacious residence with pleasure grounds, and the rector possesses a fine collection of fossil remains of mam-malia found in the Cromer Forest Bed, and also remains of the Mastodon from a pit in the Norwich Crag recently found in the parish. The tithes of the two parishes were commuted in 1843, for £794. 7s. 6d. per annum, and here are about 25 acres of glebe. The School occupies a building converted to the purpose in 1855, and is attended by about 50 children. The Church Land, 8 acres, is let for £11. 17s. The Town Lands, 41A.2R.6P., have been vested from an early period for paying the tenths, fifteenths, and other charges, and are now let for £53 per annum, which is applied with the poor rates, together with £2. 2s. as part of the dividends of £105. 1s. 3d. three per cent. stock which has arisen from the sale of timber, &c. The poor have the following yearly doles, viz., £3. 12s. left by Eliz. Bayspoole, out of farms belonging to Miss Steward and Mr. Wm. Black; £2 from the gravel-pit land, 2 acres, left by the Rev. John Tuthill, in 1678; and 19s. 2d. from £31. 19s. 8d. three per cent. stock, purchased with £20, left by Wm. Tuthill, in 1676.

SAXLINGHAM-THORPE, near the river Tas, $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of Norwich, has in its parish 141 inhabitants and 465 acres of land. John Steward, Esq. is lord of the manor; but part of the soil belongs to Robt. Fellowes, Esq., the Rev. J. L. Johnson, Miss Steward, and several smaller owners. The Church (St. Mary) is an ivy-clad ruin, being dilapidated long before 1740, when the rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., was consolidated with that of Saxlingham-Nethergate. Here is a small Baptist Chapel, built about 1818. The chief residents are Robt. Lighting, baker; John Wakelin Miles, corn miller; John Sayer, gardener and beerseller; John Stevenson and Robt. Want, blacksmiths; W. Thrower, beerseller; and John and William Feltham, Wm. Meek, Wm. Reeder, and Matthew Sallitt, farmers. Post via Norwich.

SHOTTESHAM-ALL-SAINTS, or High Shottesham, is a neat scattered village, with several good houses, 6 miles S. by E. of Norwich, and has in its parish 484 inhabitants, and 1523 acres of land, nearly all belonging to Robt. Fellowes, Esq., the lord of the manor, impropiator, and patron of the vicarage, which has annexed to it the vicarages of Shottesham St. Mary and St. Botolph, and the rectory of St. Martin. The consolidated livings, valued in K.B. at £16. 13s. 4d., and now at £564 per annum, are in the incumbency of the Rev. Charles Fellowes, M.A., who has a spacious and pleasant residence. The Church (All Saints) is a neat building of perpendicular architecture, comprising nave, chancel, north porch, and square tower with five bells. Part of the ancient screen remains, and here are tablets of the Neech, Bransby, and Cooper families. The School is held in a cottage and attended by about 36 children. The parishes of High and Low Shottesham send eight paupers to the Hospital at East Greenwich, founded by the Earl of Northampton, who was born here in 1539. Each parish has £4 a year for the poor, left by Thomas Bransby, in 1730. Eliz. Bayspoole, in 1711, charged land here (belonging to the Rev. C. L. Bennett,) with the yearly payment of £3, for schooling six poor children, and £4. 12s. for the poor of this parish; and 20s. for the poor of Low Shottesham. Here are $2\frac{1}{4}$ a. of church land, and two cottages occupied by paupers.

SHOTTESHAM, (LOW) 6 miles S. of Norwich, comprises the consolidated parishes of Shottesham St. Mary, St. Martin, and St. Botolph, and has 369 inhabitants, and 1615 acres of land, exclusive of about 400 acres in Shottesham Park, the beautiful seat of Robt. Fellowes, Esq., lord of the manor, and owner of the soil. The park is well wooded, and extends down to the river Tas. The house is a handsome modern structure of brick, built on the site of the ancient hall, which was long a seat of the D'Oyley family. St. Mary's Church is a plain perpendicular structure, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. The ancient holy water stoup still remains in the porch. St. Martins' and St. Botolph's churches have been in ruins for several centuries; of the latter scarcely anything remains, but the tower and part of the walls of the former are still standing. The three benefices were consolidated with Shottesham All Saints soon after the Reformation, as noticed above; and here are 16 acres of glebe. Upwards of 1000 acres were enclosed in 1781. The poor have a share of the charities noticed above, and the dividends of £60 three per cent. stock, purchased with £50 left by Miss Ann Fellowes, in 1817. The Church Land, is 3A., let for £5. Here is a small School supported by Mrs. Fellowes, and attended by about 20 children. The chief residents are Robt. Fellowes, Esq., Shottesham Park; John Bales, bricklayer; George Boyce, plumber and glazier; Hy. Brighton, thrashing machine owner; Jas. Martin, shoemaker; John Mitchell, shopkeeper; Fredk. Smart, land agent; Mary Welley, schoolmistress; and Wm. Golder, Walter Hy. Lee (Old Hall), William Beverley Raven (Lath Green), Danl. Sayer, and John Wormoll, farmers.

STOKE-HOLY-CROSS, on the east side of the river Tas, nearly 5 miles S. of Norwich, has in its parish 446 inhabitants and 1603 acres of land. Robt. Fellowes, Esq., is lord of the manor; but Robt. John H. Harvey, Hy. Birkbeck, and R. K. Long, Esqs., and Mrs. H. Dashwood, own most of the soil, and the two former are impropiators of the great tithes. The Dean and Chapter of Norwich are patrons of the vicarage, which is now in the incumbency of the Rev. John Bailey, M.A., for whom a handsome new residence was built in 1841, at a cost of £1200. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for £211. a year. The Church is a plain building chiefly in the perpendicular style, and comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with three bells. The east window contains some fragments of stained glass, representing our Saviour, the Evangelists, &c.; and here are a double piscina and tablets of the Mann and Shearing families. The parish register dates from 1538. Outside the south wall of the nave is a curious monument to the Rev. Thos. Havers, who died in 1719, and was not only a divine, but remarkable for his skill as an operative surgeon, more particularly excelling in lithotomy, or cutting for the stone. The instruments used in this fearful operation are faithfully represented on the monument. A School with mistress's house attached, was built here in 1850 by Hy. Birkbeck, Esq., who still supports it. It is attended by about 70 children. Here is also an Orphans' Home established in 1861 and supported by the same gentleman, who resides at the Hall, a handsome brick Elizabethan mansion on a commanding eminence. A Baptist Chapel was built here about 20 years ago by Messrs. J. and J. Colman, but it is now used as a kind of Chapel of ease, evening service being performed in it every Sunday by the vicar. The Fuel Allotment, 13A. 1R. 10P., is let for £18. Petty Sessions are held at the Rummer Inn, as noticed at page 495.

SURLINGHAM, 5 miles E. by S. of Norwich, and 1 mile S. of Brundall railway station, is a pleasant village on the southern acclivities of the vale of the Yare, comprising in its parish 465 inhabitants, and 1767A. of land, exclusive of 100A. of broads and marshes, and lying chiefly in the manors of Surlingham and Surlingham Earlhams, (fines arbitrary). C. E. Tuck, Esq., is lord of the former, and Robert Fellowes, Esq., of the latter; but a great part of the soil belongs to John Rudd, Robert Pratt, and Matthias Brown, Esqrs., Sir S. Bignold, Knt., and some smaller proprietors. Hill House, the seat of Robert Pratt, Esq., is a pretty white brick residence, which has been recently enlarged and beautified. Here were formerly two Churches, St. Mary's and St. Saviour's, but the latter was dilapidated several centuries ago, and only a small part of the walls and tower remains, mantled with ivy and forming picturesque ruins. The former is a small plain structure, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle and tower. The latter contains four bells, and is round at the base and octagonal above. The porch was built in 1859, at a cost of £60. Here is a fine brass to Master John of Alnwick, dated 1460. The vicarage of St. Mary's and the curacy of St. Saviour's are consolidated, and valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d. The Bishop of Norwich is patron, and the Rev. John Scott, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £111, awarded in 1845, when the great tithes were also commuted for £309 per annum. The latter, with the glebe (36A.) belong to the Rev. Wm. Collett. A National School was built in 1837, and is attended by about 40 children. The Wesleyans meet in a room belonging to M. Brown, Esq. The Church Land,^a given by John Alnwick, in 1640, was exchanged at the enclosure in 1822, for 37A. 35P., let for £68. 3s. 6d. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, is 23A. 2R. 27P., of which 17A. are let for £16. 15s., and the rest is a morass, let for cutting sedges, and fishing. £10 are applied for schooling poor children.

TROWSE-WITH-NEWTON, or Trowse-Newton, is a parish and village on the south-east bank of the river Yare, opposite Trowse-Millgate, 1 mile S.E. of Norwich, containing 717 inhabitants, and 1126A. of land, belonging to Robert John Harvey Harvey, Esq., and the Trustees of the Great Hospital, Norwich. The former owns Trowse-Newton Hall, now a farm house, but formerly the seat of the Priors of Norwich, and occupied by the Deans after the dissolution. The Dean and Chapter of Norwich are lords of the manor, and patrons of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5, and now at £361, with that of Lakenham annexed to it. The Rev. Alfred Pownall, M.A., of Norwich, is the vicar. The tithes were commuted in 1845. The hall estate and the great tithes were purchased about two years ago by Robert John Harvey Harvey, Esq., of Brundall House, who is about to erect a new and splendid mansion at Crown Point, in this parish, instead of the present plain but spacious edifice, which was formerly the residence of Col. Money and his father, General Money. The site is almost unsurpassed for beauty, being on an eminence surrounded by fine forest trees, and commanding extensive views of the surrounding country and the picturesque vale of the Yare. The Church (St. Andrew) is a plain structure, consisting of nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell and a clock. It is of the perpendicular period of architecture, except the east window, which is decorated. Outside the east end of the church is a niche, with a Latin inscription stating that William of Kirkby (a prior) placed it there. The piscina is very large; and here are tablets of the Rumsby, Carter, and Wright families, and a brass with full length figure of the wife of Roger Dalyson, dated 1585. The National School, attended by about 65 children, is a neat flint building, erected in 1846. Here is also a British School, established in 1848, and attended by 50 children. Trowse Mills, built across the river Yare, were burnt to the water's edge in 1792, and the damage was estimated at upwards of £2000. They were subsequently rebuilt, and are chiefly in Trowse-Millgate. In 1813, died Edward Whetstone, aged 80, who was 44 years clerk of this parish, to which he gave the organ, placed in the church in 1803. A salmon trout, weighing 21 lbs. was caught here in 1816. In 1779, Samuel Cooper left £500 Old South Sea Annuities;—20s. of the dividends for the parish clerk, and the rest for the poor. This charity has been changed for a rent-charge of £5 per annum, on land belonging to R. B. Cooper, Esq. Trowse-Millgate, Carrow, and Bracondale, are hamlets in the county of the city of Norwich. (See page 243.)

WHITLINGHAM, a small churchless parish, 3 miles E. by S. of Norwich, has only 25 inhabitants, and 555 acres of land, on the south side of the river Yare. It is all included in the extensive park of Crown Point, belonging to R. J. H. Harvey, Esq., the lord of the manor, impropiator of the tithes, and patron of the sinecure curacy, which is of trifling value, and is now vacant. The Church (St. Andrew) was dilapidated about 1630, and now forms a picturesque ruin, near the verge of a lofty eminence overlooking the river. The round tower is still tolerably perfect, and has four two-light belfry windows of Norman architecture. On the top of it are two heraldic animals of large size, which have probably been brought from some neighbouring manor-house. Part of the church walls and some of its lancet-shaped windows also remain. A few years ago the fossil remains of a red deer were found in a chalk-pit near the ruins. Here was formerly a well-known tavern called Whitlingham White House, to which numerous pleasure parties resorted in fine weather to enjoy the romantic scenery and remarkable echo in its grounds; but it has recently been pulled down, and its site attached to the mansion at Crown Point. A rent-charge of 20s. a year is paid by this parish to the rector of Kirby Bedon.

YELVERTON, on a bold acclivity, 5½ miles S.E. by E. of Norwich, has in its parish 59 inhabitants and 529 acres of land. The Earl of Rosebery is lord of the manor, but most of the soil belongs to Sir John Playter's Trustees. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a plain fabric, comprising nave with clerestory, south aisle, south porch, chancel, and square tower with three bells. It is in the decorated style, but the east and west windows are modern perpendicular insertions. The chancel contains a piscina, and there is another at the east end of the south aisle, which has evidently been a lady-chapel. The lower part of the chancel screen still remains, and its panels bear paintings of saints. The font is decorated, but on Norman pillars. Here are tablets to the memory of the Playter, Nichols, Day, Bawtree, and Crabtree families, and a marble monument to H. Rant, Esq., dated 1661. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, and now at £498, with that of Alington annexed to it, is in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Postle, B.A., who has here a good Rectory House, which was enlarged in 1838. Till the poor law act came into operation Yelverton and Alington were united for the support of their poor, but they are now connected only in ecclesiastical affairs. The Church Land is 1A. 17P., let for £3. 15s. At the enclosure of the heath under an act of the 41st of George III, a Fuel Allotment of 4A. 26P. was awarded to the poor, and is let for £8. 6s. In 1698, Mrs. Ann Rant left £200 to be laid out in land—one-half of the rent for the rector, and the other moiety for the poor of Yelverton and Alington. The land purchased with this legacy is 21A. 1R. 35P. in Kirby-Cane, called Lechmere Lands, and now let for £30 a year. The children of this parish attend the school at Alington. Most of the parish is farmed by farmers living in the surrounding parishes, and the chief residents are—the Rev. Edward Postle, B.A., Rectory; Jeremiah Nobbs, pork butcher; Chas Sheldrake, shopkeeper and wheelwright; John Smith, farmer; and John Whitmore, shoemaker. Post from Norwich, via Framingham.

HUMBLEYARD HUNDRED

Is a fertile and well-wooded district, about 8 miles in length, and 6 in breadth, bounded on the north by the County of the City of Norwich, and Forehoe Hundred; on the west by the latter; on the south by Depwade; and on the east by Henstead Hundred. It is crossed by two branches of the Great Eastern Railway and by four excellent turnpike roads, and forms the Deanery of Humbleyard, in the Archdeaconry of Norfolk. Its Petty Sessions are held on the first and third Mondays of every month: on the former day, at the Queen's Head, Hethersett; and on the latter day, at the World's End, Mulbarton. George Elward Simpson, Esq., of Norwich, is clerk to the magistrates. The following enumeration of the 19 parishes of Humbleyard shews their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate, in 1843, and their territorial extent in assessable acres:—

BRACON-ASH, 6 miles S.W. of Norwich, has in its parish 271 inhabitants, and 958 acres of fertile land, mostly the property of the Rev. Thomas Berney, M.A., and the Rev. Sir William Robert Kemp, Bart. The former resides at the Hall, a spacious brick mansion, standing on the site of a much older building which Queen Elizabeth is said to have visited, and situated in the ancient "Brakene Ashe Parke." He is lord of the manor, and patron and incumbent of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £10, and has now a yearly rent-charge of £243. 8s., awarded in 1842, in lieu of tithes. The Berney family is of great antiquity, having originally come from Bernay in Normandy, and settled prior to the Conquest in this county, where they gave name to the parish of Berney, in West Norfolk. The Church (St. Nicholas) is a neat little structure, comprising nave, chancel, south aisle, north porch, and bellcot with one bell. It is mostly of the decorated period, but the south aisle and the columns between the nave and aisle are perpendicular. The piscina and chancel-screen still remain, and here are also a vault of the Berney family, and a tablet dated 1694, to Wm. Bedingfield. The parish register commences in 1563. Archbishop Tenison held this living for a short time, and resigned it in 1662. The School occupies a neat building erected in 1846 by the late Miss Berney, and is attended by 30 children. A pack of hounds, called the Bracon-Ash Harriers, is kept here by G. W. F. Loftus, Esq., who resides at Bracon Lodge, a handsome modern brick mansion with pleasant grounds, about half a mile east of the village. A house and garden, left by Anne Woode in 1720, are let for £2 a year, which is divided amongst four poor aged widows. The village stands in an elevated situation, and its air is pure and bracing.

CARLTON (EAST) 5 miles S.W. by S. of Norwich, has in its parish 244 inhabitants and 1213A. of land. Sir J. P. Boileau, Bart., John Steward, Esq., Edward Freestone, Esq., and the Executors of the late I. Jermy, Esq., own most of the soil; but the Norwich Charity Trustees are lords of the manor of East Carlton-with-Hethel, which they hold by the service of carrying yearly to the "royal household" 24 herring-pies, but none have been presented since 1834. (See page 172.) Here is another manor, called Carlton-Curzon and Peverels, of which John Steward, Esq., is lord. East Carlton was anciently two parishes, and had two churches, standing within 50 yards of each other; but St. Peter's was dilapidated in 1550, and only a few fragments of it now remain. St. Mary's is a small edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and low square tower. The latter contains one bell, and is surmounted by a wooden spire. The interior of the building is very plain; many of the windows have been bricked up, but those remaining are lancet-shaped. The chancel contains sedilia and a piscina, and there is another piscina at the east end of the aisle. Here are tablets of the Coppin and Steward families. The two rectories are now consolidated, and were valued in K.B., the former at £6, and the latter at £4 per annum. They are in the alternate patronage of the Lord Chancellor and the Norwich Charity Trustees. The Rev. James John Cumming, M.A., of Bracon-Ash, is the incumbent, and has a yearly tithe rent-charge of £315, awarded in 1851. Post via Norwich.

COLNEY, on the river Yare, 3 miles W. of Norwich, has in its parish 84 inhabitants, and 948A. 0R. 21P. of land, belonging to Joseph Scott, Esq., of Colney Hall, a large and handsome modern mansion, on a commanding eminence in a well-wooded park of 70 acres. Mr. Scott is also lord of the manor, and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Edward Postle, B.A., of Yelverton, for whom the Rev. John Hervey Payne, B.A., officiates. The glebe is 38a., and the tithes were commuted in 1840 for £229 a year. The Rectory House is a commodious residence, occupied by the curate. The Church (Saint Andrew) is a neat flint building, comprising nave, chancel, and round tower with two bells. It is in the early-decorated style of architecture, but the east window is of the perpendicular period, and was filled with beautiful stained glass about twelve years ago, at the expense of the rector. In the chancel are tablets of the Scott, Gibson, and Browne families, and an altar tomb to the memory of Wm. Tomson, Esq., who died in 1575. The font has been beautifully restored. A School is supported by the lord of the manor.

CRINGLEFORD, 2½ miles S.W. of Norwich, is a small village of neat houses, with a large corn-mill and a good bridge on the river Yare, and comprises in its parish 205 inhabitants, and 981 acres of land, belonging to the trustees of St. Giles' Hospital, Norwich, J. H. Gurney, Esq., M.P., Alfred Massey, Esq., and others, but the former are lords of the manor, impropiators of the tithes, and patrons of the perpetual curacy, valued at £100 a year, and now in the incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Dunn. The Parsonage House was formed, about twelve years ago, by enlarging an old building near the church, called the "priests' chamber." This was further enlarged and improved by the present incumbent in 1862. The Church (St. Peter) is a neat building, comprising nave, chancel, and square tower with three bells. It is of perpendicular architecture, except the east window, which is decorated, and was inserted in 1859, when the whole building was repaired at a total cost of £127. Here is a remarkably fine font, which has been well restored. The living was a rectory till Sir Alexander de Vaux sold it to Bishop Suffield, who appropriated it to St. Giles' Hospital. The village was totally consumed by fire in Elizabeth's reign, and an act was passed for its re-edification in 1581. In the parish stood a free chapel, dedicated to St. Etheldred; but it went to decay soon after the Reformation. The mill occupies the site of one of great antiquity; and in the low meadows behind it, at a depth of two feet, is a regular stratum of small shells. Stags' horns have likewise been found; and in 1795, on removing a mound of earth, about a furlong east of the hall, a great quantity of human bones was discovered, apparently thrown together in confusion at some visitation of the plague. The tithes have been commuted for £285. 16s. 3d. per annum. The School, with master's house adjoining, was built in 1858, at a cost of £700. It is supported by subscription, and attended by 112 children. Cringleford Hall, a spacious building surrounded by well-wooded grounds, is now the Rectory House of Intwood-with-Keswick, and is at present occupied by the curate of those parishes. The Grove, a tasteful residence on the north-west side of the village, is the seat of Alfred Massey, Esq. Post via Norwich.

DUNSTON, on the small river Tas, 4 miles S. of Norwich, has in its parish 83 inhabitants, and 605 acres of land, all the property of Robert Kellett Long, Esq., who is also lord of the manor, impropiator of the tithes, and patron of the perpetual curacy, valued at £33 a year. The Rev. Hy. Churchman Long, B.A., of Newton-Flotman, is the present incumbent. The Church (St. Remigius) is a pretty structure consisting of nave, chancel, and square tower with pinnacles and three bells. It is chiefly in the early-decorated style, and partly perpendicular; and was thoroughly restored in 1844, principally at the expense of the patron, who inserted some handsome stained glass windows in the chancel. A brass to Clere Talbot and his two wives, dated 1649, and the fine carved oak screen still remain. A small School is supported by the lord of the manor. Nearly all the parishioners died of the plague in 1349. Dunston Hall, the seat of R. K. Long, Esq., is a fine modern brick mansion in the style of a manor-house of the 16th century, having pointed gables, ornamental chimneys, &c. It was built in 1859, and is situated in extensive and pleasant grounds. The tithes have been commuted for £194. 4s. a year. The chief residents are R. K. Long, Esq., Hall; Mr. John Fish; John Brown, bricklayer; John Dady, parish clerk; Mary Ann Stimson, schoolmistress; Hy. Gooch and Sutton Le Neve, farmers; and Jeremiah Lincoln, farm bailiff. Post via Norwich.

FLORDON, 7½ miles S. by W. of Norwich, has in its parish 163 inhabitants, and 907 acres (including a common of 33 acres) of land, mostly belonging to Thos. Brightwell, Esq., and the Rev. Sir Wm. Robt. Kemp, Bart. The latter is lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Gascoigne Fredk. Whitaker, M.A., who has a neat residence, 30A. of glebe, and a yearly rent of £291, awarded in 1845 in lieu of tithes. The Church (St. Michael) is a small plain edifice, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and belfry with one bell. Some of the windows are early English, and the rest decorated. That at the east end contains some fine old stained glass representing St. Peter. The tower fell down many years ago, and the four bells which it contained are now in the adjoining church of Tasburgh. Here is a station on that branch of the Great Eastern Railway which lies between Norwich and Ipswich. Rainthorpe Hall gives name to a small manor extending from this into the parishes of Newton-Flotman and Tasburgh, and is the seat and property of the Hon. Frederick Walpole, son of the late and brother of the present Earl of Orford. It is a fine old Elizabethan mansion, built in 1503, and situated in pleasant grounds on the west bank of the river Tas or Taes. It was purchased in 1852 by its present proprietor, who has enlarged and magnificently restored it. Most of the windows contain some curious old painted and stained glass, and the rooms are enriched with fine oak carving and antique furniture of the Elizabethan period. The drawing room is especially remarkable for its cabinets containing many rare specimens of Sèvres and Chelsea china. Here are also two splendidly carved bookcases, and a fine collection of family portraits by Kneller, Lely, and others. Mr. Walpole is author of "Five Years in the Pacific." The poor have the dividends of £173. 7s. 10d., new $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. stock, purchased with £200, left by Thos. Clabburn, in 1815. They have also 20s. a year from T. Brightwell, Esq., as the rent of an acre of land.

HETHEL, a parish of scattered houses, 7 miles S.W. by S. of Norwich, has 196 inhabitants, and 1416 acres of land. H. Gurney, Esq., and Sir J. P. Boileau, Bart., own most of the soil, and have manors here, but part of the parish is in the manor of East-Carlton-with-Hethel; and the Trustees of the Great Hospital, Norwich, have an estate in the parish. The Church (All Saints) is a singular brick building, comprising nave, chancel, north aisle, and square tower with one bell. The original windows have been replaced by common domestic ones; even that at the east end being an ordinary house window. Here is a large vault of the Bevor family, and in the porch is a holy water stoup. In the chancel is a large alabaster monument dated 1612, with recumbent effigies of Miles Branthwayte and his wife, and kneeling figures of their three children. Here are also several tablets of the same family, and one of the Finch family. The Rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, and now having 60A. 1R. 39P. of glebe, and a yearly rent of £474., awarded in 1839, in lieu of tithes, is in the patronage of John Steward, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Hy. Steward, B.A. The School is supported by H. Gurney, Esq., and is attended by about 20 children. Near the church is an ancient and wide-spreading Thorn, recorded to have stood here for more than 600 years; and it is probably much older. It measures at one foot from the base of the trunk, 12 feet 1 inch in circumference, and at five feet high, 14 feet 3 inches, whilst the circumference of the space over which its branches spread is 31 yards. Its trunk is reduced to a mere shell, and the branches are most curiously interwoven. Its bark is as hard and heavy as iron, and nearly all the interior wood is gone. It is covered with lichen and crowned with mistletoe, but still puts forth blossoms and haws everywhere yearly. Tradition says that this tree is mentioned in an old chronicle as the meeting place in an insurrection during the reign of King John. The chief residents in Hethel are Lieut. Col. John Davy Brett, Hall; Mrs. Rachel Crane; Rev. Hy. Steward, B.A., rector; Edw. Bailey, parish clerk; and the following farmers:—Jas. Claxton; Wm. Cook, Neale's farm; John Ellis, Wood farm; Saml. Gardner; and Wm. Stannard, Corporation farm. Post from Norwich.

HETHERSETT, a large, well-built and pleasant village, on the Wymondham road, 5 miles W.S.W. of Norwich, has in its parish 1169 inhabitants, 2135 acres of fertile land, and 39 acres of roads. The Trustees of the ate R. H. Gurney, Esq., Henry Back, Esq., Sir John Peter Boileau, Bart., and Mr. Benj. Baker, are the chief owners; but Jas. and Fras. Thos. Cuddon, Esqs. are lords of the manors of Hethersett-Woodhall, Hacons, Cromwells, and Canteclose, the latter which had anciently a church (All Saints), and its site is still called the old churchyard. The common and the village green were enclosed in 1800, and the parishioners claimed and obtained part of Wymondham common, because they had buried a dead man found upon it, after the parish officers had refused to inter him. The Hall, on the south side of the village, near the church, is a spacious modern mansion, lately enlarged and improved, and pleasantly situated on an eminence in a park of 60 acres. It is the seat of Hy. Back, Esq., whose family obtained the estate in 1811. Thickthorn House, another handsome residence, is the property of the Trustees of the late R. H. Gurney, Esq., and is occupied by the Misses Oxley. In this parish is the decayed "Oak of Reformation," under which Kett and his rebel band, in 1549, took a solemn oath to reform the abuses in Church and state. (See page 152.) Though hooped and screwed together, this venerable tree still vegetates. Petty Sessions are held monthly at the Queen's Head, as noticed at page 509. About a mile S. by E. of the village is a station on that branch of the Great Eastern Railway lying between Norwich and Thetford. The Church (St. Remigius) has a lofty nave with aisles, a handsome porch, and a massive square tower containing five bells and surmounted by a small incongruous wooden spire. The chancel was pulled down in 1636, but its remains are still visible, and the whole of the windows, (except that at the east end, which is of modern decorated work) have been disfigured by replacing the old mullions and tracery by a single straight mullion in the centre. The pillars separating the nave and aisles are quatrefoil, and those on the south side are considerably out of perpendicular. In the south aisle is an altar tomb of the 14th century, with effigies of Sir R. Berney and his wife; and behind it is a piscina. On the opposite side is an altar tomb of the Flowerdew family, but without effigy. In 1858 the stonework was restored, and the church refitted with open benches, oak pulpit, &c., at a cost of £1200, raised by subscription. Henry Back, Esq., and J. H. Gurney, Esq., M.P., were the largest contributors, and the former at the same time restored the belfry, recast one bell and put the others in order; and the latter restored the south porch and the two altar tombs. The rectory of Hethersett-with-Canteclose, valued in K.B. at £8, is in the gift of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Reynolds Collett, M.A., who has a spacious brick residence near the church, and a yearly rent charge of £835, awarded in 1846 in lieu of tithes. The Wesleyan Reformers have a chapel here with 250 sittings. The National School, a spacious brick building with master's house and good playground attached, was built in 1860 at a cost of £700, and is attended by 50 children. The master receives £8. 3s. 4d. yearly from £272. 8s. 8d., three per cent. consols, left by Wm. Hughes, for the education of six poor children. The old school, built in 1817, is now an Infant School, and has also about 50 children in attendance. The British School is a pretty brick building in the pointed style, erected in 1854, and attended by 40 boys and girls and 30 infants. In 1658, John Rope bequeathed property to provide clothing for the poor parishioners, now consisting of the Queen's Head public-house, a garden, and 3r. 35p. of land, let for £40 a year. In 1710, Walsingham Bokenham left to the poor, a house and 5A. 1r. 5p. of land, now let for £18., which is distributed in shirting, calico, and shoes. The poor have also divided among them yearly the dividends of £100 three per cents., left by John Corder, and of £133. 7s. 6d., new 3½ per cents., left by Henry Harman, in 1815.

INTWOOD, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. by S. of Norwich, is crossed by the railway, and has in its parish only 68 inhabitants, and 530 acres of land, all the property of Clement William Unthank, Esq., of Intwood Hall, which was built in a handsome style of architecture about 30 years ago. Here it was that Sir Thomas Gresham entertained the great Earl of Warwick, in his march against the rebel Kett, in 1549. The Church (All Saints) is a neat stone fabric, comprising nave, chancel, north and south porches, and tower. The latter is round at the base and octagonal above, and contains one bell. The building was beautifully restored in the perpendicular style in 1852, by Hudson Gurney, Esq., and the late J. S. Muskett, Esq., at a cost of £1500. The pulpit, reading desk, gallery, organ case, open benches, and other fittings are all of oak, beautifully carved, and of uniform design. In the chancel are handsome marble tablets to the memory of the late J. S. Muskett, Esq., and the wife of H. Gurney, Esq. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5, and now at £374, with that of Keswick annexed to it, is in the patronage of Clement W. Unthank, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Edmund Saul Dixon, who is non-resident. The Rev. W. C. Davie, M.A., is the curate, and occupies the Rectory House, which is situated in the parish of Cringleford. Here are 12A. 1R. 31P. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £146. Mr. Wm. Pierce occupies the Hall farm, and Henry Cannel is the parish clerk. Post from Norwich.

KESWICK, near the railway and the Yare, 3 miles S.S.W. of Norwich, has in its parish 154 inhabitants, and 722 acres of land, nearly all the property of Hudson Gurney, Esq., the lord of the manor, who occupies the New Hall, a handsome stone building with pleasant grounds, but has another residence in London. Mrs. Elizabeth Lucy Birkbeck occupies the Old Hall, which is a spacious brick mansion. The other residents are—Miles Blomfield, miller; Thomas Edwards, farmer and land agent; and Susan Hopkins, schoolmistress. The Church (All Saints) was dismantled about the end of the sixteenth century, and nothing remains but the round tower and a small part of the walls. Its rectory, valued in K.B. at £5, was at the same period consolidated with that of Intwood. The tithes of this parish have been commuted for about £228 a year. The school, with residence attached, was built and is still supported by the lord of the manor. It is attended by 40 children. POST OFFICE at John Beezer's. Letters despatched via Norwich, at 5 p.m.

KETTERINGHAM parish, $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. of Norwich, and $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by N. of Wymondham, has 198 inhabitants and 1580 acres of land. It is all the property of Sir John P. Boileau, Bart., except 180 acres belonging to the Trustees of the late I. Jermy, Esq. Hethersett station, on the Great

Eastern Railway, stands in this parish. In Domesday Book, Olf and Ketel are stated to have been the last Saxon lords of Ketteringham, the latter holding the larger share, including the church and mill. They were of the rank of the Teini, the next class to the Comites; and after the Conquest their estates passed to Roger Bigod and Ranulph Peverel, and from them to the Vaux, Vere, and other families. In 1261, the manor came by marriage to the Argentines, who made it their usual family residence; and it afterwards became the property of the Grey, Heveningham, Heron, Atkyns, and Peach families. In 1836, Ketteringham was conveyed to John Peter Boileau, Esq., of Tacolnestone Hall, who in 1838, on the Coronation of Queen Victoria, was created a baronet. He married in 1825, Lady Catherine S. Elliot, youngest daughter of the first Earl of Minto; and his son and heir, Francis George Manningham Boileau, Esq., was born in 1830. The Hall, a large and handsome castellated Tudor mansion, of ancient foundation, has been considerably enlarged and improved by its present owner, especially by the erection of a spacious Gothic Hall, fit for the hospitalities of the chivalrous ages, and occasionally the scene of magnificent entertainments. The house is richly stored with paintings, books, and choice monuments of antiquity, including a fine collection of arms and armour; and stands in a park of 200 acres, near the margin of a small lake. Sir John P. Boileau, Bart., is a Fellow of the Royal Society, President of the Norfolk Archæological Society, and a Vice-president of the Society of Antiquaries, the Zoological Society, the Statistical Society, and the Archæological Institute, &c. He is descended from an illustrious French house, one of whom fled from the persecution of the Reformed by Louis XIV. and settled at Southampton. This was Charles Boileau, Baron of Castlenau and St. Croix, a lineal descendant in an unbroken male line from Etienne Boileau, the first Grand Provost of Paris, 1250, whose descendants held honourable civil and military appointments till the time when they became Protestants. The son of Charles Boileau removed to Dublin, and was the father of the late John Peter Boileau, Esq., who went to India with his relative, General Caillard, and after filling the highest offices in the Presidency of Madras, returned to England with an ample fortune in 1780, and settled at Tacolnestone, in Norfolk. The Church (St. Peter) was founded by the Saxons, and is named in Domesday book, but no part of the original structure remains. The present building is of perpendicular architecture, and comprises nave, chancel, north porch, and low square tower with five bells. The nave was furnished with new windows, seats, pulpit, and reading desk, in 1837, at a cost of £300, raised by subscription; and in 1841, the chancel was rebuilt and a gallery erected at the sole cost of Sir J. P. Boileau, Bart. The tower suddenly fell down in July, 1608, and was rebuilt the following year. In the porch is a holy water stoup, and in the chancel a piscina. Over the altar is an old Flemish painting representing the Marriage of Cana. The perpendicular five-light east window was once entirely filled with beautiful painted glass, as a memorial of the Grey family. The principal figure in the centre was that of Sir Henry Grey, who rebuilt the chancel in 1492, but this has entirely disappeared, as has most of the painted glass in the other four compartments, though some fragments, confusedly arranged, still remain. The head of the window is nearly in its original state, and represents the Annunciation, St. George, St. Michael, St. Lawrence, Our Lord and the Virgin seated and in glory, St. Catherine, St. John Baptist, the Angel Gabriel, &c. The tomb of Sir Henry Grey, which stood in the chancel, and had brasses of himself and lady, appears to have been removed about 50 years ago. Against the south wall of the chancel is a beautiful canopied altar-monument of the 15th century, with enamelled brasses representing Sir Thomas Heveningham, his lady, and their ten children in the attitude of prayer. On the opposite wall is a monument with effigies of Sir Wm. Heveningham, his wife, and two children. He was one of the judges of Charles I., and surrendered as one of the regicides in 1660, but his life was spared. Here are several other ancient brasses, some handsome recent brasses of the Boileau family, and several fine marble monuments of the Atkins and Peach families. The font is handsomely carved and apparently of the early part of the 16th century. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6, and now at £210 a year, is in the patronage of Sir J. P. Boileau, Bart., who is also impropiator of the great tithes. The Rev. Wm. Wayte Andrew, M.A., of Hethersett, is the vicar, and has here 34 acres of glebe. The School is attended by about 40 children, and was erected in 1839, by the patron, who still supports it.

MELTON, (GREAT) $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. by S. of Norwich, has in its parish 368 inhabitants and 2477 acres of land, nearly all the property and manor of the Rev. H. E. Lombe, of Bylaugh. Melton Hall, an ancient Elizabethan mansion, built in 1611 by one of the Anguish family, commands an extensive view, and stands in a park of 100 acres, in which are some fine chestnut trees. It is now the residence of the Rev. Hy. Evans Lombe, M.A. On White Rail farm is a barn, containing a loft in which one of the Anguish family was concealed during the commonwealth. The parish had formerly two Churches, in the same graveyard; but that dedicated to All Saints was dilapidated in the 12th of Queen Anne, though much of its ruins still remains, richly mantled with ivy. It was evidently the finer of the two, and it is remarkable that it should have been suffered to fall into decay in preference to the other. St. Mary's is a plain building of late perpendicular architecture, and comprises nave, chancel, and tower. The latter is of much later date than the rest of the building, and contains three bells. The holy water stoup remains near the door. The joint rectories, each valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., are in the patronage of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Eyres, M.A., who has 20 acres of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £754. 19s. 3d. awarded in 1839, and a handsome brick residence in the Elizabethan style, erected in 1851 at a cost of £2000. The National School, a pretty Gothic structure of flint and white brick, near the Rectory, was built in 1851 by the late Chas. Lombe, Esq. It is attended by about 40 children and chiefly supported by the rector. In 1350, Henry III. granted a market and fair to his manor of Melton, but both have long been obsolete. In 1664, Richard Snelling left a close of land, at Wramplingham, charged with the yearly payment of 15 yards of cloth, worth 2s. 6d. per yard, for the poor of Great Melton. Post via Wymondham.

MELTON, (LITTLE) is a parish, lying east of the above, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. by S. of Norwich, containing 370 inhabitants, and 666 acres of land, mostly belonging to F. B. Frank, Esq., the Rev. Hy. E. Lombe, M.A., Colonel Norgate's Executors, and the Great Hospital in Norwich, the former of whom is lord of the manor. The Church (All Saints) is a neat little thatched fabric of perpendicular architecture, and comprises nave with aisles, chancel, and short square tower with three bells. It was repaired and had a handsome new west window inserted about 20 years ago principally at the cost of the vicar. The chancel contains a double piscina and two sedilia, and in the north aisle is another piscina. Here are also two handsome marble tablets of the Skottowe and Johnson families, and a carved chancel screen. The tithes were commuted in 1835, the rectorial for £181. 14s. 3d., and the vicarial for £98 per annum. The great tithes and 19A. of rectorial glebe belong to Emmanuel College, Cambridge, together with the patronage of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., and now in the incumbency of the Rev. J. C. Barkley, M.A. It was augmented in 1776, with £200 of Q.A.B., and has 12A. of glebe. The School is attended by about 40 children. The poor's land, awarded by a decree of Chancery, in the 16th of James I., and at the enclosure, in 1817; was partly exchanged in 1820, and now consists of 7A. 3R., let for £15. Two poor widows ought to have 40s. a year, left by Sarah Johnson, in 1740, out of land at Brooke, but this has not been paid for the last 16 years. Post via Wymondham.

MERKSHALL, or Markshall, sometimes called MATTISHALL HEATH, is a small parish, in the vale of the river Tas, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of Norwich, and has only 34 inhabitants, and 528 acres of land, nearly all in one farm, occupied by Mr. Thos. Allen, and belonging to Mrs. Dashwood, of Caister St. Edmund, on the opposite side of the river, with which this parish has been consolidated in ecclesiastical affairs since 1695, when the Church here was dilapidated, though some of its remains are still extant.

MULBARTON, a pleasant village, scattered round a verdant common of 47 acres, 5 miles S.S.W. of Norwich, has in its parish 525 inhabitants, and 1348A. of land, belonging chiefly to John Steward, Esq., Edmund H. W. Bellairs, Esq., Messrs. James Turner and James Muskett, and the Rev. T. Berney, M.A. The first is lord of the manor, for which Thomas de St. Omer obtained from Henry III. the privileges of a fair (obsolete), free warren, view of frank-pledge, &c. The Church (St. Mary Magdalen) was built by Sir William de Hoo, a great warrior, who died in 1410. It comprises nave, chancel, porch, and square tower with five bells. The chancel windows are in the perpendicular style, but have square heads, and are filled with ancient and beautiful stained glass. The rest of the church is of the early-decorated period. There is a piscina in the chancel, and another in the nave, near an arch which probably covered an altar-tomb. The holy water stoup still remains near the door. Here are marble tablets of the Rich, Gay, Balls, Norris, Lany, and Spurgeon families, and a curious copper tablet, dated 1680, to the memory of Daniel Scargill and his wife. The churchyard was enclosed, the tower windows repaired, and the bells rehung in 1863, at the cost of P. Squires, Esq. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £14, and now at £632, is in the gift of John Steward, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Richd. Gay Lucas, B.A., who has a good brick residence. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £531. 3s. 3d. per annum. Kenningham estate, belonging to Mr. James Muskett, was anciently a parish, but was consolidated with Mulbarton in 1452; and the site of its church is now occupied by a plantation. Sir Thomas Richardson, lord chief justice of the Common Pleas, in 1626, was born in this parish, where his father was rector. The Old Hall belongs to the lord of the manor, and is now occupied by Mr. Wm. Riches as a farm house. It is an ancient brick building, and the manor courts are held in it. A great part of the moat by which it was once surrounded still remains. The present house called the Hall is a good brick building of considerable antiquity, which has been recently restored, and is the seat and property of Donald Mackinnon, Esq. The Lodge, a handsome modern residence, is the property and residence of Capt. Edm. Hooke Wilson Bellairs. Petty Sessions are held on the third Monday of every month, at the World's End Inn, where there is a good bowling-green, much resorted to in summer by company from Norwich. The Church Lands, &c., consist of 2A. 2R., and four old tenements, let for £11. In 1670, Sir Edwin Rich bequeathed to the poor of this parish £100, of which £90 were laid out in the purchase of 10A. 2R. 24P. of land, now let for £90. 10s., which is distributed on New Year's day, along with 30s. the rent of a house built on land in 1829 and converted into a School in 1847. The school is attended by about 45 children and chiefly supported by the rector.

NEWTON-FLOTMAN, 7 miles S. by W. of Norwich, has in its parish 328 inhabitants, and 1168 acres of land, mostly the property of R. K. Long, Esq., the lord of the manor; but Robt. Fellowes, Esq., the Hon. F. Walpole, and several smaller owners have estates here. The Church (Virgin Mary) was rebuilt in 1385, and is a plain structure of mixed decorated and perpendicular architecture, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. There is a stoup in the porch, but the piscina in the chancel is plastered up. The old open seats still remain, and here is a fine brass, on which are engraved the effigies of Richard, Ralph, and Edward Blundeville, of the 15th and 16th centuries. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, is consolidated with that of Swainsthorpe, in the patronage of R. K. Long, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Henry C. Long, B.A., who has a pleasant Rectory House built in 1835 on a commanding eminence. The tithes here have been commuted for £370 per annum. The manor of Rainthorpe, as noticed with Flordon, is partly in this parish. The poor have the dividends of £173. 17s. 10d., new 3½ per cent. stock, left by Thomas Clabburn, in 1815, and a yearly rent-charge of £4, left by John Pye, in 1697, out of land belonging to R. K. Long, Esq. The School is held in an old cottage and is attended by about 25 children. Post via Norwich.

SWAINSTHORPE, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. by W. of Norwich, has in its parish 785 acres of fertile land, and had 338 inhabitants in 1861, including 73 persons in Henstead Union Workhouse, (which is already noticed at page 496.) R. K. Long, Esq. owns all the soil and is lord of the two manors. He is also patron of the rectory, valued in K.B. at £12. 13s. 4d., and now at £627, with that of Newton Flotman annexed to it, in the incumbency of the Rev. Hy. C. Long, B.A. The Rectory House is at Newton; and the tithes of Swainsthorpe have been commuted for £250 a year. The Church (St. Peter) consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, large porch, and tower. The latter contains three bells, and is round at the base and octagonal above. The windows of the aisle are lancet shaped, but most of the others are of the perpendicular period, though evidently of much later date than the walls. The porch has early English windows, and contains a stoup. The roof of the church is supported by well-carved spandrels, and has eight figures of angels on the hammer beams. The corbels are also carved. Here are marble tablets of the Dearsley and Rump families, and a brass to Captain Havers, who served Queen Elizabeth, and died in 1628. Here was formerly another church, dedicated to St. Mary, but it was demolished at the Reformation, and its site is now occupied by a small round building. The poor have £2 a year left by John Pye, in 1697. The cottagers have pasturage on a common of 16a., by paying 7s. a year each for repairing the fences. The National School is supported by subscription and attended by about 20 children. The Great Eastern Railway has a station in the village. Post via Norwich.

SWARDESTON, 4 miles S.S.W. of Norwich, is a pleasant village and parish containing 385 inhabitants and about 900 acres of land, in two manors, called Swardeston and Gowthorpe. Hudson Gurney, Esq., is lord of the former, and John Steward, Esq., of the latter; but part of the soil belongs to R. K. Long, Esq., R. P. Kemp, Esq., and several smaller owners. Swardeston Rectory, built by the Hobart family, was mostly rebuilt about 25 years ago, and is now occupied by Capt. Day, but belongs to R. P. Kemp, Esq., the impropiator. The Hall Farm, formerly a seat of the Berneys, is the tithe-free estate of John Steward, Esq., the patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £6, and augmented with £800 of Q.A.B., in 1800 and 1819, and £200 given by the late J. Steward, Esq., in the latter year. It is now worth £180 a year. The Rev. Fredk. Cavell is the present vicar, for whom a new residence is about to be erected. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a neat edifice, of early decorated architecture, consisting of nave, chancel, and massive embattled tower with four bells. In its windows are some fragments of ancient stained glass, and it contains memorials of the Marsh, Kemp, and Berney families. The nave and chancel are of the same width and height, and are separated by a carved oak screen. There is a piscina near the east end. A School is supported by subscription and attended by 30 children. Mangreen Hall belongs to R. K. Long, Esq., and is occupied by the Rev. W. Fellowes, M.A. The Wesleyans have a small chapel in the parish, built in 1840 by Mr. Ezra Parr.

WRENINGHAM, a parish of scattered houses, near the source of the small river Tas, 8 miles S.W. by S. of Norwich, has 437 inhabitants and 1502 acres of land, mostly the property of Miss Harrison and Miss Burton; but Lord Berners is lord of the manor, which includes the ancient manors of Nayland and Little Wreningham, the latter of which had a church, of which no traces are now extant. The Church (All Saints), in that part of the parish formerly called Great Wreningham, is a small fabric, comprising nave, chancel, north transept, south porch, and square tower with four bells. The old tower fell down in 1852, and was rebuilt the following year, when the church was restored, the transept added, and new open seats provided, at a cost of £700, raised by subscription. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, is consolidated with that of Ashwellthorpe, in the gift of Lord Berners, and incumbency of the Rev. Arthur Wilson Upcher, M.A., who has a handsome brick residence built in 1852 at a cost of £1600. The tithes here were commuted in 1837, for £400 per annum. The Independents have a small chapel here, which is occasionally used by Primitive Methodists. The School, attended by about 50 children and supported by subscription, occupies a neat building, erected in 1860 at a cost of £120, chiefly contributed by the patron. The Fuel Allotment, 20A., awarded at the enclosure, is let for £38 a year, which is distributed in coals.

EARSHAM HUNDRED

Is a fertile district, bounded on the west by Diss Hundred, on the north by Depwade and Loddon, and on the east and south by the river Waveney, which divides it from Suffolk, and flows through a verdant and picturesque valley. It is about 13 miles in length, along the river, from the vicinity of Scale Inn to Bungay, on the Suffolk side of the valley, and averages from 3 to 5 miles in breadth. The Waveney Valley Railway passes through and has several stations in this hundred, which forms, with Diss Hundred, the Deanery of Redenhall, in the Archdeaconry of Norfolk, and is all comprised in the paramount jurisdiction of the Liberty of the Duke of Norfolk, which has two coroners, and contains above a hundred other parishes in this county. Petty Sessions are held at the Corn Hall, Harleston, every three weeks. Wm. M. Hazard, Esq. is the magistrates' clerk. The following enumeration of the parishes, &c. in Earsham Hundred, shews their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate, in 1843, and their territorial extent, in assessable acres.

*Mendham is mostly in Suffolk, and all in Hoxne Union.

☞ The return of Pulham St. Mary Magdalen included 244 persons in the Workhouse of DEPWADE UNION, which comprises all Earsham Hundred, except Mendham. Langmere, a hamlet of Dickleburgh parish, is locally situated in this Hundred.

ALBURGH, a pleasant village on an acclivity, 3 miles N.E. by N. of Harleston, and 5 miles W. of Bungay, has in its parish 587 inhabitants, and 1514 acres of land, belonging to several charities in Norwich, and to J. C. Miles, Esq., Osborn Springfield, Esq., and others. It lies in several manors. The Church (All Saints) is a plain edifice with a nave and chancel, and a lofty and handsome square tower containing eight well-toned bells. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £12. The Earl of Effingham is patron, but must select a fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. The Rev. John Adams Coombe, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence built in 1848 at a cost of £2000, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £395, and five acres of glebe. There is a small manor attached to the rectory. The church registers date from 1540. The National School was built in 1848, and is attended by about 40 children. The Town Estate, purchased in the reign of Henry VIII., with £20 left by Richard Wright, and other moneys paid by the parish, consists of a farm of 83A., at Wissett; 3A. 2R. of land in Alburgh; and a farm of 25A. in South Elmham. The rents amount to about £200 a year, out of which the town reeves pay all the expenses attending the church, and other town charges, and apply the balance in aid of the poor rates. At the enclosure, under an act of the 41st George III., an allotment of 13A. 1R. 20P. was awarded to the poor of Alburgh and Wortwell, and is now let for about £40 a year, which is distributed in coals.

BILLINGFORD, alias PYRLESTON, on the north side of the vale of the Waveney, 4 miles E. of Diss, has in its parish 199 inhabitants, and about 1000 acres of land, mostly belonging to Geo. Holt Wilson, Esq., lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, valued in K.B. at £9, and now at £365 with that of Little Thorpe annexed to it, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Augustus Cooper, B.A., of Syleham. The glebe here is 20A. 2R. 13P., and the tithes were commuted in 1842, for £296. 10s. per annum. The Church (St. Leonard) is a very plain structure consisting of nave and chancel. It has one bell, but the tower has long since disappeared. Here was a hospital, with 13 beds for travellers, founded by Wm. Beck, in the reign of Henry III. Martha Brighton died here in 1844, aged 101 years. The Rev. Edmund Hollond has an estate here. The poor have £2 a year out of the Hall farm, left by Thomas Holt; and 5s. a year left by the Rev. John Bryers, in 1717, out of a cottage. The chief residents are John Blomfield, Esq., Hall; Jas. Balls, blacksmith; Eliz. Cotton, schoolmistress; Geo. Goddard, corn miller; Geo. King, shoemaker and shopkeeper; Robt. Peake, victualler, Three Horse Shoes; John Sage, farm bailiff; John Whiting, shopkeeper; and Thos. W. L. Bales, Robt. Bartram, Fras. and Jas. Drake, and Hannah and Henry Goddard, farmers. Post via Scole.

BROCKDISH, on the south bank of the Waveney, 3 miles W.S.W. of Harleston, and 6 miles E. of Diss, has in its parish 544 inhabitants, and 1054 acres of land, all freehold. Gervas Holmes, Esq., is lord of the manors of Brockdish Hall and Brockdish Earl, and owner of the Hall, formerly the seat of the Le Grys family. Miss French owns and occupies Brockdish Place, a handsome modern mansion, of white brick; and has a large estate here. The Grove estate, anciently the seat of the Wythes, belongs to D. H. Walne, Esq. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) is a fine edifice of flint, in the decorated and perpendicular styles, and comprises nave with clerestory, chancel, south aisle, porch, and tower with six bells. Two of the bells have Latin inscriptions dating before the Reformation. Many of the windows are filled with modern stained glass, and in the south aisle is a curious and very early piscina. The roof is of open timber, supported on carved stone corbels, those in the chancel being full length figures of angels playing instruments, painted and gilt. The seats are open benches of oak, with handsomely carved poppies. The pulpit and reading desk are also of oak, richly carved, and the communion table is of walnut. Part of the old painted screen remains, but the font is modern. The building was thoroughly restored and refitted in 1852 at the expense of the rector, who also, in 1864, rebuilt the tower, which is now 75 feet high. During the restorations several very small lancet windows, which had been blocked up, were discovered. The porch is very elegant, having a niche on each side and one over the outer doorway, and being surmounted by heraldic lions at the angles and a cross at the apex. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, is in the patronage of the Executors of the late W. B. France, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Geo. France, M.A., who in 1844 erected a handsome Rectory House, in the Elizabethan style. The glebe is 25A., and the tithes have been commuted for £350 per annum. The School was formerly the village workhouse, but was bought by subscription in 1843 and adapted to its present purpose. It is attended by about 40 children. The Wesleyan Reformers have a handsome chapel here, built in 1861 at a cost of £400 in lieu of a smaller one. The Church Land, 7A. 1R. 24P., left by John Bacon in 1433, is let for £18. The poor have a yearly rent of 6s. 8d. left by John Sherwood, in 1574, out of land at Hoxne.

DENTON, in the vale of the Waveney, 4 miles E.N.E. of Harleston, has in its parish 518 inhabitants, and 2434 acres of land, belonging to many proprietors. Most of the copyholds are held of the manor of Topcroft-with-Denton, of which J. I. Hunter, and W. M. Hazard, Esqs., are lords, and in which the fines are certain. The commons were enclosed under an act passed in 1805. Here is also a small manor attached to the rectory. Denton House and Lodge are two handsome mansions with lawns and plantations; the former is the occasional seat of the Misses Umphelby, and the latter belongs to the Rev. G. Sandby, M.A., but is occupied by Charles Mortlock, Esq. In Darrow or Deerhaugh Wood, in this parish, are some ancient earthworks, consisting of a large circular hill enclosed by a ditch, and having a spacious enclosure with bank and ditch, on one side of it. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a fine antique fabric, which has lately been repaired and beautified, and comprises nave, chancel, and tower. The latter was raised ten feet in 1843. The east window is filled with stained glass; and the porch is finely groined, and decorated with carvings of the Nativity, Salutation, Resurrection, and Ascension. The windows at the east ends of the north and south aisles and the west window in the tower are also filled with stained glass. Some of the painted panels of the old screen remain, and have been made up with old oak into a chest, which now stands in the chancel. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £24, is in the patronage of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who must confer it on one who either is or has been a fellow of Merton College, Oxford, pursuant to the will of the Rev. Matthew Postlethwayte, a former patron, who died in 1714. The Ven. Wm. Arundell Bouverie, B.D. archdeacon of Norfolk and honorary canon of Norwich, has been incumbent since 1839, and has greatly improved and enlarged the Rectory house. The glebe is 92a., and the tithes were commuted, in 1839, for £769 per annum. The Church Land is 6a., let for £12. Here is an Independent Chapel, which was rebuilt in 1821, on the site of an older one founded in 1655. It has an endowment of about £80 per annum, and a good house for the minister. The National School, built in 1840, has £8. 8s. a year from 7a. of land left by the Rev. Thomas Rogerson, in 1722, and now let in allotments for about £10. 10s. a year, of which £2. 2s. a year are distributed in bread among the poor, who have also the following yearly doles, viz., 8s. for two Bibles, left by Sarah Bedbank, in 1692, out of Stone-pigtle; 20s. left by John Warner, out of land held by the Boys' Hospital, Norwich; £3. 10s. from 1½a. left by the Rev. John Porter; and 21s. left by John Button, in 1803. Here is also a British School established in 1845 and attended by about 40 children.

EARSHAM, which gives name to this hundred, is a considerable village, in the vale of the Waveney, 1 mile W. of Bungay, and has in its parish 697 inhabitants, and 3052 acres of land, but only 2718 acres are assessable. The Duke of Norfolk is lord of the manor of Earsham (fines arbitrary) and owner of the Park farm (600A.) The Executors of the late Sir W. W. Dalling, Bart., are lords of the manor of Dobels-in-Earsham, and own a large estate here, including Earsham House, a large mansion situated in a pleasant park, and built in 1700, by John Buxton, Esq., of whom it was purchased by Colonel Windham. Here is a station on the Waveney Valley Railway. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave and chancel, with a square tower containing three bells and crowned by a short spire. Two of the south windows were decorated with stained glass by the late Joseph Windham, Esq., F.R.S., F.S.A., an eminent antiquary, who died in 1810. One of them is particularly fine, and represents Joseph's brethren finding the money in their sacks. The east window was also filled with handsome stained glass about ten years ago, at the expense of the rector and Sir W. W. Dalling, Bart. It represents the Nativity, the Crucifixion, &c. The font is richly carved, and is supposed to be about 600 years old. The chancel contains a number of fine monuments of the Windham, Dalling, and Gooch families. The church was thoroughly repaired a few years ago. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15, is in the gift of the Executors of Sir W. W. Dalling, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Peckham Goode, M.A., who has a neat residence. The glebe is 35A. 1R. 25P., and the tithes were commuted, in 1839, for £493 per annum. The School was built in 1856 by the lord of the manor, and is attended by about 45 children. Celts have been often found in this parish, and near the church there existed until a few years ago a remarkable system of earthworks with several adjacent tumuli, which Blomefield considered to have been a work of the Danes or Saxons. Many Roman coins have been found on this spot, and during the levelling of the earthworks several portions of urns were found, and one entire. This urn is indisputably Anglo-Saxon, made by hand, and stamped with the characteristic circular pattern common on Saxon urns both in this country and on the continent. The Town Estate, which has been vested, from an early period, for the benefit of the church and poor, was partly exchanged, at the enclosure in 1816, and now consists of about 20 acres, let for nearly £75 a year, which is partly applied to the support of the church, and partly distributed among the poor on Plough Monday, together with a yearly rent-charge of £21, left by Wm. Windham, Esq., in 1787; and another of £5, left by Thos. Bransby, in 1730. The poor have also £15 a year from £500 three per cents. left by Miss Rachel Dalling in 1850. The Fuel Allotment, 5A., awarded at the enclosure, is let for £23. 10s., which is distributed in coals. Post from Bungay.

MENDHAM parish contains 779 inhabitants, and upwards of 3000 acres of land, of which only 221 inhabitants, and 1200 acres are in Norfolk, adjoining Harleston; and all the rest, with the village, church, (All Saints,) and some vestiges of a Priory, is in Hoxne Hundred, Suffolk, on the south side of the river Waveney, 2 miles S.E. of Harleston. (See our Suffolk Vol.) The whole is in Hoxne Union. The Rev. T. W. Whitaker, M.A., is patron of the Vicarage, valued at £122 a year, and the Rev. Arthur Hy. Brereton is the incumbent. Dove House belongs to the Rev. T. W. Whitaker, but is occupied by the Rev. Jas. Watson Stote Donnison, M.A. This and several other scattered houses, near Shotford Bridge, are in the Norfolk part of the parish. Mrs. Holmes, of Gawdy Hall, is lady of the manor of Walsham Hall, and Sir Robert Shafto Adair, Bart., is lord of the manors of Mendham King's Hall and Priory, and owner of Shotford Hall estate, &c. The copyholds are subject to arbitrary fines. Part of the great tithes has been purchased by the landowners, and Sir R. S. Adair is impropiator of the remainder, which has been commuted for £270 per annum. An Independent Chapel, endowed with an estate at Topcroft, is in the Norfolk part of the parish; the chief inhabitants of which are the Rev. Jas. W. S. Donnison, M.A., Dove House; Mr. Saml. Prentice; and the following farmers, viz.:—John Beaumont, Shotford Hall, Wm. Dordery, — Read, Thos. Mayhew, and Wm. Nichols. Post from Harleston.

NEEDHAM, on the Diss road, 1 mile W.S.W. of Harleston, has in its parish 395 inhabitants and 1200 acres of land, in five manors, of which the following are the names and owners;—Bourts, F. B. Frank, Esq.; Denisons, George Dunbar, Esq.; Seymours, Geo. W. Lawton, Esq.; Witchingham, Sir R. S. Adair, Bart., and Gunshaw. the Rev. T. W. Whitaker; but the Duke of Norfolk has a paramount jurisdiction. The Church (St. Peter) was formerly a chapel to Mendham, and is an ancient fabric, except the chancel, which was rebuilt in 1735. The tower is round at the base and octagonal above. Sir Robert Shafto Adair, Bart., is impropiator of the tithes; but the heirs of the late A. Adair, Esq., are patrons of the perpetual curacy, which was certified at £15, and is now valued at £72, in the incumbency of the Rev. John Knevet, of Fressingfield. It was augmented from 1675 to 1817 with £1000 of Q.A.B. and £400 given by the Rev. A. Freston and Mrs. Pyncombe. The Town Estate consists of several cottages and 24A. of land, mostly granted in the reign of Elizabeth, and now let for £80, applied with the poor rates. In 1547, John Gowen left to the poor a yearly rent-charge of 6s. 8d. Post via Scole.

PULHAM ST. MARY THE VIRGIN is a large village on an acclivity, 3 miles N.W. of Harleston, and has in its parish 863 inhabitants and 2998A. 3R. 32P. of land. George Copeman, Esq., is lord of the manor, in which are many copyholds subject to arbitrary fines. Schofield Patten, Esq., G. F. Bevan, Esq., Sir Robert Shafto Adair, Bart., and others, have estates here. The extensive commons here and in Pulham St. Mary Magdalen, have been enclosed under an Act of Parliament, passed in 1838. Here is a station on the Waveney Valley Railway. The Church is an antique fabric, chiefly of perpendicular architecture, comprising nave with clerestory, chancel, south aisle, a lofty square tower with six bells, and a handsome porch ornamented with large figures of angels, &c. The windows were enlarged in 1478; and there was formerly a spire. The stained glass in the east window was destroyed in 1818, when the south chancel window was also blown out. The nave is very wide, and contains the ancient open benches. The chancel contains a fine double piscina, supposed to be of Saxon workmanship; a credence table; sedilia for three priests; and a fine mural monument to Mary, wife of the Rev. W. Leigh, the late rector. Part of a fine rood screen still remains. The head of a window on the north side is filled with stained glass, representing the twelve apostles. In the nave are monuments of the Swann and Inyon families. Here is also a tombstone with a fine indent of a brass cross to Simon de Walpole, rector, brother of Ralph de Walpole, Bishop of Norwich and Ely. The shaft of the cross appears to have rested on an Agnus Dei. The rectory was valued in K.B. at £33. 6s. 8d., with the perpetual curacy of Pulham St. Mary Magdalen annexed to it; but the two benefices were separated on the death of the late rector in 1858. The patronage is in the Crown, and the Rev. Richard Bond, M.A., is the present rector, and has a good residence, 34A. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £662. awarded in 1837 in lieu of tithes. Henry de Wengham, dean of St. Martin's-le-Grand, was presented to the rectory in 1252 by Henry III., but in 1259 he became Bishop of London, being then Chancellor of England, and he was twice ambassador to France. The celebrated William de Wykeham, Chancellor of England, and founder of New College, Oxford, and of the College at Winchester, was also presented to this rectory by Edward III. in 1357, and is said to have built the church porch. Sir Thomas Howes, chaplain to Sir John Fastolf (who left much money to repair and ornament the church), was presented by Wm. Grey, Bishop of Ely, in 1465. Nicholas Cloggett, who died Bishop of Exeter, was made rector here in 1717; and Wm. Browne, a learned man, and translator of notes for Pope's "Homer," obtained this living in 1728. The Baptists have a small chapel here. In 1670, Wm. Pennoyer charged certain property, which he left to Christ's College in London, with the yearly payment of £4 for the poorest parishioners, and £5 for schooling poor children. He also directed that the future lords of the manor should pay one-fifteenth part of the rents and profits of the manors, so as to make up £20 a year for a schoolmaster, to teach 30 or 40 boys of the two parishes of Pulham and the adjacent places. The School is kept in St. James' Chapel, which was built in 1401 by the brethren and sisters of St. James' Guild. It is attended by about 25 children, and the master has, in lieu of his portion of the profits of the manor, the rent of 8½ acres of land, which were allotted at the enclosure to the lord of the manor, and by him transferred to the school. This land is let for £24 a year, of which £4 go in expenses. The Town Farm, 16 acres, are let for about £30 a year, of which £10 is paid to the master of the Sunday School, and the remainder is applied with the church rates. A meadow, which had been long held by the overseers, was sold about sixty years ago, for the purpose of paying off a debt that had been incurred in erecting a Parish Workhouse, and enclosing 9 acres of land from the South Common. The workhouse is now converted into five cottages. These and a number of allotments are let to the poor at low rents.

PULHAM ST. MARY MAGDALEN is a considerable village, about a mile north of the above, on an eminence $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. of Harleston. Its parish had 1279 inhabitants in 1861, including 244 in Depwale Union Workhouse, which is situated in this parish. It includes many scattered houses, and 2956A. 1R. 19P. of land, of which the commons called Bush-green, Colegate-end, and Gresham green, were enclosed in 1838-'9. It is nearly all in Geo. Copeman Esq.'s manor of Pulham (fines arbitrary), and anciently had a weekly market, and was noted for the manufacture of hats, dornecks, coverlets, &c. It has still a cattle fair on the third Thursday in May. Sir R. Shafto Adair, Bart., Laverocke Leggett, Esq., G. F. Bevan, Esq., W. H. Cole, Esq., and others, have estates here. The Hall, anciently a seat of a younger branch of the Percy family, was rebuilt by the late J. Crickmore, Esq., and is now the property of Laverocke Leggett, Esq., whose son occupies it. The Church is a large structure of mixed architecture, chiefly perpendicular, and consists of a lofty nave with aisles, a chancel, and a tower with six bells. The roof is of carved wood, and part of the nave-roof is painted and gilt, and evidently ancient. There is a piscina in the chancel and another in one of the aisles. Here are handsome mural monuments of the Rosier, Stanhawe, Cole, Roope, Palgrave, and Page families. The perpetual curacy, valued at £646, is in the patronage of the Crown, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Leonard Ramsey Henslow, M.A., who has a commodious residence, which was enlarged and new fronted in 1861. The National School was erected in 1852 at a cost of £352, and is attended by about 80 children. The Wesleyans and the Primitive Methodists have each a small chapel here, the former built in 1862. There are two cemeteries in the parish, one belonging to the Church and the other to Dissenters. They were formed in 1860, when the churchyard was closed. The Town Estate, which was vested in trust for the poor as early as the 16th century, consists of two farm-houses and 66A. of land, let for £113, and seven cottages, let for £27 a year. Out of these rents £30 are appropriated to the church expenses, and the remainder is equally divided between the school and poor. A small estate here is held by the service of blowing a horn at the opening of the manor court, and 7A. by being "the lord's hangman"; but the duties of the latter office have long been obsolete. Here is a station on the Waveney Valley Railway.

REDENHALL-WITH-HARLESTON, and Wortwell, the first a village with many scattered houses; the second a small market town; and the third a hamlet and township; form the Parish of Redenhall, on the north side of the vale of the river Waveney. Redenhall and Harleston maintain their poor conjointly, and the former has 434, and the latter 1302 inhabitants. They contain together 2539 acres of land, in the Duke of Norfolk's manor of Harleston, and Mrs. Ann Holmes' manors of Redenhall, Hawkes, Holbrook or Alburgh, and Coldham Hall. Mrs. Holmes resides at Gawdy Hall, an ancient mansion in a well-wooded park, formerly a seat of the Gawdys, and afterwards of the Wogans. A quantity of Roman pottery was dug up on this estate some years ago, and several of the most perfect specimens are now in the possession of Mrs. Holmes. These consist of two basins and saucers of Samian ware, a small amphora of black earthenware, and a fragment of a larger bowl of the same colour. Caltofts, the residence of W. M. Hazard, Esq., is part of an ancient mansion, which was the residence of Tobias Frere, Esq., who sat for Norwich in the Long Parliament. The Kerrich family, now of Geldeston, flourished here for several generations. There are in the parish many copyholders, subject to arbitrary fines. Redenhall village is about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N.E. of Harleston, and gives name to a deanery. Its Church (St. Mary) is a handsome fabric, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, and lofty tower with eight bells. It was rebuilt of free-stone, by Thomas, Earl of Norfolk, about 1330, except the noble tower, which was begun in 1460 and finished in 1520. This tower, said to be the finest in the county, is embattled, and has pinnacles at the corners and a larger one in the centre. It was split by a tempest in 1616, and is now braced together with iron bands. In 1680, one of the pinnacles was struck by lightning, and rebuilt the following year, but was again demolished Jan. 21st, 1834, and soon afterwards restored. Here are many flat monumental stones, the brasses of which are gone; and in the north chapel are several memorials of the Gawdy family, whose arms, richly emblazoned in stained-glass, appear in the window, having been removed from Gawdy Hall many years ago. The church was reseated and fitted with new pulpit and reading desk, of carved oak, at a cost of £650, in 1858; and since then several other improvements have been effected. The organ was erected in 1841, at a cost of £500. The chancel is about to be re-roofed by the Archdeacon. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £20, has about 30A. of glebe, and a yearly rent of £1008, awarded in 1839, in lieu of tithes. The Duke of Norfolk is patron, but must present the nominee of the Bishop of Norwich. The Venerable Thomas Johnson Ormerod, M.A., Archdeacon of Suffolk, is the present rector, and has a handsome Rectory House, which he built in 1848. HARLESTON is a small market town, on the banks of a rivulet, 7 miles W.S.W. of Bungay, 10 miles E. by N. of Diss, 20 miles S. of Norwich, and 100 miles N.E. by N. of London. It is partly in Redenhall and Mendham; a good row of buildings, comprising several shops and the Magpie Inn, being in the latter parish. It was anciently called Herolveston, from a Danish leader, and gave that name to its former lords; one of whom was the valiant Sir John Herolveston, who was particularly instrumental in quelling the insurrections in this and the adjoining counties, in the reign of Richard II. The market for corn, &c., is held every Wednesday; and fairs are held July 5th, for bullocks and sheep; Sept. 9th, for lambs, &c.; and Oct. 12th, for pleasure. Here are also hiring sessions for servants on the third Wednesday in September, and a cattle repository sale on the last Wednesday in every month. The Gas Works were constructed by a company of shareholders, in 1840, and the town has been much improved during the last thirty years. Here is a station on the Waveney Valley Railway. Harleston County Court District comprises 43 parishes, of which the following are in Norfolk:—Alburgh, Billington, Brockdish, Denton, Dickleburgh, Earsham, Fritton, Hardwicke, Hempsall, Langmere, Mendham, Morningthorpe, Needham, Pulham St. Mary the Virgin and St. Mary Magdalen, Redenhall-with-Harleston, Rushall, Shelton, Starston, Stratton St. Mary and St. Michael, Tasburgh, Tharston, Thorpe Abbots, Tivetshall St. Mary and St. Margaret, Wacton, and Wortwell. The Court is held monthly at the Corn Hall, and John Worlledge, Esq., of Ipswich, is the judge; Jonathan Townley, Esq., of Norwich, treasurer; Wm. Leedes Fox, Esq., of Harleston, registrar; Mr. E. Muskett, of South Lopham, high bailiff; and Thos. Adams, assistant bailiff. Petty Sessions are held at the Corn Hall every three weeks, and William Martin Hazard, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The Corn Hall was erected in 1849, and is a brick building, having a handsome stuccoed front with four Grecian columns. The large room is 73 feet long and 35 feet wide, and is used for lectures, concerts, &c., and on market days as a corn exchange by farmers and merchants, for whose accommodation there are about 30 desks or stands. The Chapel of Ease, (St. John the Baptist) was repaired, at a cost of £1000, in 1726, and enlarged in 1819, at a cost of £680. It comprises a nave with galleries, and an apsidal chancel. In 1688, Archbishop Sancroft granted to the master and fellows of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, £54 per annum, (part of a yearly sum granted by Charles II., out of the hereditary revenue of the excise,) to be paid to a clergyman who should perform divine service here and teach a school; the said chaplain to be appointed by the master, fellows, and scholars of the said college. The Rev. Henry Patch, M.A., is the present chaplain, but only receives £30 a year, and the rector is now patron. Here is a Wesleyan Chapel, built in 1837; and also an Independent Chapel, but the latter stands in Mendham parish, was rebuilt in 1819, and is under the ministry of the Rev. Joseph Laidler. The Baptists have also a small chapel. The Faithful Lodge of Freemasons, No. 85, which was established in 1753, holds its meetings at the Exchange Rooms, on the Mondays on or before a full moon. There is a lodge of Oddfellows at the Magpie, and a Friendly Society at the Crown Inn. The 7th Norfolk or Harleston Company of Rifle Volunteers, comprises about 90 men. J. A. Holmes, Esq., is captain, and W. L. Fox, Esq., lieutenant. The Savings' Bank is open on the first and third Mondays of every month, at the Corn Hall, from 11 to 12 o'clock. On Nov. 20th, 1863, it had £17,157 belonging to 576 depositors and 16 charitable and 4 friendly societies. W. M. Hazard, Esq., is treasurer, and Mr. E. J. Everson, actuary. In 1712, John Dove left about £200 to be invested in land, for the support of a School for the poor children of the parish. The property purchased consists of 39A. 2R. 10P. of land at Rushall, let for £70 a year. In 1808, the trustees erected a school at a cost of £103; but in 1826, the free-scholars were removed to the National Schools, established in 1813, and rebuilt at a cost of £450 in 1850. These schools are now attended by about 140 children. Here is also a British School, attended by about 70 children, and built in 1843, at a cost of £200, on land given by J. Crisp, Esq. Seymer's Pightle, 3½A., in Mndham, is let for £12, and has been long vested in trust for the poor of Redenhall and Harleston, who have also a yearly rent-charge of 20s. out of the bullock fairstead, and £5 a year out of land at Shottesham, left by Thomas Bransby, in 1730.

POST OFFICE at John Caley's. Letters despatched to London by rail at 9.30 a.m. and to all parts, by mail cart via Scole, at 7.45 p.m. Money Orders granted and paid from 9 till 6, and on Saturdays till 8 p.m. This is also a Savings' Bank.

WORTWELL, the other township of Redenhall parish, has a village $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. of Harleston, and contains 466 inhabitants, and 1102 acres of land, belonging mostly to the Rev. R. A. Arnold, Osborn Springfield, Esq., and Mrs. Holmes. Here is a Church School built in 1840 and supported by the rector. Here are also an Independent Chapel built in 1773, and a Baptist Chapel built in 1822. The Town Estate, 30 acres, is let for £45 a year, which is carried to the poor rates, pursuant to the trust deeds, which have been renewed from time to time since the year 1606. The Poor's Allotment consists of one equal moiety of 13A. 1R. 20P., awarded under the enclosure act of the 41st of George III., to the poor of Alburgh and Wortwell, and now let for £63, which is distributed in coals. The poor of Wortwell have also the following yearly rent charges, viz., 6s. 8d. left by Margaret Clerke in 1585, 20s. left by Thomas Fuller in 1712, and 20s. left by an unknown donor out of a farm now belonging to O. Springfield, Esq. Here is a station on the Waveney Valley Railway. Post via Harleston.

RUSHALL, 3 miles W. of Harleston, has in its parish 242 inhabitants, and 1149A. 2R. 2P. of land, belonging to a number of freeholders, who pay small free rents to the Duke of Norfolk, as lord of the manor. The Hall farm, 228 acres, belongs to Bethel Hospital, Norwich. The Church (Virgin Mary) comprises nave and chancel, and a tower which is round at the base and octagonal above. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £4, and now in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Robert Cooper, of Dickleburgh, who has here 12 acres of glebe and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £103. The great tithes have been commuted for £300 a year, and belong to Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The National School was built in 1858 at a cost of £250 and is attended by about 40 children. In the 17th century, Thomas Pheasant left to this parish three tenements and 6½ acres of land, let at low rents to poor families. The rents are applied in the service of the church. The chief residents are Susan Algar and Wm. Gillings, shopkeepers; Jas. Catchpole, victualler, Half Moon; Robt. Nunn, joiner; Saml. Nunn, Thos. Soanes, and Wm. Fish, shoemakers; Chas. Colls, and Jas. Mullinger, blacksmiths; and the following farmers, viz.—Fredk. Aldous, Hall; Saml. Fairhead, Priory; Hy. Mills; John Stanton, College farm; and Thomas Stanton, Lodge. Post from Scole.

STARSTON, a picturesque and well-wooded parish, 2 miles N. by W. of Harleston, comprises 481 inhabitants, and 2167 acres of land, belonging to a number of freeholders, subject to small quit rents, payable to the Duke of Norfolk, the lord of the manor. Sir R. S. Adair, Bart., T. L. Taylor, Esq., R. C. Fowler, Esq., and others, have estates here. Starston Place, the seat of Thos. Lombe Taylor, Esq., is a handsome residence, pleasantly situated on an elevation commanding good views. Attached to it is a model farm, which was established about 35 years ago by the late Meadows Taylor, Esq., and has been much enlarged and improved by the present proprietor. The Church (St. Margaret) comprises nave, chancel, and square tower with five bells. It bears traces of having been originally a Norman structure, but the walls were afterwards raised and the present roof and tower added towards the close of the 14th century. The whole church was restored, re-seated with open benches, and the windows filled with stained glass, in 1858, at the cost of the present rector. Here is a handsome marble monument to the memory of Bartholomew Cotton, Esq. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Augustus Macdonald Hopper, M.A., Honorary Canon of Norwich, who has a good residence, 28 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £665. The living must be presented to a fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. The National School was built in 1839, and has been recently enlarged. It is attended by about 52 children, and chiefly supported by the rector. The Poor's Land is about 2A. The poor have also the interest of £70. 10s., and a yearly rent of 20s. The latter was left by Mary Snelling, in 1687. The Waveney Valley Railway passes through the parish. Post from Harleston.

THORPE ABBOTS, 5 miles W.S.W. of Harleston, has in its parish 256 inhabitants, and 1123 acres of land, anciently held by the abbots of Bury St. Edmund, and now belonging to several owners, the largest of whom are the Rev. E. Hollond, (lord of the manor,) and the wife of Edw. Bridgman, Esq. The Cornwallis family were formerly lords of the manor. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, and tower. The latter is round at the base and octagonal above and contains two bells. In 1862, the building was partially restored and three painted windows were inserted at the expense of the rector. In 1864, the restoration was completed, and the church refitted with open benches having poppy heads, and a new pulpit and reading desk. Here is an ancient screen; and the font is handsomely carved with the evangelistic symbols, &c. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6, and now having 17 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £340. 5s., is in the patronage of J. P. Reade, Esq., and in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Wallace, B.A., who has a good residence built in 1839. The National School, built in 1862, is attended by about 50 scholars. At the enclosure, in 1803, an allotment of 42A. 2R. 31P., was awarded to the lord of the manor, subject to the yearly payment of £5, for distribution in coals among the poor. The chief residents are Mr. Stannard Algar; John Chenery, wheelwright; Robert Debenham, blacksmith; John Gaze, corn miller; Robert Raymond Rayner, victualler, Lion; and Richd. Blackmore, Ann Brigham, John Daniels, John Lanchester King (Hall), and George Smith, farmers. Post from Scole.

DISS HUNDRED

Is so called from its thriving market town, and is nearly a square district about seven miles in length and breadth, bounded on the west by Guiltcross; on the north by Depwade; and on the east by Earsham Hundred; and on the south by the river Waveney, which divides it from Suffolk. It is a well-wooded and fertile district, generally champaign, but rising in some places in gentle undulations, and having mostly a strong loamy soil, which is usually moist, owing to a substratum of impervious blue clay, lying at a depth of from one to two feet. It is crossed by the railway from Norwich to Ipswich, &c., and has stations at Diss, Burston, and Tivetshall, from the latter of which the Waveney Valley line branches to Harleston, Bungay, and Beccles. Diss and Earsham were anciently one Hundred, and they still form the Deanery of Redenhall, in the Archdeaconry of Norfolk. Diss Hundred holds its Petty Sessions at the town of Diss, every alternate Wednesday; and John Muskett, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The following enumeration of its 16 parishes shews their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent:—

+ Frenze and Thorpe Parva are united with Scole, or Osmondiston, for the support of their poor; and their area and annual value are included with Scole.

Bressingham, Fersfield, Roydon, Shelfanger, and Winfarthing are in GUILTCROSS UNION, and all the other parishes are in DEPWADE UNION.

BRESSINGHAM is a large scattered village, on the north side of the vale of the Waveney, 2 miles W. by N. of Diss, and has in its parish 596 inhabitants, and 2287A. of land, lying mostly in the Duke of Norfolk's manors of Bressingham and Boyland, (fines arbitrary,) and partly in the rectory manor and Buckenham Priory manor. L. Palmer, Esq., is lord of the latter; and J. W. Davy and R. T. Frere, Esqrs., Miss Muskett, and several smaller owners have estates here. Boyland Hall, an ancient mansion, with a large farm, is the Duke's property, and was built by Sir Richard de Boyland, an itinerant judge of the time of Edward I., who formed here a subterraneous walk, or conduit, by which water was brought to his baths and moats, from an overflowing well, which still remains. The Church (St. John the Baptist) was rebuilt by Sir Roger Pilkington, in 1526, and repaired after the civil wars. It is a large structure, chiefly of perpendicular architecture, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, porch, and fine tower with five bells. In the porch are the remains of a holy-water stoup: and the east window has four figures in stained glass. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15, is in the gift of the Duke of Norfolk, and incumbency of the Rev. George Henry Clarke Bidwell, B.A., who has 36A. 12P. of glebe, a handsome Rectory House, built in 1842, and a yearly rent of £614, awarded in 1843, in lieu of tithes. In 1728, Elizabeth Barker left a house and land, to be applied by the rector and churchwardens in the support of a School for poor children. The property, including an allotment awarded to it at the enclosure, consists of a house and school-room, and 5A. 3R. 8P. of land, worth about £15 a year. There are now above 70 scholars. A yearly rent-charge of £2, left by John Welham, in 1702, is distributed among the poor in bread. The Fuel Allotment, 24A. 15P., was awarded at the enclosure in 1802, and is divided into small lots, on which the poor cut turf, &c. The Town Lands, partly acquired at the enclosure, comprise 10A. 31P., let for £20 a year, which is carried in equal moities to the church and poor rates. Here are also two houses and 3r. of land, occupied by paupers. Post from Diss.

BURSTON, 3 miles N.N.E. of Diss, has in its parish 419 inhabitants, and 1405 acres of land, belonging to many owners, and lying in the following manors, (fines arbitrary,) viz., T. L. Taylor Esq.'s manors of Brockdish and Milding Hall; the Earl of Albemarle's manor of Winfarthing; and Heydon Hall, belonging to the trustees of the late Charles Layton, Esq. The Rev. Sir Wm. Robert Kemp, Bart., and Sir Atwell King Lake, Bart., have estates in the parish; and here is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a small fabric, comprising nave and chancel, with a small wooden turret containing one bell. The windows are very large, and are fine specimens of the perpendicular style. The round tower fell down in 1757, when the peal of bells which it contained was sold to the neighbouring parish of Tibbenham. The remains of the door and steps leading to the rood loft may still be seen. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £16, is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Temple Frere, M.A., who has a good residence, which was enlarged in 1862. The glebe is 60A., and the tithes have been commuted for £495 per annum. The National School was opened in 1855, and is attended by 35 children. Here is a small Wesleyan Chapel. The poor have 10s. a year from Chapman's charity and the Town Pightle. Post from Diss.

DICKLEBURGH-WITH-LANGMERE constitute one parish of 895 inhabitants. The former is a large village on the Norwich and Ipswich turnpike, 5 miles N.E. of Diss, and the latter a hamlet and constablewick, a mile further to the east, locally situated in Earsham Hundred. They comprise 2115A. of land, including Semere Green, High Green, and Dickleburgh Moor, which comprise 160 acres, and were enclosed in 1856. The rectory manor comprises about half the parish, and F. T. Cuddon, Esq., is lord of Earl's manor, which comprises all the rest. Sir E. C. Kerrison, Bart., Sir Robert Shafto Adair, Bart., G. S. Kett, Esq., and others, have estates here; and the copyholds are subject to arbitrary fines. The Church (All Saints) is a large edifice of the decorated period, but the windows are mostly perpendicular. It comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, porch, chancel, and square tower with five bells. There is a piscina in the chancel, and one in each of the aisles, and in the south aisle is also an aumbry. The font bears figures of angels, &c.; and the porch is of flint and stone, and was handsomely restored in 1860. The chancel contains a monument with effigy of Lady Playters, daughter of Christopher Le Grys, who was stripped of his honours by the rebel parliament, and died in Spain. Here is also a handsome marble monument, erected by the officers of the First Royals, to the memory of Capt. Henry Turner, of that regiment, who died in the Crimea. Other tablets record the deaths of Lieut.-General Chas. Turner, George Lee, Esq., Nicholas Starkie, Esq., &c. The rectory, formerly in four medieties, valued in K.B. at £28, has 100A. of glebe, a handsome residence in the Tudor style, built in 1839, and a yearly rent-charge of £725, awarded in 1839, in lieu of tithes. The patronage is in Trinity College, Cambridge, and the Rev. George Stevenson, M.A., is the incumbent. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. In 1810, Henry Kett left £500 for the establishment of a School here, and in 1814, £136 were laid out in building a school-room in the churchyard, and the residue was invested in the purchase of stock, which has since been increased by savings of income to £946. 6s. 6d. three per cent. consols. The dividends amounting to about £28 a year, are applied towards the support of the school, which is conducted on the National system, and attended by about 70 children. The poor parishioners have a yearly rent-charge of 20s., left by Ralph Chapman in 1618, out of land in Burston. The Town Lands, which have been vested in trust from an early period, consist of 31A. 2R. 33P., let for £84 a year, which is all applied in the service of the church. The Town House, vested in the same trust, is occupied by poor families. At the enclosure, 3A. were allotted as a recreation ground, and are now let for £9.2s., which is applied in keeping open the main drains of the parish.

DISS, which gives name to this hundred, is a small but pleasant and well-built market town, on the acclivities of a deep lake or mere, on the north side of the vale of the river Waveney, which divides it from Suffolk, 22 miles S.S.W. of Norwich, 23 miles N. by W. of Ipswich, and 91 miles N.E. by N. of London. The Great Eastern Railway passes through Diss, and has a station here, which was opened in 1849. The parish of Diss has increased its population, since the year 1821, from 2246 to 3710 souls, and contains 3627A. 3R. 38P. of land; of which 243 acres were enclosed in 1814. The soil, which is generally fertile, belongs to a great number of proprietors, and lies in the four manors of Diss-cum-membris, Heywood, Heywood Hall, and the Rectory. Thomas L. Taylor, Esq., is lord of the first; the Earl of Albemarle, of the second; the trustees of the late Charles Layton, Esq., are lords of the third; and the Rector is lord of the fourth. The copyholds are all subject to arbitrary fines. Many of the owners are resident here, and some have large and handsome mansions. Heywood is a large district, comprising 23 farms on the north side of the parish, extending to a distance of five miles, and having on its northern verge, Heywood Hall, now a farmhouse, held by copy of court-roll, by the Rev. Sir Wm. Robert Kemp, Bart. Before the present century, alterations were made in this house which despoiled it of much of its original character; and very many old trees have since been cut down. But the corbie-stepped gable, the chimney, and certain traces of moats and gardens, still mark the site of "the capital Manor House," which was called by Blomefield "Diss Hall." Some carved panels, apparently removed from their original situation, are in one of the upper rooms. They represent a duck-hunt, and are of the date of Charles II. Walcot Green, a hamlet containing three or four farms, is about a mile N.E.; and Walcot Hall belongs to Wm. Manning, Esq., and is occupied by the executors of Mr. George Hill. Westbrook Green, another hamlet, containing two farms, is a mile N. W. of Diss. Park House, a good residence in the Italian style, stands near the mere, and is the property of Samuel Brook, Esq., but is occupied by his son, John Calver Brook, Esq. Grasmere House, a large and handsome stone mansion, pleasantly situated on the west side of the mere, and commanding an extensive view, was built about nine years ago, at a cost of £3000. It is the property of Mr. George Eaton, but is now occupied as a ladies' boarding school. The mere or lake, round which the town is built, is a large natural pool, having an outlet to the river, and supplied only by springs, rising from its own oozy bed, and by the rain and sewer water collected on its banks. This singular basin was formerly considered to be of unfathomable depth, and supposed by some to have been the crater of a volcano; but in 1855, it was carefully measured, and found to cover a surface of 5A. 2R. 15 P., and to average in depth $17\frac{1}{2}$ feet, the greatest depth being $19\frac{1}{2}$ feet. Its muddy bottom is well stored with eels. As most of the sewers of the town have no other outlet than the lake, the water is considered unfit for culinary purposes, so that the inhabitants have been at much expense in sinking wells and pumps. The brewery, on the highest point of the town, is supplied by a well, sunk to the depth of 615 feet, of which 500 feet is through chalk, above which the water springs to within fifty feet of the surface, and is thence raised by a steam-pump, at the rate of 36 gallons per minute. The chief part of the town is on the acclivities on the west and north sides of the mere, the steep banks of which are mostly laid out in ornamental gardens, forming a delightful contrast with the expansive sheet of water below and the town above, especially when viewed from the south and east, where the banks are lower than on the other sides, and would be overflowed if the passage out of the mere was stopped up. On the south-west side of the mere is a plot of land tastefully laid out and planted, and containing a number of seats. It is the property of T. L. Taylor, Esq., who permits the townspeople to use it as a promenade. The town is said to derive its name from the mere,—Dise, or Diss, signifying, in the Saxon tongue, standing water, lake, or ditch. It has about a dozen streets, the principal of which are well paved, and have many neat houses and well-stocked shops; and during the last twenty years it has been considerably improved by the erection of many new and handsome houses, shops, and public buildings, and the removal of all the old thatched houses, &c. The LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH, established in 1851, levies about £600 annually in rates for repairing the highways and improving the town, and J. C. Brook, Esq., is the clerk. The GAS WORKS were erected here in 1835, by Messrs. J. and T. Whaithe, and were purchased in 1846 by Mr. Richard Slack, who considerably enlarged them in 1850. The gasholders will contain about 8000 cubic feet of gas, which is charged to consumers at the rate of 6s. per 1000. There are twelve retorts and about four miles of pipes. The MARKET, held every Friday, for the sale of corn, swine, provisions, &c., is held in the open space in the centre of the town. A large FAIR is held on November 8th, upon the large green at the foot of Cock street; where a lamb fair is held on the first Friday in July. Diss was formerly noted for the manufacture of "Suffolk hempen cloth," worsted yarn, and knit hosiery; but when the hand-loom commissioners were here, about 25 years ago, they found only one manufacturer, giving out materials for sheetings, drabbets, &c. ; and the business is now wholly discontinued. The CORN HALL, in Crown street, is an elegant building, with a lofty portico approached by a flight of steps. It contains an entrance hall lighted from above; a corn exchange 77 feet long, 42 wide, and 27 high, in which concerts, public meetings, &c., are held; and two rooms, each 33 feet by 20 feet, the lower of which is used for magistrates' meetings, and the upper, as a public library and reading room. The roof of the large room is of thick ground glass supported on strong cast iron girders; the walls are decorated with pilasters, having enriched capitals and supporting a cornice; and the floor is laid with small blocks of wood which considerably deaden the sound caused by walking. This noble structure was erected in 1854 at the sole expense of Thomas Lombe Taylor, Esq., and generously presented by him to his native town. A handsome portrait of this public benefactor, painted by Boxall, and purchased by subscription in 1857, now hangs in the hall; and here is also an excellent organ presented by Miss Taylor. Weaver's Hall, at the Saracen's Head, was formerly the great mart, for the hempen linen manufactured in the town and surrounding villages. Here are two large breweries, several windmills, two brush manufactories employing about 100 hands, and a cocoa mat and matting manufactory employing 50 hands. There is a large Assembly Room at the King's Head, for balls, concerts, &c. Diss is in the EYE COUNTY COURT DISTRICT, and the court is held each alternate month at the Sessions Hall, Eye, and Corn Hall, Diss. John Worlledge, Esq. is judge, and Edgar Chenery, Esq., of Eye, registrar. The following parishes in Norfolk are included in this District:—Blo' Norton, Bressingham, Burston, Diss, Fersfield, Frenze, Garboldisham, Gissing, North and South Lopham, Palgrave, Roydon, Scole, Shelfanger, Shimpling, Thelveton, and Winfarthing. PETTY SESSIONS are held in the Corn Hall every alternate Wednesday, and John Muskett, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. A small Police Station was erected on the Roydon road in 1863. The Baths in Victoria road were formed in 1863, and consist of a small wooden building used as dressing rooms on the banks of the river Waveney. The early annals of Diss are barren of all that is momentous; but we find that the plague raged here in the year 1579; and in 1640, the town suffered by an alarming fire, which was ultimately quenched by an ample supply of water carried from the mere. The Norfolk historian, Blomefield, received the first rudiments of his education at the Grammar School, in Diss, which was carried on in a house known as the Guildhall. This building belonged originally to the two guilds of St. Nicholas and Corpus Christi, and was subsequently granted to the inhabitants. It was used as a schoolhouse as early as 1692 (if not earlier), as shewn by the Town Books, which record the payments of salaries to the masters and sundry sums for repairs. About 1713, the school began to be conducted in two divisions, the Grammar school occupying the upper, and the Charity school the lower room; and it so continued till 1738, when the latter was discontinued and the former removed to the lower floor. The Grammar school continued to be carried on with varied success till 1820, when it was finally given up. A charity school for girls was afterwards conducted in the same room, but in 1846 the building was taken down for the purpose of enlarging the churchyard. The only evidence of antiquity exhibited by the Guildhall, was a massive oak post at the south-west corner, having a rude carving on its upper part. There are several old timber houses still remaining in the town, and one of them has a somewhat similar corner post, with carvings of the annunciation and nativity, of 15th century work. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a large and handsome perpendicular building, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, north and south porches, chancel, and a square western tower containing a peal of eight bells, cast by Mr. Dobson, of Downham, and put up January 6, 1832, in place of the old peal. The tenor weighs 24 cwt., and is in the key of D natural, and the peal is allowed to be as musical and perfect as any in the kingdom. A set of chimes plays upon the bells every four hours, viz., at 4, 8, and 12. The church was founded by the Fitzwalters, one of whom was Sir Robert Fitzwalter, who eminently distinguished himself in the reign of King John. That monarch, because he could not obtain the knight's consent to gratify an illicit passion he entertained for his daughter, Matilda, surnamed the Fair, banished the father, and afterwards caused the daughter to be poisoned. The tower and the pillars of the nave date from about 1290; the aisles and chancel belong to the middle of the 15th century, and the clerestory, which has ten fine windows on each side, is still later. The heads of the clerestory windows are neither round, pointed, nor flat, but the arch is formed by a waving line. At the west end of the aisles are two chapels, anciently belonging to the Guilds of Corpus Christi and St. Nicholas. The east end of the chancel was restored to its original length in 1857. The east window is a fine painting by Oliphant, representing scenes from the life of Christ, and is a memorial of the Rev. Wm. Manning, who was rector of this parish for 46 years, and whose portrait, painted by subscription in 1838, hangs in the vestry. In the south chantry are two memorial windows, one by Wailes, to the Fincham family, and the other by Lavers and Barrand, to Mrs. E. Darby. Two windows on the south side of the chancel are filled with beautiful stained glass, one by Oliphant representing the Crucifixion; the other by Wailes, depicting the Ascension, Our Saviour's appearance to Mary, and the supper at Emmaus, is in memory of Mrs. Manning, widow of the late rector. The vestry window contains the arms of England, Norwich, and Diss, and of the Fitzwalter, Bosworth, and Manning families; and a large window in the north aisle has several fragments of ancient coloured glass. The stairs leading to the rood loft and to the parvise over the north porch, and three piscine, still remain, and one of the latter is of large size. The chancel arch is lofty, and the ceiling over the communion table is richly painted and gilt. A handsome stone font, with oak canopy of carved open work, and a pulpit, reading desk, and lectern, of oak, were purchased by subscription in 1858. The church also contains an organ, and a number of mural tablets; and in the north aisle is the altar tomb of Wm. Burton, who left a sum of money for the poor. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £33. 6s. 8d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Robertson Manning, M.A., who has about 12 acres of glebe, and a yearly rent of £903, recently awarded in lieu of tithes; but of this £243 are absorbed by the parochial rates. The Rectory House is an old building with modern additions, situated in ornamental gardens. Among some family pictures is one of Thomas Manning, Esq., of Bungay, believed to be by Gainsborough. Here is a library of about 5000 volumes, containing some fine works on topography, antiquities, and botany: also a considerable collection of antiquities (chiefly medieval), and old china. The National School was erected by subscription in 1862, to replace an inferior one in the churchyard. It stands on the glebe land, and is a brick building of good design. It accommodates 120 children, and provision is made for its enlargement by the addition of a girls' school. The British School near Victoria road was built in 1860 at a cost of £700, on land given by T. L. Taylor, Esq. Half the amount was contributed by the Committee of Council on education, and the remainder was raised by subscription. There are about 90 boys and 30 girls in attendance. There is another school in Denmark street attended by 80 girls, and supported by Miss Taylor. The Baptist Chapel in the Market place, is a handsome building, erected in 1860, at a cost of £2100, on the site of an older chapel. It has a good schoolroom beneath and is under the pastoral care of the Rev. J. P. Lewis. The Independent Chapel is a handsome building, erected in 1839, at a cost of £2000, and has an organ. The Rev. Joseph Field is its minister. The Unitarian Chapel was built in 1822, and the Rev. Hy. Webb Ellis is its pastor. The Wesleyan Chapel was rebuilt in 1833, by a congregation formed in 1799, and adjoining it is a large school, erected in 1819. It is under the ministry of the Rev. Thomas Leach. The Methodist Reformers have a small chapel in Park Green road, and the Society of Friends have a meeting room in Frenze Hall lane. The Primitive Methodist Chapel in Mount street was built in 1858 at a cost of £450, and is under the care of the Rev. Powls Carrick. The Public Reading Room and Library was established in 1856, and occupies a room in the Corn Hall. It has about 3000 volumes, and is supplied with most of the London and local newspapers, periodicals, &c. There are about 150 members who pay from 6s. to 21s. a year each. T. L. Taylor, Esq., is president; Mr. Fras. Cupiss, treasurer; Mr. Geo. Fdk. Browne, secretary; and Mrs. Charlotte Cattermole, librarian. Diss Book Club, in Mere street, was formed in 1745, and now possesses nearly 6000 volumes. Miss Clara Cubitt is the librarian. The Musical Society meets at the King's Head Hotel every alternate Tuesday evening, and the Sacred Harmonic Society meets in the Corn Hall. At the National School are a Lending Library and a Clothing Club; and in the town are several lodges of Oddfellows, Foresters, &c.; a Lying-in Charity, a Benefit Society, &c. A small Roman urn of black ware was discovered in making the Railway, a little north of the station; and several Roman coins have been found on the glebe, near the Rectory. Flint and metal Celts have also been found here; and in 1847 a curious Seal of the 13th century was picked up, representing St. John, with a palm tree on one side of him, and on the other the lamb and banner elevated upon a small circular prominence, with the legend "Ecce Agnus Dei." The TOWN ESTATE, which has been held in trust since the reign of Elizabeth, for repairing the church and streets, and other public uses in Diss, consists of a farm house and 95A. 3R. 31P. of land, at Framlingham, in Suffolk, let for £240 a year. More than half of this rent is applied to the use of the church, and the remainder in improving the streets, &c. From 1830 to 1833, about £250 were applied by the trustees to the rebuilding of Cock street bridge. Vested with the same trustees were eight Alms-houses, which were taken down about 25 years ago, for the purpose of enlarging the churchyard. These tenements, for eight poor widows, were given by Richard Fisher, in 1601, and repaired out of the rent of the town estate. Apartments have been provided for thirteen almspeople, in the building which was erected as the parish Workhouse, in 1730. The CHURCH ESTATE consists of several small parcels of land, at Penning's Green, Walcot, Roydon, and the Mere's Mouth, let for £23. 4s. 8d. a year, which is applied in the service of the church. Two cottages, called Town Houses, given by Robert Buxton and John Notley, in 1715 and 1757, are let for £15. 14s. a year, which is distributed to the poor in bread and coals. A close of 1½A., called Bell Acre, was purchased for the poor with £24 benefaction money, in 1596, and is now let for about £8. 10s. a year, which is distributed in bread, with the following yearly doles:—£18. 18s. from 6A. of land, purchased with £100 left by Wm. Burton, in 1705; 25s. as a rent-charge left by Wm. Camell, in 1700; 11s. charged on land at Stradbroke, by Richmond Girling, in 1658; and 20s. a year left by Ralph Chapman, in 1618. A house and meadow, formerly called the Unicorn, were charged by Wm. Pettit, in 1727, with the yearly payments of 10s. for the poor of Diss; 10s. for the repairs of the south porch, 10s. for a sermon, and 1s. each for the clerk and sexton. At the enclosure in 1816, several pieces of land were awarded to the poor: one, comprising 6A. 1R. 13P., and called Fairstead Green, is used as a recreation ground; another plot of 4A. 2R. called Cock Street Fen, is let for £9. 5s., which is distributed to the poor in bread and coals; and a sand and gravel pit of one acre, is now in possession of the Local Board of Health, and its rents are applied towards the repair of the highways.

PERSFIELD, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles W.N.W. of Diss, has in its parish 295 inhabitants, and 1359A. 2R. 31P. of land, partly belonging to the Duke of Norfolk, the lord of the manor, (in which the fines are arbitrary,) and partly to Miss Mortimer and some smaller owners. The common was enclosed in 1799. The Church (St. Andrew,) comprises nave, chancel, south aisle and tower; and contains effigies of two of its founders or rebuilders,—Sir Robert and Wm. de Blois. The chancel was rebuilt in 1844. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 6s. 8d. is in the patronage of Chas. S. M. Kyrle, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. George Wm. Darby, M.A., who has a good residence, 60A. 2R. 21P. of glebe, and a yearly rent charge of £375, awarded in 1838, in lieu of tithes. The Church Land, given by Jeffrey Ellingham, in 1493, is nearly 22A., let for £34. The Rev. Francis Blomefield, M.A., F.S.A., the great Norfolk Historian, was born in this parish July 23rd, 1705, being the eldest son of Henry Blomefield, gentleman, whose family had long resided here. He entered Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, in 1724, and took the degree of B.A. in 1727. In the latter year he was ordained deacon of the Church of St. Giles'-in-the-Fields, London; and in the following year was made a licensed preacher by Dr. Tanner, then Chancellor of Norwich. In 1729 he was instituted rector of Hargham, in Norfolk, on the presentation of Thomas Hare, Esq.; and in September of the same year he became rector of his native parish: his father having purchased the presentation of Lord Rochford, who was then patron of the advowson. He continued to hold both rectories till 1730, when he relinquished Hargham. Blomefield began to collect materials for his great work, which he modestly called "An Essay towards the Topographical History of the County of Norfolk," as early as 1720, when he was but fifteen years of age, and most of his leisure time was spent in travelling to collect notes of churches, &c., and to test the accuracy of the information which he had otherwise obtained. Finding that he could not get his work printed in the country, in consequence of the want of Greek, Hebrew, and other characters, he finally decided upon the singular and costly task of fitting up a printing-office in his own house, so that he could at all times have the supervision of the press, and see that no stolen copies of his book were issued. He commenced printing in February, 1736, and the first volume was completed Dec. 25th, 1739. The third volume was nearly finished when the industrious antiquary was snatched away by death, 16th January, 1752, at the early age of 47 years. His unfinished work was completed by the Rev. Chas. Parkin, rector of Oxburgh, who had rendered some assistance to Blomefield in the previous portion, and had himself formed considerable collections. This gentleman finished the third volume, and added two more, which are, however, considered inferior to those by Blomefield. They were published by Mr. Whittingham, bookseller, at Lynn, in 1769 and 1775; the whole forming five folio volumes, since reprinted by Mr. W. Miller, of London, in eleven volumes, royal octavo. A marble slab with an inscription, covers the historian's grave in the chancel of Fersfield Church; and the house in which he was born may still be seen in a remote part of the village; and though now humbly tenanted, and in picturesque decay, it retains the thick mullioned projecting windows, and some of the pargetting and other ornaments which we associate with the residence of a wealthy yeoman in the olden time. FRENZE, 1 mile E. of Diss, has only 49 inhabitants, and about 420A. of land. It is ecclesiastically a separate parish, but is united with Scole and Thorpe Parva, for the maintenance of the poor. It is occupied by, and mostly the property and manor of Sheldrake Smith, Esq., of Frenze Hall, who is also patron of the rectory, valued in K.B. at £2. 13s. 4d., and now in the incumbency of the Rev. Robert Wegg, M.A., of Dickleburgh. The tithes were commuted in 1840, for £106 per annum. The Church (St. Andrew,) is a small antique fabric, comprising only a nave with wooden turret; the chancel having been taken down about 40 years ago. It was long the burial place, and still retains many interesting memorials of the knightly family of Blenerhaysett, so named from Blenerseta, in Cumberland, where the elder branch long resided. To the secluded situation, and unpretending simplicity of the church at Frenze, Blomefield ascribed the safety of those brasses which it contained, while more stately edifices in the neighbourhood had been unsparingly stripped and plundered. The publicity given to its treasures by the valuable work of Cotman, was the signal for commencing the work of spoliation, and the fine effigy of Sir Thomas Blenerhaysett, (represented as clad in an armorial tabard,) and some others, have since disappeared. There still remain several fine brasses worthy of note. Near the south door is the effigy of Jane Blenerhaysett, 1522, with the pedimental head-dress of the period, furred cuffs, and a rich girdle, from which hang a chain and pendant. On the north side of the nave, near the font, is a small brass figure of Thomas Robson, in a shroud, with the hands raised in prayer. Towards the centre of the church is a large stone, with a brass, in good preservation, of Johanna Braham, 1519, clad in a long mantle with a veil and barbe, in a religious dress. In front of the Communion table is the effigy of Sir John Blenerhaysett, 1510, having a skirt of chain-mail, under plate armour, with taces and tuilles. The hands are raised in prayer; and the sword is suspended by a baldric, and hangs down straight in front of the figure. In the north-eastern corner of the church is a brass of Sir Ralph Blenerhaysett, 1475. He is represented in plate armour, the right arm covered by a succession of plates to give greater freedom to its movements; on the right side hangs a dagger, on the left a sword suspended by a baldric, and at the feet a lion couchant. There are also some brass plates of the Blenerhaysetts on the east wall. Just below these, and partly under the communion table, is a large stone from which a small figure of George Duke, Esq., 1551, has been removed; but the figure of his wife, Anne Duke, still remains. She is represented with the pedimental head-dress; a long-waisted dress with tight sleeves terminating in cuffs which cover the hands; and a rich girdle supporting an aulmonière and a rosary. Here are several other tablets and inscriptions, and near the centre of the floor is an old altar tomb, marked with five crosses. Post from Scole.

GISSING, a pleasant scattered village, 5 miles N. by E. of Diss, has in its parish 481 inhabitants, and 1907 acres of fertile land. It is in two portions, called Upper and Lower Streets, and had anciently a weekly market. It has a pleasure fair on July 25th. Two farms belong to Doughty's Hospital, Norwich, and here are a few smaller proprietors. The rest of the parish belongs to the Rev. Sir Wm. Rt. Kemp, Bart., the patron and incumbent of the rectory, and lord of the manors of Gissing, Kemps-with-Dallings, and Gissing-cum-Dagworth. His family has held lands here more than five centuries. Robert Kemp was created a baronet by Charles I., in 1641, and suffered greatly for his loyalty to that monarch. Gissing Hall, the ancient seat of the Hastings, whose heiress carried it in marriage to the Kemp family, was a moated mansion, but was taken down about 1700, by Sir Robert Kemp, who removed to Ubbeston, in Suffolk. He converted the uplands and the chief part of the park into a farm, for which he built a large Elizabethan house on a more elevated spot than the old hall. This is now the residence of the present baronet, whose heir presumptive is his brother Thomas John Kemp, Esq. The Church (St. Mary) is a neat structure, comprising nave, chancel, and round tower with four bells. It contains several handsome monuments of the Kemps, and attached to the chancel are two small chapels, under one of which is their vault, and in the other is their family pew. In one of the buttresses, are the remains of the stairs which led to the rood-loft, where the Rev. Mr. Gibbs, a harmless rector, but a nonjuror, used to sleep, with a window at his head, so that he could see the altar. The roof is constructed with double hammer-beams, finely carved, and bearing figures of angels, &c.; and the nave retains its ancient open benches with carved poppies. The west and south doorways are good specimens of Norman architecture, and in the north chapel is a piscina. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £14. 6s. 5½d., has a good residence, about 41A. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £487, awarded in 1838, in lieu of tithes. The Rev. Joseph Clark Haddock, B.A., is the officiating minister. A freehold cottage and garden, left to the poor by Edward Smith, are let for £3. Some copyhold land, left to the poor by Thos. Ringer, passed to the lord of the manor, many years ago, for want of trustees. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here, built in 1860.

ROYDON, on the north side of the Waveney, 1½ mile W. of Diss, has

in its parish 607 inhabitants, and 1217 acres of land, in the manor of Roydon Tufts, of which Saml. Brook, Esq., is lord, and Gissing Hall, of which Geo. Edw. Frere, Esq., F.R.S., is lord. The latter is the present head of the Frere family, and elder brother of Sir Henry Bartle Frere, K.C.B., governor of Bombay. He resides at Roydon Hall, a large modern red-brick mansion, surrounded by extensive grounds, and situated on an eminence above the river; and is also patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £9, and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Chas. Richd. Elrington, B.A., who has a handsome residence with extensive grounds, in which is a very fine avenue of lime trees. Here are 40 acres of glebe, and the tithes were commuted in 1839 for £456 a year. The Church (St. Remigius) is a small antique fabric, comprising nave, chancel, south aisle, and tower. The latter contains three bells, and is round at the base and octagonal above. The church was restored and refitted a few years ago at the expense of the patron. Here is a small organ. The National School is attended by about 70 children. The Church Land, 6A. 2R. 27P., and two cottages, are let for £22. 10s., which is applied in the service of the church. The aged poor of the parish have the dividends of £905. 2s. three-and-a-half per cent. stock, left by Margaret Blowers, in 1815. In 1708, Robt. Horner bequeathed to the rector for the time being, a close of 4 acres, on condition that he should preach a sermon on Good Friday, and distribute 40s. yearly among poor widows. A yearly rent-charge of 20s., left to the poor of Roydon, by Wm. Kettleborough, is paid out of the White Hart public-house. In 1839, Miss Susanna Frere left £400, the interest to be applied in equal parts towards ornamenting the church and providing warm clothing for the married poor. Z. Simpson, J. Richardson, T. L. Taylor, and S. Farrow, Esqs., and others, have estates in the parish. Several flint and metal celts have been found here.

SCOLE, or OSMONDISTON, is a pleasant village and parish, on the north bank of the river Waveney, and upon the Norwich and Ipswich road, 2 miles E. by S. of Diss. It has 677 inhabitants, and about 850 acres of land, but the parishes of Frenze and Thorpe Parva are united with it for the support of the poor, and they contain together 1454 assessable acres, and 747 souls. Scole belongs to several proprietors, but Sir Edward C. Kerrison, Bart., is lord of the manor, (fines arbitrary.) Scole Lodge, a large handsome mansion, is the seat of Fredk. Crawshay, Esq. The Shrubby, another neat residence, is the seat of Wm. Calverley Curteis, Esq., D.C.L. Scole Inn is a large brick building, adorned with imagery and carved work, and formerly noted for a very large sign, forming an arch across the road, containing a great number of large statues, and executed by Fairchild, in 1655, at a cost of £1057. Here was a round bed, big enough to hold 15 or 20 couples; but this and the costly sign were destroyed above 80 years ago. The Church (St. Andrew) comprises nave, chancel, south aisle, and square tower with one bell, and was thoroughly repaired about 20 years ago. There is a piscina at the east end of the aisle. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9, is in the gift of Sir E. C. Kerrison, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Chas. Wimberley, M.A., who has a good residence built in 1863, about 25 acres of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £250 awarded in lieu of tithes. The National School was built in 1853. Here is a large Flax mill, built in 1854. and belonging to Messrs. Costerton & Nayler, who obtained the prize-medal at the International Exhibition of 1862, and employ about 100 hands. The churchwardens have two cottages and 2R. 11P. of land, let for £7. A fair for horses and toys is held here on Easter Tuesday. Several flint and metal celts and many Roman coins have been found in this parish.

The Church (All Saints) is covered with reeds, and is of the late-decorated period. It comprises nave, chancel, and square tower with five bells. The School, a handsome building erected by the patron in 1864, is attended by about 40 children. The Baptists have a chapel here, built in 1821; and the Wesleyans, one built about 20 years ago. SHIMPLING, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. of Diss, has in its parish 219 inhabitants, and 670 acres of land, exclusive of commons. Thos. Lombe Taylor, Esq., is lord of the manor, but the Duke of Grafton owns Shimpling Place, a large and ancient house, to which an extensive farm is attached. This is now in the occupation of Wm. Bate, Esq., and part of the moat which once surrounded the house may still be seen. Several smaller owners have estates in the parish. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 13s. 4d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Jeffery Watson Millard, M.A., who has a good residence, about 30A. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £230. The Church (St. George) comprises nave, chancel, and tower. The latter, which contains four bells, is round at the base and octagonal above, and is surmounted by a small shingle spire, which was added in 1863. The font is of stone, handsomely carved, and bearing the emblems of the evangelists and the instruments of the passion, but it is disfigured by a coat of paint. The windows contain many fragments of ancient stained glass, and in the east window are the arms of the Shimpling and Le Grys families. In the centre of the floor is a small brass to Robert Le Grys, dated 1598. During the last eight years the church has been partially restored, and open benches have been substituted for the old pews. There is a small piece of land in Gissing, left by an unknown donor, for the repair of the church, and 5s. a year are paid out of land at Shelfanger for the same purpose. The poor have 12s. a year left by Wm. Dennington in 1725. Post from Scole.

THELVETON, 2 miles E.N.E. of Diss, has in its parish 160 inhabitants, and 1001 acres of land, all the property of the Executors of the late Thos. Havers, Esq., of Thelveton Hall, a large Elizabethan mansion, with octagonal turrets, and spacious pleasure grounds. The Church (St. Andrew) comprises nave, chancel, and small bell turret. It was thoroughly repaired and beautified about 20 years ago, and has a very ancient font, in fine preservation, decorated with figures of the twelve apostles. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9, is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Robt. A. Prichard, M.A., who has a good residence, built about 20 years ago, and greatly enlarged in 1862. The glebe is 8 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1839 for £290 a year. Post via Scole.

THORPE PARVA, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. of Diss, has only 21 inhabitants, and about 330 acres of land, belonging to George H. Wilson, Esq., the patron of the Church (Virgin Mary), which has been long in ruins. The rectory is consolidated with Billingford; but the parish maintains its poor jointly with Scole and Frenze. Mr. John Lines is the only resident farmer, and occupies 260 acres, for which he pays only a tithe rent of £6 a year. The remaining 70 acres are farmed by Mr. John Blomfield, of Billingford, who pays tithes to the rector of that parish. Post from Scole.

TIVETSHALL ST. MARGARET, partly on an eminence, 6 miles N.N.E. of Diss, has in its parish 375 inhabitants, and 1698 acres of land, belonging to John Hotson, Esq. (lord of the manor), the Rev. D. G. Norris, A. W. Pashley, and A. R. Kerrison, Esqs., and others. Here is a station on the Great Eastern Railway, from Norwich to Colchester, &c., near its junction with the Waveney Valley line, which extends eastward to Harleston, Bungay, &c. An oak tree in this parish is supposed to be the largest in the county, measuring 21 feet in circumference. Extensive manure works were erected here in 1858 by Mr. Alex. Wm. Pashley, and give employment to many hands. The Church consists of nave, chancel, and square tower with five bells, and was partially restored and much improved in 1862. The living is a rectory, consolidated with that of Tivetshall St. Mary. The Society of Friends has an old meeting house and burial ground, and the Wesleyans have a small chapel here. The Poor's Allotment 6A., awarded at the enclosure in 1808, is let for £12. In the 17th century, Jeffrey Neeve left 6A. 11P. of copyhold land, in Moulton, in trust for the repairs of St. Margaret's church, except the yearly payment of 13s. 4d., to each of the two parishes of Tivetshall, for distribution among the poor. This land, with an allotment of 1R. 3P. awarded to it at the enclosure, is let for £12. Post via Scole.

TIVETSHALL ST. MARY lies south of the above, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.E. of Diss, and about 2 miles from Tivetshall railway station, and has in its parish 362 inhabitants and 1125 acres of land. John Hotson, Esq., is lord of the manor; but Jas. Hill, John Aldous, and Mitchell Baker, Esqs., and the Rev. Sir W. R. Kemp, Bart., have estates here. The Church is a large thatched edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and square tower with five bells. There is a piscina on the south side of the chancel. The living is a rectory, with that of Tivetshall St. Margaret annexed to it, and was valued in K.B. at £20. It is in the patronage of the Earl of Orford, and incumbency of the Rev. Frederic Saml. Bignold, M.A., who has here 28A. of glebe and a handsome residence, which was almost entirely rebuilt about 33 years ago, and is surrounded by pleasant grounds. The tithes of St. Mary's parish were commuted, in 1839, for £439, and those of St. Margaret's for £530 per annum. The poor have yearly 13s. 4d. from Neeve's charity; 15s. from land allotted to the town house: £2. 8s. from 5 roods called Town yard; the interest of £10, left by an unknown donor; and £6. 10s. from the Fuel Allotment, 3A., awarded at the enclosure. The National School was built in 1861, and is attended by about 36 children.

WINFARTHING, a pleasant village and parish, 4 miles N. of Diss, has 615 inhabitants and 2566 acres of land. The Earl of Albemarle owns a great part of the soil, is lord of the manor, (fines arbitrary,) and patron of the rectory, valued in K.B. at £12, and now in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. James Carver, M.A., who is non-resident. The Rectory House is very ancient, and is occupied by the curate. The tithes were commuted in 1840 for £571 per annum, and here are 33 acres of glebe. The Church (St. Mary the Virgin) is a plain structure, comprising nave, chancel, south aisle, and a fine square tower containing a peal of five good bells. In the interior are two old brasses, a fine Norman font, and some good windows. There are sedilia for two priests and a piscina in the chancel, and another piscina in the aisle. This church was, in the superstitious and corrupt age of monachism, in high repute among the ignorant for a certain sword preserved in it by the monks, under the name of the "Good Sword of Winfarthing," and said to possess such virtues in effecting the wishes of devotees, that pilgrims came to it from all parts, with large gifts and offerings, "vow-makings, crouchings, &c." The sword had previously belonged to a thief, who had taken sanctuary in the church. The manor has all the privileges of ancient demesne, and remained in the Crown till Henry III. gave it to Sir William Montecaniso, or Munchensy, in consideration of his military services against the French. The son of this knight had a large park here, well stocked with deer, and had liberty to keep dogs to hunt the hare, fox, and wild cat, in his wastes and forests. So late as 1604, the park abounded in deer, but it was afterwards enclosed by the Earl of Arundel. It now belongs to the Earl of Albemarle, and comprises 1000 acres of cultivated land, of which 656a. are tithe free. The National School is a good building in the Elizabethan style, erected by the present curate in 1854 at a cost of £280, and attended by about 40 children. The Wesleyans and the Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. The celebrated "Winfarthing Oak," probably the largest in England, except the one at Cowthorpe, in Yorkshire, stands near the Lodge farm-house, and is a grand and picturesque old ruin. It measures 70 feet round the roots, and 40 feet in the middle of the main stem, and must have been at one time a magnificent spreading tree, with enormous arms. It is traditionally said to have been called the "Old Oak" in the time of the conqueror, and is usually considered to be more than 1200 years old. It is now a mere shell, bleached snowy white, and capable of containing a large number of persons in its interior. The only mark of vitality is on its south side, where a narrow strip of bark sends forth a few branches. The Town Estate, part of which anciently belonged to a religious fraternity, or guild, was mostly acquired in the reigns of Henry VIII. and Elizabeth, and now consists of six tenements let for £11, and 43a. 2r. 11p. of land let for £102. The rents are carried to the poor-rates and church repair account, except £5 which are distributed among the poor not receiving parochial relief, pursuant to the will of John Alden. At the enclosure in 1781, an allotment of 39a. 3r. 20p. was awarded to the poor, to whom it is let in small allotments at low rents, producing about £52. 10s. per annum which is distributed in coals.

DEPWADE HUNDRED

Is about ten miles in length, from east to west, and six in breadth, extending from 9 to 15 miles S. by W. of Norwich. It is a fertile and well-wooded district, crossed by the Great Eastern Railway, and intersected by good roads, and by several small rivulets which give rise to the river Tas or Taes, which was formerly a much larger stream, crossed near Tasburgh by a deep ford, from which the Hundred had its name. It is bounded on the north by Forehoe, Humbleyard, and Henstead; on the east by Loddon; on the south, by Diss and Earsham Hundreds; and on the west by Shropham Hundred. It forms the Deanery of Depwade, in the Archdeaconry of Norfolk; and the fee of it was in the crown till the reign of Richard I. In 1327, Edward III. granted it to John de Clavering, but it is now divided among various proprietors. Its Petty Sessions are held at Long Stratton, every alternate Tuesday; and John Hotson, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The following enumeration of its 21 parishes shews their population in 1861; the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the county rate, in 1843; and their territorial extent.

DEPWADE UNION comprises all the 21 parishes of Depwade Hundred, 13 parishes in Earsham Hundred, and 9 parishes in Diss Hundred. These 43 parishes comprise an area of 73,000 acres, and had 25,248 inhabitants, in 1861. Their average annual expenditure, from 1832 to 1835, was £24,000; and it is now about £14,500. The Union Workhouse is at Pulham St. Mary Magdalen, in Earsham Hundred, and was built in 1836-7, at a cost of £8240. It has room for 400 inmates, but has rarely so many. John Hotson, Esq., of Long Stratton, is Union clerk and superintendent registrar; and Mr. Robert L. Bond, of Alburgh, and F. R. Rose, Esq., of Diss, are registrars of marriages. The registrars of births and deaths are Mr. George B. Mann, of Dickleburgh, for Diss District; Mr. George Craske, of Aslacton, for Forngett District; Mr. R. L. Bond, of Alburgh, for Harleston District; and Mr. George Rayson, of Pulham Market, for Stratton District; and the three former are also the relieving officers for Diss, Stratton, and Harleston Districts. Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Dunn, are master and matron; Rev. Robert Wegg, of Dickleburgh, chaplain; Walter Chenery and Martha Hawkes, school teachers; and Leonard Platford, porter of the Workhouse. The surgeons are Messrs. T. H. Barton, of Long Stratton, Charles Garneys, of Bungay, H. F. Howard, of New Buckenham. C. A. Mills, of Pulham, F. R. Rose, of Diss, J. Candler, of Harleston, and, H. Hardwicke, of Saxlingham.

ASHWELLTHORPE, 9 miles S.W. of Norwich, has in its parish 409 inhabitants, and 979 acres of land, anciently in two parishes, called Ashwell and Thorpe, and held for a long period by the family of De Thorpe, from whom the manor passed to the Bouchier, Knyvett, and Wilson families. Lord Berners, the head of the latter family, is the present owner, and also patron of the rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and now at £740, with that of Wreningham annexed to it, in the incumbency of the Rev. Arthur Wilson Upcher, M.A., who resides at Wreningham, where the Rectory House is situated. The tithes of Ashwellthorpe were commuted in 1842 for £340, and those of Wreningham, in 1837, for £400 per annum. Here are many copyholds, subject to arbitrary fines. The Hall, a handsome brick mansion of Elizabethan architecture, was mostly built in 1831, on the site of the old hall, which had a moat and drawbridge, and of which a small part still remains. A new wing and porch were added in 1845. It has long been the property of Lord Berners, but is now occupied by that distinguished officer, Major-General Sir Archdale Wilson, of Delhi, Bart., K.C.B., who was born at Kirby Cane Hall, in 1803, and was son of the Rev. George Wilson, rector of Didlington. He entered the East India Company's service in 1819; and on September 14th, 1857, his troops stormed and captured the ramparts of Delhi, for which he was promoted to the rank of Major-General, created a Baronet and K.C.B., and voted a pension of £1000 a year by the E. I. C. He also received the thanks of Parliament; and in 1858 was appointed Colonel of the Bengal Artillery. Some years ago a curious chess-piece was found in the garden of the hall. It is formed of the tusk of a Walrus, and elaborately carved, apparently being the work of a Norman French artist of the 12th century. The Church (All Saints) is an ancient fabric, comprising nave, chancel, porch, north chapel, and square tower with five bells. There is a piscina in the chancel, another in the nave, and a third in the chapel; and in the porch is a holy water stoup. The font is octagonal, with carved shields, and was given by Thos. Knyvett, Esq., and his wife. The north chapel contains several mural monuments of the Wilson family, and has three stained glass windows, with the arms of the Thorpe, Bouchier, Knyvett, and Wilson families. Between the nave and chapel is a handsome white marble altar tomb, bearing recumbent effigies of Sir Edmund de Thorpe and his lady. He was slain at the siege of Lover's Castle, in Normandy, but was interred here, and is represented in armour with his feet resting on a greyhound or talbot. There are two small dogs at the feet of the lady, and at her head is a figure of an angel kneeling. The sides of the tomb are also embellished with angels bearing shields. Under the south-east window of the chancel is a stone coffin without inscription, and near it is a slab to Philip de Thorpe, who died in 1298. The building was thoroughly restored, and refitted with open seats in 1861, at a cost of about £500. The Fuel Allotment, 1A. 1R. 31P., awarded at the enclosure in 1814, adjoins 10A. which were enclosed from the waste for the use of the Workhouse, 75 years ago, and the whole is let for £20. The Workhouse was sold after the formation of Depwade Union. Here is a school, established in 1841, and attended by 75 children. Post via Wymondham.

ASLACTON, 13 miles S.S.W. of Norwich, and $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by N. of New Buckenham, has in its parish 356 inhabitants, and 1168A. of land, belonging to Messrs. Robert Buxton and Frederick Copeman, and others; but Edward Gilman, Esq., is lord of the manor and impropiator of the tithes. The Church (St. Michael,) comprises nave, chancel, south aisle, porch, and round tower with five bells, and has recently been repaired and reseeded with open seats, at the expense of the patron. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued at £58, and now in the patronage of the Rev. Thos. Gale Curtler, and incumbency of the Rev. Thos. Harrison, M.A., who has a good Parsonage House, built in 1861, at a cost of £1200, on a piece of land given by Mr. Copeman. The Grange is tithe-free, and the tithes of the rest of the parish were commuted in 1839 for £340 per annum. Here is a small Wesleyan Chapel, built in 1833, and enlarged in 1844. The Fuel Allotment, 17A. 3R. 36P., awarded at the enclosure in 1806, is let for £25. The poor have also 20s. a year, left by Lawrence Le Neve, out of land belonging to Mr. Edmund Snelling. BUNWELL, a large scattered village, 3 miles N.E. by E. of New Buckenham, 4 miles S.E. of Attleborough, and 13 miles S.W. by S. of Norwich, has in its parish 907 inhabitants, and 2423 acres of fertile land, belonging to various owners, the largest of whom is Sir Robert J. Buxton, Bart., who is lord of the manors of Bunwell, Baynard's Hall, and Peri's Hall, (fines arbitrary;) but John Mitchell, Esq., has a small manor called Beachams-in-Bunwell, and Clarke Stoughton, Esq., is lord of Tibenham-with-Carlton, which is partly in this parish. The Church (St. Michael) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and lofty tower with six bells, and stands in an elevated situation, so that it can be seen from a great distance. The roof is of open timber, and the windows are large, and good specimens of perpendicular workmanship, especially that at the east end, which is of five lights. The font is of carved stone and very ancient, and the porch is built of large flints intersected with Caen stone. The altar-piece is a painting of the circumcision of Christ. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £17, and now having a yearly rent-charge of £700, awarded in 1836 in lieu of tithes. Sir R. J. Buxton, Bart., is patron, and the Rev. Hy. Dawson, M.A., of Hopton, Suffolk, is the incumbent, for whom the Rev. Fredk. G. Gill, M.A., officiates. Here is a small parochial school, and also a Primitive Methodist chapel. The Town Land, which has been vested in trust from an early period for paying tenths and fifteenths, repairing the church, &c., consists of 16A. 1R. 22P., partly in Wymondham and Carleton Rode, and is let for £22, which is applied with the church rates, except 20s. for the poor. The Fuel Allotment, 18A. 1R. 22P., awarded at the enclosure in 1812, is let for £20.

CARLETON RODE, a large scattered village, 2 miles E.N.E. of New Buckenham, has in its parish 905 inhabitants, and 2573 acres of land, the greater part of which belongs to Sir Robt. J. Buxton, Bart., but part of the parish is in Fornceett and Tibenham manors. In 1844, some very interesting British instruments or tools were discovered here in digging a ditch across a pasture field, and are now placed in the Norwich Museum. They consist of four celts, one of them ornamented with embossed lines, two lower portions of two other celts, three chisels, one evidently worn by use, four gouges, and two punches, one of them battered apparently by rivetting. They are all in excellent preservation, and shew the probable uses to which they were applied, that is, mechanical or domestic purposes; and they go far in determining the long agitated question, whether these celts were domestic or war-like instruments. They are formed of very hard brass, and are of different sizes, just as you might expect to find at the present day a small series of tools on a carpenter's bench varying in their dimensions. Eight or nine small lumps of the same metal, in its crude state, were found with them. The chisels and gouges do not seem to differ much in their form from the same kind of tools used at the present day. In all probability, they have been buried in the earth 2000 years; and they prove that the primæval inhabitants of this island, whom, on the authority of its Roman invaders, we are accustomed to hear spoken of as savages clothed in skins of beasts, and prowling about with painted bodies, were not so ignorant of mechanical arts, as we are sometimes disposed to imagine. In 1863, an ancient dagger, about 2 feet long and apparently of copper, was found in a field occupied by Mr. Elisha Bateman. The Church (All Saints) is a handsome fabric, comprising nave with aisles, fine chancel, and square tower. The latter was formerly much higher and contained five bells. The windows of the nave are perpendicular, and the west window and tower arch are of good proportions. The chancel was thoroughly restored a few years ago by the late rector, and contains a very elegant double piscina with elaborately carved canopy. A number of consecration crosses, &c., were found on the walls during the restorations, but have been again hidden by colour. There is a piscina in each of the aisles, and that in the north has a shelf. The seats in the chancel and south aisle are carved and have poppies, and the rector's pew displays some good workmanship. The heads of four of the chancel windows contain portions of ancient stained glass; and here is also a mural monument of white marble with medallion, in memory of the late rector's wife, who was a daughter of Sir Robt. Buxton, Bart. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £16, and now having 50 acres of glebe, and a yearly rent charge of £922. 12s. 6d., awarded in 1839 in lieu of tithes. Sir R. J. Buxton, Bart., is patron, and the Rev. John Cholmeley, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good Rectory House. Here is a Baptist chapel. The National School, built in 1821, is chiefly supported by the rector, and attended by about 40 children. The Town Lands consist of 13A. 15P., let for £20, which is carried to the poor rates; and 15A. 3R., let for £22. 15s. 6d., applied with the church rates. Part was given by Robert Verdon and other donors, and the rest was set out at the enclosure, in 1799, when a Fuel Allotment of 40A. was awarded to the poor. The latter is let for £45, which is distributed in coals, together with £2. 10s., the rent of 2A. purchased with the bequest of a Mr. Howes. There is also an allotment of 20A., let for £19. 5s., which is applied towards the repair of the highways. Post via Attleborough, FORNCETT ST. MARY, 11 miles S.S.W. of Norwich, and 6 miles N.E. of New Buckenham, has in its parish 299 inhabitants, and 731 acres of land, belonging to several copyholders, (fines arbitrary,) and forming the head manor of the Liberty of the Duke of Norfolk, which comprises 127 parishes in this county, and formerly had a court here every three weeks. H. Birkbeck, Esq., the Girls' Hospital, Norwich, Sir J. P. Boileau, Bart., and Mrs. Margitson, have estates here. The Church is a thatched edifice of the 15th century, comprising nave, chancel, and square tower with three bells. The rector has recently fitted the chancel with open seats. The rectories of Forncett St. Mary and St. Peter were united till 1846, when they were separated, and the Rev. J. W. Colenso, M.A., became rector of the former, and the Rev. W. G. Wilson, M.A., of the latter. Dr. Colenso, in 1853, was appointed Bishop of Natal, and is well known as the author of "Elements of Algebra" and other valuable educational works; and "The Pentateuch and Book of Joshua critically examined," which has given rise to so much controversy. The united rectories were valued in K.B. at £20, and in 1831 at £982. The Earl of Effingham is patron, and the Rev. John Edward Cooper, M.A., is rector of St. Mary's, and has 8 acres of glebe, and a good residence built in 1846. The incumbent must be a fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. The tithes here have been commuted for £309. 13s. 5d. per annum, but the rector receives part of the tithes of Forncett St. Peter, so that the living is now worth about £515. The Town Land, 4A. 31P., received in exchange at the enclosure in 1809, is let for £8. which is applied towards the support of a National School, which was built in 1813, and is attended by 42 children. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here, built in 1854.

FORNCETT ST. PETER, on the west side of a rivulet, opposite the above, 11½ miles S.S.W. of Norwich, and 5½ miles N.E. of New Buckenham, has in its parish 665 inhabitants, 1829 acres of land, and the hamlets of Forncett-end, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile W. of the church, and Bustard's green, on the east side of the rivulet. The Duke of Norfolk is lord of the manor, and the copyholds are subject to arbitrary fines, but will shortly be enfranchised. The Church was thoroughly restored in 1857, and comprises, nave, chancel, aisles, fine north porch, and round embattled tower with five bells. The porch contains a holy water stoup, and over the entrance is a partially erased inscription:—"St. Peter and Paul. Patronys of this Place. Pray to I.H.S. in Heaven, yt we may see his face." The tower is said to have been erected by the Saxons before the conquest, and the rest of the church appears to have been built about the middle of the 15th century. The chancel contains a piscina; and has a stained glass window in its south wall, representing the patron saints of the church, purchased by subscription, in memory of the Rev. Joseph Bell, M.A., a late curate. The rectory was consolidated with Forncett St. Mary till 1846, as noticed above. It is in the patronage of the Earl of Effingham, and incumbency of the Rev. William Greive Wilson, M.A., who has 57A. of glebe, and a good residence near the church with an avenue of lime trees. The incumbent must be a fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. The tithes of the parish have been commuted for £793 per annum, of which £578 belong to the rector of St. Peter's, and the remainder to the rector of St. Mary's. The Town Lands were exchanged at the enclosure in 1809, for 6A. 3R. 28P., let for £10. 10s., which is applied towards the support of the National School; together with a yearly rent charge of 32s., left by an unknown donor, out of land belonging to Robt. J. H. Harvey, Esq.. The school was built in 1848, at a cost of £630, and is attended by about 45 children. The interest of £50, left in 1859 by the late Sir R. J. Harvey, is distributed amongst poor aged women. The Primitive Methodists and Baptists have each a small chapel here, and the Rev. George Meadows is minister of the latter. A fair for pleasure and pedlery is held here on the third Thursday in September. Here is a station on the Great Eastern Railway. Post via Long Stratton.

FRITTON, a pleasant village scattered round a green of 66 acres, 11 miles S. of Norwich, has in its parish 235 inhabitants and 890 acres of land, in Frederick Wm. Irby, Esq.'s manor of Boyland-cum-Fritton, but part of the soil belongs to Edward Howes, Esq., M.P., and other proprietors. The Church (St. Catherine,) comprises nave, chancel, and round tower with three bells, and was thoroughly restored in 1853. Several mural paintings representing St. Christopher, St. George, &c., of a somewhat remarkable character, were discovered here in 1850. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £9, and was augmented, in 1781, with £200 of Q.A.B., and £200 given by the late Rev. Thomas Howes. It is in the patronage of Edward Howes, Esq., M.P., and incumbency of the Rev. Herbert Wilson, M.A., who has a good residence, about 17 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £286 awarded in 1833. The School is attended by about 40 children, and is also used as a night-school for the youths of the parish. The Town Lands, consisting of a farm of 14A. in Morningthorpe, and 3A. in Fritton, let for £25 a year, are supposed to have been left by John Alward, in 1506, for the repairs of the church, and the payment of the taxes of the poor. As far as needed, the rents are applied in the service of the church, and the remainder is carried to the poor-rates. The Labourers' Land, 2A. in Hemphall, is let for £7. 10s., which is expended in providing tools for poor labourers, for which purpose it is supposed to have been given. Post, via Long Stratton.

FUNDENHALL, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.S.E. of Wymondham, and 9 miles S.S.W. of Norwich, has in its parish 334 inhabitants, and 1348 acres of land, belonging to several owners, the largest of whom are, Lord Berners, lord of the manor of Fundenhall-cum-Hapton, (fines arbitrary,) and T. T. Berney, Esq., impropiator of the tithes and patron of the living, which is a donative, worth only about £51 a year, and now held by the Rev. Thomas Sedger, M.A. of Bracon Ash. The tithes were commuted, in 1840, for £506 per annum. Wm. Howes, Esq., is lord of the rectory manor, and his farm suffered damage to the amount of £1470, in the great storm of hail and wind, on August 9th, 1843. Many other farms in this neighbourhood suffered severely at the same time. The Church (St. Nicholas) is an ancient fabric, comprising nave, chancel, porch, and tower with five bells. The tower stands at the junction of the nave and chancel, and is of the Norman period, as also is the porch. The rood loft still remains, and is handsomely carved and painted, and bears a Latin inscription. The font has figures of angels bearing shields, upon the shaft; and in the chancel is a good piscina. The School was built in 1856 by Wm. Howes, Esq., and is attended by 30 children. The Fuel Allotment, 5A., awarded at the enclosure in 1814, is let for £6. 10s. Post via Wymondham.

HAPTON, 9 miles S.W. of Norwich, has in its parish 196 inhabitants, and 657 acres of land, mostly the property of Hudson Gurney, Esq., but Lord Berners is lord of the manor. The Church (St. Margaret,) comprises nave, chancel, and tower with one bell; and contains a piscina. The perpetual curacy valued at £100, is in the incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Edw. Price, B.A., who has a good residence and 2 acres of glebe; and the patronage, with the appropriation of the tithes, belongs to Christ's College, Cambridge. Here is a Presbyterian Chapel, which was built in 1741, and endowed with a good house for the minister, and about 120A. of land, by a Mrs. Elizabeth Gay. The Rev. James Knapton is the present minister. The parish school is attended by about 40 children. Post via Long Stratton.

HEMPNALL, a large scattered village, 9 miles S. of Norwich, and 7 miles N.W. of Bungay, has in its parish 1094 inhabitants, and 3626 acres of land, belonging to many proprietors, and lying mostly in J. T. Mott, Esq.'s manor of Hempnall-and-Canons, and partly in F. W. Irby, Esq.'s manor of Boyland-cum-Fritton. J. T. Mott, Esq., owns a great part of the soil, and is impropiator of the rectory, and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Geo. Thos. Hall. Here are 46 acres of glebe, and the tithes were commuted in 1841 for £611. 15s. to the impropiator, and £388.5s. to the vicar. The Church (St. Margaret) is a large structure, comprising nave, small chancel, aisles extending the whole length of the building, and a square tower with one bell. It was partly rebuilt and thoroughly restored in 1857, at a cost of £1400, when several mural paintings, two piscinæ, and a quantity of old painted glass were discovered: Eighteen new windows were inserted and a new bell turret was erected on the tower. Here are several tablets of the Rolfe and other families. The church is said to have been almost entirely destroyed by fire at some remote period, and was again burnt down about 300 years ago. The National School was built in 1847, and here is a Wesleyan Chapel, erected in 1839. The Town Lands, which have been held in trust from a period earlier than the reign of Elizabeth, for paying the tenths, fifteenths, and other taxes, and for the relief of the poor, consist of 72A. 1R. 21P., let for £123. 3s., of which £68 are carried to the poor rates, and the residue is applied towards repairing the church, supporting the school and clothing-club, and distributing coals amongst the poor; who have also a yearly rent-charge of 10s. left by Robt. Row, in 1662, and another of 3s. 4d., given by an unknown donor. Part of the Town Lands was exchanged at the enclosure in 1817. A fair is held here on Dec. 11th for hogs and pedlery. In June, 1854, an ancient British cemetery was discovered in a field to the east of Hempnall church, containing a quantity of cinerary urns, burnt bones, and ashes. The deposits seemed to have been made at regular distances of ten or twelve feet in parallel rows, and in some instances two pots of ashes were found together.

Most of the urns were broken and of the rudest description; but in one spot a few feet southward of the general interments, a mass of black soil and ashes was found, mingled with fragments of dark pottery of a superior character, apparently Anglo-Roman.

MORNINGTHORPE, or Mourningthorpe, 11 miles S. of Norwich, and 8 miles N. by W. of Harleston, has in its parish 140 inhabitants and 921 acres of land. The soil is held by several owners. Edw. Howes, Esq., M.P. for East Norfolk, is lord of the manor of Morningthorpe, and resides at the Manor House, a handsome mansion which has been recently much enlarged and improved. Fredk. Wm. Irby, Esq., is lord of Boyland manor, which extends into this and several other parishes, and resides at Boyland Hall, a large and handsome Elizabethan mansion with pleasant grounds, in a picturesque valley, 1 mile N. of Morningthorpe. This mansion was built in 1571, and thoroughly repaired in 1804, by a late owner, Rear-Admiral the Hon. F. P. Irby, who collected on the coast of Africa a large quantity of courie shells, with which he studded the interior of an alcove, in a shrubbery, near the hall, which has over its entrance porch a fine bust of Queen Elizabeth, removed from a niche at the demolition of Tilbury house. It has recently been much improved and enlarged, and the dining room contains a number of valuable portraits, including one of Queen Elizabeth, painted from life by Lucas de Heere. The Church (St. John the Baptist) comprises nave; chancel, and round tower with three bells; and was thoroughly restored in 1840. Here are several mural monuments, a fine piscina, and two handsome stained glass windows in memory of Admiral Irby and his wife. In front of the gallery is a fine carving of the royal arms, cut from a solid block of oak, by Ollett. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £7, and now having 7A. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £300 in lieu of tithes. The Lord Chancellor is patron, and the Rev. Edmund Nelson Rolfe, M.A., incumbent. The Rectory House is a good residence with pleasant grounds, and was built in 1840. The Rev. Thos. Howes, a former rector, who died in 1814, aged 86, was a learned divine and author of "Critical Observations on Books, Ancient and Modern," in 4 vols. 8vo. The Town Lands, 14A. 1R., are let for about £30 a year, which is applied with the church rates. The sum of £16 left by John Ward, to provide fuel for two poor families, was laid out in 1646, in the purchase of 1½A. of land, at Stratton St. Michael. Post via Long Stratton.

MOULTON, 9 miles N.N.E. of Diss, 6 miles E. by N. of New Buckenham, and about 2 miles from Tivetshall and Fornsett railway stations, has in its parish 442 inhabitants, and 1346 acres of land, anciently in two parishes, called Great and Little Moulton; but the church of the latter (All Saints) was demolished in 1570, and its site is now called the Sanctuary. Mr. Edw. Betts is lord of the manor of Moulton, but part of the parish is in the manors of Aslacton and Fornsett. The soil belongs to F. Copeman, Chas. Walford, and T. H. Bates, Esqs., and some smaller owners. The Church (St. Michael) is a small fabric, with nave, chancel, north aisle, and porch, and was restored and reseated in 1863. In the churchyard, near the west end of the church, is a fine altar tomb of the 15th century. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and now having 20A. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £460, awarded in 1840, in lieu of tithes. The Rectory House is a splendid mansion in the Italian style, with extensive grounds and gardens, and was erected in 1831, regardless of cost, by the patron's brother. The drawing room is an elegant apartment, with elaborately painted walls. W. L. W. Chute, Esq., is patron, and the Rev. Chas. Peter Buckworth, M.A., incumbent. The School was built in 1848. The Town Land, 10A. 14P., is let for £20. Three acres of it were allotted at the enclosure, and part of the remainder was left in 1520, by the Rev. Richard Drake. In 1731, Samuel Hammond, left £20 for the poor, and it was laid out in building a cottage, but the overseers distribute the interest yearly.

SHELTON, 6 miles N. of Harleston, and 12 miles S. by W. of Norwich, has in its parish 192 inhabitants, and 1301A 2R. of land, belonging to several proprietors, the largest of whom are Mrs. Evans' Trustees, owners of the Hall, (a moated farm house with turrets;) F. B. Frank, Esq., patron of the rectory; the Rev. Thomas Howes, lord of the manor; the Rev. Edward Hawkins, D.D., Osborn Springfield, Esq., and Sir R. Shafto Adair. The Church (St. Mary,) is a handsome structure, in the perpendicular style, and comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, and square tower. The latter is of flint, but the rest of the building is of brick, and there is no chancel, but under the east window is a small chapel, about 14 feet by 7, containing a holy water stoup and a sedile. The windows at the east ends of the nave, and aisles are filled with beautiful ancient stained glass, as are also the heads of most of the windows of the aisles. At the east end are three stone altar tombs with the arms of the Sheltons, who were formerly seated here, and mostly rebuilt the church; and also a handsome alabaster altar tomb, with kneeling effigies of Sir Robert Houghton, Knight, his son, and two wives. Here is a neat mural tablet to Mrs. Sarah Bloom and her daughter, the late Mrs. Curteis. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8, and now at £640, with that of Hardwick annexed to it, is in the incumbency of the Rev. Jeremiah Curteis, M.A., who has a neat residence here. The glebe is 35A., and the tithes have been commuted for £372. 7s. per annum. Two poor widows have a yearly rent of 20s., left by Danson Futter. The school is attended by about 35 children. STRATTON ST. MARY, or LONG STRATTON, is a small Market Town, on the Roman street or way which led to Caister; being 2 miles E. of Forn-cett station, 10 miles S. by W. of Norwich, 9 miles N. by E. of Scole Inn, and 100 miles N.E. of London. Its parish contains 743 inhabitants, and 1517A. of land, including the hamlet of Wood-green, 1 mile E.N.E. of the town, which forms a long street of good houses. It has two fairs yearly, on Whit-Tuesday and October 12th, for pedlery, &c.; and Petty Sessions are held at the Swan Inn every alternate Tuesday. John Hotson, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The lord of the manor and principal owner of the soil is Robert Randal Burroughes, Esq., of Stratton Manor House, a handsome brick mansion on a pleasant eminence. The Hall, which had a deep moat, is now a farm house. Edward Howes, Esq., M.P., and others, have estates in the parish. In 1773, several Roman urns were found here in a gravel pit, six feet below the surface; and about a furlong from the town was discovered a hearth, four yards square, having upon it ashes and burnt earth, three inches deep, with two imperfect copper coins. The Church (St. Mary) is a large handsome fabric, comprising a nave with aisles and clerestory, a chancel, and an ancient round tower, containing five bells, and surmounted by a short spire. The tower is much older than the church, the latter being rebuilt about 1330, by Sir Roger de Burgh and his family, to whom here were formerly many brasses and other memorials, long since gone. The late rector, who held the living from 1795 till 1842, decorated the east window with stained glass, in 1805. One of the windows on the south side of the chancel was also filled with stained glass, by the present rector, in 1858. It represents Christ blessing little children and restoring sight to the blind, &c. At the north side of the chancel is a fine marble altar tomb, on which lie the effigies of Judge Reeve and his lady; the former died in 1647, and the latter in 1657. Here is also a number of small tablets of the Burroughes, Walford, and other families. An organ was given by Mr. Utting, about 12 years ago, and the church was thoroughly restored in 1848, when several mural paintings were discovered, but have been again hidden. There are sedilia for two priests and a piscina in the chancel; and there is also a piscina in the south aisle. The seats are open benches with finely carved poppies. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, is in the gift of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Frederick William Hill Jerrard, M.A., who has a good residence. The glebe is about 40a., and the tithes were commuted in 1838 for £424 per annum. The National School is a neat building, erected in 1850, at a cost of £300, and attended by about 50 children. Here is an Independent Chapel, built in 1840, and now under the ministry of the Rev. David Jarman. It has 200 sittings. The Mechanics' Institution was established in 1859, and has a good library of 300 volumes, a reading-room supplied with many London and provincial papers, and about 70 members. The poor have two yearly rent-charges of 26s. each, one left by John Reeve, in 1687, out of the Swan Inn, and the other left by Elizabeth Bayspool, out of land at Wacton. They have also a house and 3 roods of land, left by Nicholas Porter, in 1578.

STRATTON ST. MICHAEL, a scattered village, 2 miles E. of Fornsett station, and 10 miles S. of Norwich, adjoins Long Stratton on the south, and has in its parish 251 inhabitants, and 1050 acres of land, including the hamlet of Rise Green, one mile S. of the church. The soil belongs to the Rev. R. Gwyn, Wm. Branford and John Hotson, Esqrs., and some smaller owners, and lies in the manors of the adjoining parishes. Here were formerly two churches, but that dedicated to St. Peter, was dilapidated in the reign of Henry VII., and its rectory consolidated with that of St. Michael's, which is an ancient structure, comprising nave, chancel, and low square tower. At the south side of the chancel is a fine piscina, and at the north side a credence table. The doorway and stairs to the rood loft still remain, and the antique stone font is well carved. The east and west windows, and one in the south-wall of the chancel, are filled with painted glass, and the heads of nearly all the other windows retain some fine ancient stained glass. The joint rectories, valued in K.B. at £6. 12s. 8d., and now at £397, are in the gift of New College, Oxford, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Henville Bayly, M.A., who has a good residence, built in 1843. The glebe is 27A., and the tithes have been commuted for £348 per annum, of which £9. 18s. belong to the rector of Long Stratton. Here is a Wesleyan Chapel, built in 1838, and also a small Primitive Methodist Chapel. The School is attended by 15 children. The Rev. John Cowan, in 1509, left a cottage and garden for the poor, and 6A. of land for the use of the church. The following are the chief residents not included in the directory of Long Stratton:—Rev. C. H. Bayly, M.A., Rectory; Sarah Barnes, schoolmistress; Elizabeth Brown, boarding school; John Rudling, cooper; Wm. Whitaker, parish clerk; Robert Dix, farmer; Mary Roberts, farmer and corn miller; and Richard James Spurrell, farmer, Cedar Grove. Post via Long Stratton.

TACOLNESTONE, commonly called Tacleston, is 5 miles N.E. of New Buckenham, and 10 miles S.W. by W. of Norwich, and has in its parish 451 inhabitants, and 1396 acres of land, belonging to many owners. Fras. George Manningham Boileau, Esq., son and heir of Sir J. P. Boileau, Bart., F.R.S., of Ketteringham Hall, (see p. 516.) is lord of the manor of Dovedale, and resides at Tacolnestone Hall, which was formerly the family seat of the Boileaus, and is a large ancient mansion, situated in a small park. The garden is partially surrounded by a moat, and the walls of the dining and drawing rooms are finely panelled in oak. In the dining room is a handsome chimneypiece with well carved figures of Justice, Charity, and Hope. J. B. Graver-Browne, Esq., is lord of the manor of Williams, and the Earl of Effingham is lord of Earls manor. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, south aisle, and square tower with five bells, and was rebuilt about A.D. 1509. Part of the old screen remains, and forms the front of the rectory pew; and in the chancel is a piscina with a shelf. Here are also several tablets of the Warren and Knipe families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12, has 30 acres of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £566, awarded in 1845 in lieu of tithes. The Rev. Thomas Corbould, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a neat residence; and John Corbould Warren, Esq., is the patron. The Fuel Allotment, 10A., awarded at the enclosure, in 1779, is let for £20. The oldest poor widows of the parish have £5. 4s. yearly left by Edmund Knipe, in 1781, out of a farm at Shipmeadow. The School is supported by F. G. M. Boileau, Esq., and attended by 30 children.

TASBURGH, 8 miles S. of Norwich, and about 1 mile S.E. of Flordon station, is a village on the abrupt acclivities at the confluence of three streams which form the small river Tas, Taes, or Tau, which flows southward to Norwich, and was once navigable up to the Roman station here, called Ad Taüm, which occupied the summit of a lofty entrenched hill, commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country. The entrenchment is of a square form, containing an area of 24 acres; and the fosse and vallum may still be traced. In the centre of it stands the Church (Virgin Mary), which has a nave, a chancel, and a round tower with four bells, and is said to have been built in 1380. The chancel contains a piscina and an ancient altar-tomb. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8, is in the incumbency of the Rev. H. E. Preston, M.A., and patronage of the Executors of the late Isaac Jermy, Esq., the lords of the manor. The parish contains 446 inhabitants, and about 870 acres of land, belonging to several proprietors, one of whom is Wm. Gwyn, Esq., who has a pleasant seat here called Tasburgh Lodge. The tithes were commuted in 1840 for £287. 7s. per annum. The Rectory House is a handsome white brick residence, and was built in 1844, at a cost of £1000. The School was erected in the same year, and is attended by about 40 children. Among the Roman coins found here at various periods are several inscribed "IC. DURO T." The Poor's Land, 9A. 1R., is let for £13. 5s. a year, which is distributed in clothing and blankets. The Fuel Allotment, 6A. 2R. 14P., awarded at the enclosure, is let for £9. 10s. a year, which is distributed in coals. The poor have also a yearly rent-charge of 40s., left by Robert Meek, in 1598; the dividends of £356. 15s. 6d. new 3½ per cents., left by Thos. Clabburn, in 1816; and the dividends of £45 three per cent. Consols, left by Miss Bateman, in 1828.

THARSTON, a pleasant village about 1 mile N.E. of Fornsett station, 10 miles S. by W. of Norwich, and 1 mile W. of Long Stratton, has in its parish 351 inhabitants and 1502 acres of land, belonging to many proprietors, the largest of whom are R. J. H. Harvey, Wm. Ringer, William Gwyn, and Augsts. A. Vansittart, M.P., Esqs., the former of whom is lord of the manor, in which the fines are certain. The Hall, a large Elizabethan mansion of brick, is the seat of John Harvey, Esq. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 1s. 8d., is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Biggs, M.A., who has a good residence, built in 1846. The tithes were commuted in 1838—the rectorial for £460, and the vicarial for £120 a year. The Church (Virgin Mary) comprises nave, chancel, and lofty square tower with four bells. In the churchyard is a mausoleum, erected in 1855 by the late General Sir Robert John Harvey, C.B., who was buried beneath it in 1860. The chancel will shortly be restored by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who have recently purchased the great tithes, and intend to augment the living. The School is attended by about 25 children. The rent of 2 acres of old Poor's Land (£3) is distributed in bread. The Poor's Allotment, 8A. 29P., awarded at the enclosure in 1802, is let for £21, which is distributed in coals. For distributions of bread, the poor have also the dividends of £173. 7s. 10d., new 3½ per cents., purchased with £200, left by Thomas Clabburn in 1815, and of £100, 3½ per cents., left by Sir R. J. Harvey, Kt., in 1860. In the Oak-field, which belongs to Wm. Ringer, Esq., stands an extraordinary oak tree, supposed to be at least 500 years old. Though of the pollard kind, its boughs cover a space of 90 yards in circumference. At a foot from the base its trunk is 26 feet, and at five feet high, 24 feet in circumference. At six feet from the ground it is divided into two great trunks, which, four feet higher, diverge into five grand divisions, each about the size of an ordinary tree. Post via Long Stratton.

TIBBENHAM, a large village and parish, about 2 miles N.W. of Tivetshall station, 3½ miles E. of New Buckenham, and 14 miles S. W. by S. of Norwich, has 729 inhabitants and 3254 acres of land, belonging to many owners, the largest of whom is J. Petre, Esq., lord of all the manors, except Channonz Hall, the property of Sir R. J. Buxton, Bart. J. Petre, Esq., is also lessee of the rectorial tithes, which belong to the Dean and Chapter of Ely; but the Bishop of Norwich is patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £7. 6s. 8d. and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Thos. Wm. Thompson, M.A. It was augmented in 1816 with a parliamentary grant of £1000, and £380 given by the late vicar. These sums, except £118, were laid out in the purchase of 22A. of land in 1831. The tithes were commuted in 1836—the rectorial for £782. 10s., and the vicarial for £327. 5s. per annum. The Vicarage House is a good residence, having been recently enlarged. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, south aisle with clerestory, and square tower with a fine peal of six bells. At the east end of the aisle is a chapel, on the north wall of which are three brasses in memory of John Buxton, who died in 1572, and his family. A small gallery in this chapel was formerly the family pew of the Buxtons, whose arms are carved in front of it. The pulpit and sounding board are of oak, elaborately carved and gilt, and the font is supported by eight round shafts. The Church Land comprises 40A. 2R. 16P. in Winfarthing, let for £50. Ten acres of town land in this parish, and two cottages, and 1A. 35P. of poor's land, were sold by the Overseers a few years ago, for the purpose of assisting the poor to emigrate to America. Alms-houses for six poor people were built about 20 years ago, out of the savings of income of the church land, on the site of the old Guildhall. A Clothing Society for the relief of the poor, is supported by the contributions of the landowners and other principal parishioners. The School was built in 1831, and is a substantial brick building. Here is a small Primitive Methodist Chapel, built in 1848.

FOREHOE HUNDRED

Is of an irregular oblong figure, 12 miles in length, and from 6 to 8 in breadth; bounded on the west by Wayland and Mitford, on the south by Shropham and Depwade, on the east by Humbleyard and the county of the city of Norwich, and on the north by Eynesford and Taverham. It is divided from the latter by the river Wensum, and is intersected by the Yare and several smaller streams, and crossed by three excellent turnpikes, from Norwich, to Watton, East Dereham, and Thetford. Two branches of the Great Eastern Railway form an important junction at Wymondham, in the southern part of the hundred. Forehoe has its name from four hills, near Carleton, where the Hundred Court was formerly held; but it was then called a Hundred-and-a-Half, and belonged to the Crown, till King John and his successors granted most of the manors to the Earl of Arundel and John le Mareschall, lord of Hingham, from whom they have passed to Lord Wodehouse, Lord Stafford, and many others; but the chief manor, in the extensive parish of Wymondham, which was called the Half Hundred, is still held by the Crown. Forehoe forms, with Mitford, the DEANERY OF HINGHAM, in the Archdeaconry of Norfolk, and is an extensive district of fertile and highly improved land, nearly all the commons having been enclosed during the present and the latter part of the last century. All the 24 parishes in Forehoe Hundred, except Honingham (in St. Faith's Union,) were incorporated by act of Parliament, in 1776, for the maintenance of their poor, and the erection of a HOUSE OF INDUSTRY, at Wicklewold, at the cost of £11,000, borrowed, at five per cent. interest, on a tontine scheme of 110 shares. Each subscriber of £100 named some young person on whose life his annuity was to depend; and of these nominees only three survive, so that the interest of the £11,000 is now divided among three shareholders, and will ultimately become the sole property of that person whose nominee may be the last survivor. This large Workhouse has accommodation for 400 paupers, but it has seldom half that number. The 23 incorporated parishes, forming Forehoe Union, comprise about 36,500 acres, and 12,818 inhabitants. Their annual expenditure, in support of in and out-door poor, since 1838, has averaged only about £4300; but the total amount for the year ending March 25th, 1863, was £8555. 4s. The "Board of Directors and Acting Guardians" are still governed by their own local act of Parliament, though they are under the control of the Poor-Law Commissioners. The Rev. Charles Beauchamp Cooper, M.A. of Morley St. Botolph, is chairman; and the Rev. Edward Gurdon, M.A. of Barnham Broom, vice chairman; Mr. Jesse White, of Wymondham, is clerk to the Board and superintendent registrar; R. J. Tunaley, Esq., of Wymondham, and Mr. Charles Smith, of Cossey, are registrars of marriages. The registrars of births and deaths are—R. J. Tunaley, Esq., for Wymondham District, and Mr. William Sturgess, of Bawburgh, for Costessey District; and the relieving officers are—Mr. Hutchinson Murrell, of Barnham Broom, for Hingham District, and Mr. James Carter, of Wymondham, for that District. Mr. Robert Smith Gowen, is master, Mrs. Hannah Goodchild, matron, and the Rev. R. B. Slipper, M.A., of Coston, chaplain of the Workhouse. The surgeons are—Messrs. W. B. Francis, of Norwich, J. T. Tallent, of Hingham, D. W. Hughes and T. E. F. Colman, of Wymondham, and George Taylor, of Mattishall. PETTY SESSIONS, for the Hundred of Forehoe, are held on the first Tuesday in every month, at the White Hart, Hingham; and on the third Tuesday, at the King's Head, Wymondham. E. C. Bailey, Esq., of Norwich, is clerk to the Magistrates. The following enumeration of the 24 parishes of this Hundred shews their population in 1861, their annual value, as assessed to the county rate in 1843, and their territorial extent, in assessable acres.

BARFORD parish has a village of detached houses, 7 miles W. of Norwich, and contains 419 inhabitants and 1029 acres of land. E. P. Clarke, Esq., is lord of the manor, but Capt. Ives, Rev. W. Millett, Rev. Henry Lombe, Mrs. Hunter, and some smaller owners, have estates here. The Church (St. Botolph) is a neat structure, consisting of nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with three bells. The nave is in the perpendicular style, and was re-roofed, and fitted with new open seats, pulpit, and reading-desk in 1849, at a cost of £500. The chancel was judiciously restored by the patron in 1862, and contains some early English windows. Below the east window is an aumbry, and also a niche, supposed to be a credence. At the east end of the nave are several niches, and a tomb ornamented with a floriated cross. Here is a good decorated font. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 8s. 4d., was augmented, in 1732, with £20, given by the Rev. Jeremiah Revans, and £200 of Queen Anne's bounty. Skinner Turner, Esq., is patron, and the Rev. John Bowman Turner, M.A., incumbent; and they divide the rent of 30A. of glebe between them. The tithes were commuted, in 1839, for £360 per annum. The Wesleyans and the Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. The school, attended by about 25 children, and supported by subscription, was built by the rector in 1852, at a cost of £80. In 1711, Jeremiah Revans gave a yearly rent-charge out of land at Little Melton, for distributions of bread among the poor; and by his will, in 1725, he charged his lands at East Tuddenham with the yearly payment of 32s. 6d. to Barford, as follows: 10s. for a sermon, 2s. 6d. for the clerk, 10s. for the poor, in bread, and 10s. to be distributed in bibles and prayer-books. In 1813, Samuel Nash charged an estate here (160A.) with the yearly payment of £20, which is distributed among the poor parishioners, chiefly in coals. Ferdinand Ives, Esq., now owns most of the land charged, and pays £15. 12s. 6d. of this annuity, and the rest is paid by Mr. Spooner Nash, owner of the remainder. Post via Wymondham.

BARNHAM-BROOM is a small village, 4½ miles N. by W. of Wymondham, and 9 miles W. of Norwich. Its parish includes the hamlet of Bicker- ston, or Bixton, nearly a mile N. of the church and contains 481 inhabitants, and 1774 acres of land, chiefly the property of Lord Wodehouse, lord of the manor of Barnham-Rysks and Bickerston; but Capt. F. Ives has an estate here; and the corporation of Norwich own 90 acres, and are lords of the manor of Barnham Hawkins. (See page 235.) The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) is a handsome building in the perpendicular style, with nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower. The latter contains five bells, and is surmounted by stone figures of the symbols of the evangelists at the four corners. The chancel screen is very beautiful, and its panels bear paintings of saints. There is a large piscina with an opening at the side, in the chancel; and in the south wall of the nave are a piscina and an aumbry. Here is a marble tablet of the Ganning family. In 1850-1, the building was thoroughly restored, fitted with new oak seats, pulpit, and reading-desk, and furnished with an organ, at a total cost of £750, given by the rector. At the same time a new western doorway was made, and the bell-frame and the flooring of the tower were repaired at the expense of the rector and parishioners. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12. 8s. 1½d., and now at £604, with the rectory of Bixton and the vicarage of Kimberley annexed to it, is in the gift of Lord Wodehouse, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Gurdon M.A., who has a spacious residence with pleasant grounds, near the church. The Old Hall, on the west side of the village, is a fine Elizabethan house, built in 1614. The rooms are lofty, and have moulded ceilings; that of a large room (now forming two bedrooms) on the first floor being especially remarkable for the richness and beauty of its decorations. On Mr. Sparkhall's farm, is a rifle range of 900 yards, formed in 1861, for the 21st Norfolk Volunteers. Bixton, or Bickerston, had anciently a church, the foundations of which are still visible. The church annuity of £4 per annum is paid by Lord Wodehouse. The Town Lands, which had been vested in trust from the time of Henry VIII., were exchanged at the enclosure, in 1811, for 9A. 28P., let for £25 a year, which is carried to the poor rates. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, consists of 18A. 3R. 29P., let for £13 a year, which is distributed in coals. Here is a National School, erected in 1841, by the late rector, and attended by about 90 children.

To Norwich, Wed. & Sat., Ths. Orton

BAWBURGH is a village and parish on both sides of the river Yare, 5 miles W. of Norwich, containing 433 inhabitants and 1373A. 3R. 24P. of land, in Lord Stafford's manor of Costessey; but Sir Woodbine Parish, Kt., C. W. Unthank, Esq., and some others, have estates here. The Church (St. Mary and St. Walstan) was partly rebuilt in 1309, and thoroughly repaired in 1638. It comprises nave, chancel, and round tower, and was either originally rebuilt or newly dedicated in 1016, during the reign of Edmund Ironside, shortly after the burial of St. Walstan. The upper part of th tower was long ago demolished, and replaced by a low conical roof covered with red tiles. The building is mostly of perpendicular architecture, and contains a piscina, a fine carved screen, and some ancient stained glass. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £13. 7s. 6d., and is in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. Hicks Thomas Deacle, M.A. The former are appropriators of the rectorial tithes, which are leased to C. W. Unthank, Esq., and were commuted in 1839 for £251, and the vicarial tithes for £109 per annum. The Vicarage House, a good residence near the village, was purchased and annexed to the living in 1860. The School is attended by about 50 children, and is supported by the vicar, the patrons, and J. H. Gurney, Esq., M.P. The Hall, an ancient Elizabethan building of stone, is now a farmhouse, and in one of its rooms is an oaken mantle-piece, having the face of a Bacchante in the centre, surrounded by clusters of vine leaves and grapes, most exquisitely and naturally carved. Near it is a remarkable stone tower or tomb, said to have covered the remains of St. Walstan, and to have stood on the north side of the church, where the remains of a wall may still be seen. The apparent age of the building does not, however, warrant the tradition. The Wesleyans have a preaching-room in a cottage; and here is a Water Mill for the manufacture of paper. On Mr. Bleakley's farm, is St. Walstan's Well, supposed to possess extraordinary healing virtues. The poor have the dividends of £50 three per cent. consols, left in 1809 by John Wagstaffe. BOWTHORPE parish, 3 miles W. by N. of Norwich, has only 21 inhabitants, and 600 A. of land, all in one farm, belonging to F. B. Frank, Esq., and occupied by Mr. John Howlett. The Church (St. Michael) was unroofed in 1792, but much of the ruined walls still remains. The vicarage, certified at £15, is consolidated with Earham. (See page 216.)

BRANDON PARVA, or Little Brandon, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.W. of Wymondham, and 10 miles W. of Norwich, has in its parish 208 inhabitants, and 982A. of land, mostly belonging, with the manor, to O. S. Onley, Esq., but Messrs. Wm. Sutton and C. C. Atkins have small estates here. The Church (All Saints) is a neat building of perpendicular architecture, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. The east window is of the decorated period, but very plain. The roof is of open timber, and in the chancel is a well-preserved piscina. Here are marble tablets of the Warner and Tidd families. In 1854 two new windows were inserted in the north wall of the nave, at a cost of £30; in 1856, the chancel arch was rebuilt at a cost of £55; and in 1860, the church was re-roofed, the porch was rebuilt, and two new windows were placed in the south wall of the nave, at a cost of about £300. The old high pews still disfigure the church. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 3s. 9d., and now having a yearly rent-charge of £321, awarded in 1841, in lieu of tithes. Isaac

Preston, Esq., is patron, and the Rev. Philip Preston Gwyn, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a large and handsome rectory-house, built in 1854, at a cost of £1500, at the sole expense of the patron. Here are 14 acres of glebe. In 1692, Abigail Costivel left £20 towards building a school here, and endowed it with a yearly rent-charge of 20s. out of High House farm. The old school was divided many years ago into three tenements, claimed by the churchwardens, who, in 1833, agreed to pay the rent of one of them (£2) towards the support of a Sunday School. The rents of the other two go to the poor rates. There is no day school, so that the rent-charge out of High House farm is not now paid. The poor have £10 a year out of Mr. Onley's estate, left by John Warner in 1702, for distribution on Christmas-day. The Fuel Allotment, 10A., was awarded at the enclosure in 1833, and is let for £15. 10s. a year. The chief residents are—The Rev. P. P. Gwyn, M.A., Rectory; Mr. Thomas Tice; John Peggnall, parish clerk; and the following farmers, viz.:—Maria Chaplin, Eleanor Neave, Glebe farm; Saml. Sharpin, Hall farm; Wm. Denny Sutton, Monk's Hall; Charlotte Tice, and John Wrigglesworth, sen. (owner). Post via Wymondham.

CARLETON FOREHOE is a small scattered village and parish, 3 miles N. by W. of Wymondham, containing 124 inhabitants, and 696 acres of land, nearly all belonging to Lord Wodehouse, the patron of the rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 17s. 1d., and now at £150, arising from 131 acres of land, mostly allotted in lieu of tithes in 1766, and partly purchased with £200 of Q.A.B., and £200 given by the Rev. James Champion in 1724. Of this, 93A. 2R. 39P. are in this parish, and the rest in Garveston. The Rev. Francis Raikes, M.A., is the rector, and has a good brick residence, built in 1847 at a cost of £900. The Church (St. Mary) is a small structure of perpendicular architecture, and comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and low square tower. The latter was built in the reign of Queen Anne, and contains one bell. There is a piscina in the chancel, and another at the south-east end of the nave. Near the latter is a niche which probably once contained a statue. The organ was given by a Mrs. Wodehouse. The church, in 1863, was restored, fitted with handsome open seats of oak, and partly paved with encaustic tiles, at a cost of £200. The School, with mistress's house attached, is a neat thatched building, erected by Lord Wodehouse in 1830, and attended by about 25 children. It is supported by the present Lord Wodehouse. The Town Lands, left by John Sayer in 1391, are undefinably intermingled with Lord Wodehouse's estate, and for many years he and his predecessors have paid for them a yearly rent of £24. 9s. 4d., which is carried to the poor rates, together with £1. 16s., received as the rent of an acre of land in Barnham Broom, which was obtained at the enclosure in exchange for other land belonging to this parish. The chief residents are—The Rev. Francis Raikes, M.A., rector of Carleton Forehoe and Crownthorpe, Rectory; Thomas Bowhill, parish clerk; Samuel Laskey, shopkeeper; Wm. Rudledge, shoemaker; Peter Thurling, carpenter; Maria Wilby, schoolmistress; Matthew Green, Glebe Farm; and John Thurlow Thwaites, Church Farm. Post via Wymondham.

COLTON, a parish and scattered village, 8 miles W. of Norwich, contains 228 inhabitants, and 912 acres of land, belonging to Captain F. Ives, Mr. Stephen Hipkin, and Major-General Daveney, but forming part of the manor of Costessey. The Church (St. Andrew) is a neat structure in the decorated style, and comprises nave, chancel, north porch, and square tower with three bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1850 by the late John Daveney, Esq., who enriched all the windows with stained glass. The same gentleman, in 1855, presented a fine organ with twelve stops, and endowed it with the interest of £550 three per cents. The chancel-screen is well carved, and the seats have handsome poppies. Inside the south door is a holy water stoup. Here are tablets of the Daveney, Pooley, and Ives families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 9s. 9d., was augmented in 1728 with £200 of Queen Anne's Bounty, £120 given by the Rev. Henry Rix, and £80 given by the parishioners. The Lord Chancellor is patron, and the Rev. Henry Girdlestone, M.A., of Landford, Wilts., is the incumbent. The tithes have been commuted for £305 a year. In the village is a Library, established in 1852, and now containing above 200 volumes. A house and 3 acres of land in Colton, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ acres in Barnham Broom, let for about £11 a year, were purchased with £60 left by the Rev. Henry Rix in 1726. Out of the rent are paid 13s. 4d. for land tax; £1. 1s. for a fee farm rent; 10s. for a distribution of bread; 10s. for a sermon; 1s. to the clerk; and £5 towards the support of the School, which has also a yearly rent-charge of £5, left by Elizabeth Brown in 1732, out of Captain Ives' estate, £5 from the Norwich Diocesan Society, £10 from the rector and parishioners, and £5 from the Rev. Henry Daveney, the officiating minister. The School is a pretty brick edifice, which was built in 1855 at a cost of £250. The poor have 20s. a year out of Mr. Hipkins' estate, left by James Seaborne in 1704. The Fuel Allotment, 10 acres, was awarded at the enclosure in 1801, and is let for £20, which is distributed in coals. The chief residents are—The Rev. Henry Daveney, curate; Thos. Bales, vict., Black-a-moor; Henry Dunnell, blacksmith; John Eagling, wheelwright; Hannah Fields, schoolmistress; Sarah Horstead, shopkeeper; Wm. Norton, bricklayer; Robert Tuck, carpenter, beerhouse, and shopkeeper; Christopher Dunnell, and George Grand, shoemakers; and Thos. Bales, James Comer, Robert Gaff, and George Moore, farmers. Post via Norwich.

COSTESSEY, or Cossey, is a large village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile in length, pleasantly situated in the vale of the Wensum, 4 miles N.W. by W. of Norwich. Its parish contains 1047 inhabitants and 3040 acres of land. The common, comprising 270 acres, was enclosed in 1860. Lord Stafford owns the greater part of the soil, and is lord of the manor, which extends into several other parishes, and in which the fines are arbitrary. His lordship resides at his ancient family mansion—COSTESSEY HALL, which is delightfully seated in a beautiful and well-wooded park of 900 acres, crossed by a rivulet, and bounded on the north by the winding stream of the Wensum, and on the south by the road from Norwich to East Dereham. The park contains some of the finest forest trees in the county, and the vicinity is much celebrated for its diversified features of hill and dale. The old hall is an extensive pile of brick in the plain Tudor style, with battlements and square windows. It forms three sides of a quadrangle, and the projecting wings are terminated by corbie-stepped gables, crowned by square pinnacles. This house was erected by Sir Henry Jerningham, Kt., in the reign of Elizabeth, and will be pulled down when the new and splendid mansion, which is now attached to it, (and was commenced by the late Lord Stafford, about thirty years ago,) is completed. The new building is also of brick, and is a fine specimen of Tudor architecture. It contains many fine paintings, one of which is a portrait of Queen Mary, by Holbein; another represents Thomas, Earl of Arundel, and his Countess Alethea, seated under a canopy, with all their children around them, designed by Vandyck, but finished by Philip Frutiers, of Antwerp, in 1640; and a third contains portraits of James II. and his family. Attached to the hall is the family Roman Catholic Chapel, a handsome edifice in the perpendicular style, erected from a design by Edward Jerningham, Esq., and measuring 90 feet long, 25 wide, and 20 high. It is chiefly copied from the chapel of King's College, Cambridge, and has 20 noble windows, filled with exquisite stained glass of inestimable value, collected from various monasteries on the continent. The manor was given by the Norman Conqueror to Alan, Earl of Richmond. After passing through various families, it was granted by Queen Mary to her vice-chamberlain, Sir Henry Jernegan, or Jerningham, who founded the hall, which has ever since been the seat of his family, which was distinguished even before the conquest, one of its members having obtained several manors in Norfolk from Canute, as a reward for the services he had rendered to Sweyne, King of Denmark, when he invaded England. Henry Jerningham, Esq., was created a baronet in 1621. His descendant, the late Sir George Jerningham, was heir-general of the bodies of Sir William Howard, and Mary Stafford, his wife, Baron and Baroness Stafford. Sir Wm. Howard was created Baron Stafford, after espousing the heiress of the Stafford family, in 1640; but being iniquitously attainted as a conspirator in the supposed Popish plot, he was beheaded in 1678, when all his honours were forfeited. By the reversal of this unjust attainder in 1825, Sir George Jerningham succeeded to the title of Baron Stafford, and assumed the name of Stafford by sign-manual in 1826. On his death in 1851, he was succeeded by his son, Henry Valentine Stafford-Jerningham, the third and present BARON STAFFORD, who has large estates in Shropshire and Staffordshire, including a handsome seat called Shiffnall Manor, and a baronial castle at Stafford; the latter of which was partly rebuilt in the five years succeeding 1809. His nephew, Augustus Fredk. Fitzherbert Stafford-Jerningham, Esq., is the heir presumptive. The parish Church (St. Edmund) is a large structure, comprising nave, chancel, and tower. The latter contains five bells, and is surmounted by a neat wooden spire. The building was originally in the decorated style, but the heads of the windows of the nave have been bricked up and have a very ugly appearance. The chancel has a pretty east window, and contains several tablets of the Jerningham and Waldegrave families, and one in memory of Captain Sir Wm. Bolton, R.N. The church has been recently re-roofed and repaired by the patrons and incumbent at a cost of £75. Here is a handsomely-carved screen, and here were formerly three guilds. The rectorial tithes, &c., belong to the Great Hospital, in Norwich, (see page 234,) together with the patronage of the perpetual curacy, which is certified at £40, and now worth £175 per annum. The Rev. James Williams Evans, M.A., is the present incumbent, and has 51 acres of glebe. The Baptist Chapel has 130 sittings, and is a plain brick building, erected in 1822, and now under the ministry of the Rev. John Ivory. The Roman Catholic Chapel, dedicated to St. Walstan, was built in 1841, and is of brick, in the early-English style, having narrow lancet windows, some of which are filled with stained glass, the work of a native artist. Attached to it is a large burial ground, and also a house for the priest, the Very Rev. Frederick Charles Husenbeth, D.D. The National School, built in 1837, at a cost of £160, is a small brick edifice, attended by 60 children. The British School is a similar building, erected in the same year, and attended by 40 children. The Roman Catholic School is a good brick structure in the Tudor style, erected in 1820 by the late, and entirely supported by the present Lord Stafford. It is attended by about 80 children. The poor parishioners have £2. 2s. a year from 1a. 1r. of land, given by an unknown donor, and a yearly rent-charge of 30s., left by John Hyrne. Lord Stafford, though a Roman Catholic, is extremely benevolent to the poor of all denominations, and allows them to gather fuel in his extensive plantations on certain days in the year. There is a Lodge of Odd Fellows at the Swan Inn, and a Benefit Society at the White Hart. The Corn Mill on the river Wensum is a fine building of white brick, erected in 1858 on the site of an old mill. It is now occupied by Mr. Henry Utting Culley.

COSTON parish, on the river Yare, 4 miles N.N.E. of Hingham, has only 58 inhabitants, and 342A. 2R. 16P. of land, nearly all in one farm belonging to Lord Wodehouse. The Church (St. Michael) is a small neat edifice of pure early-English character, and comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. The windows are all lancet-shaped, except that at the east end, which is an ugly square-headed perpendicular one. The porch is evidently of later date than the rest of the church, and the principal entrance was doubtlessly by the north doorway, inside which is the holy water stoup. The chancel arch is sharply pointed and narrow, and terminates in a tie. The steps leading to the rood-loft remain entire. There is a large aumbry in the chancel, and behind the pulpit is a piscina. In 1850, the nave was fitted with open seats at a cost of £70, derived from the sale of the late Archdeacon's portrait. Mr. C. C. Atkins, at the same time, restored and repaired the stonework at a cost of £20, and the rector repaired the chancel. The rectory, certified at £21, was always held by the Archdeacon of Norfolk, till 1855, when it was consolidated with the Vicarage of Runhall. It is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich and Lord Wodehouse alternately, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Robert Brown Slipper, M.A., who has 8a. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £95. 5s., and a neat Rectory House, which was built in 1857, at a cost of £600, on the site of the old palace of the Archdeacons. The School is supported by Lord Wodehouse, and attended by about 25 children. It is held in a cottage, but a new building is contemplated. The chief residents are the rector; Charles Cadywold Atkins, farmer, land agent and valuer; Robert Orton, schoolmaster; Edward Nicholls, vict. Coach and Horses. Post via Wymondham.

CROWNTHORPE, a small village and parish, 2 miles W.N.W. of Wymondham, has 97 inhabitants, and 685 acres of land, all the property of Lord Wodehouse, except the glebe, and 100 acres belonging to Mr. William Rose. The Great Eastern Railway passes through the parish. The Church (St. James) is a small structure, comprising nave and chancel under one roof, south porch, and square tower with one bell. It is chiefly of the early-English period, but some of the windows are plain perpendicular insertions, with square heads. The nave has arches on either side, now blocked up, but, which are supposed to have once opened into chapels. The lower part of the chancel screen, the ancient font, and a fine early-English double piscina still remain, and here are tablets of the Watson, Bunn, and Buckle families. The pulpit was presented by the late rector, and has three well carved panels representing scenes from the life of Christ. The church was re-roofed and fitted with open seats in 1844. The rectory was valued in K.B. at £4. 12s. 6d., and now has a yearly rent-charge of £150, awarded in 1841, in lieu of tithes. Lord Wodehouse is patron, and the Rev. Francis Raikes, M.A., of Carleton Forehoe, is the incumbent. The glebe here in 16A. 16p. The parish was enclosed in 1777, and the poor have 10s. a year from Hendry's Charity. (See Wymondham.) The chief residents are—Mr. Joseph Williams Howlett; Mrs. Frances Morris; Joseph Gilman Howlett and John Smith farmers; Meshach Barker, blacksmith; George Gotts, bricklayer; Edward Thompson, jun., parish clerk; and John Yeomans, gardener. Post via Wymondham.

DEOPHAM, or Deephams parish, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. of Hingham, includes the small village of Deopham Green, many scattered houses, 483 inhabitants, and 1626 acres of land, belonging to a number of proprietors, and lying in two manors, of which Lord Wodehouse and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords. The latter are also appropriators of the rectorial tithes, which are leased to the Exors. of W. S. Millard, Esq., and have been commuted for £377. 13s. 5d. a year. The Dean and Chapter of Canterbury are patrons of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B., at £5. 7s. 11d., and augmented, from 1716 to '18, with £70, given by them, £130, given by the Rev. Henry Rix, and £200 of Q.A.B., all laid out in 23 acres of land at Shipdham. The Rev. Hibbert Wanklyn is the incumbent, and has a neat brick residence near the church, erected in 1852, at a cost of £600; and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £190. 2s. 9d. The Church (St. Andrew) is a finely proportioned and spacious structure, consisting of a lofty nave with aisles and clerestory, a chancel, a south porch, and a massive square tower. The latter, which is in the perpendicular style, and contains five bells, rises to the height of 100 feet, and is surmounted at the angles by octagonal turrets, and ornamented with crosses. The nave is of the early-decorated period, and has five lofty arches on each side, resting on triangular pillars on the north and octagonal ones on the south side: it has a fine open timber roof, the spandrels of which rest on carved corbels. The chancel is of later date, being in the perpendicular style, and having a plain roof. It contains a large piscina, and sedilia for three priests, and there are piscine and the remains of painted screens at the east ends of the aisles, where there were formerly chapels. The tower arch is lofty and very fine, but the west window is nearly bricked up. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are about to restore the chancel, and the rest of this fine building will shortly undergo a similar process. The National School, a neat brick building with residence attached, was built in 1851, and is attended by about 33 children. A large Lime-tree, 90 feet high, was cut down in the parish, in 1705, the trunk of which was from $8\frac{1}{2}$ to 16 yards in girth. The Primitive Methodists have two small chapels here. In 1726, the Rev. Henry Rix left £60 for schooling poor children, &c., and it was laid out in the purchase of 4A. 1R. 32p. of land, now let for £12, out of which 32s. are paid for teaching four poor children, 10s. for a sermon, and 1s. to the clerk, and the rest is distributed in bread among the parishioners. The Charter Acre was exchanged at the enclosure for 1A. 38p., let for £5, of which 11s. are paid annually to the sheriff, for renewing the "town charter," which exempts the parishioners from serving on juries, and the residue is carried to the church rates. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1814, consists of 14A. 2R. 13p., let for about £20 a year, which is distributed in Coals.

Millard George, The Church Farm

EASTON, a village and parish on the Dereham road, 6 miles W. by N. of Norwich, has 233 inhabitants, and 1541 acres of land, lying mostly in Lord Stafford's manor of Costessey; but the greater part of the soil belongs to T. T. Berney and Robert Fellowes, Esqrs. The latter is patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £7. 11s. 10d., and augmented with £400 in 1796. The Rev. J. C. Matchett, M.A., of Norwich, is the incumbent. The Church (St. Peter) is a small structure about a quarter of a mile west of the village, and comprises, nave, chancel, north aisle, clerestory, south porch, and brick bellcot. The latter was built in 1848, but the tower fell down in 1778, and its ruins may still be seen. The windows are all plain perpendicular, but the original style of the building appears to have been transitional Norman, and the doorway is a good specimen of that period, having a pointed arch with the star ornament, &c. This was only discovered a few years since, when it and the fine Purbeck marble font, which is of the same age, were cleared of their coverings of plaster. In 1851 a gallery was erected and an organ presented by J. H. Gurney, Esq., M.P. Here are marble tablets to Ambrose Mears and Philip Vincent, Esqrs. Cardinal Easton, who flourished in the reign of Richard II., was a native of this parish. Here was a heath of 60a., till 1850, when it was enclosed. The tithes were commuted in 1845, for £175 a year. Easton Lodge is occupied as a shooting box by J. W. C. Ewart, Esq., of Leicestershire. A few years ago a number of rare British silver coins were discovered here. The School, a neat brick building, erected in 1857, at a cost of £65, on land given by R. Fellowes, Esq., is attended by about 30 children, and supported by subscription.

HACKFORD parish, 2 miles E. of Hingham, has 222 inhabitants, and 721a. of land, belonging to Lord Wodehouse, and Messrs. James Howes and James Matthews, but the former is lord of the manor. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a small building in the early-decorated style, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and tower. The latter contains one bell, and has a conical roof. In the porch is a fine holy-water stoup on a carved pedestal with a canopy; and in the chancel are sedilia, and a piscina with an opening at the side. The steps to the rood loft still remain. The gallery was erected in 1827, and in 1841 the building was thoroughly repaired. In 1857, new pulpit, reading-desk, and altar rails, of oak, were given by the rector. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 15s. 10d., and now at £220. B. Gurdon, Esq., is patron, and the Rev. M. B. Darby, M.A., of Hingham, is the incumbent, and has 23 acres of glebe. The Fuel Allotment, 10a., was awarded at the enclosure, in 1807, and is let for £14 a year. The rector supports a school here for about 20 children. Post via Wymondham.

HINGHAM, which gives name to a deanery, is a small market town, consisting of a large square of good houses and shops, with several narrow streets, pleasantly seated on rising ground, near a large lake or mere, which covers more than 20 acres, abounds in pike, eels, and other fish, and is supplied by several copious springs, which give rise to a rivulet, flowing eastward to the Yare. It is distant 14 miles W.S.W. of Norwich, $9\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. by E. of East Dereham, 6 miles W. of Wymondham, 3 miles W. of Kimberley Station, and 97 miles N.E. by N. of London. Its Market, formerly held every Wednesday, was revived about 25 years ago, after being long obsolete, and is now held on Tuesday, when some business is done in corn, cattle, &c., at the Cock and White Hart Inns. It has three large annual fairs for stock, &c., held March 7th, Whit-Tuesday, and October 2nd. Its parish has increased its population since the year 1801, from 1203 to 1605 souls, and contains 3645 acres of land, partly in the Rectory Manor, and the Rev. W. B. Hurnard's manor of Gurney's, but mostly in Hingham Manor, of which Lord Wodehouse is lord. The common (800A.) was enclosed in 1781. The manor of Hingham was held during the 13th and 14th centuries by the Marshals, Earls of Pembroke, and passed from them to the Morleys, and from the latter to the Wodehouses. The Hall, a large and handsome brick mansion on the north side of the town, stands on a well-wooded lawn of 50 acres, and commands extensive views. It is the seat of Alfred Muskett, Esq., who purchased it in 1858, and has since considerably improved it. The Lodge, the property and residence of the Misses Waskett, is a neat house, a mile N.E. of the town; and Gurney's Manor, the handsome seat of the Rev. W. B. Hurnard, M.A., is surrounded by pleasant grounds. The Church (St. Andrew) is a noble building in the early-decorated style of architecture, of which it is a fine example. It comprises a lofty nave with aisles and clerestory, a spacious chancel, a south porch, and a massive square tower, rising to the height of 120 feet, and containing a peal of eight musical bells. It was rebuilt in 1316, by its rector, Remigius de Hethersete, and its patron, John le Marshal. Several chapels and numerous images decorated its interior, prior to the Reformation. Trinity chapel, at the north-east corner, is now dilapidated, but formerly had a fine stained-glass window, with an inscription, which Blomefield read thus:—"Thys window ys ye mayden cost of Hengham," from which it was supposed to have been glazed at the cost of the ladies of the town. The nave is separated from the aisles by six finely pointed arches on either side resting on quatrefoil columns; and its roof is of open timber, but much lower than the original pitch. The aisle roofs have shields on the hammer beams. A window in the south aisle was filled with stained-glass by the Rev. W. C. Hodgson, in memory of his mother, in 1859; and at the same time a gallery, which blocked up the magnificent tower-arch was removed, and a new font was obtained, thus considerably improving the appearance of the interior. On the north side of the chancel is a noble canopied monument, reaching from the floor to the roof, richly decorated with stone imagery and tracery; and though the brass inscriptions are gone, it appears, from the arms remaining, to have been raised to the memory of Thomas Lord Morley, baron of Rye, and marshal of Ireland, who died in 1435. Here are also tablets of the Watson, Cary, Amyas, Heyhoe, and Browne families, and a brass to the memory of Capt. F. Wodehouse. The large seven-light east window is in the perpendicular style, and is filled with beautiful stained glass, purchased on the continent by the late Lord Wodehouse, in 1813, and representing in figures as large as life, the Crucifixion, the Descent from the Cross, the Resurrection, the Ascension, Adam and Eve, Moses, Aaron, St. Andrew, &c., all much admired for the beauty and brilliancy of their colours. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £24. 18s. 4d., is in the gift of Lord Wodehouse, and incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. W. Wodehouse, M.A., who has a good residence, 33A. 3R. 3P. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £1260. 12s. 3d., awarded in 1842, in lieu of tithes. In 1605, Robert Peck, M.A., was rector here, and being a man "of a very violent schismatical spirit," he pulled down the rails, levelled the altar, and sunk the whole chancel a foot below the nave; but being prosecuted for it by Bishop Wren, he fled to New England, where he and some of his parishioners founded a new colony by the name of Hingham, in which many of their posterity still remain. He promised never to desert those who emigrated with him, but hearing that the bishops were deposed, he left them to shift for themselves, and returned here in 1646, and died in 1656. Sir Ralph de Hingham, Kt., was a native of this parish, and Justice of the King's Bench, in the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I.; but being found guilty of bribery and corruption, he was fined 7000 marks, and as he did not immediately pay, he was banished, with nine more of the twelve judges, who had been convicted of similar crimes. He ultimately paid the fine, and was made Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, in the first of Edward II., but died in the same year. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. That of the former, built in 1836, at a cost of £475, is now under the ministry of the Rev. Frederick G. Andrews. Petty Sessions are held at the White Hart Inn, on the first Tuesday in every month.

Hingham Endowed School was founded, and endowed with a valuable estate, by William Parlett, in 1727, for the support of a master and usher, to teach and instruct freely in the Greek and Latin tongues, and also in English, writing, and arithmetic, all the sons of the inhabitants of Hingham, Woodrising, and Southburgh. He directed that the master should be a graduate of one of the Universities, and should have two-thirds, and the usher one-third, of the clear yearly income, and that both should be natives of Norfolk or the city of Norwich. In 1728, Sarah Day gave £40 towards purchasing or building the school, on condition that one boy should be admitted from Scoulton, on the nomination of the minister of that parish. In 1750, Sir John Wodehouse conveyed to the trustees $1\frac{1}{2}$ rood of land, on which a dwelling-house and school-room were built. Part of the School Estate was sold for the redemption of the land-tax, and some other parts were exchanged at the enclosure, in 1783. It now consists of a farm-house, and 122A. 0R. 4P. of land, let for £220 per annum. On the 24th June, 1856, a new scheme was sanctioned by the Court of Chancery, vesting the estates and the management of the school in eleven trustees, who are empowered to borrow the necessary sums for rebuilding, repairing, or otherwise improving the buildings, and to appoint the master, usher, and other officers. The head-master must be a member of the established church, and may not exercise any other office or employment without the consent of the trustees, who can remove him at pleasure. He has a good dwelling-house with accommodation for 40 boarders, a yearly salary of £40, and one-half of the capitation fees paid by the scholars. The usher has an annual stipend of £75. All boys of the age of 8 years or upwards, of any religious denomination, of good conduct, and able to read and write, are eligible for admission, on payment of an annual capitation fee of £4. Boarders pay £25 a year additional. Books, stationery, and other materials, are supplied to the boys at cost price, and prizes to the extent of £10 a year are given by the trustees. There are now 10 boarders and 25 day boys. Mr. Thomas Spencer Turner is the present head-master; and Mr. Henry Kendrick, usher. The National School for boys was built in 1841, and that for girls in 1857. They are plain brick buildings, attended by 75 boys and 75 girls, and principally supported by the rector. The poor have three yearly rent-charges, amounting to £5, left by Francis Seaborn, in 1655, Robert Baldwin, in 1677, and Christopher Adcock, in 1705. Thomas Heyhoe, in 1708, left 2A. of land, (now let for £7,) and directed 10s. to be paid yearly for a sermon; 1s. to the clerk, and the remainder of the rent to be distributed in bread among the poor. In 1724, William Thurrold left land for a weekly distribution of bread; and in 1808, it was exchanged for 2A. 3R., now let for £10 a year. Edward Payne, in 1734, gave land for the benefit of the poor, and it was exchanged, about 1808, for 2A. 2R. 8P., now let to ten labourers, at rents amounting to £7. 10s. At the enclosure, in 1783, an allotment of 2A. 2R. 24P. was awarded in respect of the above-named charity lands, and is now let for £9, half of which is applied to the use of the church. At the same time, a Fuel Allotment of 34A. was awarded to the poor, and it is now let for £30, which is distributed, with most of the other charities, on St. Thomas's day and Candlemas day, chiefly in coals. The Church Estate, purchased with £20 in the reign of Henry VIII., was exchanged, at the enclosure, for 8A. 16P., let for £23. 5s. a year.

HONINGHAM is a neat village on the East Dereham road, 7 miles W. by N. of Norwich. Its parish is in St. Faith's Union, and has 328 inhabitants, and 2563 acres of land, all the property of the Right Hon. and Rev. Henry Wm. Powlett, Lord Bayning, M.A., who is lord of the manor and patron and incumbent of the discharged vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £8. 12s. 6d., and is now worth £655, with that of East Tuddenham annexed to it. His lordship resides at HONINGHAM HALL, a fine Elizabethan mansion, in an extensive and well wooded park of about 100 acres. This house was erected (except the more modern south front), by Lord Chief Justice Richardson, and afterwards sold to the Hon. William Townshend, fourth son of Viscount Townshend, who married the heiress of Lord William Powlett. His son Charles was created Lord Bayning, of Foxley, (Berks), in 1797, and was for many years ambassador to the Court of Spain. He died in 1819, and was succeeded by his eldest son, Charles, who died unmarried in 1823, when his brother, the present lord, succeeded, and assumed the names of his maternal great grandfather in lieu of his patronymic. The Church (St. Andrew) stands a mile east of the village, and is a handsome building of the decorated period, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and lofty square tower. The latter is surmounted by figures of the four evangelists at the angles, and contains four bells. In the porch is a holy water stoup, and in the church are tablets of the Townshend family and Baron Richardson. The interior of the church is well fitted, and was restored a few years ago. The windows have also been recently renewed, and several of them are filled with beautiful stained glass. Two of those in the chancel represent scenes from the life of our Saviour, and were inserted in 1860, by Lord Bayning, in memory of the Hon. Anne and Annabella Townshend. That at the east end was inserted by subscription in 1850. The tithes of Honingham were commuted in 1840, for £543. 5s. to the impropiators, and £210 to the vicar. The Vicarage House and School are in East Tuddenham parish. About 1790, the Rev. Roger Du Quesne charged his estate here with the yearly payment of 30s. for the poor of this parish, 10s. for the clerk, and 10s. for distribution in religious books amongst the poor of East Tuddenham.

KIMBERLEY is a small village, scattered round a green, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. of Wymondham, and comprises in its parish 112 inhabitants, and 1507A. 1R. 19P. of land. The whole, except the poor's land, is the property of the Rt. Hon. Lord Wodehouse, of KIMBERLEY HOUSE, which is situated $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile E. of the village, in a beautiful park, occupying 646A. 3R. 4P., of which 276A. 1R. 31P. are in the Downham division of Wymondham parish, 58A. 2R. in Carlton Forehoe, and the rest in Kimberley. The first seat here belonged to the Fastolff family, and stood on the west side of the village, until Sir John Wodehouse, who married the heiress of Sir John Fastolff, demolished it, and erected a moated hall with a tower, at the west end of the park. This mansion became dilapidated in the 17th century, and at the beginning of the 18th, Sir John Wodehouse built the present house, which stands on the east side of the park, in the parish of Wymondham, and was afterwards enlarged and beautified by Sir Armine Wodehouse, who added four towers at the angles. It is a large and handsome brick mansion, with many convenient rooms, and some fine paintings, one of which is a portrait of Vanduyck, painted by himself, when young. Queen Elizabeth, in her progress through Norfolk in 1578, lodged at the old hall, and the dress of rich brocade which she wore, is still in possession of the family. The park is richly ornamented with wood and water, and well stocked with deer. The rivulet on the west side of the hall, divides the parishes, and is expanded into a lake, apparently environing a large wood of venerable oaks, below which the serpentine stream bounds a fine lawn. The WODEHOUSE FAMILY has long been settled in Norfolk, and derives its descent through a succession of knights from the time of Henry I.; one of whom distinguished himself at Agincourt. The late Sir John Wodehouse, the seventh baronet of his family, represented the county of Norfolk in two Parliaments, and was created Baron Wodehouse, of Kimberley, in 1797, and died, aged 98, in 1834, when he was succeeded by his son John, who died in 1846, and was succeeded by his grandson John, the present Lord Wodehouse, who was born in 1826, graduated first class in classics at Christ Church, Oxford, in 1847; was under-secretary of state for foreign affairs from Dec. 1852, to April 1856, and from June 1859, to July 1861; envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Russia from May 1856, to March 1858; and ambassador extraordinary at the coronation of King Christian IX., of Denmark, in 1863. His son and heir the Hon. John Wodehouse, was born in 1848. Kimberley Church (St. Peter) is a small but neat edifice in the early-decorated style of architecture, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with two bells. The upper part of the tower was rebuilt in 1631 by the Wodehouse family. The interior of the church was fitted with richly carved oak seats, pulpit, and reredos, in 1835, by the first Lord Wodehouse, and an organ and gallery were given by the Dowager Lady Wodehouse, in 1839. The chancel contains a piscina and two beautiful stained glass windows, but is disfigured by a modern and nearly flat roof. Here are several marble tablets and old brasses of the Wodehouse family. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6.12s.3d., was augmented in 1722 with £200, given by Sir J. Wodehouse, and in 1744, with £200 of Queen Anne's bounty. It is consolidated with the rectory of Barnham-Broom, as noticed at page 572. The rectorial and vicarial tithes were both commuted for land at the enclosure. The School, a neat Elizabethan building, attended by about 40 children, was erected in 1850, by the Hon. Mrs. Wodehouse, and is supported by Lord Wodehouse. The Dereham branch of the Great Eastern Railway passes through the parish, and has a station near the village. The poor have £4.10s. a year as the rent of 2A.2R. of land awarded at the enclosure in 1811. The chief residents are—The Right Hon. Lord Wodehouse, Kimberley House; Jas. Bush, shopkeeper; Wm. Coleman, blacksmith; John Fox, brickmaker; Hy. Kiddle, parish clerk; Edw. Odey, butler and house steward; Thos. Rudledge, wheelwright; Thos. Selfe, station master; Eliz. Spinks, schoolmistress; and Thos. Cubitt (Manor), James Cunningham (Park), Edw. Matthews, and Richd. Smith, farmers.

MARLINGFORD parish, in the vale of the Yare, 6 miles W. of Norwich, has 224 inhabitants, and 617 acres of land, mostly the property of Thomas L'Estrange Ewen, Esq., the lord of the manor, and partly belonging to John Race, Esq. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a very plain thatched fabric, with nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. It has a Norman doorway and a piscina, and in the chancel are some tablets of the Greene family. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 12. 8d.; and was augmented in 1725-'6, with £200 of Q.A.B., and £200 given by Rt. Fellowes, Esq. The tithes have been commuted for £162 per annum. Thos. Greene, Esq., is patron, and the Rev. John Nelson Cooper, B.A., is the incumbent, and has 32 acres of glebe and a good residence near the church. The School, attended by 25 children, is a small building erected in 1842; but a new one is about to be built on a piece of land allotted at the enclosure in 1863. The poor have the interest of £10, left by Mary Wright, in 1798.

MORLEY ST. BOTOLPH, 3 miles W.S.W. of Wymondham, has in its parish 278 inhabitants, and 819 acres of land, mostly belonging to Thomas Sutton, Esq., of Morley Hall, and lying in the manor of Shadwells, or Cockerills in Morley. J. B. Graver-Browne, Esq., owns part of the parish. The Church is a neat structure, chiefly in the perpendicular style, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and massive square tower with three bells. The chancel was repaired and the roof opened by the rector in 1850. The east window is plain decorated, and contains some stained glass. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £14. 11s. 5½., and has the curacy of Morley St. Peter annexed to it, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Chas. Beauchamp Cooper, M.A. The tithes of the two parishes were commuted in 1840 for £580 per annum. The rector greatly enlarged and beautified the Rectory House in 1833. The National School, with residence attached, is a pretty brick and flint structure, erected by Miss Morse in 1847, and attended by about 50 children. In 1732, Elizabeth Browne left the yearly rent-charges of £5 for schooling ten poor children, and £3 for providing them with books and clothing; and Miss Morse in 1847, gave a piece of land to the school, which is now let for £1 a year. The Fuel Allotment, 16a., was awarded at the enclosure in 1815, and is let for £32, which is distributed in coals, in the two parishes of Morley. In 1847, a number of brass Roman Coins was found here in digging a drain. They were mostly of Constantine and some of Licinus, but many of them were in such a state of decomposition that they crumbled to dust in the act of removing. Post via Wymondham.

MORLEY ST. PETER is a parish on the south side of the above, 2½ miles N. by E. of Attleborough, and 3½ miles S.W. of Wymondham. It has 147 inhabitants, and 1009a. of land, mostly the property of J. B. Graver-

Browne, Esq., the lord of the manor, who resides at Morley House, a handsome white brick mansion, erected in 1841-'2 in a fine lawn, well-studded with oak and other trees, and commanding extensive views. The Old Hall, formerly the seat of the Sedleys, is an ancient Elizabethan brick mansion with a centre and two wings, encompassed by a moat. It is now a farmhouse, and behind it is a large ash tree whose branches cover a space of more than 100 yards in circumference. The Woodlands, a pleasantly situated antique building near the church, has recently been restored and improved, and is the residence of Mrs. Frances Graver-Browne. The Church is a small plain structure of perpendicular architecture, consisting of nave, chancel, south porch, and low square tower with a conical roof and one bell. The chancel was re-built by the rector in 1849, and the nave was re-roofed, and fitted with new pulpit and open seats, by the late J. T. Graver-Browne, Esq. Here are marble tablets of the Browne and Sedley families. The Curacy has long been consolidated with the rectory of St. Botolph, which is considered the mother church of both parishes. The chief residents are—John Bathurst Graver-Browne, Esq., Morley House; Mrs. Frances Graver-Browne, The Woodlands; John Hewitt, parish clerk; John Lake, carpenter and wheelwright; and William Anthony, Noah Ayton, David Barker, Francis Canham, Charles Clarke, James Richardson Howell (Old Hall), and John Matthews, farmers. Post via Wymondham.

RUNHALL parish, near the chief source of the river Yare, 12 miles W. of Norwich, and $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. of Hingham, has 246 inhabitants, and 824 acres of land, mostly belonging to Lord Wodehouse, the lord of the manor, impropiator of the great tithes, and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 18s., and augmented from 1742 to 1824, with £1200 of Q.A.B., though now valued at only £60 a year. It has been consolidated with the rectory of Coston since 1855. (See page 577.) The Church (All Saints) is a plain structure of early-English architecture, and comprises nave, south porch, and round tower with one bell. The chancel is in ruins, and the chancel arch is walled up. Two of the windows of the nave are perpendicular, and in the north east corner is a niche for a saint. The old square pews remain, and the interior of the church is very plain and rude. The poor have 10s. a year left by Mrs. Lindsey, out of Mr. Roe's estate. The chief residents are—George Breeze, shoemaker; Murrell Brown, parish clerk, and victualler, Black Horse; John and Lacey Canham, corn millers; William Duffield, shopkeeper; Charles Hardy, blacksmith; Charles Murrell, shopkeeper; and Henry Atkins, William Breeze, Richard Cobb, John Coleman and Isaiah Durrant, farmers. Post via Wymondham.

WELBORNE parish, 11 miles W. of Norwich, and 6 miles E.S.E. of East Dereham, has 200 inhabitants, and 736A. of land, belonging to O. S. Onley, Esq., and a few smaller owners, but James Cuddon, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Church (All Saints) is a picturesque ivy-covered building, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and round tower. The latter has a conical roof, and contains one bell. The windows are early decorated, those in the nave having square heads. The chancel, originally much larger than at present, was built about two centuries ago. The roof is open, and the chancel screen remains. In 1852, the interior was thoroughly restored, and re-fitted with new and handsomely carved open-seats and pulpit, and provided with an organ and gallery, at the expense of the rector and his friends. Here is a marble tablet of the Tinkler family. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 18s. 4d., in the patronage of Mrs. Johnson and incumbency of the Rev. John Barham Johnson, M.A. The glebe here is 43A. 25P., and the tithes were commuted in 1840 for £225 per annum. The Rectory House, is a pretty brick Tudor building, erected in 1847 at a cost of £1300, and situated in pleasant grounds. The parish School is in the same style, and was also erected in 1847. It is supported by the rector and attended by 30 children. At the enclosure in 1811, $3\frac{1}{4}$ A. of land were allotted to the poor, and are now let for £9 a year. Post from Thetford, via Dereham. Here is a wall letter-box, which is cleared at 3 p.m.

WICKLEWOOD, a parish and scattered village, three miles W. of Wymondham and E. of Hingham, contains 1527 acres of land, and had 806 inhabitants in 1861, including 141 in Forehoe Hundred Workhouse, which is described at page 570. Here is a large pond covering $1\frac{1}{2}$ acre, and abounding in pike and other fish. Henry VI. granted Wicklewood a market and two fairs, but they became obsolete more than two centuries ago. The soil belongs to many proprietors, the largest of whom is Lord Wodehouse, lord of the manor of Wicklewood, but here is a small rectorial manor, called Amptners, belonging to A. C. H. Percy, Esq., and the Rev. M. B. Darbie, M.A., as impropiators of the rectorial tithes, and patrons of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 3s. 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., and now in the incumbency of the Rev. William Acton, B.A., for whom a new Vicarage House is about to be erected. The Church (All Saints) is a spacious structure in the perpendicular style, comprising a lofty nave and chancel, with a massive square tower containing two bells, and curiously situated over the south porch. The roof is of open timber, and the steps leading to the rood-loft may still be seen behind the pulpit. The chancel contains sedilia and a piscina, and in the porch is a holy water stoup. The east window is a plain square headed one, and some fragments of stained glass still remain in the north-east window of the nave. Here are mural tablets of the Colman and Stone families. There was formerly in the same burial-ground, another Church, (St. Andrew,) belonging to the rectory, but it was dilapidated in 1367. Here is a National School built in 1841, and attended by 50 children. The Independents have a chapel in the parish. The Fuel Allotment, 12A., was awarded at the enclosure, under an act of the 47th George III., and is let for £17. 10s. a year. The tithes were commuted in 1844, for £340 to the impropiators, and £130 to the vicar.

WRAMPLINGHAM, a parish and scattered village on the Yare, 3 miles N. by E. of Wymondham, has 194 inhabitants and 830 acres of land, belonging to several owners, the largest of whom are the Rev. Hy. E. Lombe (lord of the manor), Mrs. Mary Cann, Mr. Wm. Ringer, and Mr. Frederick Fisher. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) is a small edifice of the decorated period, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and tower. The latter contains three bells, and is round at the base and octagonal above. The chancel was handsomely restored and re-roofed in 1863, and is remarkable for being nearly as long as the nave. It has six single-light early-decorated windows on each side, with mouldings terminating in richly carved heads and foliage. These formerly contained figures of the twelve apostles in stained glass, of which some fragments still remain. A beautiful five-light east window, filled with stained glass, has recently been inserted by the rector. On the east side of the chancel screen is a narrow lancet low side window, now blocked up; there are also remains of sedilia and an aumbry. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 4s. 9½d., is in the patronage of the Rev. Henry Philip Marsham, B.C.L., and in the incumbency of the Rev. Charles Philip Paul Jodrell, M.A., who has a handsome residence, built in 1851 at a cost of £1600, 30 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £266. 7s. 4d. A new School has just been built near the church, at a cost of £200. The chief residents are—the Rev. Chas. P. P. Jodrell, M.A., Rector; Mrs. Mary Ann Cann; Robert Brewster, parish clerk; Jacob L. Brighty, blacksmith and vict., King's Head; Eliza Ann Fisher, schoolmistress; George Fisher, carpenter; Wm. Ringer, farmer, corn merchant, and miller; and Geo. and John Cullyer, Executors of Mary Ann Fisher, and George Read, farmers. Post via Wymondham.

WYMONDHAM, or WINDHAM, is an ancient market town, pleasantly situated on rising ground, upon the Norwich and Thetford turnpike, skirted on two sides by a rivulet, and distant 9 miles S.W. by W. of Norwich, 19 miles N.E. of Thetford, and 100 miles N.E. by N. of London. It consists chiefly of four streets, converging in the centre, and having many ancient houses, shops, &c., and some handsome modern mansions. Two branches of the Great Eastern Railway form a junction about half a mile south of the town, where there is a commodious brick station, erected in 1844. Wymondham was once celebrated for the manufacture of wooden spindles, spoons, and other turnery ware; but this trade is obsolete, having given place many years ago to the weaving of bombasines, crapes, &c., in which employment here were, 30 years ago, above 600 looms, but they have been reduced to less than 60, which are now chiefly engaged in the manufacture of paramattas. In the town is an extensive brewery, belonging to Messrs. Cann and Clarke; and in the parish are several corn mills. The 21st Norfolk or Wymondham Company of RIFLE VOLUNTEERS was formed in 1860, and numbers about 75 men, including some from Hingham and the surrounding villages. The uniform is grey, with black and red facings, and the rifle ranges are at Hingham and Barnham Broom. Robert T. Gurdon, Esq., is captain; Geo. Forrester, Esq., lieutenant; Edm. Larke, Esq., ensign; R. J. Tunaley, Esq., surgeon and honorary secretary; and John Barnard, drill sergeant. Mrs. E. P. Clarke, of Vicar street, has more than 400 specimens of British Birds, preserved by the celebrated Leadbeater, and supposed to be the most complete and splendid collection in the country. The market, held every Friday, is almost extinct, owing to the great facilities afforded by the railway for attending Norwich markets. Corn is sold by sample at the different inns. The Market-cross was built in 1616, and is covered by an octagon roof, supported at the eight angles by wooden pillars, and having a cornice on which are rudely carved the town arms and the various articles of turnery ware for which the town was once famous. It was well restored in 1863, at a cost of £100, raised by subscription, through the exertions of the Rev. W. H. R. Brickmann, B.A. The thick coat of plaster with which it was covered has been removed, thus bringing to light seven windows and a door. The room inside is 25 feet in diameter, and is used as a public reading-room. The beams composing its walls have been stained black, and the interstices white, which has a very pleasing effect. The market and two of the fairs are held under a charter, granted by King John in 1203. Here are now three annual Fairs, viz., on Feb. 14th and May 17th, for horses, lean cattle, &c.; and on Sept. 29th, for pleasure, pedlery, &c. When any of these dates fall on a Saturday, the fair is held on the following Monday, so as not to interfere with Norwich market. The town is well lighted with Gas, from works erected in 1848 by a company of £5 shareholders. Mr. Arthur Glasspoole is the secretary and manager.

The extensive PARISH of Wymondham increased its population from 3567 inhabitants in 1801, to 5485 in 1831, but decreased to 5179 in 1841, and to 4952 in 1861. It comprises 10,559 acres of fertile and well cultivated land, extending from three to four miles round the town, and rising in picturesque undulations from both sides of a tributary stream of the river Yare. It is in Six Divisions, of which the names and population are, Downham, 1177; Market street, 1216; Silfield, 842; Sutton, 398; Town green, 654; and Wattlefield, 665. Market street and Town green comprise the greater part of the town; the former having 277 and the latter 454 acres. They are called the In-soken, and the others the Out-soken. Downham includes the north end of the town, many scattered farm-houses, &c., and Kimberley House and part of the park, (see page 584,) distant 3 miles north. It contains 3648 acres, and belongs chiefly to H. N. Burroughes, Esq., Lord Wodehouse, Mrs. C. Lynes, and Wm. Atkins Bignold, Esq. The latter has a handsome seat called Downham Grove, about a mile N.W. of the town. Silfield has 2015 acres, mostly belonging to Lieut.-Col. Hobart, Miss Jermy, and Edmund Larke, Esq., and extending nearly three miles to the south and east. It includes Stanfield Hall, a fine Tudor mansion of brick, nearly encompassed by a moat, and formerly a seat of the Flowerdews, and afterwards of the Jermys, but now unoccupied. The entrance hall is very fine and has a richly groined roof, and the house contains some noble rooms and several pictures of the Branthwayte, Beevor, and Preston families. The Rev. George Preston, who died here in 1838, built a neat chapel, adjoining the hall, but it is now converted into kitchen offices. Stanfield Hall, has obtained an unenviable notoriety from the remarkably cold-blooded and boldly planned murders committed there on the night of the 28th November, 1848, by James Blomfield Rush, who, having some monetary affairs to settle that day with Isaac Jermy, Esq., recorder of Norwich, who then lived at the hall, thought to destroy all evidence of his debt by slaying his creditor. He therefore proceeded to the front of the house, disguised and armed, and Mr. Jermy coming to the door and looking out into the night, was shot dead in the porch; his son immediately ran to the place, but only to meet the same fate. The murderer then entered the house and meeting young Mrs. Jermy and her maid in the passages, fired upon and wounded both, after which he made his escape, and by various ingenious devices tried to avert suspicion from himself and direct it to innocent persons. He was however arrested, and found guilty on the clearest evidence, and though he defended himself in a speech which lasted 13½ hours, he failed to make any impression on the jury, and on the 21st April, 1849, was hanged at Norwich Castle, but made no confession of his guilt. Rush, though professing a great deal of piety, had long lived a depraved and licentious life, and richly merited his doom. Suton division extends more than three miles south-west from the town, and contains 1950 acres, mostly the property of H. N. Burroughes and W. R. Cann, Esqs., the former of whom owns Burfield Hall, which is now unoccupied, and the latter has a handsome seat here, called Cavick House. Wattlefield is about 3 miles south of the town, and comprises 1966 acres, mostly belonging to John Mitchell, Esq. of Wattlefield Hall, who about 20 years ago built here a neat Chapel of Ease, for the convenience of the inhabitants of the southern parts of the parish.

These divisions form twelve MANORS, whose names and owners are as follow :—Wymondham Reginæ or Abbot's, the Rev. Hy. Evans Lombe ; Gris-haugh, Cromwell, and Rusteyn's, Lieut.-Col. Hobart ; Brockdish, C. Stoughton, Esq. ; Gonville's, John Mitchell, Esq. ; Choseleys, the Corporation of Norwich ; Stanfield Hall, Miss Jermy ; Downham Hall, Lord Wodehouse ; Stalworthy's with Burfield Hall and Nothes, H. N. Burroughes, Esq. ; and Palgrave's or Hethersett, Mrs. Caroline S. Lynes. The inhabitants enjoy all the privileges of ancient demesne, being exempt from serving on juries out of the parish, free from tolls at markets and fairs, &c., &c. The town is supposed to be of Roman origin ; and without the smallest evidence to countenance such an opinion, some antiquaries have considered it the Sitomagus of the Itinerary. Its present name is purely Saxon, and the consequence of the place appears to have arisen from the ABBEY, founded here in 1130, by Wm. de Albin, afterwards Earl of Arundel, whose father had obtained from the Norman Conqueror all the manors in this parish, to be held by the service of the King's butler, except Stanfield Hall, which was for some time held by the Warrens and Bigods. The abbey was richly endowed by the founder, as a cell to the Abbey of St. Alban's ; but in 1448, it was constituted an independent abbey for monks of the Benedictine order. The founder gave it his manors of Wymondham, Happisburgh, &c., to which Henry I. added "all wrecks on that part of the coast lying between Eccles, Happisburgh, and Tunstead, and a rent in kind of 2000 eels annually from the village of Hilgay." Its ample revenues were augmented by subsequent benefactions, and amounted to £211. 16s. 6d., per annum at the dissolution, when no crimes were laid to the charge of the Abbot, who, therefore, had an allowance for life of £66. 13s. 4d. a year ; and the monks were found to be blameless, except four, who acknowledged themselves guilty of incontinency. Its possessions were conferred by Henry VIII. on the Earl of Surrey, who was attainted and beheaded in 1547.

The ABBEY CHURCH was a large cruciform structure, erected partly on the site of the old parish church, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary and St. Thomas-a-Becket. It consisted of a choir, nave, transepts, and two aisles, with a tower standing in the centre, (still called the abbey steeple,) and another at the west end, built in 1410, by subscription, to receive the five bells of the parish ; the west end of the edifice being then used by the parishioners, and the east end appropriated exclusively to the monks. When the monastery was destroyed, the parishioners obtained a grant of the church with its chapels and its beautiful choir or chancel ; but the latter and the south aisle were destroyed by Sergeant Flowerdew, who came to superintend the demolition of the abbey. The inhabitants rebuilt the south aisle, and converted the east part of the nave into the chancel, so that the present Parish Church consists of a lofty nave with triforium and clerestory, north and south aisles, a north porch with parvise, a large square western tower, and an octagon tower at the east end. The only remaining parts of the choir are a few fragments of the walls, and a lofty and beautiful perpendicular arch in the eastern face of the octagon tower, having richly-moulded piers with embattled capitals. All the other ruins, at the east end and south side of the church, were cleared away in 1834, when two bodies were found wrapped in lead, and supposed to be the remains of Lady Albin and her infant, who, with the founder of the abbey, and many other of the Albin and Clifton families, were interred in the choir. Externally, the church is mainly in the perpendicular style, though the tracery of some of the windows is decorated ; and the south aisle, which is shorter and narrower than the nave and north aisle, and of later date than the rest of the building, is entirely of plain decorated character. The eastern tower is square to the ridge of the nave, and octagonal above. The lower part is engaged in the north aisle, and was in the original south aisle, but only opened into them by doors. The second stage has a large three-light perpendicular window on the north and south sides; and the two upper stages have each a two-light window in their cardinal faces, and in the diagonal ones, buttresses resting on the angles of the square part of the tower. There was probably a wooden spire on this tower at some period, as it now terminates abruptly and is much lower than the western one, which, though unfinished, is a very noble structure, rising to the height of more than 142 feet. At each angle of the western tower is a bold octagonal turret, tapering in stages, panelled with flint work, and having the angles shafted and moulded. The lower compartment of its western face has a fine pointed doorway, with shafts in its jambs at considerable distances, and from its great depth, having a wonderfully grand effect. The head is enclosed in a square label forming spandrils, and on each side of the door is a pointed cinquefoiled niche, also having square spandrils. Above is a lofty window of four lights, with unfoliated ogee heads, the central mullion being a large mass of masonry, evidently employed for strength. Over this stage is an ornamental band of chequered flint and stone, the upper string of which is embattled. The next stage has a small two-light window, and above it is a plain flint stage. The belfry in the uppermost stage has a couplet of two-light windows in each face, with tracery of a somewhat decorated character, under a crocketed ogee canopy, the space in the head having a quatrefoil in panel set diagonally. The parapet is of plain brickwork. The north porch, a rich and beautiful specimen of perpendicular architecture, occupies the western bay of the aisle, to which, with its parvise, it is equal in height. It has a fine door-way, with shafts and capitals in the jambs and a deeply moulded architrave; above which is a square label forming spandrils. The front of the parvise is enriched with panels and niches, and surmounted by a parapet, having open quatrefoils in circles, and a pierced battlement above. In the porch are the remains of a clustered column, which appears to have consisted of a central shaft, surrounded by six smaller ones, and to have supported a holy water stoup of early-English character. In the interior of the church, the original Norman predominates, and the massive piers and arches are much varied, both in composition and ornament. The arches on the south side have alternately the embattled fret and the reticulated, the latter being ornamented; some of those on the north side have chevrons on the surface of the archivolt. Most of the piers have lost the shafts and mouldings with which they were formerly enriched, and have been so smoothed down as to be octagon in shape. The triforium is a large and important feature, and like that of Norwich cathedral, consists of a single undivided arch in each bay, not much differing in size or elevation from the pier-arch below, but retaining its shafts and mouldings. The clerestory is mostly perpendicular, and is surmounted by a magnificent open timber roof of considerable pitch, with large star-shaped bosses, richly carved, at the intersections, full length figures of angels with extended wings on the hammer-beams, and smaller figures bearing scrolls on the frames in the centre of each bay. The spandrils are filled with delicate open work, and the corbels are small figures bearing shields. The north aisle is perpendicular, and longer and wider than the nave, and its windows contain some good stained glass. At its east end are the remains of a piscina, and also an aumbry. It has a beautiful coved timber roof, divided into square foliated compartments, and like the nave having a frame between each bay as well as at the centre of the bay, and perforated spandrils. The roof of the south aisle is comparatively plain. A magnificent cinque-cento construction occupies the place usually assigned to the sedilia, and is of a form that might very well answer that purpose. It entirely fills the large Norman arch on the south side of the altar, and consists of three arches, forming deep recesses, with projecting canopies of a semi-circular plan above each; the whole profusely enriched with ornaments of the early revived Italian style. By some, it has been conjectured to be a sepulchral monument, covering the remains of the last abbot; but this is not probable, as it bears no inscription or arms. The font is a beautiful octagonal one, raised on three steps, and enriched with sculpture. The sides of the basin bear the symbols of the evangelists, and angels bearing shields, &c.; and the angles of the octagonal shaft are also enriched with figures. The organ was given by Mr. Farmer in 1793: it has 21 stops, and cost £700. In the church are marble tablets of the Burroughes, Jermy, Cann, and other families. The Bishop of Norwich is appropriator of the great tithes and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £10. 14s. 4d., and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Robert Eden, M.A., who has a large brick residence. The tithes were commuted in 1839, for yearly payments of £2192. 15s. 4d. to John Horner, Esq., lessee of the appropriate rectory; and £799. 4s. 8d. to the vicar.

Here are seven DISSENTING CHAPELS. The Wesleyans have one at Wattlefield, erected about 50 years ago; and the Primitive Methodists have one at Silfield, built in 1840, and another on Town Green, erected in 1855. The Baptist Chapel, in Back lane, was built half a century ago, and the Friends' Meeting House, a mile N.W. of the town, was built in 1687. The first Quakers here, met in an ancient chapel, or lazar-house, which stood upon a bridge over the Westwade rivulet, half a mile N.E. of the town, and was founded by the founder of the abbey, as a cell to the lazars of Burton. The Plymouth Brethren have a chapel on Eastside, built in 1848 of clay lumps, in the Gothic style. The Independent Chapel, now under the ministry of the Rev. John Anderson, was built by ROGER GAY, in 1715, and vested with seven trustees, together with lands and tenements in Wilby and Wymondham, then of the yearly value of £36. 10s., of which he directed that £20 should be paid towards the support of the minister, and the remainder applied, as far as necessary, for the repairs of the chapel, and the residue divided among the poor of the congregation, or applied to such other uses as the trustees and minister should appoint. In 1745, the lands in Wilby were exchanged for a yearly rent-charge of £24 out of lands in Bes-thorpe, now belonging to the Earl of Albemarle. The premises in Wymondham now belonging to this trust, exclusive of the chapel, consist of a house for the minister, and two cottages and 3A. 2R. 28P. of land, let at rents amounting to £19 per annum, which, with the £24 above-named, is carried to one account. In 1813, and subsequent years, considerable sums were expended in enlarging and altering the chapel, and in rebuilding and repairing the cottages; and a large Sunday School was erected behind the chapel in 1840.

FREE GRAMMAR SCHOOL AND OTHER CHARITIES.—Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth granted to certain trustees, for the support of a Free Grammar School, and for other charitable and pious uses, in Wymondham, various lands, tenements, &c., that had belonged to the dissolved Guilds of Corpus Christi, St. Thomas-a-Becket, and St. Peter. The Chapel of St. Thomas-a-Becket, was converted into a school-room, in the early part of the reign of Elizabeth, and is a large and handsome building, in the early-decorated style, consisting of one room 84 feet long, 20 feet wide, and 40 feet high. It is now in a state of dilapidation, its numerous good windows being blocked up, and several small buildings being attached to its south side, where there was once an aisle or lady-chapel, of which the arches remain. It has a fine open timber roof, and a speedy restoration of the whole building is contemplated. In 1672, Robert Dey left a house in Chapelgate street, for the residence of the master, his family, and boarders, and gave £40 to be laid out in land, the rents thereof to be applied in apprenticing poor boys to trades. In 1683, John Verdon sold to the trustees 4 acres of land for this legacy. In 1670,

Thomas Taylor bequeathed his messuages, &c., in Wymondham, for the use of the poor parishioners. Blyth Meadow, 4A. in Wattlefield, was held in trust for the poor of Sutton and Damgate. Under the act of Parliament passed in the 46th Geo. III., for the enclosure of the parish, various charity lands were given in exchange for other lands, and the commissioners, by their award in 1810, set out to the trustees "divers parcels of land, without distinguishing in respect of which of the ancient charity lands such allotments were made." A petition, filed in the Court of Chancery, in 1822, states that these exchanges had so confused the charity lands that the petitioners were unable to ascertain to what charitable purposes the income was applicable; that the income had greatly increased, and the salary of £20, up to that time allowed to the schoolmaster, was insufficient to procure a proper person to fill that office; that many of the old rules had become inconvenient, and that the master's dwelling house was unfit for the purpose;—it was therefore prayed that the court would approve of a new scheme for the future management of the charities. In 1825, the old school-house and two other dwellings were given in exchange to Cornelius Tipple, for an acre of garden ground, &c., and a commodious house for the master's residence. A large room has since been added to the latter, and in it the school is now held. The following are the most important provisions of the new scheme, which was sanctioned by the Court of Chancery, in 1826:—That there shall be 12 trustees and 15 governors; that such of the trustees as reside in Wymondham, and the Vicar, shall be governors, and shall elect others to make up the number 15; that the school and master's house shall be kept in repair out of the rents; that the master must be a clergyman of the church of England, and a graduate of Oxford or Cambridge; that he may be dismissed for misconduct or incapacity, by a majority of the governors; that he shall have a yearly salary of £60; that all such boys of the parish as the governors appoint shall be educated at the school, and instructed by the master and his assistants, in reading, writing, and arithmetic, the learned languages, and other useful learning, on payment of an annual capitation fee of £2; no boy to be admitted under eight, or above thirteen years of age, nor continue after eighteen; that the rent of Dey's charity land (£7.6s.6d.), and the yearly sum of £5, part of the rents of other lands, shall be applied in apprenticing one or more boys, and that the residue, after paying the master's salary, shall be applied by the governors in distributions of coals, among the poor parishioners. The charity estates now comprise 97A. 3R. 15P. of land, several warehouses, &c., and a double cottage called the Lizard, let for a total rent of £221. 8s., which, with £20. 7s. 4d., the interest of £679 new three per cents., swells the yearly income to £251. 15s. 4d. The Rev. Joseph Grisdale, B.A., is the present master, and has generally about 30 boarders, who pay from 25 to 30 guineas each per annum. In 1567, Matthew Parker, Archbishop of Canterbury, founded a scholarship in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, for a boy from this school, who must be a native of the town. Further changes in the management of the school are in contemplation by the Charity Commissioners.

The four FUEL ALLOTMENTS, awarded at the enclosure, in 1810, comprise 53A. 0R. 18P., let for £101. 11s. 9d. a year, which is distributed in coals among the poor parishioners, together with the funds set apart for the same purpose from the rents of the charity estates noticed with the Grammar School. HENDRY'S CHARITY.—In 1722, John Hendry left £400 to be laid out in the purchase of a freehold estate, for the sole benefit of the Vicar of Wymondham, for the time being, upon condition that he should preach, or cause to be preached, two sermons every Sunday in the year. He also devised certain lands and tenements in Crownthorpe and Wymondham, to the vicar for the time being, in trust, to apply the rents and profits thereof as follow:—50s. yearly to be distributed amongst aged unmarried women; 10s. for yearly distribution among the poor of Crownthorpe; and the residue to be applied for the benefit of the Charity School in Wymondham, for instructing poor children to read and write, and binding them out to trades. And he devised all his lands, called Flory's, in Wymondham, to Philip Carver and his heirs, upon condition that they should pay to the Vicar £3. 10s. yearly, for preaching a sermon every Friday in Lent. The £400 were laid out in the purchase of a house and 25A. 2R. 26P., in Wicklewold; and the estate devised for education, &c., now consists of 18A. 1R. 21P. in the same parish, and 1A. 2R. 22P. in Wymondham. The rents amount to £75. 13s. per annum, of which 50s. are divided amongst 25 "ancient maids"; 10s. go to the poor of Crownthorpe; £24. 15s. are applied in support of the National School; and the residue is appropriated by the vicar.

In 1692, ANN BLACKBORNE left, for the poor of Wymondham, £100; and to increase her charity, her executor, Francis le Neve, added as much as purchased a yearly rent-charge of £8. 2s.; out of an estate in Sutton, to be paid to the Vicar, and disposed of in several distributions among the poor parishioners, by him and the owner of Burfield Hall. In 1833, the Rev. WM. PAPILLON, who was vicar from 1788 till 1836, conveyed to trustees, two cottages, and 19 acres of land, called the Abbey Land, and directed £40 per annum to be paid out of the rents for a lecture at Wymondham every Sunday evening, and the residue to be given to the National School. The rents now amount to £73. 10s., and the Rev. H. E. Preston, M.A., of Tasburgh, is the present lecturer.

The NATIONAL SCHOOL for boys and girls, in Church street, is a large building, attended by 155 children; and that for infants is in Lady's lane. Both were built in 1812, by the Rev. W. Papillon. A small brick building was erected in 1849 on the Norwich road, about 1½ mile N.E. of the town, as a branch school, and it is attended by 40 children. The BRITISH SCHOOL, in Fairland street, was erected by the congregation of the Independent Chapel, in 1847, at a cost of £200. It is a handsome brick Tudor building, and has about 30 scholars.

The County Prison, or BRIDEWELL, at Wymondham, was built in 1787, on the plan recommended by the philanthropic Mr. Howard; but after the removal of the prisoners to the new gaol at Norwich, in 1827, it remained unoccupied till 1832, when it was re-opened, for the incarceration of females; and those sentenced to hard labour are employed in washing and sewing for the male prisoners at Norwich. For the last 15 years, the separate system has been in use here, and each prisoner has a separate cell and wash-house. The average number of prisoners in 1863, was 26. Miss Emily Greenfield is matron; the Rev. Wm. Hy. Robt. Brickmann, B.A., chaplain; and R. J. Tunaley, Esq., surgeon. The COUNTY POLICE STATION is at the Bridewell, where three cells were appropriated as a lock-up in 1850, in lieu of the old one in Church street, and a house for the residence of the constable was at the same time built, at a cost of £200. Mr. Samuel Barrett is the superintendent, and Robert Hook and John Goodings are the constables stationed here, the latter of whom lives at the prison. PETTY SESSIONS are held at the King's Head Inn, on the third Thursday in every month.

The COUNTY COURT is held at the King's Head Inn, every two months, for a district embracing the parishes of Ashwellthorpe, Aslacton, Barnham Broom and Parva, Bunwell, Carleton Forehoe and Rode, Coston, Crownthorpe, Deopham, Forncett St. Mary and St. Peter, Fundenhall, Hackford, Hapton, Hardingham, Hethel, Hingham, Ketteringham, Kimberley, Morley St. Peter and St. Botolph, Moulton, Runhall, Tacolnestone, Tibbenham, Welborne, Wicklewold, Woodrising, Wrampingham, Wreningham, and Wymondham. Thos. Jacob Birch, Esq., is judge; Jonathan Townley, Esq., treasurer; Jas. Feltham, Esq., of Hingham, registrar; Geo. C. L. Knight, Esq., of Wymondham, deputy registrar; Mr. Thos. Kerslake, high bailiff; and Chas. Crane and Geo. Fiddament, assistant bailiffs.

On Sunday morning, June 11, 1615, while the inhabitants were at church, the town was set on FIRE by a party of gipsies, and upwards of 300 houses were consumed, valued, with their contents, at above £40,000. In 1631, the town was visited by the plague. In 1400, Bishop Wakering placed it under a papal interdict, because the people did not ring the bells when he passed through the town. Richard Crashfield and Francis Knight were burnt here, for not conforming to the Roman Catholic faith, in the reign of Queen Mary. Robt. and Wm. Kett, who headed the formidable insurrection in 1549, were natives of Wymondham. (See page 152.) Robert was hanged in chains on the castle at Norwich, and William upon the western tower of Wymondham church. This parish gave name to the distinguished FAMILY OF WINDHAM, which was ramified into several branches, resident at Felbrigg, Cromer, and Earsham, in this county, and at other places in Wiltshire, Somersetshire, and Glamorganshire. In 1204, Wm. de Wimundham, being skilled in chemistry and metallurgy, was appointed overseer of the lead mines in Devonshire; and extracted immense quantities of silver from the lead ore.

POST OFFICE at James Fison's, Market Street. Letters despatched to London and all parts at 10.45 a.m. and 9.30 p.m., and to Norwich at 2.45 p.m. The town deliveries commence at 7 a.m. and 3.45 p.m., but there is only one delivery on Sundays. Foot-postmen leave for the surrounding villages at 6 a.m. Money Orders are granted and paid from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., and the Savings Bank is open during the same hours.

TAVERHAM HUNDRED

Is of an irregular oval figure, stretching seven miles northward from Norwich, and about twelve miles in length from east to west; being bounded on the south by the river Wensum and the city liberties; on the east by Blofield and Walsham Hundreds; on the north by the river Bure and South Erpingham Hundred; and on the west by Eynesford Hundred. It gives name to the Deanery of Taverham, in the Archdeaconry of Norwich. A great portion of it has a light, loamy soil, resting on beds of marl and chalk, and having an undulated surface, highly cultivated, and studded with many handsome mansions; but to the north of St. Faith's and Horsford, is a large sterile tract of flat sandy heath, enclosed by an act of Parliament, passed in 1790, and now having many thriving plantations. Petty Sessions are held at the Shire Hall, Norwich, every Saturday; and Roger Kerrison, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The following enumeration of the 18 parishes of this Hundred shews their population in 1861; the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the county rate, in 1843; and their territorial extent:—

† Hellesden parish, is partly a hamlet in the County of the City of Norwich. (See p. 243.)
‡ Horsham includes 112 persons in St. Faith's Union Workhouse.

ST. FAITH'S UNION has for its Workhouse the old House of Industry at Horsham St. Faith, which was built in 1805, for Coltishall and the thirteen parishes marked * in the foregoing table, which were incorporated in that year for the support of their poor. This house has 10 acres of land attached to it, and was enlarged about 30 years ago at a cost of £1000, and in 1849 at a cost of £3000. It has room for 450 inmates, but has seldom so many as 200. The Union comprises 30 parishes, embracing the 18 parishes of Taverham Hundred; St. Mary's-in-the-Marsh, in Norwich (see p. 143); Honingham, in Forehoe Hundred; Booton, in South Erpingham Hundred; and nine parishes in Eynesford Hundred. It comprises an area of 75 square miles, and in 1861 had 11,628 inhabitants, of whom 5582 were males, and 6046 females, living in 2538 houses. The average annual expenditure of its parishes, from 1832 to 1835, was £10,525; but in 1838 it was only £5837; and in 1839, £6227; and it is now about £7000. Francis John Blake, Esq., of Norwich, is union clerk; Mr. Philip Lincoln Carman, of St. Faith's, superintendent registrar; Mr. John Scarnett, of St. Faith's, registrar of marriages; and Mr. Wm. Durrant, of Sprowston, and Mr. Robert Richards, of St. Faith's, registrars of births and deaths, and relieving officers. Mr. James and Mrs. Ann Dickerson are master and matron of the Workhouse; Rev. J. D. Ballance, M.A., of Horsford, chaplain; and Jane Nicholls, schoolmistress. Messrs. Robert Thompson and Frederick Henry Orris, of Norwich; Thos. Robert Evans, of Coltishall; Thos. Alderton, of Reepham; and George Taylor, of Mattishall, are the union surgeons. The Board of Guardians meets at the Workhouse every Wednesday.

ATTLEBRIDGE, on the north bank of the Wensum, and on the Fakenham turnpike, 8 miles N.W. of Norwich, has in its parish 93 inhabitants and 1206 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Rev. J. N. Micklethwait, M.A., the lord of the manor and impropiator of the great tithes; and partly to T. T. Berney, Esq. Formerly, here was a hamlet called Dighton, or Dike-townhills; and there was also a Hermitage near the river. A new wrought-iron bridge on two piers was erected in 1861 by T. T. Berney, Esq., in place of the old wooden one. The Church (St. Andrew) is a plain old structure, comprising nave, north aisle, chancel, and square tower with one bell. The windows are all modern insertions with square frames; but here are four brasses, a tablet of the Craven family, a piscina, a holy water stoup, a squint or hagioscope, and a low side window or lychnoscope. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 10½., and consolidated with the rectory of Alderford. The tithes were commuted in 1839—the vicarial for £70. 15s., and the rectorial for £165 per annum. The chief residents are—Edward Blyth, blacksmith; James Crisp, woodman; Michael Plummer butcher and shopkeeper; Robert Laws, parish clerk; and the following farmers:—John Bird, Hall farm; Wm. Chubbock; Samuel Pumfrey, Malt-house farm; and Richd. Jas. Rayner, Ashtree farm. Post via Norwich.

• BEESTON ST. ANDREW, 3½ miles N.E. by N. of Norwich, has only 37 inhabitants and 620 acres of land, mostly the property of the Rev. John N. Micklethwait, M.A., and Mr. O. Barnes; but Sir T. B. Lennard, Bart., is lord of the manor. The Hall, long a seat of the Micklethwaits, was pulled down in 1846. There has been no church here during the last two centuries, though the rectory, valued in K.B. at £3. 6s. 8d., and now at £190, is still continued as a sinecure, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Hy. Banfather, B.D., of Sprowston. An old brick house, called the Red Hall, is occupied by Mr. Orlando Barnes; and the other chief residents are—Abm. Gowen, gardener; and Thos Bowen (Dairy farm), and Harcourt Howlett, farmers. Post via Norwich.

wich, having many picturesque mansions, ornamented with tasteful plantations and pleasure grounds. It contains 646 inhabitants, and about 900A. of land, belonging to a number of proprietors, many of whom reside here, and have purchased the rectorial tithes of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, who are lords of the manor and patrons of the living, which is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £4. 13s. 9d., and now in the incumbency of the Rev. Richard Hart, A.B., who has £160 a year in lieu of the vicarial tithes, £10 a year from the rectorial tithes, and 17 acres of glebe. The Church (St. Margaret) is in the perpendicular style, and comprises nave, chancel, south aisle, two transepts, and a lady-chapel on the north side, a large porch, and an ivy-covered tower, round at the base and octagonal above. The aisle was built in 1850, at a cost of £400, and the two transepts were added in 1851 and 1860 by Mrs. Morse, at a cost of £1500, and are separated by arches resting on pillars having richly foliated capitals. Many of the windows are filled with stained glass, those in the chancel being very handsome; and here are numerous mural monuments to the Corie, Bronde, Blanks, Brereton, Busby, Lincoln, Challis, Morse, Adams, and many other families. Four boys are sent from this parish to Norman's Free School, in Norwich, founded in 1724 by John Norman, who left 6d. each to 20 poor people yearly, on Nov. 1st; and 20s. to the vicar, and 2s. 6d. to the clerk, for a sermon once in two years. (See page 227.) The poor have 10s. a year from the treasurer of the Boys' Hospital in Norwich, as the amount of Warner's charity to this parish; and a yearly rent-charge of 20s. out of Five Acre Piece, left by Wm. Bussey. They have likewise 15s. worth of bread yearly from the charities of John and Eliz. Addey, which also provide for the education of four boys from Catton, at a school in Norwich, and for binding them out apprentices when they leave school. (See page 225.) A Mr. Whall, at an early period, gave 2½A. of land to the poor of Catton, and in 1826 it was exchanged for 3A. 1R. 16P., which is let out to the industrious poor in about 13 lots, at 10s. a rood. The rents are distributed at Christmas in bread. Here is a Free School, built about 35 years ago, attended by 50 children, and supported by subscription. Catton Hall, a large and handsome modern mansion, in a well-wooded park of 70 acres, is the seat of John Henry Gurney, Esq., M.P. for King's Lynn. The Grove, another spacious house, is occupied as a private lunatic asylum by Thos. John Carter Rackham, Esq. During the repairs of a large barn in this parish, in 1850, a considerable number of fragments of pillars and capitals, shafts, mouldings, &c., in Caen stone, was found imbedded in the walls. They were chiefly of the transitional Norman period, and appeared to have been merely used as building material, having probably belonged to some ecclesiastical building in the immediate locality. NEW CATTON is a modern suburb in St. Clement's parish, Norwich, and has a Chapel of Ease. (See page 218.)

CROSTWICK, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.E. of Norwich, has in its parish 144 inhabitants, and 691 acres of land, mostly belonging to J. Longe and E. J. Stracey, Esqrs., but W. H. Trafford, Esq., is lord of the manor. Here is a common of 30A. The Church (St. Peter) is a handsomely restored building, in the perpendicular style, and comprises nave, chancel, and square tower. The latter contains one bell, and is surmounted by stone finials adorned with angels at the angles. The three windows in the chancel are filled with beautiful stained glass; that at the east end representing Our Saviour, St. Peter, and St. John, is in memory of Eustace Arkwright, Esq., and is dated 1846. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £2. 17s. 6d., is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. Perry Nursey, B.A., who has a good residence purchased in 1850, 5 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £192 awarded in 1839. The School was built on the common by the Rev. E. J. Bell, in 1850, and is attended by 30 children. The poor have 25s. a year, as the rent of an acre of "town land." A coach passes through the village daily from Norwich to North Walsham. The chief residents are—The Rev. P. Nursey, B.A., Vicarage; Robert Bird, parish clerk; Alfred Crowe, wheelwright; John Bensley and Horatio Howlett (North Farm), farmers; Mary Jane Money, schoolmistress; and Hannah Woodhouse, shopkeeper and vict., White Horse. Post Office at the School. Letters despatched to Norwich at 5.45 p.m.

DRAYTON, on the Fakenham road, 4 miles N.W. of Norwich, is a fine rural village, in the vale of the Wensum, and has in its parish 452 inhabitants, and 1292 acres of light sandy land, mostly in the bishop's manor of Drayton-with-Taverham, subject to fines certain; and partly in the Rev. J. N. Micklethwait's manor of Drayton Hall, subject to fines arbitrary. F. W. Bradshaw, Esq., J. Winter, Esq., Mr. S. Bunn, Rev. E. Day, Rev. J. Evans, and others, have estates here; and the former resides at the Hall, a spacious mansion with extensive and well-wooded grounds. In the village are the remains of an ancient cross, which had an inscription in French, offering pardon to all who would pray for the souls of William de Bellemonte, and Joan his wife. In the grounds of F. A. Magnay, Esq., a little to the left of the road leading from Norwich to Fakenham, which was formerly so much frequented by pilgrims to the shrine of "Our Lady of Walsingham," stands the ruin of a small building called Drayton Lodge, whose origin is so shrouded in mystery as to have long been a puzzle to antiquaries. It is of an oblong shape, 22 ft. 6 in. long, by 16 ft. 3 in. wide, with an ivy-clad round tower, 22 feet in circumference, at each corner; and is built of yellowish brick of rather large size. The entrance is by a depressed arch in the south front, to the left of which is a small narrow aperture, which appears to have been the only means of lighting the lower room when the door was closed. The holes where the beams were inserted in the walls, and the flues of the fireplaces remain; and the south-western tower appears to have had a staircase. Drayton and Hellesden were held by Sir John Fastolf in the time of Henry VI., and afterwards passed to the Pastons, who had a residence in a neighbouring valley: to the security and comfort of which, a building such as the one described, placed on the crest of a hill, whence a commanding view of the country in every direction could be obtained, and within bowshot of one of the principal roads to Norwich, was no mean addition. Allusion in the celebrated Paston Letters to "The Lodge," seem clearly to point to Drayton Lodge, which must therefore have existed for more than 400 years, though many persons still regard it as a sham antique. It is now the property of Robert Fitch, Esq., F.S.A., of Norwich, who will doubtless carefully preserve it. In a plantation near the road are traces of an entrenchment; and at a short distance is Blood's dale, said to be the scene of a battle in the Saxon era. The Church (St. Margaret) was originally of early-decorated architecture, but has undergone so many alterations that it now exhibits almost every variety of style. It comprises a nave, a chancel, and a square tower with three bells; and contains a piscina and an antique font. The window at the east end, and those on the north side, are of the plain lancet shape, but those on the south are of various designs. The present rector has considerably improved the church by fitting it with handsome new open seats, &c. In 1849, several interesting paintings were discovered on the walls during some repairs, but have all been again hidden by the colouring. They represented a gigantic St. Christopher, St. George and the Dragon, Our Saviour appearing to St. Mary Magdalen, &c. In 1860, three stone coffins were found beneath the floor of the church, all containing human remains, and one of them having within it a case of lead, shaped like a human form and containing a perfect skeleton 6 ft. 2 in. long. Several sepulchral slabs were found at the same time, and one of them bore a mutilated inscription in Norman-French, and an incised Jerusalem cross. The tower fell down in 1850, and was shortly afterwards re-built. In the church chest is a curious old altar-cloth, composed of fragments of ancient church vestments, embroidered with figures of some of the apostles and other holy persons and elegantly designed flowers, worked in gold thread and coloured silk. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 2s. 9d. and now at £700, with that of Hellesden annexed to it. There are 14 acres of glebe in Drayton, and 30 acres in Hellesden. The Bishop of Norwich is patron, and the Rev. Hinds Howell, B.A., is the incumbent, and has a spacious and handsome residence, which he considerably enlarged in 1855. The tithes of Drayton were commuted in 1839, for £253. 5s. 5d. per annum. The National School is a pretty edifice of pointed architecture, built in 1859, at a cost of £300, and attended by about 60 children. Here is a small Baptist Chapel, built in 1847. The Fuel Allotment, 49A. 2R. 34P., was awarded to the poor at the enclosure of Drewway Common, in 1813, and is let for £12 a year, which is divided equally amongst poor householders. Two acres of land in Taverham field have belonged to the parish from an early period, and are now let for £3. 13s., which is applied with the church rates, though it is supposed to belong to the poor. Fragments of Anglo-Saxon urns have been frequently found in this parish, and in one urn a portion of an iron dagger had been placed.

FELTHORPE, a large parish and scattered village, 7 miles N.W. by N. of Norwich, has 514 inhabitants and 2242 acres of land, with several flourishing plantations. Here are four manors, the largest of which is a member of Lord Stafford's manor of Costessey, and consists of copyholds, subject to arbitrary fines. The other manors have for their respective lords the Rector, the Bishop, and Edward Fellowes, Esq., M.P. The latter owns the Hall, a handsome white brick mansion, now unoccupied. E. H. Buxton, Esq., the Trustees of the late R. Marsham, Esq., and some smaller owners, have estates here. The Church (St. Margaret) is a neat edifice, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, north porch, and square tower with one bell. It was thoroughly restored by the late Mrs. Fellowes, in 1846, when the south aisle was added, the windows were adorned with stained glass, and the old pews were replaced by handsome open seats. The piscina still remains. The rectory, valued in the King's Books at £4, has 23A. of glebe, of which ten were purchased with £200 of Queen Anne's Bounty, obtained in 1759. The Bishop of Norwich is patron, and the Rev. Richard Brickdale, M.A., is the incumbent. The tithes were commuted, in 1841, for £271. 4s. per annum; and a new Rectory House was erected at a cost of £800 in 1840. The School, a neat brick building, with residence attached, is attended by 70 children, and was built in 1846 by E. Fellowes, Esq., M.P., who still supports it. Here is a small Independent Chapel. The Fuel Allotment, 46A., was awarded at the enclosure in 1780. The poor cut turf upon it, and the feeding is let for £9 a year. In 1687, Wm. Brereton left two tenements and two acres of land (let for £2 a year) for the residence and sole benefit of two poor aged widows; and he bequeathed his other land and house in Felthorpe, and £100 to be invested, for the under-mentioned uses. Besides the almshouse and two acres attached to it, there are now belonging to this charity a double cottage and 24A. 1R. of land let for £32 per annum, of which £2, in weekly sums, are paid to the two alms-women; 16s. for a sermon; 16s. for land-tax; and the remainder, after paying for the repairs of the cottages and the church, is distributed among the poor parishioners.

FRETENHAM, 6 miles N. by E. of Norwich, has in its parish 221 inhabitants and 1581 acres of land. Lord Suffield is chief owner of the soil, lord of the manor, and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £10, and is now worth £481 a year, with that of Stanninghall annexed to it, in the incumbency of the Rev. James Shirley, A.M., who has a rent charge of only £5. 10s. from Stanninghall. The Rectory House is a good brick building near the church, and has recently been enlarged. The glebe here is 21A., and the tithes have been commuted for £395 per annum. The Church (St. Swithin) was repaired and repewed in 1836, and is a fine old building in the early-decorated style, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, porch, and lofty square tower with two bells. The pillars between the nave and aisles are quatrefoil and support good arches, and here are some ancient brasses and a piscina. The east window was partially bricked up many years ago, and an ugly modern one of three round-headed lights inserted in its stead. A School, built in 1832, and attended by 35 children, is supported by the rector. The late Lord Suffield apportioned to each cottage half an acre of land, so that the poor here are in better circumstances than those of most other parishes. The common was enclosed in 1846; and in a field which formed part of it, on the west side of the village, is a remarkable mound, called Court Hills, on which, it is said, the manor courts were formerly held. The chief residents are—The Rev. Jas. Shirley, A.M., Rectory; Wm. Wright Scottow, victualler, Rose and Crown; Jeremiah Fryer, joiner; John Fuller, shoemaker; Charles Remington, blacksmith; Ann Read, schoolmistress; Wm. Riseborough, parish clerk; Wm. Tooley, shopkeeper; and John Amies, Wm. Hall, Wm. Juby (Mayton Hall), and Robert Reed, farmers. Post from Norwich, via St. Faith's.

HAINFORD, or Haynford, 6½ miles N. of Norwich, is a large straggling village, occupied partly by weavers, and having in its parish 643 inhabitants and 1790 acres of land. The Hall, an ancient brick building with extensive and pleasant grounds, is the seat of the Rev. Wm. Arnold Walpole Keppel, B.A.; and John Middleton, Esq., and some smaller owners, have estates here, but the greater part of the soil, and the manorial rights, belong to the Trustees of the late Robt. Marsham, Esq. The Church (All Saints) is a neat cruciform building of brick, with lancet-shaped windows, and a small bell-cot; and was built in 1840, at a cost of £1200. The old church was about half a mile distant, and its tower and vestry are still standing and form a mortuary chapel for the churchyard, which is still in use. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 2s. 1d., is in the patronage of the Rev. Henry Philip Marsham, and incumbency of the Rev. W. A. W. Keppel, B.A. The glebe is 34A., and the tithes have been commuted for £425 per annum. Here is a National School, attended by about 65 children. The Wesleyans and the Primitive Methodists have each a chapel in the parish. The poor have £30 a year from the owners of the new enclosures, pursuant to a provision of an Act of the 42nd of George III. In 1693, Thomas Bulwer left to the poor of Hainford £200, which were laid out in land, now intermixed with other poor's land, left by Jno. Sporle, in 1677, and a Mr. Bolts, and comprising altogether about 76A. with ten cottages, let for £112 a year. Of this income, 10s. are given to poor communicants each time of administering the sacrament, and the residue is divided among poor parishioners, who have also a yearly rent charge of 60s., left by the above-named Thomas Bulwer. There are paid yearly out of the Garrod estate, 6s. to the poor, 3s. 4d. to the rector, and 8d. to the clerk. Post from Norwich, via St. Faith's.

HELLESDON, or Hellesden, 2 miles N.W. of Norwich, has in its parish 496 inhabitants and about 2000 acres of land, but only 103 inhabitants and 1163 acres are in Taverham Hundred, all the rest forming a separate township, called Lower Hellesden, which is in the county of the city of Norwich, with which it maintains its poor. For Church see page 217, and Directory, p. 328. That part of the parish in Taverham Hundred is a township in St. Faith's Union, and belongs chiefly to Chas. Middleton and Hugh Berners, Esqs., and the Trustees of the late R. H. Gurney, Esq. The National School at Upper Hellesden is a pretty brick building, erected in 1852, and attended by 80 children. It is supported by J. H. Gurney, Esq., M.P., W. Delane, Esq., and the rector; and divine service is held in it every Sunday evening. Here is a large Corn Mill, now unoccupied. Post via Norwich.

HORSFORD, on the Holt road, 4 miles N.N.W. of Norwich, has in its parish 665 inhabitants, and 4177 acres of land, of which only 1203 acres are titheable. About 600A. form a sterile heath, partially cultivated and planted, and enclosed in 1802, when 208A. 3R. 12P. were set out as a Fuel Allotment. Sir Thomas B. Lennard, Bart., is lord of the manor, in which the fines are certain; and Viscount Ranelagh, Jas. Day, Esq., the Great Hospital, Norwich, John Middleton, Esq., and a few smaller owners, have estates here. The ancient lords of the manor (Barons Dacre) had a castle here, and there are still traces of its foundations and moat. The Church (All Saints) is a very ancient thatched edifice, comprising nave, north aisle, chancel, and square tower with one bell. Its architecture is mostly early-English, but the chancel arch is very rude, and evidently of great antiquity. It was refitted with open seats, pulpit, and reading desk, in 1862, and contains several marble tablets of the Day and Crowe families, a piscina, a handsomely carved screen, and a curious old font. Viscount Ranelagh is impropiator of the great tithes, and patron of the discharged vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £4. 5s. 2d., and augmented, in 1793, with £200 of Q.A.B. The Rev. Josiah Descarriers Ballance, M.A., who is also incumbent of Horsham St. Faith's, is the vicar, and has a neat residence, surrounded by well-wooded grounds. The glebe is 150A., and the tithes were commuted in 1841—the vicarial for £102. 4s., and the rectorial for £128. 7s. 6d. The Wesleyan Chapel was built in 1862, by Mr. Philip Blyth, at a cost of £160, in lieu of the old chapel, which was purchased in 1856 by J. Day, Esq., and converted into a National School, now attended by 60 children.

HORSHAM ST. FAITH, and NEWTON ST. FAITH, are two villages forming one united parish, commonly called St. FAITH's, and distant from 4 to 5 miles N. of Norwich, on the Aylsham road. They contain about 2340A. of land, and 1191 inhabitants, of whom 918 are in Horsham, and 273 in Newton. The latter has only about 750 acres, and the former 1650 acres. At the enclosure, in 1802, 58A. 3R. 38P. of heath were awarded to the poor of Horsham, and 68A. to the poor of Newton. HORSHAM, the larger village, is situated above the small rivulet called Hor, and was once celebrated for its cattle fair, which is held yearly on the 17th October, and now only lasts for two or three days, but formerly continued during three weeks, for the sale of Scotch cattle, &c. Here are about fifteen looms, employed by the Norwich manufacturers for the weaving of silk, &c., and upwards of 50 engaged in the manufacture of hair-seating. Hugh de Cressi had the privilege of a weekly market here, in the 41st of Henry III., but it has long been obsolete. Here were also a Benedictine Priory, and a Hospital of Knights Templar.

The priory, dedicated to St. Faith the Virgin and Martyr, was founded by Robert de Codomo, lord of Horsford, and Sibilla his wife, in the year 1105; after which, numerous bequests were made to it by the families who possessed this and the adjacent manor of Horsford. In the reign of Richard II., this priory was discharged from its subjection to the abbey of Couches, in France, and constituted indigeni. At the dissolution, its annual revenues were valued at £193. 2s. 3½d., and granted, with the rectory and advowson of Horsford, to Sir Richard Southwell and Edward Ellington, Esq. Some of the boundary walls of the priory still remain on the Abbey farm, near the Church, which is a remarkably fine old thatched edifice, chiefly of the perpendicular period, but retaining some early-decorated features. It consists of a lofty nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and square tower with four bells. The porch has a fine groined roof, and a chamber or parvise above. The triple lancet window at the east end, is filled with stained glass representing Faith, Hope, and Charity, given by the late R. Twining, Esq., of London, in memory of his parents. The steps leading to the rood-loft and a double piscina still remain, and here is also a handsomely carved screen. There is a hagioscope in the south aisle. The benefice is a perpetual curacy, valued at only £95, though augmented in 1773 and 1801, with £400 of Queen Anne's Bounty, and in 1813, with a Parliamentary grant of £1200. The Rev. J. D. Ballance, M.A., of Horsford, is the incumbent, and Viscount Ranelagh is the patron, impropiator, lord of the manor, and principal owner of the soil. The impropriate tithes were commuted in 1842, for £711 per annum. A Parsonage House is about to be erected on a piece of land given by the patron. NEWTON is a smaller village, one mile N. of Horsham, but has no church. The Wesleyans have a chapel in each village; that at Horsham was built in 1818 and enlarged in 1844, and that at Newton was erected in 1810 and enlarged in 1830. The National School at Horsham is attended by about 80 children, and is a neat edifice, with residence attached, erected in 1853. R. Twining, Esq., gave £130 towards the cost of the building, and in 1858, he bequeathed to it the sum of £450 three per cent. consols. He also left the interest of £180 invested in the same securities, to provide for distributions of fuel to the poor. Here is a pack of harriers, kept by a few gentlemen in the neighbourhood. The Workhouse of St. Faith's Union is in this parish as noticed at page 599.

HORSTEAD AND STANNINGHALL form a consolidated parish containing 608 inhabitants, and 2679A. 3R. 17P. of land, with a village of the former name, pleasantly seated on the south bank of the river Bure, 7 miles N.N.E. of Norwich. Stanninghall contains only 40 souls and 314 acres of land, and was formerly a separate parish, but is now all in one farm belonging to Lord Suffield, and is ecclesiastically united with Frettenham, though it pays church and poor's rates to Horstead. Its church was dilapidated in the reign of Elizabeth, but the tower and part of one of the walls remain, and are used as farm buildings. Horstead Church (All Saints) is chiefly of the perpendicular period, and comprises nave with south aisle, chancel with south chantry, and square tower with three bells. It contains a handsome antique font, and several memorials of the Ward, Homsell, Townshend, and other families. In 1856, the rector enriched the east window with stained glass, and presented new commandment tables, several zinc scrolls with appropriate texts, some carved bead-work, &c. The chancel aisle or chapel is divided from the nave by a carved screen, and appertains to the estate of Dr. Blake, who has a handsome Elizabethan mansion, about a mile south of the village, built in 1841, and having pleasant and well-wooded grounds. The rectory valued in K.B. at £7. 10s., was consolidated with that of Coltishall in 1522, and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Thackeray, M.A., who re-built the Rectory House in 1847, and has a fine collection of portraits and old china. The tithes of the parish were commuted in 1847 for £590. 15s. 4d. The Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge, are patrons of the living, and also lords of the manor, which is mostly copyhold on fine certain, and was obtained by grant from Henry VI. The School, established in 1841, and attended by 55 children, is supported by subscription. The Hall stands in a picturesque and well-wooded park of 60 acres, near the river Bure, and is of Elizabethan architecture. It is the property of Lord Suffield and is occupied by the Dowager Lady Suffield. Horstead House, another ancient Elizabethan residence near the Bure, belongs to E. H. Lyon Winder, Esq., but is now rented by Hastings Elwin, Esq. Half a mile east of the village is the hamlet of Haggard street. The Poor's Land, 7A., is let in 16 plots at the rate of 30s. an acre, and the rents are distributed in coals. Post from Norwich, via Coltishall.

RACKHEATH is a parish and scattered village, 4½ miles N.E. by N. of Norwich, on the Worstead road, and has 275 inhabitants, and 1980A. of light, loamy land, with a sub-stratum of chalk. It was anciently in two parishes, called Great and Little Rackheath; but the church in the latter division was taken down several centuries ago, and its site is now unknown. The remaining Church (All Saints) is a small structure of the early-decorated period, standing alone in the fields, and comprising nave with south aisle and clerestory, chancel, and square tower with three bells and a clock. Here are several mural tablets of the Pettus and Stracey families. The windows were all filled with rich stained glass in 1857, at the expense of Sir Henry Josias Stracey, Bart., M.P. for Yarmouth, who is patron of the living, owner of the soil, and lord of the manor. He resides at the Hall, a handsome white brick mansion in the Italian style, standing on an eminence in an extensive and richly wooded park, which is well stocked with deer, and contains a large lake. At the entrance are fixed the elegantly designed wrought iron gates, purchased at the Great Exhibition of 1851, by the present baronet, who has much improved and enlarged both the park and house. The latter contains a splendid walnut sideboard finely carved with figures of men, fruit, fish, and game; and also a choice collection of paintings, amongst which are a Vandyck, and a very valuable Rubens, representing Coriolanus before Rome. Rackheath was anciently held by a family of its own name, and had a priory, the temporalities of which were valued in 1428, at 41s. 3d. The Yelvertons, afterwards Earls of Essex, were seated here in the reign of Edward II. At the enclosure, in 1802, a yearly rent of 10d. per acre, amounting to £22 per annum, was charged on the allotments, to be paid to the poor for a distribution of coals. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and now having 26 acres of glebe and a yearly rent-charge of £450, awarded in 1837 in lieu of tithes, is in the incumbency of the Rev. Francis Henry Stone Hodgson, B.A., who has a neat brick residence built in 1856, at a cost of £1200. The School is supported by the present baronet, and was built by his father about a dozen years ago. It is attended by 35 children, and attached to it is a house for the mistress. The chief residents are—Sir H. J. Stracey, Bart., M.P., Hall; Rev. F. H. S. Hodgson, B.A., Rectory; Elizabeth Baker, schoolmistress; Anthony Brown, blacksmith; Charles Coldham, farmer and victualler, Green Man; Edward Gillingwater and William Kemp, gardeners; and George Barnes, jun., Wm. John Chandler (Dakenham farm), Henry Utting (Church farm), and Robert Watts, farmers. POST OFFICE at Elizabeth Baker's. Letters despatched via Norwich at 5.30 p.m.

SALHOUSE, or Sallowes, is a large but straggling village and parish, 6 miles N.E. of Norwich, comprising 684 inhabitants, and 2060 acres of land, lying within William Henry Trafford, Esq.'s manor of Wroxham with Salhouse; but the soil belongs to a number of freeholders and copyholders, the latter of whom are subject to arbitrary fines. The Hall, a pretty castellated brick building of the Elizabethan period, contains a fine collection of paintings and other works of art. It stands in a well-wooded lawn commanding extensive prospects, and is the seat of Mrs. Ward. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave with north aisle, chancel, and square tower with two bells. It is mostly of perpendicular architecture, but the windows of the chancel and some of those in the nave are early-English. The interior has a peculiar appearance, owing to the nave and tower not being in line with each other, and the north aisle partly blocking the tower arch. The pillars between the nave and aisle are modern, and have foliated capitals. The chancel contains a piscina and the tomb of a crusader, and at the top of the screen the sanctus bell still remains. Near the south door is a holy water stoup; and here are tablets of the Ward and Farman families, and also an ancient hourglass stand. The discharged vicarage is consolidated with that of Wroxham, in the patronage of W. H. Trafford, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Samuel Haworth, M.A., who has here a good residence, built in 1846 at a cost of £1048, about 12 acres of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £187. 10s., awarded in 1843 in lieu of tithes. Lord Suffield is impropiator of the rectorial tithes. The National School is a neat building erected in 1845, at a cost of £237, on land given by the late R. Ward, Esq., and now attended by 70 children. The Baptists have two chapels here, the oldest of which is endowed with the interest of £190 left by Mrs. Linford in 1825. A Mechanics' Institution was established here in 1850, and is now held in a building formerly a Wesleyan chapel. It is supported by subscription for the benefit of the working classes, and is well supplied with newspapers, &c. Here is also a Horticultural Society, which has an annual show, when prizes are given to cottage gardeners of the parish. The Poor's Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1802, comprises 19A. 2R. 21P., which are let, together with 4A. 1R. 21P., received at the same time, in exchange for the old poor's land. The rent, £28 a year, is distributed in coals to the poor, who have also a yearly rent charge of 50s. left by Edward Metyer; 5s. a year from Topcliffe's charity, (see Wroxham;) and 10s. a year from an acre of land, on Mousehold Heath, pursuant to the plantation act of the 29th of George II. SPIXWORTH, 4 miles N. by E. of Norwich, has only 42 inhabitants, and 1224 acres of land, bounded on the north by a rivulet called Spikes, and belonging to John Longe, Esq., the lord of the manor and patron of the living, who resides at the Hall, a fine old Elizabethan brick mansion in a well-wooded park of 178 acres, which was purchased by the Longe family in 1690, of T. Peck, Esq., and has been several times subsequently enlarged and improved. The Church (St. Peter) comprises nave with south aisle, chancel and square tower. The latter is curiously situated at the south-west angle of the church, and its upper portion, which contains two bells, was rudely rebuilt many years ago. The chancel was restored in 1856 by the rector, at a cost of £70, and contains many marble tablets of the Longe and Howes families, and one to General Chas. Leigh. It has also a fine marble monument, with recumbent effigies of Wm. Peck and his wife under an arch supported by Corinthian columns, and bearing English and Latin inscriptions, dated 1634. The piscina and sedilia are rich specimens of the decorated style; and the handsomely carved screen was given by the patron. Here are a few brasses, and a curious old marble font of the Norman period. The roof of the church fell down in 1804, when the present unsightly flat one was substituted. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6, is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Henry Howes, M.A., who has a good residence, which was built in 1705, by the Rev. J. Hoadley, afterwards Archbishop of Armagh, and enlarged in 1756, by the Rev. J. Longe. The glebe is 7A. 2R. 15P., and the tithes were commuted in 1838, for £362 per annum. The chief residents are—John Longe, Esq., J P., D.L., Hall; Rev. Hy. Howes, M.A., Rectory; Wm. Graver, blacksmith; and Geo. Eaton, Benj. Holmes, and Jane Porter (Grange), farmers. Post from Norwich via St. Faith's.

SPROWSTON is a scattered but well-built village, 2 miles N. by E. of Norwich. The parish contains about 2700 acres of land, and has increased its population, since 1811, from 310 to 1407 inhabitants; many handsome villas and houses having been erected here during the last 50 years, especially on the south side of the parish, which adjoins the city suburbs, and is commonly called New Sprowston. The manor anciently belonged to the Corbets, but was sold by Sir Thos. Corbet, (the last baronet of his family,) in 1645, to Sir Thos. Adams, from whose family it passed, by sale, to Sir Lambert Blackwell, who was created baronet of Sprowston, in 1718. It was held by three successive baronets of this family; but the last, who died in 1801, sold it to Mr. Boycott, of Norwich, and after passing through the hands of various owners, by whom a large portion of the soil was alienated, it became the property of the Head family. George Head Head, Esq., of Carlisle, is the present lord of the manor and chief owner, but W. H. C. Hardy, Esq., Colonel E. J. Stracey, Sir H. J. Stracey, Bart., M.P., and some smaller proprietors have estates here. The Hall, a pretty brick Elizabethan house, said to have been erected in 1559, was much improved some years ago, and is now occupied by John Norgate, Esq. The Lodge, a spacious white brick mansion, 3½ miles N. by E. of Norwich, is the seat of Lieut.-Col. Edw. John Stracey, and has pleasant grounds. The Grange is the handsome modern residence of Mrs. Lubbock; and South Lodge, the pleasant seat of Joseph Howes Allen, Esq., is about half a mile north of Norwich. Here are several other good houses occupied by their owners; and near Sprowston Cottage are the remains of St. Magdalen's Chapel, now converted into cottages. The Church (St. Margaret) is an ancient structure, but has undergone many modern repairs, and now presents a curious appearance, the chancel roof being considerably higher than that of the nave, and the tower and some other parts having been rebuilt of brick. It is chiefly in the perpendicular style, and comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, lady-chapel, and square tower with three bells. Its interior is remarkable for the number and beauty of its monuments. One of white marble is especially fine, and depicts Lady Wilhelmina Mickelthwait (who died in 1805) watching over her infant, which is in the arms of its nurse. Another, of alabaster, bears recumbent figures of Sir T. Adams (who was lord-mayor of London in 1645) and his wife. The north aisle contains several ancient tombs with kneeling and recumbent effigies of the Corbets, much mutilated. Miles Corbet, a member of this family, sat as one of the judges and signed the death-warrant of Charles I., but does not appear to have been interred here. Here are also marble tablets to Sir P. Painter, and J. Morse and N. Mickelthwait, Esqs., and a well-carved font given by the Rev. W. Stracey. A new decorated east window of three lights, filled with beautiful stained glass, representing the six mercies, was inserted in 1863, at a cost of £160, by Mr. and Mrs. Rushmore, in memory of Mr. Hy. Suffield Wm. Farman, son of the latter by a former marriage. Mr. Rushmore has also just presented a handsomely carved reredos, at an expense of about £30. The benefice is a perpetual curacy, not in charge, and now valued at £160 per annum. It was augmented in 1790 and 1794 with £400 of Q.A.B., laid out in land; and in 1824, with a Parliamentary grant of £1000, now at interest. The Rev. Henry Banfater, B.D., is the incumbent, and has a good Parsonage House, purchased in 1849, at a cost of £400; and the Dean and Chapter of Norwich are the patrons and appropriators; but the tithes are leased to the landowners. The National School, a neat brick structure, built in 1860, by Mrs. Arkwright, is attended by 100 children. The Huntingdonians and Baptists have each a small chapel here, the former built in 1839. The fair, formerly held on August 2nd, was discontinued in 1826. At the enclosure, in 1800, about 1000 acres of Mousehold Heath (partly in this parish,) were charged with the yearly payment of £30, for distribution in coals to the poor of Sprowston, who have also 5s. a year left by Jno. Warner in 1648, for a distribution of bread on St. Thomas' day.

TAVERHAM, the small village which gives name to this hundred, is situated on the north bank of the Wensum, commanding a fine view of the vale, and distant $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. of Norwich. Its parish contains 212 inhabitants, and 2021a. of land, with extensive plantations, partly surrounding the large lawn and picturesque mansion of the Rev. John Nathaniel Micklethwait, M.A., the principal owner of the soil, and lord of the manor of Taverham Hall; but part of the parish is in the Bishop's manor of Drayton. The copyholds in the latter are on fine certain, and in the former arbitrary. The Hall was entirely rebuilt on a more splendid scale in 1860-'1, and is of brick with stone dressings, in the Elizabethan style of architecture. The apartments are spacious and lofty, and have finely moulded ceilings. They contain a number of valuable paintings by Lely, Poussin, Canaletti, Holbein, and other great masters, several exquisite cabinets of marqueterie and buhl, &c. The gardens in front are terraced, and the flower-beds form arabesques and have a very striking effect. In the village is a mill in which printing paper is manufactured. The old church was destroyed by lightning in 1458. The present Church (St. Edmund) is in the early-decorated style, and comprises a nave with south aisle, a chancel, and a tower—round at the base and octagonal above. It contains an organ, a piscina, a chancel screen, and some ancient stained glass; and was handsomely restored, refitted with open benches, and the aisle rebuilt by the Rev. J. N. Micklethwait in 1863, at a cost of £800. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 5s. 5d., and now possessing 42 acres of glebe, and a yearly rent of £329. 9s., awarded in 1844, in lieu of tithes, is in the alternate patronage of the Bishop of Norwich and the Rev. J. N. Micklethwait. The Rev. Robert Clerke Burton, M.A., is the rector, and has a good residence. The National School, a neat brick building, erected in 1851 at a cost of £358, is attended by 45 children

WROXHAM, 6½ miles N.E. of Norwich, on the Stalham road, is a picturesque village, standing on the summit and bold acclivities of the south bank of the river Bure, which is here crossed by a good bridge, and flows in a very circuitous channel, expanding into several broads, abounding with pike, perch, and other fish, and navigable for small craft to Yarmouth. The parish contains 409 inhabitants, and 1489A. 1R. 6P. of land, belonging to several proprietors. William Hy. Trafford, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at the Hall, a plain square brick mansion with pleasant grounds. Wroxham House, a handsome modern residence with extensive lawn and plantations, is the seat of Robert Blake Humfrey, Esq.; and Broad House, the seat of Alfred John Norman Chamberlin, Esq., is pleasantly situated on the margin of Wroxham Broad, a fine sheet of water, on which the annual regatta of the Norfolk & Suffolk Yacht Club is held. James Green, Esq. and Mr. Charles Utting, have also estates and neat houses here. The Church (St. Mary) stands on a lofty eminence above the river, and is a noble edifice, comprising nave with aisles, south porch, chancel, and square tower with six bells. It was originally of Norman architecture, and the south doorway is a splendid specimen of that style, being deeply recessed and elaborately ornamented. The rest of the building is now mostly perpendicular, and was judiciously restored in 1845 at a cost of about £600, including the insertion of new windows filled with stained glass at the east and west ends, the former representing scenes from the life of Christ, and the latter, the Nativity, Baptism and Adoration, the Virgin Mary, Our Saviour, and St. John. The roof is of open timber, with finely carved corbels; and here are several marble tablets of the Wace, Hardy, Humfrey, and Collyer families a piscina, a carved reredos, and a hagioscope or squint from the south aisle. In the churchyard are seven large oak trees which were purchased by the late B. Trafford, Esq., of Archdeacon Collyer, and are preserved as ornaments. There is also a mausoleum, erected over the vault of the late R. S. Trafford Southwell, Esq. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7. 17s. 1d., and now at £337, with that of Salhouse annexed to it, in the incumbency of the Rev. Sml. Haworth, M.A. of Salhouse. (See p. 608.) Wm. Hy. Trafford, Esq., is patron, and also impropiator of the rectorial tithes. The glebe here is 18A. 3R. 24P., and the vicarial tithes were commuted in 1839 for £139 per annum. In 1674, Edmund Topcliffe charged his estate here with the yearly payment of £2. 10s., to be applied as follows;—20s. worth of bread for the poor of Wroxham, Salhouse, Belaugh, and Hoveton St. John; 10s. towards repairing the south aisle of Wroxham church; 4s. to the clerk, and 16s. to the vicar, for a sermon on New Year's day. The School is attended by about 40 children, and is endowed with the interest of £450, three per cents, left in 1856 by Miss Bryant for educating children according to the principles of the established church. TUNSTEAD HUNDRED

Is of a crooked oblong figure, extending about 13 miles southward from the sea coast, between Happisburgh and Mundesley, to the river Bure, and averaging from five to six miles in breadth. It is generally a well cultivated district of rich loamy land, highly productive in wheat and barley, and broken into a pleasing variety of hills, vales, and plains, interspersed with tracts of fertile marshes, and watered by several "broads" and rivulets, most of which are tributary to the small river Ant. This river intersects and bounds the Hundred during its whole course from Antingham to the Bure, and was formerly navigable only as high as Dilham; but by deepening the channel, and cutting a canal upwards of seven miles in length, in 1825-6, at a cost of £32,000, the navigation has been extended to North Walsham, and the bounds of Antingham; thus affording an easy transit for the produce of this and the adjoining Hundreds to Yarmouth. TUNSTEAD and HAPPING HUNDREDS form the Deanery of Waxham or Waxton, in the Archdeaconry of Norwich; and their 42 parishes, except North Walsham, (which is in Erpingham Union,) were INCORPORATED for the support of their poor, in the 25th of George III., when they erected a HOUSE OF INDUSTRY, at Smallburgh, which was altered and enlarged in 1836 and subsequent years, and has now room for about 800 paupers. Attached to this large Workhouse are 24A. of arable land. The expenditure of the 41 incorporated parishes, on their in and out-door poor, was £4367, in 1839, and £4381, in 1842; and their total average annual expenditure at the present time is nearly £8000. They comprise an area of about 57,700 acres, and a population of 14,516 souls, of whom 7,274 are males, and 7,242 females. Wm. Postle, Esq., is chairman; and Mr. Hy. Riches Barnard, of Worstead, is clerk to the Board of Guardians and Directors, and superintendent registrar. Messrs. Joseph Durrell, of Worstead, and R. B. Silcock, of Stalham, are registrars of marriages; and Messrs. S. T. Huke, of Ludham, John Dix, of Smallburgh, Fras. Clowes, of Stalham, and Wm. Moy, of Bacton, are registrars of births and deaths. The relieving officers are Mr. Geo. Stearman of Stalham, for Happing district, and Mr. Wm. Barcham of Worstead, for Tunstead district. Mr. James and Mrs. Betsy Holt, are master and matron, and the Rev. John B. Vale, M.A., of Crostwight, chaplain to the Workhouse.

Tunstead Hundred is bounded on the north by the ocean and North Erpingham, on the east by Happing, on the south by Walsham, and on the west by South Erpingham and Taverham Hundreds. It contains 26 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent.

ASHMANHAUGH, a small parish, 7 miles S. by E. of North Walsham, and 10 miles N.E. by N. of Norwich, has 136 inhabitants, and 666 acres of land, mostly the property of Sir J. H. Preston, Bart., the lord of the manor, impropiator, and patron of the perpetual curacy, which was certified at £10, and is now valued at £76, and consolidated with the rectory of Beeston St. Lawrence. It was augmented from 1731 to 1810, with £600 of Q.A.B., and in 1758, with £200, given by Isaac Preston, Esq. With these sums 27A. of land were purchased. The old glebe is 5A. 2R., and the impropriate tithes have been commuted for £145 per annum. The Rev. Fras. Jickling, M.A., is the present incumbent, and has just built a new Rectory House here, for the consolidated parishes. The Church (St. Swithin) is a very small fabric, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and low round tower. The latter was rebuilt in 1842, and contains one bell. The Church Land, 1R. 2P., has a cottage upon it, and is let for £4. The Poor's Allotment, 8A., awarded in 1808, is let for £8. The Old Poor's Land, with an allotment awarded to it, is 2½A., let, with two tenements upon it, for £2. 5s. The School is supported by the Misses Preston, of Barton Turf, and is attended by about 45 children. The chief residents are—The Rev. Fras. Jickling, M.A., rector of Beeston St. Lawrence, and incumbent of Ashmanhaugh, Rectory; Benj. Ling, farmer; Caroline Felstead, shopkeeper and blacksmith; Ann Blackburn, schoolmistress; and Hy. Smith, parish clerk. Post from Norwich, via Neatishead.

BACTON is a parish on the sea coast, 5 miles N.E. by E. of North Walsham, containing 1564A. of land, and 486 inhabitants, residing chiefly in the hamlets of Bacton, Bacton Green, Keswick, and Bromholm, distant nearly half a mile from each other; but a narrow point of the parish extends three miles to the S.W., where there are some cottages called the Wood. Lord Wodehouse is lord of the manor, impropiator of the great tithes, patron of the living, and chief landowner; but Miss Emily Morse, Mrs. Atkinson, Mrs. Girling, Messrs. John Mack, Thos. Cubitt, and H. R. Culley, and others have estates in the parish. The Church (St. Andrew) stands on a summit above the village of Bacton, about half a mile from the sea, and is a fine edifice, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with five bells. The chancel contains sedilia for three priests and a handsome piscina, and near the south door is a stoup-niche. The building was restored in 1857-'9, and refitted with open seats, new pulpit, reading desk, &c., of oak; and in 1862, a beautiful stained glass window, representing the Presentation of Christ in the Temple, was inserted by Mrs. Culley, of Dilham, in memory of her parents. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5.3s.1½d., was augmented in 1746, with £200 (in land,) given by Miles Branthwayt, Esq.; and in 1747, and 1792, with £200 of Queen Anne's bounty. The Rev. Jas. Camper Wright, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence, which was enlarged in 1858. The glebe is about 30A., and the tithes were commuted in 1844, for the yearly rent-charges of £229. 12s. 6d. to the vicar, and £284. 10s. to the impropiators. The National School was built in 1859, and the teacher's residence adjoining in 1863. They are neat Elizabethan buildings of flint and stone. The poor have the interest of £10, left by J. Bradfield and another donor. A pleasure fair is held on the first Monday in August. In 1836, Jan. 1845, and at Christmas 1862, the sea made great encroachments on the coast, and nearly every year considerable portions of the land are swallowed up by the ocean. Keswick, half a mile S.E. of Bacton Green, had a church standing in 1382, but no vestiges of it now remain. Here is a Baptist Chapel, erected in 1826. On the beach is a station-house for a coast guard, consisting of a commander and five men. There is also one of Capt. Manby's apparatus for communicating with vessels in distress. The life-boat, placed here by the National Life Boat institution, has been the means of saving many valuable lives. Its crew displayed great bravery

during the terrific gale of Dec. 3rd, 1863, when they rescued the crew of the barque Ina, and were accompanied and aided by Mr. W. P. Cubitt, of Bacton Abbey. The ruins of BROMHOLM PRIORY are near the west end of Keswick. This priory for Cluniac monks, was founded by Wm. de Glanville, as a cell to Castleacre priory, in 1113, and dedicated to St. Andrew. A great source of profit to the monks here was a cross, said to be made of the wood of that on which our Saviour suffered, "and possessed of such virtues, that (according to Capgrave) nineteen blind persons were restored to sight, and 39 persons raised from the dead by it." At the dissolution, this priory and its adjacent estate were granted to Thomas Wodehouse, and are now possessed by Lord Wodehouse. It was chiefly of flint, but very little now remains to shew the plan of the edifice. It appears, however, to have been similar to that of most other Benedictine monasteries. The church was cruciform, about 200 feet long by 50 feet wide; and the transepts measured 90 feet from north to south. Part of the north transept is still standing, but has been patched up to form a cartshed and woodhouse. It is of late Norman character, but most of the other ruins appear to be early English, with some few perpendicular additions. The remains of the chapter house are very picturesque, and the dormitory adjoining measures 90 feet by 22, and was vaulted beneath and lighted by a range of narrow windows in the east wall. The gatehouse stands about 300 feet north of the other ruins, and has a lofty arch of the perpendicular period, supported by transitional Norman piers. About Christmas, 1845, a jewelled gold coin of the Emperor Mauricius was found on the beach at Bacton, and is now in the British Museum. This coin is surrounded by a double border of open-work, also of gold, and most of the small cavities still contain the bits of ruby-coloured glass, with which they were doubtless all originally filled. On the top is a ring or loop by which the ornament was suspended, and this is enriched with a chain or braid-like pattern, which is also extended round the outer rim of the frame.

BARTON TURF is a parish and straggling village, 11 miles N.E. of Norwich, and 6 miles S.S.E. of North Walsham, comprising 379 inhabitants, and 1599 acres of land, of which 178A. are wood and water. The navigable river Ant opens out into an extensive lake or "broad," on the east side of the parish. The soil belongs to a number of proprietors, the largest of whom is Sir J. H. Preston, Bart., the lord of the manor, lessee of the tithes, and owner of Barton Hall, a large handsome brick mansion, seated on a pleasant eminence, and now occupied by the Misses Preston. The Corporation of Norwich has a small manor and estate here, called Berry Hall. The Church (St. Michael) stands in the centre of the parish, and is a handsome structure, comprising nave with aisles, chancel with south chapel, and a lofty and beautifully proportioned tower with three bells. The nave is late-decorated—about 1360, the tower and chancel early perpendicular, and the aisles about 50 years later. The chapel of St. Thomas, on the south side of the chancel, was built in 1445, by Thomas Amys, as appears from two very interesting brasses which it contains. The lower panels of the rood-screen have beautifully painted representations of St. Apollonia, St. Citha, St. Barbara, and the Heavenly Hierarchy. There is also a side screen in the south aisle, with paintings of King Henry VI., St. Edward, St. Edmund, and St. Olave. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., and now at £379, with the rectory of Irstead annexed to it. The Bishop of Norwich is the patron, and the Rev. John Gunn, M.A., F.G.S., of Irstead, incumbent. The glebe here is 27A. 2R. 1P. The tithes of Barton Turf were commuted in 1840, for the yearly payments of £171 to the vicar, and £295 to the Bishop of Norwich, the impropiator. The Fuel Allotment, 30A., was awarded in 1810, and the poor cut fuel upon it. The parish clerk has the rent of 3R. 21P., called “The Dog Whipper’s Land.” A School is supported by the Misses Preston. Post from Norwich, via Neatishead.

BEESTON ST. LAWRENCE, 10 miles N.E. of Norwich, is a small parish with only 50 inhabitants, and 519 acres of land, nearly all belonging to Sir Jacob Henry Preston, Bart., the lord of the manor, who resides at Beeston Hall, a large Gothic mansion of flint, with stone quoins, &c., in a beautiful park of 300 acres. This has long been the seat of the ancient family of Preston, which was distinguished for its loyalty during the civil wars in the reign of Charles I. As a last tribute of affection, this unfortunate monarch, when upon the scaffold, presented Jacob Preston, Esq., with an emerald ring, which is still preserved here. The present baronet was born in 1812, graduated M.A. at Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1832, and was Sheriff of Norfolk in 1847. His son and heir, Henry Jacob Preston, was born in 1851. The Church (St. Lawrence) is a small ancient structure of mixed architecture, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and embattled round tower with one bell. A great part of it was rebuilt by the late Sir Thomas Preston; but the lower part of the tower, and part of the north wall appear to be of the Saxon period, having indications of herring-bone work and long-and-short work. On the north, south, and west sides of the tower, at 20 feet from the ground, are triangular headed windows without imposts, 5 feet high and 2 feet wide, formed of the native gravel indurated and blackened by the oxide of iron, and worked in the rudest manner; and at 4 feet from the ground is a small west window or loop, with a circular headed archivolt of one large stone, rabbeted to receive a shutter of board or casement of glass, and splayed inwards. It is 2 ft. 10 in. high by 8 inches wide, of very rude construction, and with unusually thick joints of mortar. Most of the windows of the church are of the decorated style, and the east window is filled with stained glass. Over the altar is a picture of the last supper; and here are many handsome mural monuments of the Preston family. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6, was augmented in 1741, with £200 of Q.A.B., and £200 given by Isaac Preston, Esq. These sums were laid out in a house and 18A. 2R., making the glebe about 31 acres. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £145 per annum. The rectory of Beeston and the perpetual curacy of Ashmanhaugh are consolidated, and the Rectory House is situated in the latter parish, and was built in 1864. Sir J. H. Preston, Bart., is patron, and the Rev. Fras. Jickling, M.A., incumbent. In 1806, Ann Powell, left the interest of £41. 10s. for schooling two poor children. The chief residents are—Sir J. H. Preston, Bart., Hall; Joseph Page, steward; and John Weeds Long, farmer. Post from Norwich, via Neatishead.

BRADFIELD, 2½ miles N.N.W. of North Walsham, has in its parish 226 inhabitants, and 757 acres of land, belonging to Lord Suffield, the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £3. 15s; but one moiety of the tithes (£55 a year) form a donative annexed to Thorpe Market. The rector has £160. 10s. a year in lieu of tithes, 2A. 2R. 28P. of glebe, and a neat residence, built in 1861. The Church (St. Giles) is a handsome building in the decorated style of the 14th century, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and lofty square tower with one bell. There is a canopied piscina in the chancel. From the arches in the walls on each side of the nave, it is evident that there were once side aisles. The building has recently been thoroughly restored, and refitted with open oak benches in the nave, and richly carved stalls in the chancel, with pulpit and reading desk to correspond. There are two fine pinnacles on the chancel gable, which with the new stone coping, cross, and window, present an east front not surpassed by any church in the district. The Independents have a chapel here. Bradfield Hall, a pleasant white brick residence, is occupied by Hy. Smith, Esq., who on Sept. 8th, 1863, lost 7 large wheat and barley stacks, by fire, occasioned by two little boys heedlessly playing with lucifer matches. The chief residents are—Mrs. Eliz. Barber, Lingate Bridge; Hy. Smith, farmer, land agent, bone crusher, and merchant, Hall; Robt. Wood, cattle dealer and drover; John Cook, wheelwright; James Larnier, blacksmith; James Vince, book-keeper; Philip Storey, cattle dealer; and Susan Mayes, Thos. Ampleford, Wm. Scottow, James Sewell, Wm. Goulden, Mrs. Larnier, and Robt. Barber (Lingate Bridge), farmers. Post from Norwich, via North Walsham.

CROSTWIGHT parish, 4 miles E. of North Walsham, has only 73 inhabitants, and 777 acres of land, mostly the property of Martin James Shephard, Esq., of North Walsham, who is also lord of the manor, and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. John Bartholomew Vale, M.A., who has a good residence, 13½ acres of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £150, awarded in 1838 in lieu of tithes. The Church (All Saints) is a small rubble building, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and short square tower with one bell. It is of the early-decorated period, and retains its elegant rood-loft screen, from which, however, all traces of painting are obliterated. There are some fragments of stained glass in the windows; and on the bosses of the roof the heads of a King and Queen may still be seen. In the pavement are two stone coffin lids with crosses, and a small brass; and in the churchyard is a remarkable stone of considerable thickness, shaped like a cross, and about six feet long. In 1848, some curious paintings were discovered on the north wall of the church, representing the seven deadly sins, St. Christopher, the Crucifixion, St. Michael, Our Saviour before Pilate, and other subjects, treated with great spirit and displaying a tolerable knowledge of art. There is a piscina in the chancel, and a stoup-niche in the porch. An organ was purchased about two years ago. Crostwright Hall, a large old mansion, near the ruin of the ancient manor house, which was a seat of the Walpole and Le Groos families, is occupied by John Love, Esq., who farms the whole parish. The poor's land is let for 20s. a year. Post from Norwich, via Smallburgh.

DILHAM, a pleasant scattered village, nearly 5 miles S.S.E. of North Walsham, has in its parish 425 inhabitants, and 1563A. of land, on the south-west side of the small but navigable river Ant. The soil belongs chiefly to W. F. Windham and H. Taylor, Esqrs. The former is lord of the manor, in which the fines are arbitrary, and the latter resides at the Hall. Miss Charlotte Taylor occupies Hill House, which has one of the prettiest pleasure grounds in the county, formed at much labour and expense, in what was previously a morass of 25 acres. Instead of a bog, this now delightful spot presents a fine lake, with six ornamental islands approached by swing bridges, and one of them having a handsome summer-house. The lake or fish-pond is encompassed by beautiful walks, margined with trees and shrubs, and the whole is surrounded by a moat. Dilham Staith, on the east side of the parish, is a hamlet on the navigation, partly in Smallburgh parish; and Dilham Mill, with a dam of 25A. formed about 35 years ago, is occupied by Mr. John Stammers. The Church (St. Nicholas) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and embattled round tower of flint, with one bell. It was rebuilt about 40 years ago of brick, except the tower which was re-constructed of the old materials. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 7s. 4d., and now at £272, with that of Honing annexed to it, is in the gift of the Bishop of Ely. The Rev. Hicks Deacle, B.A., is the non-resident incumbent, for whom the Rev. Fras. Gardner Salt officiates. The rectorial tithes of both parishes belong to Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge. The tithes of Dilham were commuted in 1838 for £315. 9s. 3d. per annum to the appropriators, and £163. 6s. 7d. to the vicar. The National School is supported by subscription, and attended by 40 children. Post from Norwich, via Smallburgh.

EDINGTHORPE, 3 miles N.E. by E. of North Walsham, has in its parish 181 inhabitants and 691A. 1R. 23P. of land. J. Mack, Esq., is lord of the manor; but the soil belongs to M. Neave, and J. Walpole, Esqrs., Lord Wodehouse, and Messrs. Charles and William Turner. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and tower. The latter is round at the base and octagonal above, and contains three bells. The building has been recently restored and refitted by subscription. The screen is handsome and of the decorated period, having the tracery supported by small circular shafts with capitals and bases; these were originally ornamented with spiral bands of colour. The lower panels have six paintings of saints, now nearly obliterated. There is a piscina in the nave, and near the north door is a stoup-niche. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 5s. 2d., in the patronage of the Queen, as Duchess of Lancaster. The Rev. Jph. Lawson Lisson, B.A., is the non-resident incumbent, and the Rev. Walter Arthur Taylor, is the officiating curate and occupies the Rectory House. The glebe is 17A. 3R. 34P., and the tithes were commuted in 1840 for £240 per annum. The chief residents are—the curate; Edward and Richard Larter, blacksmiths; Mary Steward, shopkeeper; John Sudbury Landymore, farmer, and brick and tile maker; and Thomas Bush, Adam Fuller, George Richardson, Charles Turner, and Robert Burton, farmers. Post from Norwich, via North Walsham.

sham, comprising in its parish 434 inhabitants, and 1863A., forming a well-cultivated champaign district, with a number of neat farm houses and a good inn. Lord Suffield is proprietor of part of the soil, and is lord of Bryant's manor, or Rugg's Hall; but Mrs. Wm. Postle, of Smallburgh, is lady of the manor of Felmingham Stubbs. The Church (St. Andrew) comprises only a nave (which was rebuilt of brick in 1745,) and an ancient square tower of flint, with six bells. It contains tablets of the Seaman, Hylton, Moore, and Griffin families, but is in a very dilapidated state, and sadly needs restoration. The benefice is divided, three-fourths being a vicarage, (certified at £16,) in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. W. H. Charlton; and one-fourth a rectory, in the gift of Mrs. Postle, and incumbency of the Rev. John Postle, B.A. of Tuttington. The latter was augmented from 1714 to 1791, with £600 of Queen Anne's Bounty, vested in land at North Walsham. The vicarial glebe is 14A. The Bishop of Norwich is appropriator of three-fourths of the rectorial tithes. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for the following yearly rents:—£352. 2s. to the Bishop; £167. 2s. 6d. to the rector; and £150. 12s. 6d. to the vicar. The Wesleyan Reformers have a small chapel in the parish, built about 10 years ago. Susanna Bunn died here Jan. 23rd, 1864, aged 101. There is a Lodge of Oddfellows at the King's Head. The School is attended by 34 children, and supported by subscription. The Poor's Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1814, consists of 30A. 32P., on which fuel is cut. They have also 14s. 4d. yearly from 1A. 14P., left by Wm. Garrard, except 3s. 4d. for a sermon, and 1s. for the clerk. In 1844, some labourers, when carting sand from a hill near the Hall, found two beautiful Roman Urns, containing a variety of bronze figures and ornaments of exquisite workmanship; among them was a silver coin of Valerian the younger. In 1845, seventeen similar urns, but of coarser make, were found on the same spot, and with them a brass coin of Severus. Post via Aylsham.

HONING, a small village and parish, on the east side of the canal, nearly 4 miles S.E. of North Walsham, has 304 inhabitants, 1187A. 1R. 17P. of enclosed land; and about 300A. of wood, heath, and common, on which the poor cut fuel. The principal owner and lord of the manor, is Edward George Cubitt, Esq., of Honing Hall, a large modern mansion of brick, with a richly-wooded lawn. Lord Wodehouse, the Rev. J. N. White, and others have small estates here. The Church (St. Peter & St. Paul) is a handsome edifice, comprising nave, chancel, and south porch, which were rebuilt in 1796, and an ancient and lofty tower containing five bells. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £4. 13s. 4d., is consolidated with that of Dilham. (See page 618.) The glebe here is 17A., and the tithes were commuted in 1842, for yearly rent-charges of £145 to the vicar, and £283 to the Provost and Fellows of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, the appropriators. The poor have the interest of £46, arising from the sale of a house left by John Gibbs. Rents amounting to £37. 10s. a year from 3A. 2R. 36P., in Tunstead, left by Thomas Husband, in 1613, and 18A. 3P. in Dilham, left by John Baxter, are disposed of as follows: £19 for schooling poor children; 10s. to poor widows; about 20s. to lying-in women; and the residue is carried to the accounts of the churchwardens, who now hold a balance of £140. invested in three per cent annuities. The School is attended by 30 children. Here is a large nursery comprising about 7A. Post via North Walsham.

HORNING, 9 miles N.E. of Norwich, is a large straggling village and parish, with 441 inhabitants, 951A. 3R. 17P. of arable land, and 1571A. 3R. 23P. of fertile marshes and meadows, lying between the navigable rivers Bure and Ant. Over the former is a ferry to Woodbastwick. The lower parts of the valleys are often covered with water. The Bishop of Norwich owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manor, appropriator of the great tithes, and patron of the living; but the tithes are leased to Mr. Wm. Heath, of Ludham. The village is in two divisions, called Upper and Lower streets, and has several neat houses; and on the Bure are commodious staiths or wharves. A fair is held here on the first Thursday in July. The celebrated Abbey of St. Bennet's at Holm, stood in this parish, on the north side of the Bure, in a fenny place called Cowholm, where there had previously been a hermitage. It was founded by King Canute, in 1020, for black monks of the order of St. Benedict, who fortified it so strongly, that it resembled a castle more than a cloister, and held out against the attacks of the Norman Conqueror, till betrayed by one of the monks, who was induced to this treachery by a promise of being made abbot, which was done; but immediately after receiving the mitre he was hanged as a traitor. The ample endowments and privileges first granted to this mitred abbey were greatly increased by Edward the Conqueror, the Empress Maud, and other royal benefactors. According to Speed, they were valued in the 26th of Henry VIII. at £677. 9s. 8d. In the following year, William Rugge or Rappes, the abbot, who had been a powerful instrument in aiding the lascivious propensities of Henry, was translated by that monarch to the See of Norwich, to which the revenues of the abbey were granted in place of those of the bishopric, which Henry had appropriated to himself by an agreement with the preceding bishop, Richard Nix, who died in the tower, Jan. 14th, 1535; but the new bishop being bound to provide for the prior and twelve monks, was unable to maintain his state and dignity, and obtained leave to retire with a pension of 200 marks. The abbacy is still annexed to the bishopric, but no monks were appointed after the death of those on the foundation, when the revenues were alienated. All the Abbots had a seat in the House of Lords; consequently the present bishop has a double claim to his seat there; and he is the only abbot in England, being styled in legal documents "Bishop of Norwich and Abbot of St. Benedict," or St. Bennet's at Holm. The walls which surrounded the abbey, enclosed an area of 36 acres, defended on the south by the river Bure, and on the other sides by a deep fosse. Part of their foundations may still be traced; but the walls of the once stately abbey are gone, except the chapel, (converted into a barn,) and part of the magnificent gateway, now partially obscured by a draining mill erected over it. The abbots had their grange, or country seat, at Ludham Hall. The abbey church was a large cruciform structure, with a round tower in the centre, surmounted by a small spire. The present parish church (St. Benedict) stands on an eminence, and has a tall square tower with one bell.

The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8; and was augmented, from 1729 to '93, with £800 of Queen Anne's bounty, vested in 31A. of land, at Stokesby, Acle, and Newton-Flotman; besides which, it has 6A. 2P. of old glebe. The vicarial tithes were commuted, in 1841, for £175 14s. The Bishop of Norwich is patron, and the Rev. Augustus Pyne, M.A., incumbent. The Vicarage House was rebuilt about 40 years ago, and enlarged in 1858. The Church land was exchanged at the enclosure, in 1818, for 4A. 3R. 19P., let for £13. 15s. a year. The Poor's Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, consists of 30A. 1R. 33P., let for £18. 5s., which is distributed in coals. The poor of Horning have also a yearly rent charge of 5s., left by the Rev. Daniel Morley, in 1727, out of land at Hoveton St. John.

HOVETON ST. JOHN, 7½ miles N.E. by N. of Norwich, is a village and parish, with 285 inhabitants, and 1409A. 3R. 22P. of land, exclusive of a lake or "broad" of 133 acres, near the river Bure. The Rev. Thos. John Blofeld, M.A., is chief owner of the soil, impropiator of the tithes, and lord of the manor. He resides at Hoveton House, a handsome brick mansion, with Grecian pilasters, and an extensive lawn overlooking the Bure. The Church stands on an acclivity about half a mile east of the village, and has a brick tower, built in 1765. The east window was filled with stained glass in 1845 by the late Rev. T. C. Blofeld, and new altar rails have recently been given by the present incumbent. The benefice is a curacy, certified at £17, and consolidated with Hoveton St. Peter, in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich and incumbency of the Rev. T. J. Blofeld, M.A. The poor have two yearly rent charges, viz., 10s., left by Daniel Morley, in 1727, and 5s. by Edm. Topcliff, in 1674. Four small Alms-houses, with gardens, have for many years been kept in repair by the Rev. T. J. Blofeld and his ancestors, but there are no documents relating to their foundation. Messrs. E. S. M. and Wm. Scales have a neat model steam corn mill here.

HOVETON ST. PETER, 9 miles N.E. by N. of Norwich, is a small parish of scattered houses, with 131 inhabitants and 945 acres of land. H. N. Burroughes, Esq., of Burlingham, is sole proprietor of the soil and impropiator of the tithes. His son, the Rev. Randall Burroughes, J.P., who married the Hon. Emily Harbord, daughter of the third Lord Suffield, resides at Hoveton Hall, a spacious white brick mansion, with a well-wooded and extensive park, in the vale of a small rivulet which flows southward to the Bure, and divides this parish from that of Neatishead, in which the hall is situated. The Church stands on the south-west side of the park, and contains several handsome monuments of the Aufrere family, and was rebuilt of brick in 1624. The vicarage, certified at £17, is consolidated with that of Hoveton St. John, as noticed at p. 621. The annual value of the joint livings is £134. The great tithes are held on lease by the vicar, and all the tithes of the two parishes were commuted in 1841 for about £660 per annum. The chief residents are—the Rev. Randall Burroughes, J.P., and the Hon. Mrs. Burroughes, Hoveton Hall; James Hearne, farmer; and Wm. Mitchell, farm bailiff. Post via Norwich.

IRSTEAD, a parish and straggling village, 11 miles N.E. of Norwich, has 149 inhabitants, and 1065A. of land, including a broad of 114 acres in the river Ant, and 18A. 1R. 3P. in the Neatishead broad. Sir J. H. Preston, Bart., owns the greater part of the soil, and is lord of the manor, which, in Domesday Book, is called Orsteada, and was formerly held by the Glyn, Gurney, and Horner families; the latter of whom sold it to the late Sir T. Preston. The Church (St. Michael) is a small edifice with a plain square tower. It is in the late decorated style, except the south aisle, which is perpendicular. About 20 years ago it was thoroughly repaired and refitted with open seats; the ancient carved oak benches, &c., were restored; the east end was paved with ornamented tiles; and a new east window of painted glass was inserted. The beautifully executed designs in this and the west window are by Mr. Grant, of Cossey. The lower panels of the screen contain beautifully painted figures of the twelve apostles; and there is a good specimen of medieval iron-work on the door. The font is a fine example of the perpendicular style, but of unusual design. Four of its sides are sculptured with representations of clouds, in which are the head of Christ in a cruciform nimbus, St. John the Baptist's head in a charger, a hand and scroll, and the Agnus Dei; the remaining sides are filled with foliage. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and consolidated with the vicarage of Barton-Turf in the gift of the Bishop, and incumbency of the Rev. John Gunn, M.A., F.G.S., whose predecessor, the Rev. Wm. Gunn, was author of "An Inquiry into the Origin and Influence of Gothic Architecture," (8vo. 1819;) and published a new edition of "Historia Brittonum," (edited in the tenth century by Mark, the Hermit,) with notes and illustrations. The joint livings are valued at £383. per annum, and here is a good Rectory House. The glebe is 13A., and the tithes of Irstead were commuted in 1839 for £202. per annum. Henry Headley, a very elegant poet and critic, and the son of a late rector, was born here in 1766, but died in 1788, in his 22nd year. Wm. de Wykham, who was rector here in 1347, bequeathed a sum of money for the purpose of beautifying the windows of the church. The Poor's Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1805, is 39A. 2R. 6P., on which turf is cut for the poor. The chief residents are—the Rev. John Gunn, M.A., F.G.S., Rectory; Miss Annie Maria Moon, The Grove; John Allan, reed dealer; Jas. Balls, parish clerk; Wm. Brooks, basket maker; Jas. Wiseman, shoemaker; Jas. Scarland, mat and collar maker; John Gay, wherry owner; Geo. Daniels, farmer and veterinary surgeon; Robert Eldridge, farmer, and John Smith, farmer, Hall Farm. Post from Norwich, via Neatishead.

NEATISHEAD, 10 miles N.E. of Norwich, is a large village and parish, containing 580 inhabitants and about 1905 acres of land. This manor was given by Canute, the Dane, to his Abbey of St. Bennet's at Holm, so that the Bishop of Norwich is now patron of the living, appropriator of the great tithes, and lord of the manor; but a great part of the soil belongs to his lessee, Sir J. H. Preston, Bart., and to I. Neve, Esq., Messrs. John Dix, Chas. Cubitt, Richd. Allen, and some smaller proprietors. The Church (St. Peter) is a small edifice with a belfry, being only the chancel of the original building, which was extensive, and had a lofty tower and spire of the age of Edward IV. A new gallery was erected by subscription in 1840. Over the present west door are some remains of rich tabernacle work, which appears to have originally decorated a monument. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £3. 13s. 1½d., and now at £201, has 46A. of glebe, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Henry Browne, M.A., who has a neat brick residence built in 1862. The tithes were commuted in 1841, for the yearly payments of £301 to the appropriator, and £175 to the vicar. The poor have eight cottages and gardens and 3A. 21P. of land, left by widow King and others; and 50A. 39P. allotted at the enclosure in 1808. The rents, amounting to £50 per annum, are distributed in coals. The Baptists have a chapel here, built in 1811 and enlarged in 1857. It has a burial ground attached, and is under the ministry of the Rev. Joseph Hasler. There is a friendly society at the Church schoolroom, with 240 members.

PASTON, a parish of scattered houses, 4 miles N.E. by N. of North Walsham, has 286 inhabitants, and 1375 acres of land, mostly the property of John Mack, Esq., who is lord of the manors of Paston, Leeches, Latimers, and Huntingfields; but H. F. Custance, Esq., has a small manor here, called Paston Sacre; and Thos. Purdy, Esq., and some smaller owners have land in the parish. J. Mack, Esq., resides at the Hall, a neat white brick mansion, embowered in plantations, near the site of the old one, which was long a seat of the Paston family, who removed to Oxnead after being raised to the peerage. From them this estate passed to the first Lord Anson, but was sold in 1824, by the third Lord Anson, now Earl of Lichfield. The Church (St. Margaret) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and lofty tower with five bells. In the chancel are sedilia for three priests, and a piscina; but the former have been partially destroyed by an altar tomb, placed against them, and supposed to have been removed from Bromholm Priory, with a similar one which now serves as the communion table. The screen is richly carved; and near the south door is the holy-water stoup. Here are several monuments of the Pastons; one of which has the recumbent effigy of Lady Katherine Paston, wife of Sir Edmund, beautifully executed in 1629 by Nathaniel Stone, at a cost of £340, and another has two brasses to Erasmus Paston. The church was thoroughly restored in 1843-'4, at a cost of about £500. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., was augmented with £400 of Q.A.B. in 1774 and '89. It has 4A. of glebe, and the small tithes were commuted in 1842 for £136 per annum. The great tithes belong mostly to the owners of the land. The Church Land is 3A. J. Mack, Esq., is patron. and the Rev. Arthur Taylor, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence. STOW HILL, $\frac{3}{4}$ of a mile W. of the village, is a lofty ridge which divides this parish from that of Mundesley; and about half a mile to the S.E. is the hamlet of Paston Green. Austin Bridge, 3 miles S., has a public house and staith. The poor have two cottages with gardens, and 8A. 1R. 20P. of land, left by Sir Wm. Paston, in 1620, and now let for £12. Mr. Edmund Beare, of Pond farm, in this parish, is a noted breeder of Norfolk polled bullocks, for which he has obtained prizes at the chief cattle shows of the kingdom, including the prize medal at the Islington Show in 1862. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here. Post from Norwich, via North Walsham.

RIDLINGTON, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. of North Walsham, has in its parish 236 inhabitants, and 600 acres of land, most of which belongs to E. G. Cubitt, Esq., and Messrs. Saml. Nash and Thos. Bush; but Martin J. Shephard, Esq., is lord of the manor. About 80A. are titheable to Walcot, and a small portion of Walcot pays tithe to this parish. The Church (St. Peter) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and tower. The latter is surmounted by figures of the evangelists in lieu of pinnacles. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 6s. 8d., and now at £210, with East Ruston vicarage annexed to it, in the alternate patronage of the Hon. C. Wodehouse and the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The Rev. John Webb Flavell is the incumbent, and has a good Rectory House, built 20 years ago, about 1 mile S.E. of the church. The other chief residents are—Miss Eliza Taylor; Benjamin Clements, shoemaker and shopkeeper; Joshua Blogg, shopkeeper; Thos. Decker, victualler, Plough; Robt. Marsh, carrier to Norwich every Friday; and Samuel Nash, Robert Marler, Ann Howes, Walter Sandell, and Wm. Newman, farmers. Post from Norwich, via Smallburgh

SCO-RUSTON, or South Ruston, 5 miles S. of North Walsham, has in its parish 102 inhabitants, and 482 acres of land, mostly the property of Sir H. J. Durrant, Bart., and Mr. Thos. H. Wells. The Church (St. Michael) is a small antique fabric, which was formerly larger, and had a tower, of which there are still some ivy-mantled ruins. The chancel was restored in 1861, by G. R. Johnson, Esq., the impropiator. The living is a curacy, consolidated with Tunstead vicarage, in the patronage of Mrs. Catherine Mack, and incumbency of the Rev. Geo. H. Harris, M.A. The Poor's Allotment, 1A. 3R. 8P., was awarded at the enclosure in 1820. The tithes were commuted in 1841, for £135 per annum to the impropiator, and £52. 10s. to the incumbent. The only resident farmers are Thos. Hayne Wells and Benj. Betts. Post from Norwich, via Coltishall.

SLOLEY parish, 4 miles S. of North Walsham, has 258 inhabitants and 720 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Rev. James White, M.A., who is lord of the manor, and patron and incumbent of the living, and resides at Sloley House, a neat mansion of white brick, seated on a gentle declivity, half a mile S. W. of the church. The discharged rectory was valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., and has a yearly rent-charge of £250, awarded in 1842 in lieu of tithes. The Church (St. Bartholomew) comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, and square tower with one bell. The tower occupies a somewhat unusual position, being placed at the west end of the north aisle; whilst the first bay of the south aisle is cut off to form the entrance porch. This aisle, however, extends beyond the nave, one bay farther eastward than the north aisle. The building appears to have been erected about the middle of the 15th century, but it underwent a thorough repair in 1841, when many of its details were changed. The east and west windows are decorated with stained glass, and the chancel contains a piscina and sedilia. The east ends of the aisles were formerly chapels, and each of them retains its piscina. The chapel in the south aisle was dedicated to St. James, and that in the north to St. Erasmus. The former contains a curious altar tomb to Oliver le Groos, under an arch in the wall. On the communion table is carved "I.G. 1634." The ancient octagonal font has sculptured panels representing the Seven Sacraments of the Romish church and the Baptism of our Lord; and the shaft and pedestal are also richly carved. Here are several neat mural monuments, one of which is in memory of the Rev. Wm. Gunn, B.A., who died in 1841 at the age of 91, after having been rector of this parish for the long period of 57 years. The School was built by the late rector in 1841. The Poor's Allotment, 18A. 1R., awarded in 1815, is let to poor families at rents amounting to £18. 5s. At an early period, John Ketteringham left to the poor two cottages and 4A. 2R. 4P. of land, now let for £13. 2s. 6d. The chief residents are—The Rev. Jas. White, M.A., Sloley House; Thos. Everitt, farmer, Old Hall; Rev. Hy. Coleman, B.A., curate; Thos. Cobb, Rachel Garrod, and Wm. Newman, shopkeepers; John Cole and Thos. Bentham, shoemakers; Mary Ann Chaplin and Ellen Thirtle, schoolmistresses; Simeon August, blacksmith and overseer; Philip Taylor, gardener; Joseph Middleton, cooper and parish clerk; and Robt. Nockolds, cattle dealer and victualler, Maid's Head. Mr. Everitt farms the greater part of the parish, but Charles S. Coleman, John Thirtle, John Kerrison, Wm. Steward, John Coles, jun., and John Woodhouse, have small holdings. Post via Norwich.

SMALLBURGH, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. by S. of North Walsham, and 12 miles N.E. by N. of Norwich, is a village and parish containing 1255 acres of land. In 1861, it had 559 inhabitants, including 93 in the Workhouse, or House of Industry, for the Incorporated Hundreds of Tunstead and Happing, which is already noticed at page 613. The soil belongs chiefly to W. F. Windham, Robert Cooke, and William Postle, Esqrs.; but Sir J. H. Preston, Bart., is lord of the manor, in which the fines are certain. The Old Hall is now occupied by a farm bailiff, Wm. Postle, Esq., having in 1837 built a spacious white brick mansion called the New Hall, about a mile south of the village. Holly House, another neat modern mansion, is the residence of Mrs. Mary Postle. Nearly a mile E. of the village is Wayford Bridge, on the river Ant, near which there is supposed to have been a Roman Station, and where there is a wharf for corn, coal, malt, &c. The Church (St. Peter) is a neat fabric, comprising nave, chancel, and south porch. It has a brick belfry with one bell, and formerly had a tower which fell down in 1677. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 4s., in the gift of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. William A. Ormsby, M.A., who has a good brick residence. The glebe is 28A. 1R. 17P., and the tithes were commuted in 1838 for £430 per annum. The School is a neat brick building near the church. The Church Land is 11A. 2R. 27P., let for £24, to which is added £1, from part of an allotment set out as a common-staith. The Poor's Allotment, awarded in 1820, is 43A. 21P., on which fuel is cut. Petty Sessions are held at the Workhouse, every Tuesday.

SWAFIELD, near the source of the river Ant, 2 miles north of North Walsham, has in its parish 172 inhabitants, and 817 acres of land, belonging to Mr Hy. Wrench, T. Dolphin, Esq., Mrs. Maria Layton and some smaller owners; but Lord Suffield is lord of the manor. About 200 acres belong to the Clergymen's Widows' Fund. The Church (St. Nicholas) stands on a lofty eminence, and comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and square embattled tower with four bells. The porch contains a holy-water stoup, and in the chancel are sedilia and a piscina. The lower panels of the screen have paintings of eight of the apostles upon them. The stairs which formerly led to the rood-loft still remain. The building was judiciously restored, and re-fitted with new open seats, pulpit, reading desk, &c., in 1862, at a cost of £500. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6, in the gift of the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and incumbency of the Rev. John Thos. Layard, B.A., who has a good residence built in 1848. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £220 per annum, and here are 7 acres of glebe. The Church Land is $2\frac{1}{2}$ acres. The School, a neat building erected in 1852, is attended by 40 children, and supported by subscription.

TUNSTEAD, which gives name to this hundred, is a parish of scattered houses, 6 miles S. by E. of North Walsham, and 10 miles N.N.E. of Norwich. It has 405 inhabitants and 2291 acres of land. The soil belongs to Mr. John Mack, of Tunstead, G. R. Johnson and Wm. Postle, Esqrs., and some smaller owners; but John Mack, Esq., of Paston, is lord of the manor. Tunstead House, a neat red brick residence, is the seat of Mrs. Catherine Mack. The Church (St. Mary) is a large and handsome structure of the period of transition from decorated to perpendicular architecture. It comprises nave, chancel, aisles, south porch, and lofty embattled tower with five bells. The beautiful screen has sixteen painted figures of saints and apostles in its lower compartments, and the rood-loft still remains. The building was restored in 1863, at a cost of about £700. It is now fitted with new open seats of solid oak, with carved ends. The pulpit, prayer-desk, and lectern are also of carved oak, and the floor is paved with red and black tiles. The chancel contains sedilia for three priests and a piscina, and the font and reredos are of stone, handsomely carved. The doors are also new, and one of them exhibits a beautiful specimen of medieval iron work, which has been carefully repaired. The benefice is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £18. 9s. 7d., and now at £290, with the curacy of Sco-Ruston annexed to it, in the patronage of Mrs. Catherine Mack, and incumbency of the Rev. Geo. Hemmington Harris, M.A., who has a good brick residence and 6 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1841, for the yearly payments of £284 to the vicar, £4. 4s. to the rector of Soley, and £356. 15s. 5d. to the impropiators. Of the latter sum, £132 belong to the lord of the manor, and the rest to the landowners. A neat School was built here by the late rector, and is supported by subscription and attended by 40 children. The poor have the interest of £270, derived about 25 years ago, from the sale of the town houses. They have also two cottages and 2R. 10P., let for £5, which is given to poor widows; 3A. 2R. 34P., let for £4. 4s.; and an Allotment of 8A. 3R. 11P., awarded at the enclosure in 1820, and now let for £14 a year. They have likewise a yearly rent of 3s. from land called the Three Acres; and £3. 15s. as the rent of 1A. 0R. 38P. Post from Norwich, via Scotow.

John Barber to Norwich, Wed. & Sat.

NORTH WALSHAM is a pleasant, but irregularly built market town, on an eminence, with a declivity descending northward to the river Ant, and distant 15 miles N. by E. of Norwich, 25 miles N.W. by N. of Yarmouth, and 123 miles N.E. by N. of London. It consists chiefly of three streets, forming an irregular triangle, intersected by a few cross lanes, &c.; but during the last fifty years, many neat houses have been erected in the suburbs, on the roads to Norwich, Antingham, &c.; and some of the old houses in the town have been rebuilt with handsome fronts. The principal streets have a number of large and well-stocked shops, which supply the surrounding villages for a considerable distance. The Market place is tolerably convenient, and has an elegant Cross, built by Bishop Thirlby, from a design by Palladio, in the reign of Edward VI., and repaired in 1600 by Bishop Redman, whose arms, with those of the See, are impaled on it. This cross finally came into the hands of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who in 1855 presented it to the town; and in the following year it was thoroughly restored by public subscription at a cost of £150. It stands upon an octagonal stone base, 27 feet in diameter, and rises by four diminishing stages to a height of nearly 40 feet. The lower story is paved with encaustic tiles and open at the sides, the roof being supported by eight wooden pillars. The cupola contains an excellent clock, with illuminated dials on the east and west sides. The market, held every Thursday, seldom commences before two in the afternoon in winter, and six o'clock in the evening in summer; but much business is done in corn, and butter, poultry, &c., find a ready sale at the shops and private houses, without being exposed in the market. A fair, for horses, lean cattle, &c., is held on the eve and day of the Ascension (Holy Thursday.) Mr. George Cubitt has extensive works here, for manufacturing machines, iron and brass castings, &c.; and Mr. Cornish, builder and ecclesiastical carver, gives employment to a considerable number of hands. The Corn Hall is a neat brick building behind the white Lion Inn, and was built in 1848, at a cost of £600. It contains 37 desks or stands, which are let to the farmers and merchants at a guinea each per annum. Gas Works were erected here in 1838 by Mr. James Malam, who sold them to a company of shareholders, by whom they have been considerably extended. The capital expended is about £2000, and gas is sold at 7s. 6d. per 1000 cubic feet. Mr. Edward White, is secretary; and Mr. Mark Fox, manager. The river Ant, (see p. 613,) which passes within a mile north of the town, is navigable to Yarmouth, &c.; but the tonnage and lock dues being very expensive, coals and other articles are often brought here by land carriage, direct from the coast, near Mundesley or Bacton, a distance of five miles. The Parish of North Walsham is in Erpingham Union, and comprises 4252 acres of land. Its population increased from 1959 souls in 1801 to 2896 in 1861. The Blue Bell, White Horse, and Spa Commons, are from one to two miles north-east of the town, and were enclosed about 1820, since which many scattered houses and cottages have been erected on them; and in the two latter are the extensive water mills of Ebridge and Bacton-Wood, on the river Ant. The Bishop of Norwich is lord of the manor, and the principal land owners are Lord Suffield, J. Berney Petre, M. J. Shephard and R. S. Baker, Esqrs., Capt. Margitson, Messrs. Thomas Nash, Martin Love, Helsdon Larnier, and John Harvey, and some smaller proprietors. An Agricultural Show is held here annually in October, when many valuable prizes are given to the successful competitors. Most of the neighbouring noblemen, gentlemen and farmers exhibit stock, and there is generally a good display of implements. Here is also an Association for distributing rewards and premiums to farm servants and labourers, for length of service and good conduct; as well as a Horticultural Society, established in 1857. The North Walsham, or 24th Norfolk, Company of Rifle Volunteers was established in 1862, and comprises about 60 men. Major Duff is captain; M. J. Shephard, Esq., lieutenant; and John Shephard, Esq., ensign.

North Walsham suffered considerably in 1381, when a body of 50,000 rebels, under John Litester, a dyer of Norwich, were completely routed on the heath by Bishop Spencer, as noticed at page 150. After their defeat on the heath, the rebels retreated to the town, where they were finally overthrown by the troops of the warlike prelate, after the destruction of the church and other buildings, in which they had barricaded themselves. On the Norwich road, about a mile S. of the town, stands a lofty stone Cross, erected as a memorial of the Bishop's victory over the rebels, of whom it is said nearly 40,000 were slain. On June 25th, 1600, the town was nearly destroyed by an accidental Fire, which consumed no fewer than 118 houses, with about 500 barns, stables, malthouses, warehouses, and other outbuildings; the damage being upwards of £20,000.

The CHURCH (St. Nicholas) was restored soon after the great injury it received in the rebellion of 1381, and is a noble structure, chiefly of early perpendicular architecture. Its massive tower, which was 147 feet high, has been in ruins since May 16th, 1724, when a great part of it fell down. Another large portion of the ruined tower fell on April 26th, 1835, leaving the remaining fragments of the walls in so dangerous a state that part of them was taken down in the following year. The two bells are hung as high in the ruined steeple as they could be with safety. The church is about 156 feet long and 73 wide, having a nave and chancel, with aisles continued in the same style and dimensions from end to end, and a fine south porch. The aisles are separated from the nave and chancel by seven very elegantly formed arches, supported by light clustered columns, so lofty as not to admit of a clerestory above them, and supposed to form part of the original fabric. There is a beautiful window of pure flowing decorated character at the east end of each of the aisles. The roof is also of the decorated period, plain, but of admirable construction. The south porch is a fine specimen of flint work, with stone quoins and dressings. On each side of the entrance-arch is a crocketed niche with richly carved bracket; and there is a similar one above the arch. The spandrels contain the arms of England, quartering France ancient; and those of the Prince of Wales with a label of three points. At each angle surmounting the buttress is a crocketed pinnacle, rising to nearly the same height as a beautiful gable cross in the centre. There are two windows of early perpendicular workmanship, with a buttress between them, on either side of the porch; and on the bosses of the roof are three carved heads, supposed to represent Edward III. and some of his sons. In the north wall of the south aisle, at the back of the sedilia, is a recess with an elliptic arch, and a small aumbry beside it. On the north side of the chancel is a fine monument with the effigy of Sir Wm. Paston, Kt., who, in 1607, agreed with John Key, a freemason of London, to erect and fit up his tomb, with his effigy in armour, armorial bearings, &c., at a cost of £200. Sir William died in the following year, soon after the erection of his tomb. Over the font is suspended a wooden cover of tabernacle work, rising in a succession of arches, balustrades, and pinnacles, in four distinct tiers, and terminated by a pelican. In 1844 the remains of a rich screen and parcloses were discovered, having long been concealed by lofty pews. Eighteen of the twenty panels bear painted figures of saints, each with a highly ornamented gold nimbus. This screen has been repaired and placed in its ancient position; and during the last six years the greater part of the church has been restored both internally and externally, at a cost of about £2200, mostly raised through the exertions of the vicar. The seats are all open and of stained deal, with oak ends, &c. The gas-standards, the pulpit and reading desk, and the new altar rails are very handsome. The great east window of the chancel has been restored at the expense of W. Forster, Esq. The benefice is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8, and now at £448, with the small rectory of Antingham St. Margaret annexed to it. The Bishop of Norwich, as Abbot of St. Bennet's at Holm, is patron; and the Rev. James Murray, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence. The tithes were commuted, in 1842, for yearly payments of £420. 5s. 10d. to the vicar, and £806. 12s. 8d. to Martin J. Shephard, Esq., the improPRIATOR. The Friends' Meeting House is in Swafield road; the Primitive Methodist Chapel in Hall lane; and the Wesleyan Chapel in Church street. The Independent Chapel, on the Antingham road, is a handsome Gothic building of flint and stone, erected in 1857, at a cost of £1000, in lieu of the old chapel in Theatre street, which is now used as a Sunday school. The Rev. Charles Goffe is the present minister. The Cemetery comprises about $2\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land on the Swafield road, and was formed in 1856 at a cost of £800. Two-thirds of it are consecrated, and the remainder is used by dissenters. George Wilkinson, Esq., is clerk to the Burial Board.

The Unanimity Lodge of Freemasons was established in 1758, and meets at the King's Arms, every month, on the Monday next full moon. At the Angel Inn is a Lodge of Oddfellows, opened in 1843; and here are several friendly and benefit societies, clothing clubs, &c. The Savings' Bank, in Church-street, was established in 1820, and has deposits amounting to more than £30,000, belonging to 849 depositors, and 21 Friendly and 23 Charitable Societies. It is open from twelve to one every Monday, and Mr. Geo. Smith is the actuary. The Police Station, in Vicarage-street, was purchased and adapted to the purpose in 1854. It contains two cells, and residences for the superintendent and two constables. Petty Sessions are held at the King's Arms Inn every Thursday, and Walter Scott, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. North Walsham County Court District includes Antingham, Ashmanhaugh, Bacton, Barton Turf, Beeston St. Lawrence, Bradfield, Brumstead, Catfield, Crostwight, Dilham, Eccles-by-the-Sea, Edingthorpe, Felmingham, Gimmingham, Gunton, Happisburgh, Hanworth, Hempstead, Hickling, Honing, Hoveton St. Peter and St. John, Ingham, Irstead, Knayton, Lessingham, Mundesley, Neatishead, Palling, Paston, North and South Repps, Ridlington, East Ruston, Sco Ruston, Sidestrand, Sloley, Smallburgh, Stalham, Suffield, Sutton, Swafield, Thorpe Market, Trimmingham, Trunch, Tunstead, Walcot, Waxham, Westwick, Witton, and Worstead. The court is held monthly at the King's Arms, and Thomas J. Birch, Esq., is judge; Jonathan Townley, Esq., treasurer; Geo. Wilkinson, Esq., registrar; Mr. T. Kerslake, high bailiff; and James Dye and Geo. Sexton, assistant bailiffs.

The FREE GRAMMAR SCHOOL was founded by Sir Wm. Paston, who built the school-house upon two acres of land, which he purchased; and endowed it in 1606, for a master and usher, to instruct freely, in the rules of grammar and the Latin tongue, 40 sons of the inhabitants of the Hundreds of Tunstead, North Erpingham, Happing, and East and West Flegg. For its endowment, and the payment of a lecturer, &c., the founder gave a farm of 148A. 1R., in Horsey, with the rectorial tithes and the advowson of the vicarage of that parish; and 44A. 2R. 36P. of land in Walcot; and directed that the yearly rents and profits should be disposed of as follows:—£10 for a weekly lecture on Thursdays; £20 to the master; £10 to the usher; and the residue, after providing for repairs and the expenses of the trustees, for the relief of the poor. The trust property has been the subject of several decrees and orders of the Court of Chancery; and by virtue of an Act of Parliament, the Horsey estate was sold in 1845 for £7000, which sum has been expended in the purchase of an estate in North Walsham. The yearly income of the school is now £291, of which £140 are paid to the master; £12. 12s. to the lecturer, who is appointed by the Bishop of Norwich; and £10. 10s. to the clerk to the trustees; the remainder, after paying for repairs, &c., is allowed to accumulate. The master's house was rebuilt in 1765, at a cost of £972, and enlarged and improved in 1826, at a cost of £700, (including a new school-room,) so that it is now capable of accommodating from 50 to 60 boarders. The free scholars, upon payment of a capitation fee of £2 a quarter, may be taught Greek, mathematics, the elements of natural science, history, geography, arithmetic, writing, &c., in addition to the instruction provided by the founder's will. In 1787, the Rev. Richard Berney left his library, after the death of his wife, (which occurred in 1824,) to be deposited in this school, for the use of the neighbouring clergy and students. For the reception of this valuable collection of books, a large room in the school-house was fitted up in 1825, at a cost of £122. Attached to the school is a fine lawn and playground of about 1½ acre. Lord Wodehouse, Lord Suffield, and others, are the trustees. The Rev. Thos. Dry, M.A., the present master, was appointed in 1844. Admiral Lord Nelson, Archbishop Tenison, and several other eminent men, were educated here. The National School occupies a building which was erected in 1828 as a Theatre, and was purchased and adapted to its present purpose about 18 years ago. It is attended by about 110 children. The British School, in Free School lane, was built in 1847, and is supported by subscription and government grants. It has 160 scholars. The Young Men's Self Improvement Society, established six years ago, on Church plain, has a library of 500 volumes, and a good reading room, supplied with newspapers, periodicals, &c. The Town Lands, given by Cecilia Clarke, Thos. Roberts, Roger Rant, Wm. Rant, Thomas Baylis, and an unknown donor, in the 17th century, were let for £8. 12s. a year in 1778, but they were sold in that year and in 1786, and the proceeds applied towards the erection of a Workhouse. The Poor's Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, in 1814, consists of 34A. 33P., let for about £100 a year, which is distributed in coals. The yearly sum of £4. 10s., left by Mary Scarburgh in 1690, to be paid to a master for catechising poor children every Sunday, is charged on 7½ acres of land belonging to Mr. Deyns. The interest of £200, bequeathed by John Howes in 1863, is distributed amongst poor widows in blankets.

WESTWICK, from 2 to 3 miles S. of North Walsham, is a fertile and richly wooded parish, containing 207 inhabitants and upwards of 1500 acres of land. It includes several scattered farm houses, and the beautiful and extensive park of Westwick House, the seat of John Berney Petre, Esq., owner of the soil and lord of the manor, which was formerly held by the Berneys, whose heiress carried it in marriage to Wm. Petre, Esq., father of the late John Berney Petre, Esq., whose heiress married Wm. Varlo, Esq. The son of the latter, Jack Varlo, Esq., assumed the name of Petre, and his son is the present owner of the estate. Westwick House is a handsome white mansion, erected by John Berney, Esq., in the reign of Queen Anne. It is esteemed one of the most delightful seats in the county—standing on the northern acclivity of a picturesque valley, surrounded by ornamental woods and plantations, extending in sylvan undulations down to the margin of a rivulet, which is expanded into a lake of thirty acres, from which an aqueduct has been cut to another lake near the house. The turnpike road from Norwich to North Walsingham runs for upwards of two miles through the park, at the entrance to which is a handsome lodge. The late John Berney Petre, Esq., made a carriage-drive of five miles, through a plantation of 500 acres, for planting which he received a medal from the Society of Arts. At a short distance from the house is an obelisk, or look-out, ninety feet high, with an octagonal apartment at the summit, commanding on every side a remarkably fine prospect, terminated on the north and east by a large extent of the sea coast. About $1\frac{1}{4}$ mile N.W. of the hall is a decoy, where upwards of 600 wild fowl were caught last year. The Church (St. Botolph) is a fine building, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and lofty tower with one bell. It stands in the valley, on the south side of the park, and its pinnacled tower forms a picturesque object, peeping above the umbrageous foliage at the head of a large lake. The screen is richly carved, and its lower panels have paintings of the twelve apostles upon them. There are stoup-niches near the north and south entrances, and a piscina at east end of the south aisle. The font is octagonal, and bears the evangelistic symbols. The building was thoroughly restored and refitted with new open seats, pulpit, &c., at a cost of £771, towards which the late Jack Petre, Esq., contributed £336. In the chancel are several neat monuments of the Berney and Petre families. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 13s. 9d., and now at £159. It was augmented in 1792 with £200 of Queen Anne's bounty, now vested in $4\frac{1}{2}$ A. of land; besides which it has 16A. of old glebe. J. B. Petre, Esq., is the patron, and the Rev. Edward Wymer is the non-resident incumbent, for whom the Rev. Geo. King, M.A., of Worstead, officiates. The chief residents are—J. B. Petre, Esq. and Major Duff, Westwick House; Matthew Oates, carpenter; Robt. Hewett, game-keeper; Daniel Smith, farm steward; and Thos. Hall Fairman (Old Hall), Thos. Goose, John Lacy Flaxman, and Thos. Greenacre, farmers. Post from Norwich, via Worstead.

WITTON, a parish and scattered village, from 3 to 4 miles E. by N. of North Walsham, has 269 inhabitants, and 1720A. of land, mostly the property of Lord Wodehouse, whose principal seat is at Kimberley (see page 584), but his lordship, or some of his family are frequently resident at Witton Hall, a large quadrangular mansion of white brick, which was commenced in 1770, by the late John Norris, Esq., who encompassed it with a large park and some fine plantations, but died before its completion, in 1777. It is now occupied by Rear Admiral the Hon. Edw. Thornton-Wodehouse, and stands on an eminence commanding a fine prospect of the ocean, which is distant only about two miles. The Church (St. Margaret) has nave, chancel, south aisle, porch, and round tower with one bell; and was restored in 1858. It has three stained glass windows in memory of the late Lady Wodehouse, and Thos. Ewing and Rd. Drake, Esqrs. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £4. 13s. 1d., and now at £136, was augmented with £400 of Queen Anne's bounty in 1767 and 1786; and the glebe is 7A. 1R. 38P. The Bishop of Norwich is patron, and the Rev. Fras. Proctor, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence, built in 1848. The tithes were commuted in 1839—the vicarial for £120. 13s. 4d., and the rectorial for £264 per annum. Part of the latter sum is appropriated to the vicarage and the remainder belongs to Lord Wodehouse. A cottage and 5A. 1R. 36P. of land, left by Richd. Drake, in 1649, for poor widows, are now let for £7. 5s. a year. Lands given for the relief of the poor, at an early period, by Robt. Annison, were exchanged at the enclosure, in 1828, for several allotments, comprising 11A. 5P., let for £15 a year. In 1777, Jno. Norris, Esq., left money, which was laid out in the purchase of £855 three per cent. consols, and directed the yearly proceeds to be applied as follow:—£10 for schooling 12 poor children, £10. 10s. to the vicar for extra duty, and the remainder to such charities as the vicar should think fit. A Gothic School-house was built in 1834, at the cost of Lady C. L. Wodehouse. The Church Land, 2A., is held by Lord Wodehouse, subject to a yearly rent charge of 24s. The kennels of a pack of hounds, called the North Walsham Harriers, and supported by the principal gentry and farmers of the neighbourhood, are at Mr. Wm. Smith's farm in this parish. The chief residents are—Rear Admiral the Hon. Edward Thornton-Wodehouse, Hall; Rev. Fras. Proctor, M.A., Vicarage; George Youngman, corn miller; Robert Cole, shoemaker; George Prior, parish clerk; John Green, gamekeeper; Wm. Decker, gardener; Caroline Newman, schoolmistress; and Wm. Smith, Thos. Cubitt (Hall Farm), Joseph Turner, John Watts, George Bush Monsey, and William Emerson, farmers. Post from Norwich, via North Walsham.

WORSTEAD, or Worstede, formerly a town of considerable trade, and celebrated as the first seat of the manufacture of worsted stuffs, to which it gave name, is now reduced to the rank of an agricultural village, pleasantly situated on gently rising ground, near a small rivulet, 3 miles S. by E. of North Walsham, 13 miles N.N.E. of Norwich, and 21 miles N.W. of Yarmouth. It had formerly a weekly market on Saturday; but it was removed, as tradition says, in the time of the plague, to North Walsham. It has still an annual fair for cattle, horses, &c., on May 12th. Its parish has 751 inhabitants and 2550 acres of land, mostly a champaign district, and including the small hamlets of Bengate, three-quarters of a mile N.E.;—Bridge-gate, where there are a large corn-mill and wharf, on the river Ant, one mile N.E.;—Brockley, half a mile S.;—Meeting-house Hill, where there is a large Baptist chapel, 1½ mile N.E.;—Lyngate, half a mile N.E.;—and Withergate, three-quarters of a mile N. of the village. Part of the soil lies in the manors of Sloley, Bromholm, and Lyngate. It belongs to a number of proprietors, the largest of whom are John B. Petre, Esq., R. S. Baker, Esq., and the Hon. Wm. Rufus Rous (brother of the Earl of Stradbroke), who is lord of the manor of Worstead, and resides at Worstead House, a handsome mansion of red brick, seated about half a mile east of the village, in a finely wooded park of about 300 acres, where the rivulet expands into a beautiful lake. This mansion was built by Sir Berney Brograve, under the direction of Mr. James Wyatt, the celebrated architect. It has several handsome apartments, and some valuable paintings by Rubens, Vandyck, and other eminent masters. In the reign of Edward the Confessor, Worstead was possessed by the Abbot of St. Bennet's at Holm, and was held of him by Robert, an officer of the cross bowmen, who assumed the name of the place. Worsted stuffs were first made here in the reign of Henry I., as noticed at page 162; but this manufacture left its ancient seat in Norfolk many years ago, and is now chiefly confined to Norwich and its neighbourhood. The Church (St. Mary) is a noble structure of the period of transition from decorated to perpendicular architecture, and comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, south porch, and lofty embattled tower. The latter, which is of fine proportions, has four stages, and contains six bells and a clock. It rises to the height of 109 feet, and is surmounted by four lofty and handsome pinnacles, which were erected in 1861, to replace four others put up in 1844, of which one had been thrown down by lightning in 1859. The building is chiefly of flint, but the quoins of the buttresses and the mullions and arches of the windows are of freestone. The entrance door under the tower, and the great west window above it, are richly ornamented with mouldings and tracery, and the sound-holes of the belfry are of elegant design. The chancel is separated from the nave by a beautiful rood-screen, erected in 1512, the lower panels of which are adorned with paintings of apostles and saints. There are also two similarly decorated parclose screens, dated 1412; and in the tower arch is another screen of elaborate workmanship, supporting a gallery, and dated 1501; but the lower part of this was restored in 1831, and ornamented with emblematical figures of Faith, Hope, Charity, Prudence, Instruction, Justice, Fortitude, and Temperance, painted by the lady of the Rev. John Gunn, M.A., of Irstead. The chancel was built in the second of Richard II., when the Prior of Norwich granted 13 oaks out of Plumstead wood, and other timber out of St. Leonard's wood, towards its completion. It has several inscriptions and brasses to the Brograve and other families, and had formerly a chapel dedicated to St. John the Baptist, at the east end of the north aisle, where part of the altar, and the framework of a painting, which represented the decollation of that saint, still remain. The font is octagonal; each compartment is elaborately sculptured, and the basin is crowned by a richly carved and lofty wooden cover of florid work, rising in a succession of pinnacles round a centre, and terminated by a curious crocketed finial. In 1843, a handsome stone altar table was given by the late vicar, and four beautiful carved oak stalls were erected at the expense of Wharton's trustees; and in 1863 the chancel was reroofed at the cost of the landowners. There is an organ in the north chapel. The old closed pews disfigure this fine church, and a good deal of restoration is still needed. Here was anciently a chapel of ease, dedicated to St. Andrew, but no traces of it are now extant. Sir Wm. de Worstead, in the reign of Henry III., granted the advowson of the vicarage, and the appropriation of the rectorial tithes, with about 49 acres of land, to the Prior and Monks of Norwich, whose successors, the Dean and Chapter, now hold them; but the tithes are leased to the landowners. The benefice, valued in K.B. at £10, has 3½A. of glebe, and is now held by the Rev. Geo. King, M.A., who has a good residence. The tithes were commuted in 1843, for yearly payments of £618 to the impropiators, and £270. 9s. 6d. to the vicar. The Rev. Henry Wharton, son of a late rector at Worstead, was an eminent divine, and author of "Anglia Sacra." He was born here in 1664, "with two tongues, one of which gradually lessened until it became no way inconvenient." He died in 1794, and bequeathed 22 acres of land at Shottesham, in trust to the rectors of Westwick and Sloley, and the vicars of North Walsham, Worstead, and Honing, to employ the yearly rents (now £30) in repairing and beautifying Worstead church. A large National School was built here in 1844, by subscription, aided by a grant of £365, and a collection after a sermon preached by the Bishop. It is in the Elizabethan style, and has about 130 scholars. The Baptist Chapel, on Meeting-house Hill, 1½ mile N.E. of Worstead, was founded in 1717, by its first minister, the Rev. Mr. Culley; but the original chapel was taken down in 1829, when the present more spacious building was erected on the opposite side of the road, at a cost of £800. The old grave yard is still kept sacred, and the new chapel has one of much larger extent. The Rev. Fras. Jas. Smythe, the minister, has a neat residence, with stabling for about 40 horses, for the accommodation of his hearers, many of whom reside at a considerable distance. In connection with the chapel is a British School, which was opened in 1844, for 80 boys and 40 girls, most of whom pay twopence per week, and others, whose parents can afford it, 5s. per quarter. Near the Baptist Chapel are Six Almshouses, for poor members of the congregation, built in

NORTH ERPINGHAM HUNDRED

Is in the Liberty of the Duchy of Lancaster. It extends about twelve miles from east to west, along the sea coast, and averages six miles in breadth from north to south; being bounded by Holt Hundred and South Erpingham on the west; by the latter on the south; and by Tunstead on the east. The soil is generally a fertile loam with substrata of marl and chalk lime, except at the east end, where a light sand prevails, but thrown up like the rest into a picturesque succession of hills, some of which are covered with thriving plantations; indeed, there is in every direction much timber in the fences, giving to the whole a pleasing sylvan appearance, which is finely contrasted by the white cliffs and marine views in the vicinity of Cromer and Mundesley, the most fashionable bathing-places in Norfolk. Though the coast in this district rises generally in bold swells or perpendicular cliffs of chalk, flint, sand, and gravel, it suffers continually from the incursions of the ocean, which are said to average annually about one yard in breadth along the whole beach, where many houses have been washed down in the memory of the present inhabitants; and Shipden (off Cromer,) with some other parishes on record, were totally engulfed in the sea several centuries ago. From the friable nature of the cliffs, and a want of unanimity among the landowners, the artificial means taken here for the purpose of reducing the wasting influence of the mighty waters, have been less efficient than those adopted on other parts of the coast. In the reign of Elizabeth, under the apprehension of invasion, a depôt of military stores was placed in every Hundred; and that in North Erpingham consisted of 400lbs. of powder, 600 of matches, 270 of lead, 30 pick axes, 30 shod shovels, 30 bare shovels, 9 axes, 300 baskets, and 5 beetles. This Hundred forms the Deanery of Repps, in the Archdeaconry of Norfolk; and its magistrates hold Petty Sessions every alternate Monday, at the Red Lion Inn, Cromer, and have for their clerk R. Cooch, Esq., of Cromer. It contains 32 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, showing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the county rate in 1843, and their territorial extent:—

ERPINGHAM UNION.—The nine parishes marked * in the preceding table had an incorporated House of Industry at Gimingham; and the nine marked thus † had one at Sheringham, and until 1850 these were used as the workhouses of Erpingham Union, which comprises all the 32 parishes of North Erpingham Hundred; 14 parishes in Holt Hundred; North Walsham, in Tunstead Hundred; and Baconsthorpe and West Beckham, in South Erpingham Hundred. These 49 parishes comprise an area of 104 square miles, or 63,638 acres, and had 20,874 inhabitants in 1861. Their average annual expenditure from 1832 to 1835, before the formation of the Union, was £16,532. In 1838, it was only £8968; and in 1839, £9547. Their total expenditure for the year ending 25th March, 1863, was £10,746. The old Workhouses at Gimingham and Sheringham were built in 1805, and were adopted as the Union houses, after being altered at a cost of about £1500, but in 1850 they were sold and converted into cottages, a large and handsome New Workhouse of flint, with red brick dressings, having been built at West Beckham, at a cost of £7386. This house has room for 539 inmates, but has rarely half that number, and had only 164 when the census was taken in 1861. Mr. James S. Plumbly, of South Repps, is union clerk and superintendent registrar; and Messrs. James Dye, of North Walsham, John Fox, of Cromer, and Wm. Pashley, of Holt, are registrars of marriages. The registrars of births and deaths are Messrs. Burton S. Plumbly, of South Repps, for North Walsham District; Timothy Murrell, of Sheringham, for Cromer District; and Robert Young, of Holt, for Holt District: the relieving officers are Messrs. Robert Brighten, of Gresham, Robert Falkner of North Walsham, Robert Young, of Holt, and Charles Chapman, of Sustead : and the union surgeons are Messrs. Geo. Skrimshaw, of Holt, Thomas Prangley, of Aldborough, Walter Sumpter, M.D., of Cley, John Buck, of Cromer, and John Shepheard and Edw. Prentice, of North Walsham. Mr. Thos. and Mrs. Mary Potter are master and matron of the Workhouse ; Rev. A. D. Spurgin, B.A., of Gresham, chaplain ; Chas. Jeary, schoolmaster ; and James Bower, jun., porter.

ALDBOROUGH, or Alborough, a pleasant village surrounding a level green, 5 miles N. by W. of Aylsham, has in its parish 305 inhabitants and 769 acres of land ; and has a small stock fair on the 21st and 22nd of June, unless these dates fall on Friday and Saturday, when it is held on the following Monday and Tuesday. Part of the parish is in Lord Suffield's manor of Hanworth, but a great part of the soil belongs to Jas. Gay, Esq., who resides at the New Hall, a handsome mansion, which was erected in 1636, and enlarged in 1818, and stands in a well-wooded lawn. The manor of Alborough was long held by the De Herewards, and was carried in marriage by the heiress of T. Parker, Esq., to the Gays, about the close of the 16th century. Jno. Cook and Geo. Gunton, Esqrs., Messrs. John Bone and Wm. Turner, and some smaller owners have also estates here. The Church (St. Mary) is a neat edifice, which was mostly rebuilt in 1847 at a cost of £750, and comprises nave with north aisle, chancel, and south porch, but no tower. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £8, and now having 24A. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £200, awarded in 1839, in lieu of tithes. Lord Suffield is patron, and the Rev. John Gudgeon Nelson is the incumbent, and has a good residence built in 1834. The School is supported by subscription. The Church Land is 2A. 2R. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here.

ANTINGHAM, 2 miles N.W. of North Walsham, has in its parish 227 inhabitants and 1509 acres of land, in which are two lakes or ponds, forming the principal sources of the river Ant, which was made navigable to the eastern boundary of this parish in 1827, as has been seen at page 613. On the lower pond a bone mill has been erected by Lord Suffield, who owns the whole parish, and is lord of the manor, which was formerly held by a family of its own name, under the Bigods. The Hall, anciently a seat of the Kemp family, is now occupied by Mr. Henry Wright. There were once two parish Churches here in the same enclosure ; but that dedicated to St. Margaret has long been in ruins, and only a part of its tower now remains mantled with ivy. Its rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., is consolidated with North Walsham. For this sinecure, the vicar of North Walsham receives £28. 10s. per annum from the rector of Antingham, in lieu of tithes. The church now in use is dedicated to St. Mary, and has a square embattled tower, with one bell, and contains several inscriptions to the Fermour, Keeson, and Kemp families, and a fine brass, on which are portrayed figures of Richd. Calthorp, Esq., and his children. It has recently been restored and refitted with open seats, new pulpit, &c., at a cost of £430. The font is of Purbeck marble, and here are two piscine. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 3s. 1½d., has the vicarage of Thorpe Market, and the donative of Bradfield annexed to it. Lord Suffield is the patron, and the Rev. John Dolphin, B.A., is the incumbent, and has 40A. of glebe, and £480 a year, awarded in 1839, in lieu of tithes. A new Rectory House, in the Italian style, was built in 1844, at a cost of about £1700, of which £1000 were borrowed from Queen Anne's Bounty. The poor have yearly 8s., left by Thomas Kirbye, in 1630, and the value of two coombs of wheat out of Lord Suffield's estate, in lieu of an ancient commonright. The School was built and endowed in 1826, by Edward, Lord Suffield, at a cost of £3000. It is a spacious and handsome edifice of flint with brick dressings, in the pointed style, and attached to it is a house for the master. The chief residents are—The Rev. J. Dolphin, B.A., J.P., Rectory; John Elden, schoolmaster; Chas. Thornton, grocer and draper; Thos. Wilkin, parish clerk; Jas. Sandall, rat catcher; Miss Mary Ann Cranefield, Ivy Cottage; Jonas Walpole, vety. surgeon and farmer; Ireland Watts, vict., Barge; Hy. Wright, maltster, merchant, and farmer, Hall; and Richd. Renacre, Wm. Cranefield, Jas. Carter, John Page, Benj. Helsdon, John Bell, and John Overton, farmers. Post from Norwich, via North Walsham.

AYLMERTON, 3 miles S.W. of Cromer, has in its parish 250 inhabitants and 1679 acres, including a high ridge of open heath, on which are the ruins of a beacon, and a number of singular excavations, locally called the "Shrieking Pits" (see page 39). John Ketton, Esq., owns the greater part of the soil, and is lord of the manor, and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 11s., and is now worth £370, with that of Runton annexed to it. The Rev. Edmund Foster Hatton, M.A., is the present rector, and has here a good residence, 41A. 2R. 5P. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £228, awarded in 1842, in lieu of tithes. The Church (St. John the Baptist) is in a very dilapidated condition, and comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and round embattled tower. A school is supported by subscription. The chief residents are—The Rev. E. F. Hutton, M.A., Rectory; Wm. Hall, shoemaker; Allen Shepherd, blacksmith; Chas. Shepherd, parish clerk; Louisa Robinson, schoolmistress; Lawrence Barnwell, gamekeeper; and John Allard, Thomas Crowe, Mary Ann Fuller, Edmund Hall, John Philipppo, Richd. Symonds, and Richd. Cantrell Symonds, farmers. Post from Norwich, via Roughton.

BARNINGHAM-NORTHWOOD, 5 miles E. by S. of Holt, has only 30 inhabitants, and about 800 acres of land, all belonging to the trustees of the late W. H. Windham, Esq., the lords of the manor and patrons of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Robert Marler Cremer, B.A., of North Walsham. The Church is dedicated to St. Peter. The tithes have been commuted for £162. 16s. 3d. per annum. The only resident farmers are—Wm. Miller and Wm. Willows; but Richard Symonds, of Aylmerton, farms part of the parish. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

BARNINGHAM TOWN, or Barningham Winter, 6 miles E.S.E. of Holt, has 125 inhabitants, and about 800 acres of land, belonging to J. T. Mott, Esq., who resides at the Hall, a large mansion built in the reign of Henry VIII., and having an extensive and well wooded park, partly in Matlask parish. He is patron of the rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and now in the incumbency of the Rev. Jas. Richd. Anderson, B.A., who has a good residence. The glebe is 38a., and the tithes were commuted in 1842 for £131 per annum. The Church (St. Mary) stands in the park, and is an ivy-mantled ruin, but the chancel is used for divine service, and is neatly fitted with open oak seats, &c. The old tower, which is still standing, contains one bell; and its lower part is used as a baptistry. The chief residents are—John Thos. Mott, Esq., Hall; James Battarham and Timothy Puxley, farmers; Thos. Bird, tailor; and John Gray, gamekeeper. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

BECKHAM (EAST), 5 miles E. by N. of Holt, has only 73 inhabitants and 735 acres of land. The trustees of the late W. H. Windham, Esq., are owners of the soil, lords of the manor, and impropiators. The Church (St. Helen) has long been in ruins, finely mantled with ivy. The inhabitants use Aylmerton church, and the impropiators allow the rector of that parish a yearly modus of £20. The farmers are—Hillary Rounce, Benj. Emery, John Skipper, James Curtis, and George Bird, jun. (Hall).

BEESTON REGIS, or Beeston-near-the-Sea, 3 miles W. by N. of Cromer, has in its parish 196 inhabitants, and about 850 acres of land, belonging chiefly to the Rev. Cremer Cremer, of the Hall; and John Gurney Hoare, Esq., of London, who owns the Abbey farm; but the manorial rights belong to Benjamin Bond Cabbell, Esq., F. R. S., of Cromer. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. It is chiefly in the decorated style, and contains an ancient altar tomb with effigies in brass, and some remains of a beautiful screen. Most of the windows are filled with rich stained glass. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £16, and now at £138, is in the patronage of the Duchy of Lancaster, and incumbency of the Rev. Cremer Cremer, who has about 20 acres of glebe and a good Rectory House. The latter stands in the parish of Runton, and is let to the Vicar of Sheringham. At the entrance to a picturesque dale, are the ruins of Beeston Priory, (St. Mary,) founded in the reign of John, by Lady Margery de Cressey, for Austin canons, and granted at the dissolution to Sir E. Windham and others. It was then valued at £43. 2s. 4d. The rent of 12a. 1r. 1p. of land, at Hindolveston, (£14), purchased with £100, left by Edmund Hooke, in 1715, is divided, two-thirds among the poor of Beeston, and one-third among the poor of Runton. The former have the rent of 6a., let for £12; and here is a cottage, the rent of which is applied with the church rates. The School was built in 1836 by the late Samuel Hoare, Esq., whose widow still supports it. On Beeston Heath is a cluster of curious hollows or pits, known in the neighbourhood by the term "Hills and Holes," (see p. 39). The chief residents are—the Rev. Cremer Cremer and Thomas Wyndham Cremer, Esq., Hall; Christiana Dyball, schoolmistress; Robert Dyball, carpenter and parish clerk; John Skippen, farm bailiff; John Ward, farmer; and Samuel Fuller, farmer, Abbey farm. Post from Norwich, via Cromer.

BESSINGHAM, 8 miles N.N.W. of Aylsham, and 5 miles S.S.W. of Cromer, has in its parish 153 inhabitants, and 508 acres of land, mostly belonging to Daniel Spurrell, Esq., of the Hall; but W. H. Scott, Esq., of Aylsham, is lord of the manor, and F. E. Arden, Esq., is patron of the living which is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 6s. 8d., and now in the incumbency of the Rev. Henry Cotton Arden, who is non-resident. The glebe is 25a., and the tithes were commuted in 1839, for £137 per annum. Near the church is a tumulus of half an acre. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and round tower. The chief residents are—Daniel Spurrell, Esq., Hall; Charles Bishop, blacksmith; Robert Skivins, shopkeeper; Henry Stpn. White, plumber, glazier and victualler, Horse Shoes; Geo. Brown, parish clerk; Maria Franklin, schoolmistress; Thomas Puxley and Samuel Thursby, farmers; and Robert Emery, carrier to Norwich on Fridays. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

CROMER is a fashionable bathing place and well-built town, picturesquely seated on the lofty sea cliffs, at the most north-east point of the Norfolk coast, 9 miles N.N.W. of Walsham; 10 miles E.N.E. of Holt; 11 miles N. by E. of Aylsham; 22 miles N. of Norwich; and 130 miles N.E. by N. of London. Though it stands at a considerable height above the beach, and near the verge of the precipitous cliffs, the town is sheltered on three sides by a towering amphitheatre of hills, partly covered with wood, and presenting a scene truly romantic, whilst the sea-view is no where excelled in extent and sublimity. Cromer has increased its population, since the year 1801, from 676 to 1367 souls; but its parish now comprises only about 700 acres of land, mostly belonging to Benjamin Bond Cabbell, Esq., F.R.S. and F.S.A. who is lord of the manor, and is seated at Cromer Hall, a fine Gothic mansion, which was burnt down before it was finished, in 1829, and rebuilt by its late owner, George Thomas Windham Esq. It has a centre and two wings, and is surrounded by richly wooded pleasure grounds. Mr. Cabbell is the esteemed Provincial Grand Master of the Freemasons of Norfolk, (see p. 188.) Lord Suffield is lord of the manors of Cromer-Gunners, and Cromer-Lancaster, and the Executors of G. S. Repton, Esq., are lords of Cromer-Weylands. At the Domesday survey, Cromer formed part of the lordship and parish of SHIPDEN, a considerable village, which, with its church, dedicated to St. Peter, appears to have been swallowed up by the sea, about the time of Henry IV.; for a patent to collect certain dues for the erection of a pier at Shipden, was granted in the 14th of Richard II.; and two years afterwards, Sir William Beauchamp alienated to a priory of Carthusians a piece of land in Shipden, adjoining the rectory. At very low tides, there are still to be seen, nearly half a mile from the cliffs, large masses of wall, composed of squared flints, which sailors denominate the church rock. The ocean still continues to make rapid encroachments on the cliffs, and numerous houses have been engulfed within the memory of some of the present inhabitants. Many large portions of land were washed away in 1611, previous to which the inhabitants had expended much money and ingenuity in a fruitless attempt to maintain a small harbour. In the winter of 1799, the Light-house Cliffs, which rise from the beach to the height of 250 feet, made several remarkably large shoots, one of which brought with it half an acre of ground, and extended a considerable way into the sea at low water mark. On January 15th, 1825, another large mass of earth was detached from the Light-house hills, and fell with great force on the beach, extending in breadth above 300 yards from the cliffs, and covering an area of about twelve acres. The fall of this enormous body was sudden and unexpected, but fortunately no lives were lost, though the coast-guard had to pass in the night the very spot where it fell. A large and rapid stream of water, immediately after its fall, issued from the bank, discharging itself upon the beach with great noise and violence. Early in the morning of August 19th, 1832, another large shoot of the cliff occurred near the Light-house, and so threatened the destruction of that useful edifice, that the Master and Brethren of Trinity House, London, deemed it expedient to erect another on the hill, 250 yards further inland; but the old one is still standing, though disused. The new light-house, like the old one, is in the parish of Overstrand. It is a white brick tower, 52 feet in height, and 300 feet above the level of the sea, crowned with a lantern lighted by 30 patent lamps, placed in finely plated reflectors, which revolve on an upright axis, and present to the eye a full blaze of light every minute.

Colne House, the property of Sir Thos. Fowell Buxton, Bart., is now occupied by the Dowager Lady Buxton, and among other neat mansions in Cromer are five belonging to and occasionally occupied by H. Birkbeck, Esq., J. G. Barclay, Esq., Joseph and John Gurney Hoare, Esqs., and Robert Herring, Esq. The town has several well-stocked shops, and possesses every necessary convenience for the accommodation of visitors; and standing near the cliffs, at a height of more than 60 feet above the beach, sheltered behind by rising hills, partially clothed with wood and studded with neat villas, its air is remarkably salubrious, and the walks and scenery in its vicinity beautifully diversified. It was first frequented as a watering place, about the year 1785, by two or three families of retired habits, whose favourable reports of the beautiful scenery and pleasant walks in the neighbourhood, the excellence of the beach at low water, and the simple manners of the inhabitants, soon attracted others here to share these enjoyments. The number of visitors continued to increase yearly; and for the accommodation of this growing influx of company, many neat houses have been erected during the last sixty years, and the town so considerably improved, that it now ranks as one of the most fashionable sea-bathing places in the kingdom, and will rapidly increase in importance, as soon as it enjoys the advantages of railway communication. Tucker's Hotel, the Hotel de Paris, Belle Vue Hotel, the Red Lion Hotel, &c., are extensive and comfortable establishments for public entertainment; and here are also a great many private Lodging and Boarding Houses, some of which command sea-views, and are elegantly furnished. There are as yet no gas works, the town being lighted with oil lamps. There is a Telegraph Office at Tucker's Hotel, in connection with the Submarine and British and Irish Magnetic Telegraph Companies, whose Cables enter the sea at Weybourne and land on the Hanoverian coast. The Fishermen's Look-Out and Reading Room on the East Cliff is supported by subscription. The Bath House, established by Mr. S. Simons, in 1814, is a neat building, on the East Cliff, and was erected after the old one had been washed away on the 17th February, 1836, by an extraordinary high tide, which did much damage to other property facing the sea, and drowned a poor man who was endeavouring to save the furniture of the baths. The storm continued to rage for two days, and caused a large portion of the cliff, with a house upon it, to fall into the sea. Two vessels were at the same time wrecked on the beach, but most of their crews were saved. The present Bath House contains commodious hot, cold, and shower baths, and also apartments for boarders. The Jerry, which extended 70 yards into the sea, and was erected by subscription at a cost of £1400, in 1822, (after the old one had been destroyed) was entirely washed away by a high tide and severe gale on the night of January 26th, 1845, when the sea walls and much other property received immense damage. On the 16th of February following, another extensive fall of the cliff took place near the light-house, spreading itself upon the beach to the extent of six acres, in huge masses, rent into lofty pinnacles and deep ravines by the overwhelming pressure of the waters pouring from the land springs. After the damage in 1836, persons who held property on or near the cliffs, were rated to the amount of 20s. in the pound for the erection of safety walls; and immediately after the disasters of Jan. and Feb., 1845, the inhabitants set about repairing the damage, and applied for an Act of Parliament for protecting the town from the further encroachments of the ocean, by erecting and maintaining a New Jetty, or Breakwater, and additional sea walls, groins, and other works on the beach and cliffs under the control of Commissioners, who are empowered to levy rates on owners of property in the parish. This act was passed in 1845, and the new wall and jetty were finished the same year, at a cost of £6000. A noble Esplanade now extends the whole length of the town, at the base of the cliffs, and forms a delightful promenade. The New Jetty, which is eighty feet in length, is the fashionable resort in the evenings, and is approached from the beach by a flight of stone steps, and from the town by a path formed in the sloping cliff, securely railed, and furnished with seats at every turn. On the beach are about 16 bathing machines, for immersion in the open sea. The beach, having a fine firm sand and a level surface, renders bathing agreeable, and affords a delightful promenade for several miles when the tide is out, bounded on the north by the ocean, and on the south by tremendous cliffs, rising perpendicularly, and broken into a thousand grotesque forms. Jet and amber are found here in the winter; and Jasper, cornelian, aqua marina, agate, and other beautiful stones, may be picked up on the beach. Though Cromer has no harbour where ships can ride in safety, it enjoys some little TRADE, in the importation of coals, tiles, oil cake, porter, &c., in vessels of from 60 to 100 tons burthen, which lie upon the beach, where, at ebb tides, carts are drawn alongside to unlade them. The ships and steam vessels which are constantly seen passing the offing, display a regular change of moving objects; but such is the danger of the coast, that four or five lights are stationed between this place and Yarmouth, to prevent them from running into Cromer bay, where life-boats are kept to succour the distressed. Many of the inhabitants are fishermen; crabs, lobsters, herring, cod, and whiting, being very plentiful; and here are three curing-houses. The MARKET, which was held every Saturday under the letters patent of Henry IV., is now obsolete; but the town is well supplied with provisions during the bathing season, when vegetables, poultry, butter, eggs, &c., are brought in daily. The FAIR, on Whit-Monday, is much resorted to by pleasure parties, especially when the weather is favourable for aquatic excursions; and Races are occasionally held here in August.

CROMER CHURCH (St. Peter and St. Paul) is supposed to have been erected in the reign of Henry IV., soon after the ocean had engulfed the village of Shipden. It is a large and handsome structure, of flint and freestone, principally in the perpendicular style, and comprises a nave with aisles and clerestory, and an embattled tower, 159 feet high, richly ornamented with sculpture, and containing some very pretty specimens of what are called "sound holes" in Norfolk. The flint work of the building is of the most elegant description, and the parapet is elaborately carved and pierced. The north porch and chancel have long been in ruins, and very little of the latter now remains; but it is proposed to rebuild it shortly at a cost of about £5000. The other parts of the church were thoroughly restored in 1863, and refitted with open oak seats, &c., at a cost of nearly £5000. A new and richly carved roof of the hammer-beam kind has been erected at the joint expense of Sir T. F. Buxton, Bart., and B. B. Cabbell, Esq. The whole of the windows have had new tracery, and seven of them have been filled with stained glass; four by B. B. Cabbell, Esq., one by Henry Birkbeck, Esq., and two by the Buxton family. A handsome octagonal font of Caen stone has been given by Mrs. Herring; and a fine clock has been placed in the tower by J. Gurney Barclay Esq. Cromwell's soldiers converted this church into a barrack, and destroyed many of its monuments. It now possesses only a few tablets of the Windham, Ditchell, Rust, and Earle families. The benefice is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £9. 4s., and now at £100. It was augmented, from 1743 to 1824, with £1200 of Queen Anne's bounty, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Frederick Fitch, M.A. The Bishop of Norwich is patron, but the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are appropriators. The tithes were commuted in 1843, the rectorial for £100, and the vicarial for £74 per annum. The glebe, 25A., is situated in the parish of South Repps. The Methodists have a small chapel in West-street. The Cemetery was formed about three years ago, and occupies an acre of land given by B. B. Cabbell, Esq. About one-fourth of it is for the use of dissenters, and the remainder is consecrated.

The FREE SCHOOL was founded in 1505, by Sir Bartw. Read, who left divers messuages, &c., in London, to the Goldsmiths' Company, to the intent that they should pay out of the rents and profits £10 to a priest skilled in grammar, who should keep a school at Cromer, and teach gentlemen's sons and poor men's children of the parish and neighbourhood. No application having been made for classical instruction, it was determined by the Goldsmiths' Company that the school should be remodelled upon the plan of the national schools, and placed under the management of trustees; and they agreed to allow the master £30 a year, in addition to his ancient stipend of £10. They rebuilt the school in 1821, and in 1828, raised the master's salary to £80 a year, for which they require him to teach all the boys of Cromer and the neighbourhood sent to him for instruction. They allow a liberal sum yearly for rewards, firing, and stationery. There are generally upwards of 70 scholars. Mr. Simeon Simons is the present master. There is an Infant School in Church street, supported by subscription. The interest of £200, left by John Howes in 1863, is distributed in blankets amongst poor widows. The Town Lands, 13A. 2R. 2P., in North Repps, have been held from time immemorial by the parish officers of Cromer, for the benefit of the poor, and are now let for £18 a year. Petty Sessions are held at the Red Lion every alternate Monday, and R. Cooch, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. Robert Bacon, a mariner of Cromer, discovered Iceland in the reign of Henry IV.

FELBRIGG, a pleasant village, on a declivity, nearly 3 miles S.S.W. of Cromer, has in its parish 136 inhabitants, and 1559A. 2R. 10P. of land, all the property of John Ketton, Esq., of Felbrigg Hall, a large and handsome mansion, on a commanding eminence, in a beautiful and richly wooded park of 600 acres. This stately house, in the style which prevailed in the reign of Henry VIII., has been considerably enlarged by the Windham family, at different periods; and most of these additions and alterations are in a style corresponding with the ancient south front. The apartments contain many excellent paintings, by Rembrandt, Berghem, Vandewelde, and other eminent masters; and the Library comprises a large collection of valuable books and prints. The late W. H. Windham, Esq., about 20 years ago, improved and beautified the interior, and filled the great hall windows with stained glass, brought from Belgium. In 1841 and '2, he erected three handsome lodge gateways, at the entrances to the park. A noble quadrangle of stables, with embattled towers at the angles, in the same style as the hall, was built by the late Admiral Windham, in 1825. The mansion and estate were sold in 1863, by W. F. Windham, Esq., to their present owner. About $\frac{1}{4}$ of a mile S.E. of the hall, embowered in the park plantations, and approached by a fine avenue of oak and beech, is the Church (St. Margaret), a handsome edifice, comprising nave, chancel, north and south porches, and a square embattled tower. It contains many monuments of the Felbrigg and Windham families. On a large marble slab is a fine brass, representing, in a complete suit of plate armour, the figure of Sir Simon de Felbrigg, K.G., who was standard bearer to Richard II. and died A.D 1413, in the first year of the reign of Henry V. On the south side of the altar is a beautiful monument, with a fine bust by Nollekens, of the late Right Hon. William Windham, a profound scholar, an accomplished orator, and a distinguished statesman, who was born in London, in 1750, and died there in 1810, after undergoing a surgical operation occasioned by his having injured his hip in endeavouring to save the library of his friend, Mr. Frederick North, when his house was on fire. He sat in Parliament 28 years, first for Norwich, and afterwards for various boroughs; and accepted under Mr. Pitt, the office of secretary-at-war, with a seat in the cabinet, an honourable distinction which had never before been annexed to that office. This post he held till 1801, and he accepted it again in 1806, but resigned in the following year, along with the other members of the Grenville administration. Having no issue, his estates descended to his nephew, the late Admiral Lukin, who assumed the name of Windham. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 18s. 4d., and now at £310, with that of Metton annexed to it, is in the gift of John Ketton, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. W. K. Betts, of Metton. The tithes of Felbrigg were commuted in 1841 for £179 per annum. The chief residents are—John Ketton, Esq., Hall; Wm. Norris, butler; Chas. Maring, gamekeeper; Nicholas Cawston, parish clerk; N. Cawston, jun. joiner; and Chas. Martins and Sarah Clarke, farmers. Post from Norwich, via Roughton.

GIMINGHAM, on the banks of a rivulet, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. of North Walsham, has in its parish 332 inhabitants and 1453 acres of land, belonging to various owners, and lying in the manor of Gimmingham-Lancaster, which extends into several parishes, and is held of the Crown by Lord Suffield. The fines are partly certain and partly arbitrary. Sir T. F. Buxton, Bart., Mrs. H. Collyer, and some smaller owners, have estates here. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with three bells, and was thoroughly restored, reseated, and furnished with new pulpit, reading desk, &c., in 1862 by the rector, who also filled the east and west windows with stained glass. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £11. 10s. 10d., is in the gift of Catherine-Hall, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Ralph Blakelock, M.A., who has a good residence. The glebe is 26A., and the tithes were commuted in 1839 for £413 per annum. The rector has 1A.1R. of land, left by Widow Browning, for a sermon on St. Stephen's day. An acre is charged with providing bell ropes. The National School, established in 1834, is attended by 40 children, and supported by subscription. Post from Norwich, via North Walsham.

GRESHAM, spelt Gersham in Domesday Book, is pleasantly situated 5 miles S.W. of Cromer, 6 miles S.E. of Holt, and 21 miles N. of Norwich, and takes its name from a small stream anciently called the Gur or Ger. Its parish contains 345 inhabitants and 1303A. of land, belonging to various owners; but W. H. Scott, Esq., is lord of the manor, which was held by the son of the celebrated Geoffrey Chaucer, and afterwards passed to a family of its own name in the 15th century. Sir Edmund Bacon had a license in the reign of Edward II. to embattle his manor-house here, which was subsequently strengthened by Sir Thomas Gresham, the founder of Gresham College and the Royal Exchange, and was for some time in the possession of the Pastons. This castle is said to have been originally built by a family of the name of Stuteville, and was 150 feet square, with a round tower 36 feet in diameter at each corner. It was surrounded by a deep moat, which was cleaned out in 1844, when the old drawbridge (formed of massive timbers), the keel of a boat, a few articles of pottery, and the entrance to a subterraneous passage were discovered. The foundations of the building may still be traced. The Church (All Saints) is mostly of the decorated period, and comprises nave, chancel, tower, and a beautiful south porch, surmounted by a fine cross. The tower is round at the base and octagonal above; and the font bears representations of the seven Romish sacraments. The Church contains some ancient monuments of former rectors, and recent ones of the Arden and Spurgin families. There are also several memorial stained glass windows. The whole building has been recently restored; the nave by rate and subscription and the chancel by the rector. The parish registers date from 1560. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 8s. 6d., was once connected with Thetford Priory, and is now in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Arthur Dewing Spurgin, B.A., who has a good residence, which has been lately much improved. The glebe is 24A., and the tithes were commuted in 1839 for £321 per annum. The School occupies a neat building erected in 1856. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here. The village mill stands on one of the highest spots in the county, and from it may be distinctly seen 36 churches and objects at a distance of 25 miles. There is a lodge of Oddfellows at the Chequers. Post from Norwich, via Roughton. Here is a pillar letter box, cleared at 2 p.m.

GUNTON, about 5 miles N.N.E. of Aylsham, and the same distance S. of Cromer, is a parish with only 78 inhabitants, and 942 acres of land, all comprised in the park and extensive plantations of GUNTON HOUSE, the handsome modern seat of Lord Suffield, which is built of white brick, and was much enlarged, under the direction of Mr. Wyatt, in 1785. The mansion was also much improved by the third Lord Suffield, and stands on an eminence, commanding a delightful view of the undulated park and its judiciously arranged plantations. The road to Thorpe, at the north-east angle of the park, passes under the arch of an elegant tower, which rises to the height of 120 feet 6 inches and commands an extensive prospect. Sir Harbord Harbord, the second baronet, was created Baron Suffield in 1786, and died in 1810. The Right Hon. Charles Harbord is the fifth and present Lord Suffield, and succeeded his brother, the late baron, in 1853. He has greatly improved the house and grounds; and his son and heir, the Hon. Charles Harbord, was born in 1855. The park, not only includes the whole of this parish, but has 22 acres in Thorpe, and 44A. in Hanworth parish. It is well stocked with deer, and noted for the number of pheasants and hares with which it abounds; and the gardens are tastefully laid out, and of considerable extent. Gunton Church (St. Andrew) has a handsome portico of the Doric order, and was rebuilt by Sir William Morden Bart., father of the first Lord Suffield, who became heir to the estate in 1742, when he assumed the name of Harbord. It stands near the hall; but the rectory-house was built in 1800, within the adjoining parish of Hanworth. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8, and now at £242, is consolidated with Hanworth vicarage, in the gift of Lord Suffield. Here are 42 acres of glebe. The chief residents are—the Right Hon. Lord Suffield, Gunton House; Hon. and Rev. John Harbord, M.A., Rectory; William Windham Baring, Esq., land agent to Lord Suffield, Gunton Cottage; Wm. Foreman, house steward and butler; Thomas Roofe, farm bailiff; Thomas Harmer, and Timothy Gibbons, gamekeepers; and George Allis, gardener. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

HANWORTH, a parish of scattered houses, 5 miles N. of Aylsham, contains 227 inhabitants, and 1271A. 2R. 16P. of land, belonging to Lord Suffield, and the Devises of the late W. H. Windham, Esq., the former of whom is lord of the manor and patron of the living, and the latter own HANWORTH HALL, a handsome modern mansion of brick, standing pleasantly in a verdant and finely wooded park, broken into bold undulations, and laid out with much taste. The hall is now occupied by Mrs. Nash as a ladies' boarding school, for which it is admirably adapted. The Church (St. Bartholomew) comprises nave, chancel, north and south porches, and square tower with five bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1861, and refitted with new and handsomely carved open seats, pulpit, reading desk and altar rails, at a cost of £300. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 1s. 8d., is consolidated with Gunton rectory. Hanworth tithes were commuted in 1839, for yearly rent charges of £197 to the impropiator, (Lord Suffield;) £91 to the vicar; and £2 to the rector of Alby. The Rectory House stands in Gunton Park, but within the bounds of this parish. The School was built about 12 years ago, and is chiefly supported by Lord Suffield, who annually distributes £10 in bread to the poor. The coaches from Norwich to Cromer pass through the parish.

KNAPTON, a village on a lofty eminence, 3 miles N.N.E. of North Walsham, has in its parish 310 inhabitants, and 1461A. of rich arable land, lying in three manors, viz., Knapton-Bromholm and Green, belonging to Peter House College, Cambridge, and Knapton-Cecils, belonging to Lord Suffield; but the greater part of the soil is owned by other proprietors,—among whom are Miss Shirley, of the New Hall; Sir Henry Robinson, Kt., of Knapton House; and Messrs. Edward Dunning, Abm. Coleman, J. P. Collings, and Thomas Allison. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and square embattled tower with five bells. The windows of the nave are of peculiar character, the arches being semi-circular, the mouldings of the decorated style, and the tracery perpendicular. The roof, of Irish oak, is of great magnificence, and was erected by John Smithe in 1503. It is constructed with double hammer-beams, and bears richly carved figures of prophets, apostles, saints, and the heavenly hierarchy, with shields, painted scrolls, &c. The south porch is a simple but effective structure of the early decorated style, having windows at the sides with characteristic mouldings and tracery, and above the outer doorway a beautiful triple niche. The priests' door has a small porch over it, and in the chancel are sedilia, a piscina, and a screen. The font is octagonal and very ancient. It rests on six shafts, and has a canopied cover of carved wood, with a Greek inscription. The interior of the church is in a very dilapidated condition, and still retains its unsightly pews. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £13. 7s. 1d., is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Lawson Barnes, M.A., of Chippenham, for whom the Rev. Arthur George Baxter, M.A., of Mundesley, officiates. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £475 per annum, besides £6 to the rector of Mundesley. Lord Suffield and the Master of Peter House College, Cambridge, are the patrons alternately. The college owns Knaption Hall, now held on lease by Mr. Robert Watts. The rent of one rood of land is carried to the poor rates. Mrs. Shirley supports a school here for about 35 children. Post from Norwich, via North Walsham.

MATLASK, 7 miles N.N.W. of Aylsham, and 6 miles S.E. of Holt, has in its parish 163 inhabitants and 472 acres of land, mostly the property of Mrs. Gunton, the lady of the manor, who has a pleasant seat, called Matlask Hall, but J. T. Mott, Esq., has an estate here. The Church (St. Peter) has a tower, round at the base and octagonal above, and was restored about 10 years ago at the expense of Mrs. Gunton. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £5, and was augmented in 1731 with £200 of Queen Anne's bounty and £200, given by Richard Whitaker, laid out in 40a. of land, at Gresham. The old glebe is 10a., and the tithes were commuted in 1841 for £130 per annum. The Rev. A. Langton, M.A., of Plumstead, is incumbent, and the Queen, as Duchess of Lancaster, is patroness. The Wesleyan Reformers have a small chapel here, built in 1863. About a dozen years ago a beautiful gold Niello was picked up in a field in this parish, and is now in the possession of R. Fitch, Esq., F.S.A., of Norwich. It is about an inch in diameter, and represents the crucified Saviour, with a Bishop on one side of him and the Baptist and the Agnus Dei on the other. The chief residents are—Mrs. Frances Mary Gunton, Hall; Chas. Barnes, butler; John Drake and Robert Smith, farmers; Wm. Gee, parish clerk; and Wm. Leader, blacksmith and wheelwright. Messrs. Cook and Woods occupy a farm here, and John Bone, of Aldborough, keeps a shop in the village. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

METTON, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of Cromer, has in its parish 78 inhabitants and 660 acres of land, belonging to John Ketton, Esq., the lord of the manor and patron of the Church (St. Andrew) which is a small building, comprising nave, chancel, and square tower with two bells. It was restored and refitted with open seats in 1859, at a cost of £110. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £7, is consolidated with Felbrigg. (See page 647). The tithes of Metton were commuted in 1843 for £137. The chief residents are—the Rev. W. K. Betts, rector of Felbrigg with Metton; and James Bartram, Danl. Crowe, Fras. Duffield, and Edmund Pank, farmers. Post from Norwich, via Roughton.

MUNDESLEY, as a bathing place, ranks next Cromer, from which it

distant 8 miles E.S.E., and it holds a similar situation on the lofty and broken cliffs of the ocean, which are here divided by a deep ravine, through which a small stream, after passing over the wheel of a corn mill, discharges itself upon the beach, which has a broad firm sand at low water. Mundesley is a pleasant village, commanding an extensive view of the ocean, sheltered behind by towering hills, and distant 5 miles N. by E. of North Walsham, and 20 miles N.N.E. of Norwich. It has increased its population since the year 1801 from 204 to 437 souls, and its parish comprises about 550 acres of land, wasted by the continual encroachments of the sea, like Cromer (see page 642), and forming part of the manor of Gimingham-Lancaster, of which Lord Suffield is lord. The soil belongs chiefly to Edmund Beare, Esq., John Mack, Esq., and Mr. George Gordon, but here are several smaller owners, some of whom have neat modern houses, partly for the accommodation of visitors during the bathing season. In 1810, a very rare and curious fish, called the Opah, or King fish, was found on the beach. Mundesley was much improved about thirty years ago, through the spirited exertions of the late F. Wheatley, Esq., who built a handsome mansion on the cliff, and to preserve it from the encroachments of the sea, erected, at a cost of £1000, two massive walls, forming an upper and lower terrace, the latter of which being 90 feet above the beach, commands an extensive marine prospect. These walls were destroyed by the high tides in February, 1836, and rebuilt the same year; but they are now in ruins, though the house is still standing, and is occupied by the Rev. G. E. Kent, M.A. Mundesley suffered some damage from the high tides and gales in January, 1845, but it was speedily repaired. On St. Thomas's day, 1862, one of the most destructive gales on record occurred, when about 11 yards of the cliffs were swept away, several of the adjoining cottages were rendered uninhabitable, and the whole of the workshops belonging to Mr. Thomas Gaze were destroyed. The sea encroaches upon the land about two yards every year, and it is highly desirable that some means should be speedily adopted to prevent further destruction. Here are three good Inns, and several respectable lodging-houses, with bathing machines, a warm bath, and other necessary accommodations for visitors. Though Mundesley has no haven, it imports coal, &c., for the adjacent country as far as North Walsham, the vessels being unladen on the beach. Here are four small fishing boats, employed chiefly in catching crabs, lobsters, cod, &c. The Coast Guard consists of four men and a chief boatman, under the command of Capt. the Hon. Hy. Weyland Chetwynd, R.N.; and at the station, complete apparatus for saving shipwrecked seamen is kept constantly ready for use. A fine life boat has been placed here by the National Life Boat Institution, and a large yawl is also used for affording succour to distressed vessels. The Church (All Saints), which stands on a lofty point of the cliff, above the village, has been a noble edifice, but the tower is gone, and the chancel and part of the nave are in ruins. The remaining part of the nave has received a new gable and a pyramidal roof, and is neatly fitted up for divine service. An organ was purchased by subscription in 1853. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 9s. 9d., was augmented with £200 of Queen Anne's bounty in 1800, and has 6a. 1r. of glebe, and a yearly rent of £186, awarded in 1838 in lieu of tithes. The Queen, as Duchess of Lancaster, is patroness, and the Rev. Edward Thos. Scott, M.A., is the incumbent. The father of Archbishop Tenison was ejected from this living in 1640 for his loyalty to the unfortunate Charles I. A Mission Chapel was built here in 1843, at a cost of £300. It is of flint and brick, and has a clock at the west end. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have a joint meeting room here. The School was built in 1844, and is supported by subscription. The poor have 10s. a year from the sermon acre.

NORTHREPPS, a pleasant scattered village, nearly 3 miles S.S.E. of Cromer, has in its parish 625 inhabitants and 2731A. of land, picturesquely broken into hill and dale, and mostly the property of Lord Suffield (lord of the manor); but J. H. Gurney, Esq., M.P., has a large estate here, and two neat mansions called the Hall and the Cottage. He occasionally resides at the latter, which is a tasteful Gothic structure, sometimes called the Hermitage, situated in a romantic dell commanding a view of the ocean. The Hall is now occupied by the Dowager Lady Buxton, widow of the late Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton, Bart., who died here Feb. 19th, 1845, aged 58, and was buried at Overstrand. He was created a baronet in 1840, after having sat eighteen years in Parliament, and highly distinguished himself as a philanthropist, especially by his indefatigable exertions for the abolition of the slave-trade. He was succeeded by his eldest son, the late Sir Edward North Buxton, Bart., who died 11th Jan., 1858. The present baronet, Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton, is a member of the firm of Truman, Hanbury, Buxton & Co., the celebrated brewers, and sometimes resides with his mother at Colne House, Cromer. The Church (St. Mary) is a handsome building, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and lofty square tower with five bells. It was thoroughly restored by subscription about 7 years ago. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £18, is in the patronage of the Queen as Duchess of Lancaster, and incumbency of the Rev. Patrick Comerford Law, B.A., who has 12A. 1R. 34P. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £581. 10s., awarded in 1839, in lieu of tithes. The Rectory House is a handsome mansion, which was built at a cost of £3000 by the late rector, the Rev. Thomas Hay, D.D., who died in 1830, and bequeathed £1000 three per cent. consols, in trust with Lord Suffield, to pay the dividends yearly to the rector, to be by him applied for the support of the School which he had built, and which is now attended by about 80 children on Sundays and 40 on week days. The mistress has £30 a year, and the surplus income, after paying for coals, repairs, books, &c., is applied in rewards. Lady Buxton supports an Infant School here. The Church Estate comprises 1A. 3R., let for 18s., and three rent-charges amounting to 30s. a year. Wm. Rugge, or Repps, Bishop of Norwich, who died in 1550, was a native of this place. A reading room and library were established in 1858 in a building near the church, by J. H. Gurney, Esq., who chiefly supports them. Here is a large iron foundry, belonging to Mr. W. L. Hutson, who employs a number of hands in making agricultural implements, &c.; and near it is a commodious Inn, where the neighbouring farmers meet every Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock for the transaction of business.

OVERSTRAND, on the coast, from 1 to 2 miles E.S.E. of Cromer, has in its parish 251 inhabitants, and 439 acres of land, bounded on the south by a range of hills, and on the north by the lofty sea cliffs, but having on the beach a fishing station, called BECK HYTH, where there are 2 curing houses, and 3 large and 10 small fishing boats. It is in the manor of Gimingham-Lancaster, held by Lord Suffield; but John Henry Gurney, Esq., M.P., has an estate here. The old Church (St. Martin) was washed down in the reign of Richard II., when the present one was erected. Only part of the nave is fitted up for divine service, and the rest is in ruins. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £2. 1s. 5d., was augmented with £200 of Q.A.B. in 1800, and has £80. 7s. a year, awarded in 1840, in lieu of tithes. J. H. Gurney, Esq., is patron, and the Rev. Paul Johnson, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence built in 1861. The School was erected in 1830, and endowed by Hudson Gurney, Esq., and his sister. The poor have the rent of 3a. of land in Cromer parish, distributed in coals. Foulness, or Cromer Light House, stands in this parish. The chief residents, are—Rev. Paul Johnson, M.A., Rectory; Geo. Woodhouse, victualler, White Horse; Jas. Farrow, shopkeeper and carrier to Norwich; John Payne, bricklayer; Jeremiah Cross, brickmaker and farmer; John Pilgrim and Richard Lambert, farmers; Ellis Field, lighthouse-keeper; Richd. Middleton, shopkeeper and twine spinner; James B. Barker, boat owner; Robert Brigham, shoemaker; John Summers, fish curer; and Jane Collingwood, school. Post from Norwich, via North Repps.

PLUMSTEAD, 4 miles S.E. of Holt, has in its parish 178 inhabitants, and 1272a. of land. J. T. Mott, Esq., owns most of the soil, and is lord of the manor. The Church (St. Michael) has a square tower and one bell, and is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 3s. 4d., and now having 11a. 2r. of glebe, and a yearly rent charge of £187. 12s. awarded in 1839 in lieu of tithes. The Queen, as Duchess of Lancaster, is patroness, and the Rev. Arthur Langton, M.A. is the incumbent. The School is held in a cottage. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

ROUGHTON, 4 miles S. of Cromer, and $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. by E. of Aylsham, has in its parish 412 inhabitants, and 1740 acres of land, including 371A. of open heath, on which the parishioners cut fuel. Lord Suffield owns a great part of the soil and is lord of the manor. The Church (St. Mary) is of Norman architecture, and comprises nave with aisles, north and south porches, chancel, and round embattled tower with three bells. It was restored, and re-seated with open benches in 1864 at a cost of £800. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6, has 29A. of glebe, and a yearly rent charge of £96, awarded in lieu of small tithes, in 1839, when the great tithes were commuted for £197 per annum. The latter belong to the Bishop of Ely, but the Bishop of Norwich is patron of the living, and the Rev. Robert Sayers, B.A., is the incumbent, and resides at Roughton Lodge, a pleasant house near this village, but in the parish of North Repps. Here is a small Primitive Methodist Chapel. The FREE SCHOOL was founded by the Rev. Robert Brown, in 1694, and the master now derives about £45 a year from the school property, exclusive of the use of the dwelling-house, and about five acres of land, for which he is bound to teach as free scholars all the boys and girls of the parish sent to him for instruction. The school lands comprise about 45 acres, lying in many parcels much intermixed with other property. The lord of the manor, and the churchwardens and overseers, are the trustees. The poor parishioners have £6. 6s. a year, from 7A. 1R. 4P. of land, purchased with £65 left by the Rev. Robert Brown, in 1694, and two annuities of 40s. left by Mary Hogan and Marmaduke Tenant, out of land at Hanworth and Braughin. The parish clerk has an acre of land, left by the before-named Rev. Robert Brown. A market is held every Wednesday at the New Inn for the sale of pigs, poultry, &c. Coaches pass through daily during the summer from Norwich to Cromer.

RUNTON parish, on the sea coast, from one to two miles W. of Cromer, comprises the small villages of East and West Runton, 510 inhabitants, and 1245A. of land, belonging to various owners, and lying in the manors of Runton-Hayes, Runton-Stubbe, Beeston-Priory, East Beckham, Felbrigg, Aylmerton, and Gresham. The Devises of the late W. H. Windham, Esq., are lords of the first, and Sir H. J. Durrant, Bart., of the second. Sir T. F. Buxton, Bart., B. B. Cabbell, Esq., and the Rev. Cremer Cremer, have estates here. The Church (Holy Trinity) stands on an acclivity above West Runton, and comprises nave with aisles, chancel, porch, and square tower with one bell. It was restored and refitted with open seats about 10 years ago; and several of the windows were filled with beautiful stained glass. There are a fine piscina and sedilia in the chancel, and also a piscina at the east end of the south aisle. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, is consolidated with that of Aylmerton. (See page 640.) The glebe here is 18A. 2R. 26P., and the tithes were commuted in 1838 for £245 per annum. The School, at East Runton is a spacious building in the Elizabethan style, and was built in 1858. It has a good house attached, and is supported by Sir T. F. Buxton, Bart. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. The Poor's Land, given by unknown donors, comprises about 10 acres, with a double cottage, in Runton, and 20A. 2R. 27P., in Holt and Letheringsett. The rents, amounting to £60 a year, are distributed in money and coals, together with 20s. from 1A. 1R. 32P. of land, left by Robert Frazer, in 1713; and £1. 13s. from Hooke's charity, noticed with Beeston. Post from Norwich, via Cromer.

SHERINGHAM parish, 5 miles W. of Cromer, and 5 miles E.N.E. of Holt, comprises the villages of Upper and Lower Sheringham, the latter on the sea cliffs, and the former, with the church, more than a mile inland. It has 2177 acres of land, and had 392 inhabitants in 1801, and 1284 in 1861. Part of the parish is in the manor of Morley Hall, of which B. B. Cabbell, Esq., is lord; and the Rev. Cremer Cremer has an estate here; but most of the soil, and the manor of Sheringham, belong to Henry Ramey Upcher, Esq., of Sheringham Hall, a large and elegant mansion, built by the late A. Upcher, Esq., who died in 1819, before it was completed. The hall has been finished and its grounds have been tastefully laid out at great expense by the present owner. It is sheltered by a woody acclivity, and overlooks a fine bay of the ocean. The Old House, another pleasant residence belonging to Mr. Upcher, is occupied by his sister, Mrs. Pigott. The Church (All Saints) is a handsome building, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, porch, chancel, and lofty square embattled tower with six bells; and was thoroughly restored about 12 years ago, when a fine piscina was discovered in the chancel. The ancient and finely carved screen and rood loft still remain, and the open seats retain much of their old carving, and have poppy heads. Here are also several good brasses, one of which represents two female figures. The east window was enriched with stained glass about 10 years ago; and a memorial window in the south aisle was inserted by Mr. Upcher in 1857, in memory of his mother, the Hon. Charlotte Upcher. The chancel contains an elegant white marble monument to the memory of the late A. Upcher, Esq., who is buried beneath a mausoleum adjoining the church. The vicarage, certified at £16, and now valued at £93, was augmented from 1773 to 1816, with £1800 of Q.A.B., partly laid out in land at Acle. The Bishop of Norwich is patron, and the Rev. Lethbridge Moore, M.A., incumbent, for whom a Vicarage House is about to be erected. The Bishop of Ely is appropriator of 30A. of glebe, and of all the tithes, which are held on lease by B. B. Cabbell, Esq., and were commuted in 1839 for £361 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Upper Sheringham; where there is also a School supported by H. R. Upcher, Esq.; and a good Reading room established in 1863. Several querns have been found here near the Holt road. They are made of a coarse plum-pudding stone clamped with iron. LOWER SHERINGHAM is a considerable fishing station, having a road and rivulet winding down to the beach through a ravine in the lofty sea cliffs. It has three curing-houses, and 23 large and about 150 small fishing boats. Cod, skate, whiting, crabs, and lobsters are taken in abundance, especially the two latter, of which great quantities are sent to London. As at Cromer, the sea is here continually encroaching on the cliffs, of which about a yard disappears every year. In 1800, a large inn was tumbled in a heap of ruins upon the beach; and on St. Thomas's day, 1862, a large portion of the cliff was washed away. A peep down the rugged cliffs is enough to strike a stranger with horror, though the farmers often plough to the very family. The Church (St. Michael) is a small building on a solitary eminence, and comprises nave, chancel, and low tower with one bell. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 10s., and now having 2A. 19P. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £106. 12s., awarded in 1838 in lieu of tithes, was augmented with £200 of Q.A.B. in 1810. The Rev. P. Johnson, M.A., of Overstrand, is incumbent, and the patronage is alternately in the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster and J. C. Hoare, Esq. The poor have 2A. of land at Trimmingham. The chief residents are—Mrs. Elizabeth Spurrell, Henry Lee, corn miller and farmer; and Robert Norman Moore, Geo. Hedge, John Starling (Manor House), and Christopher Woods, farmers. Post from Norwich, via Northrepps.

SOUTHREPPS, a large village, about 4 miles S.S.E. of Cromer, and N.N.W. of North Walsham, has in its parish 816 inhabitants and 2081 acres of land, including 35A. of common, 27A. of roads and 82A. of wood. It is in the manor of Gimingham-Lancaster, held of the Crown by Lord Suffield, who owns about one-fourth of the soil. Sir T. F. Buxton, Bart., and Gen. G. Glover have estates in the parish. Here is a cattle fair on the Tuesday fortnight after Whit-Monday. The Church (St. James) stands on an eminence, and comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and lofty embattled tower with five bells. The aisles were taken down in 1788 and the arches built up. A window in the south wall of the chancel has been filled with stained glass, in memory of her brothers and sisters, by Mrs. Marriot, daughter of the late Archdeacon Glover, who died in 1862, and to whom there is a fine brass in the chancel. The screen and parts of the sedilia and piscina still remain. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £16, has 12A. of glebe and a yearly rent-charge of £670, awarded in 1839 in lieu of tithes. The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster is patron, and the Rev. Richard Hamond Gwyn, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a spacious residence, which was rebuilt in 1863 at a cost of £1300. The School is chiefly supported by the rector. Here is a small Wesleyan Chapel. The Poor's Land, 4 acres, is let for £10 a year.

SUFFIELD, 3½ miles W. by N. of North Walsham, and 4½ miles N.E. by N. of Aylsham, has in its parish 212 inhabitants and 1452A. of land, all the property of Lord Suffield, who derives his title from this place. (See Guntton, page 648). The ancient Hall was converted into a farm-house by a late Lord Suffield, who built a neat School here, which has a small endowment left by a former Lady Suffield for 16 children. The Church (St. Margaret) comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and square embattled tower with five bells. There is a fine piscina on the south side of the chancel, and some of the windows in the north aisle contain fragments of ancient stained glass. The interior is in a dilapidated state, and retains its unsightly closed pews. The benefice is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £14, and now having 10A. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £350. 10s., awarded in 1841 in lieu of tithes. It is in the gift of Lord Suffield. Thomas Bulwer left to the poor of Suffield, in 1693, £100, which was laid out in land, now comprising 10A., let for £12. 10s. In 1682, the Rev. Thomas Symonds left £100 for the relief of six poor widows, and it was laid out in 12A. of land, now let for £15 per annum. The chief residents are—Stephen Sexton, parish clerk; Richard Dyball, carpenter; Robert Amies, blacksmith; Hy. Holden, shoemaker; Thos. Colman, shopkeeper; and John Kendle, Corbett Wilde (The Elm), Ann Le Neve, James Lacy, Robt. Wortley, Adam Matthews, Mary Farrow, Thos. Cook (Rookery), and George Overton, farmers. Post from Norwich, via North Walsham.

SUSTEAD parish, 4 miles S.S.W. of Cromer, has 136 inhabitants, and 483 acres of land, mostly belonging to John Ketton, Esq., and the devisees of the late W. H. Windham, Esq., the former of whom is lord of the manor, which was formerly held by the Damme family, who had a large mansion near a rivulet, which abounds in trout. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) is a small edifice with a round tower and one bell. The living is a perpetual cureacy, certified at £16, and now valued at £34. It was augmented from 1779 to 1809, with £600 of Queen Anne's bounty, laid out in land at Great Witchingham. John Ketton, Esq., is patron, and the Rev. Henry Cotton Arden is the non-resident incumbent. The chief residents are—Miss Custance, Sustead Hall; Chas. Chapman, relieving officer; Robert Pike, blacksmith; Chas. Hearn, shopkeeper; Thos. Gray, carrier to Norwich; Charles Le Neve, brick and tile maker and farmer, Hall farm; and Jonathan Landyman and Thomas Harris, farmers. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

THORPE MARKET is a picturesque village of neat houses and cottages, 5 miles S.S.E. of Cromer, and $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.W. of North Walsham. Its parish contains 215 inhabitants and 1309 acres of land. Lord Suffield is owner of the soil, lord of the manor, impropiator of the rectorial tithes, and patron of the vicarage, which is valued in K.B. at £5. 11s. 3d., and was augmented with £200 of Queen Anne's bounty in 1807. It is consolidated with the rectory of Antingham and the donative of Bradfield (see pages 640 and 617), and is in the incumbency of the Rev. John Dolphin, B.A., of Antingham. The present Church (St. Margaret) was built partly on the site of the old one by the second Lord Suffield. It is an elegant fabric of flint and freestone, with turrets at the angles and a cross on each gable. All the windows and the upper parts of two screens which divide the nave from the chancel are decorated with stained glass. Here are three ancient monuments taken from the old church, and a handsome one to the memory of two brothers of the founder. The tithes have been commuted, the vicarial for £77. 15s. and the rectorial for £155. 10s. per annum. The Alms-house for four poor widows was founded in 1671, by Sir Thomas Rant, who charged his estate here, now belonging to Lord Suffield, with the yearly payment of £10 for division among the almspeople. The Town Lands, 5A. 1R. 37P., in Thorpe and Antingham, are let for £2. 11s. 6d. a year, which is distributed among the poor, who have also four coombs of wheat yearly from Lord Suffield. The chief residents are—Mr. Philip Cushion; Robert Gibbons, shopkeeper;

John Golden, market gardener ; Thos. Hurn, woodman ; Wm. Earl, shoemaker ; Robert Mayes, baker ; John Cushion, beerhouse keeper and farmer ; and George Clarke, Richard Martins, and Robert Wortley, farmers. Post from Norwich, via Thorpe Market.

THURGARTON, $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. of Aylsham, and $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. by W. of Cromer, has in its parish 264 inhabitants and 961 acres of land, belonging to the Devises of W. H. Windham, Esq., James Gay and John Cook, Esqrs., the Hon. H. Walpole, and Messrs. W. D. Spurrell, Geo. Chapman, and B. E. Wrench and several smaller owners ; but the Bishop of Norwich is lord of the manor and patron of the living. The Church (All Saints) is a small thatched building, comprising only nave and chancel, its tower having been taken down in 1822. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 6s. 8d., has 10 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £237 awarded in 1839. The Rev. Washington Shirley Maturin, B.A., is the present rector. The poor have 26s. a year, left by John Bacon, in 1732. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

TRIMINGHAM, a small village on the lofty sea cliffs, is about 6 miles N. of North Walsham, and 5 miles E.S.E. of Cromer, like which it is subject to the encroachments of the ocean, which washed away two farm houses and several acres of land about forty years ago. A breakwater was erected in 1842, by the late Sir T. F. Buxton, Bart. The parish contains 185 inhabitants, and about 500a. of land, mostly belonging to Sir T. F. Buxton, Bart., and Charles Buxton, Esq., M.P. ; but Lord Suffield is lord of the manor. Here is a coastguard station, with a chief boatman and four men. It is furnished with the necessary apparatus for communicating with and succouring distressed vessels, but there is no lifeboat. From the ruins of an old beacon on a lofty eminence in this parish, said to be the highest point on the Norfolk coast, above 50 churches may be seen on a clear day. Here are 10 small fishing boats ; and about one-third of the inhabitants are dependent upon the herring and mackerel fisheries for support. The Church (St. John) stands on the cliffs, and is said to have been visited in the dark ages of superstition by many pilgrims, who came to see the hand of St. John the Baptist, which the priests pretended they had got. It comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and low tower with one bell. The ancient piscina, sedilia and stoup still remain, and the panels of the screen retain the original paintings of figures of saints, in good preservation. The building was restored by subscription in 1855, and re-fitted with open seats, &c., at a cost of £900. One of the chancel windows is filled with stained glass, in memory of a late rector. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6, was augmented, in 1793, with £200 of Q.A.B., and had upwards of five acres of glebe, but more than half of it has gone into the sea. The tithes were commuted, in 1839, for £142 per annum, of which £7. 10s. belong to the rector of Side-strand. The patronage is in the Duchy of Lancaster, and the Rev. William Aubrey Cutting, M.A., is the incumbent. The School was built about ten years ago, by the Buxton family, who still support it. The chief residents are—The rector ; Thos. Hall, wheelwright, pump maker, and victualler, Crown and Anchor ; Edw. Bearman, chief boatman ; James Randell, blacksmith ; James Hewett, gamekeeper ; Mary Ann Newman, schoolmistress ; Samuel Bateman, Samuel Cubitt, Stephen Gilham, and Elizabeth Wright, farmers; and Mrs. Barker, carrier to North Walsham. Post from Norwich, via North Walsham.

TRUNCH, 3 miles N. of North Walsham, is a considerable village, said to have had a market as late as the 16th century. It is called Trunchet in Domesday Book, and has in its parish 464 inhabitants and 1332A. of land. It is a member of the manor of Gimingham-Lancaster, held of the Duchy of Lancaster by Lord Suffield; and the soil belongs to Wm. Primrose, Esq., Sir T. F. Buxton, Bart., Mrs. Elizabeth Bidwell, Robert Ives, Esq., and others. Here is a large brewery, built in 1837, by Wm. Primrose, Esq., whose family has been seated in the parish about three centuries. The Church (St. Botolph) stands near the centre of the village, and is a handsome building, chiefly of perpendicular architecture. It comprises nave, with aisles and clerestory, chancel, south porch, and lofty tower with three bells; and in 1863 was thoroughly restored and re-fitted with new open seats, pulpit, and reading desk, of oak, at a cost of £503. The fine open timber roof is of high pitch, and springs from carved corbels; there are small figures of angels on the ends of the hammer-beams, and the spandrils are filled with beautiful perforated work. The screen is of the most elegant design; its lower panels have paintings of twelve Apostles, with their usual emblems, and above them is an elaborate cornice, having scrolls intertwined with foliage, on which is carved a Latin inscription. The upper part of the screen consists of six arches and the doorway, filled with tracery. The font is of the late decorated period, and its six sides are panelled with tracery. It stands beneath an elaborate and almost unique baptistery, or self-supporting cover, of richly carved oak, of the late-perpendicular period. This cover rests on six small shafts or pillars of square form, having buttresses, and carved in their whole height with twisted foliage rising out of a vase, formerly gilded, and terminating in animals' heads. These support an hexagonal top, each side of which is canopied, and had originally some further decorations—traces of the Crucifixion with St. Mary and St. John being visible on two of the sides: above this is a crocketed canopy, from which the finial is lost. There is sufficient space in the enclosure thus formed for the administration of the baptismal service. In the chancel is a monument to the Rev. Lancelot Sexton, who was rector of Trunch and chaplain to Edward VI., and died in 1533. The priest's doorway, on the south side of the chancel, is in the decorated style, and is enclosed by a shallow porch, which is remarkable for having a buttress rising from it. There is a fine gable cross on the nave roof. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 13s. 4d., in the patronage of Catherine Hall, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Jarrett, M.A., Canon of Ely, and Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University of Cambridge. The Rectory House was rebuilt in 1832, and here are 23A. 1R. 7P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £420 per annum. A neat School of flint was built in 1852. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel in the village. Wm Worts, in 1693, left 20s. a year out of Sandpit Close for poor widows of the parish.

SOUTH ERPINGHAM HUNDRED

Is a highly cultivated district, finely interspersed with woods, streams, villages, churches, and many handsome seats. It is of a crooked spiral figure, about 16 miles in length, exclusive of a narrow strip at its northern extremity, terminating at West Beckham; and varies from 9 to less than 5 miles in breadth, extending to within 3 miles of the ocean. It is bounded on the south by Taverham, on the west by Eynesford and Holt, on the north by North Erpingham, and on the east by Tunstead Hundred. The river Bure, which was made navigable from Coltishall to Aylsham, under the powers of an act of parliament obtained in 1773, flows through it, from Corpusty to Belaugh, receiving in its course many tributary streams, and watering a fertile valley, which in some places is broken into bold and picturesque acclivities. South Erpingham Hundred forms, in ecclesiastical matters, the Deanery of Ingworth, in the Archdeaconry of Norwich; and its petty sessions are held every Tuesday at the Town Hall, Aylsham, where William Forster, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The fee of it remained in the Crown till 1226, when Henry III. granted it to Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, at which time the Hundred Court was held at Cawston Park Gate. It contains 38 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent.

* West Beckham included 164 persons in Erpingham Union Workhouse.

☞ All the above parishes are in Aylsham Union, except Baconsthorpe and West Beckham, which are in Erpingham Union, and Booton, which is in St. Faith's Union.

AYLSHAM UNION comprises 35 parishes in South Erpingham, and 11 parishes in Eynesford Hundred. These 46 parishes comprise an area of 68,123 acres, or 106 square miles ; and in 1861 had 19,052 inhabitants, of whom 9473 were males and 9579 females. Their average annual expenditure, during the three years preceding the formation of the Union, was £20,391 ; but in 1838, it was only £9652, and it is at present about £11,000 a year. The Union Workhouse is on the Cawston road, and was built in 1849 at a cost of £12,000, in lieu of the two old Houses of Industry at Buxton and Oulton. It is a neat brick building, with about 12 acres of land attached, and has accommodation for 619 inmates, but has rarely more than 150. William Henry Scott, Esq., is union clerk, superintendent registrar, and registrar of marriages. Messrs John Wright of Buxton, and Alexander Sands of Reepham, are the relieving officers and registrars of births and deaths ; the former for Buxton District, and the latter for Eynesford District. Messrs R. K. Morton and F. P. Smith, of Aylsham ; Thos. Prangle of Aldborough ; C. H. Perry and Thos. Alderton, of Reepham ; and Thos. R. Lombe, M.D., of Coltishall, are the union surgeons. The Rev. S. M. Shephard, B.A., of Erpingham, is chaplain ; William and Harriet Starters, master and matron ; Robert Beatson and Hannah Howlett, school teachers ; and James Lewell, porter of the Workhouse. In 1844, eighteen persons died in this union, each of them above 80, and three of them above 90 years of age ; and in 1863, Ann Roll died in the Workhouse, at the age of 103.

ALBY, a pleasant scattered village and parish, 5 miles N. by E. of Aylsham, had 346 inhabitants in 1831, but only 231 in 1861. It contains 811A., of which 130A. were enclosed in 1842. W. F. Windham, Esq., and Messrs John Amos, John Cooke, William Wicks, William Watts, and John Temple, and some smaller owners, have estates here ; but the Earl of Orford is lord of the manor, and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £7. 11s. 8d., and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Romaine Govett, who has a good residence which was mostly rebuilt in 1843, at a cost of £600. The glebe is about 15A., and the tithes were commuted in 1838 for £202 per annum. The Church (St. Ethelbert) a small ancient building with a square tower, is at the west end of the parish, but most of the houses are about a mile to the east, and some of them half a mile west, near Thwaite Green. The School was built in 1853, but is only used on Sundays. The chief residents are—The Rev. T. R. Govett, Rectory ; Edmund Carr, parish clerk ; Denis Blythe, carpenter ; Maria Pearse, victualler, Horse Shoes ; Thomas Coe, gardener ; and the following farmers :—John Amos, Thwaite Common ; Richard Richardson, Manor House ; Robert King, Park Farm ; Thomas Pedgrift, Thomas Farrow, and John Temple. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

AYLSHAM is a well-built market town, pleasantly seated on the southern acclivity of the vale of the Bure, nearly 12 miles N. by W. of Norwich ; 10 miles S. by W. of Cromer ; 7 miles W.S.W. of North Walsham ; and 120 miles N.E. by N. of London. At the Norman Conquest the manor extended into Tuttington, and had 18 carucates, 20 villeins, and 28 bordars, with woods sufficient for the maintenance of 400 swine. During the reigns of Edward II. and III. Aylsham was the chief town in this part of the kingdom for the manufacture of linen, then called "Aylsham Webbs," "Cloth of Aylsham," &c. ; but in succeeding reigns this branch of business was superseded by the woollen manufacture ; and in the time of James I. the inhabitants were chiefly employed in knitting worsted stockings, breeches, and waistcoat pieces. Since the introduction of frame-work knitting, the latter trade has also been discontinued. The town was formerly governed by a bailiff, and had a weekly market on Saturday, but this has been changed to Tuesday, and is about to be changed again to Friday. Two cattle fairs are held annually, on March 23rd, and the last Tuesday in September; and there is also a cattle repository sale, conducted by Messrs. Geo. E. Burrell and Son, every alternate Friday, at the New Inn. The 29th of May is a general holiday here, and is called the Club anniversary, as all the clubs walk in procession on that day. The Bure, which washes the foot of the town, was formerly only navigable from Yarmouth to Coltishall (11 miles below Aylsham bridge by the water, and 7 by land); but in 1773 an act was obtained for extending the navigation to Aylsham, for boats of 14 tons burthen, drawing two feet five inches water, which was completed after many difficulties and interruptions, in Oct. 1779, at an expense of upwards of £6000, including the cost of the basin and wharves near the bridge, where much business is done in coal, corn, timber, &c. The PARISH OF AYLSHAM, including many scattered houses and villas, and the hamlets of Dunkirk and Drabblegate, on the opposite side of the river, has increased its population since the year 1801, from 1667 to 2623 souls, and comprises 4308A. 2R. 4P., of which 100A. are woods and plantations. The soil is generally fertile, and most of it arable. The parish is in four MANORS, viz., Aylsham Lancaster, held by the Marquis of Lothian; Aylsham Wood or Sextons, of which Thos. Copeman Esq., is lord; Aylsham Vicarage, of which the vicar is lord; and Bolwick Hall, of which John Henry Warnes, Esq., is lord. The three first are subject to fines certain, but the last is held by copy of court roll of Aylsham Lancaster, and subject to fines arbitrary. The Rev. A. Rackham, Colonel Stracey, J. W. Clover, Esq., and others, have estates in the parish, and here are many large and handsome houses, among which may be enumerated Bolwick Hall, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S.W.; Coldham Hall, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N.N.E.; Aylsham Wood, 1 mile N. by E.; Bushy Place, on the Cromer road; The Belt, &c. The TOWN has been greatly improved during the last twenty years, and is often called the "garden of Norfolk," from its picturesque appearance and the number of gardens and trees in its vicinity. It has a fine open market place, in which are the Bank, the new Town Hall the Black Boys' Hotel, and a number of handsome houses and well-stocked shops. The streets and most of the houses and shops are now well lighted with gas from works in Millgate, erected in 1849, at a cost of £1500, raised in £10 shares. Consumers are charged at the rate of 7s. 6d. per 1000 cubic feet. W. H. Scott, Esq., is clerk to the Company, and Henry Kent is the gas maker. The Town Hall is a commodious building of red brick, erected in 1857, at a cost of £2100, raised in £10 shares. The large room is 60 feet by 30, and is used for balls, concerts, and public meetings; it also contains a number of desks or stands for corn merchants, but it is only little used as a corn exchange. One of the rooms is well supplied with all the principal newspapers and periodicals; and here is a good library of 800 volumes, belonging to the Literary Institution, which numbers about 90 members. Petty Sessions are held at the Town Hall every Tuesday, and Wm. Forster, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The Police Station, on the Blicking road, is a neat brick building, with superintendent's residence and two cells. The County Court is held monthly at the Black Boys' Hotel, and Thomas J. Birch, Esq., is judge; Jonathan Townley, Esq., treasurer; W. H. Scott, Esq., registrar; Mr. Thos. Kerslake, of East Dereham, high bailiff; and George E. Burrell, jun., assistant bailiff. Aylsham district includes Alby, Alderford, Aylsham, Banningham, Barningham Parva, Belaugh, Blickling, Booton, Brampton, Brandeston, Burgh, Buxton, Calthorpe, Cawston, Colby, Coltishall, Corpusty, Erpingham, Foulsham, Guestwick, Hackford, Hautboys Magna, Haveringland, Hevingham, Heydon, Hindolveston, Ingworth, Irmingland, Itteringham, Lammas, Mannington, Marsham, Oulton, Oxnead, Reepham with Kerdiston, Sall, Saxthorpe, Scottow, Skeyton, Stratton Strawless, Swannington, Swanton Abbott, Themelthorpe, Thurning, Thwaite, Tuttington, Whitwell, Wickmere, Great and Little Witchingham, Wood Dalling, Wood Norton, and Wolterton.

The CHURCH (St. Michael) is a handsome structure of decorated architecture, with perpendicular insertions, situated near the summit of an abrupt acclivity, on the north side of the Market place, commanding an extensive and picturesque view of the surrounding country. It has a nave with aisles and clerestory, two transepts, a chancel, and a square tower surmounted by a small spire, and containing a clock and an excellent peal of ten bells. It is said to have been built by the great John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, whose duchy court was once held here. It has a fine-toned organ, given by the present vicar. The church was thoroughly restored, re-roofed, and fitted with new open seats, &c., in 1853. The large east window, and that on the south side of the altar, were filled with stained glass in 1842-'3, and many of the other windows have since then been similarly decorated. The font has carvings of the emblems of the four Evangelists, the instruments of the passion, and the arms of John of Gaunt. The north transept was called St. Peter's Chapel, and had a guild in 1490; and the south transept was the chapel of St. Mary, and still retains its piscina. The lower part of the ancient rood-screen still remains, and its panels have sixteen nearly obliterated figures upon them. The canopies of the sedilia are richly ornamented, and the pulpit reading desk reredos, and communion table are of carved oak. The chancel-stalls have figures of the twelve apostles for poppies. In the church are numerous monumental slabs and tablets, some inlaid with brass; among which is one to Richard Howard, who built the porch about the year 1480; and another to Thomas Wymer, who is represented in his winding-sheet, and caused the screens and roof to be beautifully painted with saints, martyrs, &c., in 1507. Here is a monument to Bishop Jeggon, who died in 1617; and in 1841 a neat monument was erected in memory of the late vicar, the Rev. Philip Hunt, LL.D., who died in 1838. In the churchyard, enclosed with iron rails, and planted with roses, heart's-ease, &c., is the grave of Humphrey Repton, the celebrated landscape gardener, who died in 1818. The benefice is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £17. 9s. 7d., and endowed with the rectorial tithes of all that part of the parish which lies on the N.E. side of the Bure, with a small manor on the opposite side of that river, where the great tithes (now leased to S. Pitman, Esq.) belong to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, together with the advowson of the living, which is held by the Rev. E. T. Yates, M.A., of Burgh Hall, who contributed largely towards the recent improvements in the church, and has now a yearly rent charge of £680, awarded in lieu of tithes in 1838, when the rectorial tithes were commuted for £716 per annum. The Vicarage House is a good brick residence, erected in 1701, and now occupied by the curate. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. A new Cemetery, comprising 2 acres, about a quarter of a mile from the town, was formed in 1855, at a cost of £600. Part of it is consecrated, and the remainder is for the use of dissenters. The Free School, near the churchyard, was founded in 1517, by Robert Jannys, who endowed it with £10 a year, now paid by the Norwich Charity Trustees out of the revenues of the Great Hospital. It was originally intended for seven free scholars, but has for many years been conducted on the National system; and a new school was built in 1848, at a cost of £700, on a piece of land granted by the Trustees. There are now about 140 scholars, and in addition to the small weekly payments of the children, the master has the annuity of £10, and a yearly salary raised by voluntary subscription. Archbishop Parker founded two scholarships in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, for boys from this and Wymondham School, "each to have 12d. a week for their commons; their chamberer, barber, larderer, and other necessaries free." An Infant School, built here in 1841, is attended by about 40 children.

The Savings' Bank, established in 1818, has deposits amounting to about £22,000, belonging to 750 individuals, and 14 Friendly and 13 Charitable Societies. Mr. George Bower is the actuary, and the bank is open every Monday from 12 to 1 o'clock. At the Black Boys' Inn, is a large Assembly Room. The 6th Norfolk, or Aylsham Company of Rifle Volunteers, comprises about 70 men, who meet for drill on the bowling green attached to the Dog Inn. It was formed in 1859, and W. H. Scott, Esq., is captain, H. A. Ernuin, Esq., lieutenant, and T. R. Lombe, Esq., ensign.

Half an acre, called the Town Meadow, belongs to the poor, and is let for 16s. a year. They have also several cottages, given by Simon Porter, in 1730; the lord of the manor, in 1738; and Edward Snelling, in 1737; and 10s. 6d. yearly, called Bread Money, paid by R. Marsham, Esq. In the reign of James I., Thos. Cressey left two houses and 2A. of land in Millgate street, for the poor. These premises, with additional buildings, were afterwards converted into a Workhouse and were used for that purpose till the formation of the Union in 1836. They now produce a rental of about £30 a year, which is distributed in clothing to the poor at Christmas. Aylsham was once noted for its SPA, which is situated about half a mile south of the town, and now belongs to Mr. E. Elvin. This chalybeate spring, though now but little used, was formerly much resorted to by invalids afflicted with asthma and other chronic diseases. In 1805, an earthen pot, containing 500 pieces of ancient silver coin, chiefly groats of Henry VII., and pennies of the Edwards, was ploughed up in a field near Aylsham. On Stow Heath, about two miles to the east, are several large tumuli or barrows, in which two urns, containing human bones and ashes, were found in 1808.

BACONSTHORPE is a village and parish, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by S. of Holt, comprising 328 inhabitants and 1360 acres of land. J. T. Mott, Esq., the Marquis of Lothian, Hudson Gurney, Esq., and others, have estates here, and the former is lord of the manor. The Rectory, valued in K.B. at £9, is in the patronage of J. T. Mott, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. John R. Feilden, M.A. The glebe is 12 acres, and the tithes were commuted, in 1842, for £379 per annum. The rectory-house was nearly destroyed by lightning in 1692 and by fire in 1754; after which it continued ruinous till 1770, when it was repaired, at considerable expense, by the rector and parishioners. The Church (St. Mary the Virgin) is a large handsome edifice, which was partly destroyed by the fall of the steeple in 1739, but was thoroughly repaired and beautified, chiefly at the expense of the Rev. Wm. Hewitt, in 1779. It is of perpendicular architecture, and comprises nave with aisles, chancel, porch, and square tower with one bell. The font is very handsome, and was given by Mary Ann Stuart in 1779. In the south aisle are two stained glass windows, inserted in 1863, in memory of John Clarke and his wife; and a handsome new window has recently been put in the south wall of the chancel by John Hales, Esq., of Holt. The east window has just been filled with stained glass in memory of the Rev. J. A. Partridge, the late rector, who died in 1861; and the church has been restored at the expense of the present incumbent. Here are several fine monuments and brasses of the 16th century. On the 21st May, 1863, some miscreants broke into the church, and after burning the large bible and prayer book and many valuable papers, &c., carried off the altar cloth, the cushions of the pulpit and reading desk, and various other things, and have unfortunately never been discovered. Here is a small Wesleyan Chapel, built in 1863. The manor was long held by the Bacons, one of whom was John Bacon, the learned and "Resolute Doctor," who died in 1346. From them it passed to the Heydons. Sir Henry Heydon built the old Hall, except the large centre tower, about the year 1495; but the whole is now in ruins, and the more modern hall is occupied by a farmer. Here is a commodious School, built in 1816; and the poor have £5 a year out of land left by Thomas Newman in 1698.

BANNINGHAM, a village and parish, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. of Aylsham, has 302 inhabitants and 920 acres of fertile land, belonging to George Copeman, Esq., Rev. F. C. Fowler, and several smaller owners; but W. F. Windham, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Church (St. Botolph) comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, south porch, and lofty square tower with only one bell, the other two having been sold in 1808 towards paying the expense of re-leading the nave. It has some remains of ancient stained glass in one of the north windows. The east window was blocked up for many years, but has been recently restored and filled with tinted glass by the rector. Several of the windows are enriched with good stained glass—one at the east end of the south aisle, in memory of Mrs. Eleanor Trueman, and another at the east end of the north aisle, representing St. Paul and St. John, in memory of Alice Allen, who died in 1861, and left £100 to the poor of the parish. The church was restored and resealed in 1847, chiefly at the expense of the rector and George Copeman, Esq. The roof is richly carved, and has 14 figures on the hammer beams. The piscina and sedilia still remain in the chancel, and there is also a piscina in the south aisle. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 5s. 10d., has 17A. 3R. of glebe and a yearly rent-charge of £388, awarded in 1842 in lieu of tithes. J. S. Dawber, Esq., and the Rev. W. Leeper, M.A., are patrons, and the Rev. Henry Torrens, B.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence. A School is supported by the rector. Here is a Primitive Methodist Chapel, built in 1828. The poor have £4. 10s. a year from land left in 1723 by the Rev. Samuel Wanley, who gave the rectory house, garden, &c., for the use of the succeeding rectors. The poor have also 30s. a year from three roods, called the Labourers' Pightle. There is an oddfellows' lodge at the Crown Inn. The soil of the parish is a rich light loam, with a subsoil of clay, which is extensively manufactured into bricks, tiles, and chimney tops of excellent quality, by Mr. R. S. Fox. BARNINGHAM (LITTLE), 6 miles N.W. by N. of Aylsham, has in its parish 273 inhabitants and 1224A. of land, mostly belonging to the Earl of Orford, J. T. Mott, Esq., C. T. Page, Esq., and Mr. Shadrach Hardy. The former is lord of the manor, which was anciently held by a family of its own name, who obtained a charter for a market and fair here in the reign of Edward I. In 1312, Sir Henry Seagrave and 26 others came to the manor house, and pricked and cut the mother of Wm. de Berningham to force her to tell them of her money and jewels, for which they were indicted, but produced the king's pardon. The Church (St. Andrew) has a square tower, and the living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 15s. 2½d., and now having £260 per annum, awarded in 1839 in lieu of tithes. The Earl of Orford is patron and the Rev. John Custance Leak, of Plumstead, is the incumbent. The Wesleyan Chapel was built in 1860 and enlarged in 1863 by Mr. S. Hardy, to whom it belongs. The chief residents are—Christopher Thomas Page, Esq., Shadrach Hardy, Edw. Case, Charles Curl, and John Watts, farmers; George Pygall, shoemaker; Wm. Fish, wheelwright; John Newstead, bricklayer; and Benjamin Newstead, parish clerk. Post from Norwich, via Aldborough.

BECKHAM, (WEST) is a small parish. 4 miles E. of Holt, containing 785A. 1R. of land, belonging to W. F. Windham, Esq, the Rev. John Gunton, and others; but W. H. Scott, Esq., of Aylsham, is lord of the manor. Its population in 1861, was 329 souls, of whom 164 were inmates of Erpingham Union Workhouse, which is situated in this parish. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, and south porch. Over the latter is a wooden belfry, the western tower having fallen down many years ago. The perpetual curacy was augmented from 1790 to 1815, with £600 of Q.A.B., partly laid out in 13 acres of land. It is now valued at £61 per annum, and is in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. Jas. Richd. Anderson, B.A., of Barningham Town. The patrons are also appropriators of the tithes, which were commuted in 1839 for £210 a year, and are now leased to Mrs. Bacon, of Aylsham. The Poor's land, 2A. 3R. 21P., was exchanged at the enclosure in 1842 for 4A. 2R. of common, which are let in allotments at small rents, producing about £2 per annum. The chief residents are—Thomas and Mary Potter, master and matron, and Charles Jeary and Charlotte Withers, school teachers, Workhouse; Henry Ransome, blacksmith; James Bumfrey, victualler, Fighting Cocks; Mark Mann, shoemaker; John Breese and Robert Doughty, wheelwrights; and Cook Fuller, Saml. King Barnes, Jas. Emery, Geo. Bird, and Wm. Gladden Seeley, farmers. Post via Thetford.

BELAUGH, in the south-east angle of this hundred, is a small village, picturesquely seated on the summit and sides of an abrupt acclivity, which rises within a semicircular curve of the river Bure, 8½ miles N.E. by N. of Norwich. Its parish contains 154 inhabitants, and 854 acres of rich loamy land, of which 130 are marsh, 690 arable, 27 water, and 7 plantations. Edw. Wm. Trafford, Esq., owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manor; but W. H. Trafford, and H. N. and W. Burroughes, Esqs., have estates here. The Church (St. Peter) has a tower and two bells. It has a high pitched roof, put up in 1862, when a new pulpit and reading desk were obtained, and the south side was re-seated with oak. The bank on the west side of the churchyard rises nearly perpendicularly from the river, and the Rectory House stands in a romantic situation on the northern acclivity. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6, and now at £430, with the vicarage of Scottow annexed to it, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. John Horatio Nelson, M.A., of Scottow. The tithes of Belaugh were commuted in 1831 for £222.6s. per annum, and the glebe is 3A. 2R. 4P. The Church Estate consists of two cottages, and 4A. 1R. 3P., let for about £15 a year. The Town House is a double cottage, occupied by poor parishioners. The poor of Belaugh have a share of Topcliffe's Charity (see Wroxham), and the rent of 1½A., left by Wm. Green, in 1717. The chief residents are—The Rev. Edw. Wilkins, B.A., curate, Rectory; John Pain, farmer; Sarah Aylmer, schoolmistress; and James Hannant, grocer. Post from Norwich, via Hoveton.

BLICKLING, a pleasant village and parish, 1½ mile N.N.W. of Aylsham, has 392 inhabitants, and 2123 acres of land, all the property and manor of the Most Honourable William Schomberg Robert Kerr, 8th MARQUIS OF LOTHIAN, Earl of Lothian, Earl of Ancrum, Viscount of Brien, Lord Newbattle, and Baron Jedburgh, Kerr, Long Newton, and Dolphinston, who resides at BLICKLING HALL, a large and handsome quadrangular mansion of brick, with stone quoins, &c., in the Elizabethan style, with two open courts in the centre, turrets at the angles, and a large clock-tower over the entrance, seated in a beautiful park of about 900 acres, well-stocked with deer, and extending into the adjacent parishes of Oulton and Itteringham. Before the Norman Conquest, this manor was held by Harold, (for a short time King;) but at the Domesday survey, it was held in two moieties, one by the Crown, and the other by the Bishop of Thetford. Both were invested with the privileges of ancient demesne, and had a leet independent of the hundred, with view of frankpledge, gallows, tumbrel or cucking stool, and free warren. The Conqueror settled the whole manor and advowson on the See; and after the foundation of Norwich cathedral, the bishops held the demesne in their own hands, and had here a palace or country seat, with a fine park adjoining. In 1431, Blickling became the property of Sir Thomas Erpingham, who sold it to Sir John Fastolf, of whom it was purchased in 1452, by Sir Geoffrey Buleyne, who made it his country seat, and was lord mayor of London in 1457.—From him it passed to Sir Thos. Boleyn, father of the unfortunate Anne Boleyn and Viscount Rochford, who were both born here, and were beheaded under the merciless tyranny of the lascivious Henry VIII., the former being one of his martyred queens. From the Boleyns, the manor passed to the Cleves, one of whom sold it to Henry Hobart, lord chief justice of the Common Pleas. His son, Sir John, rebuilt Blickling Hall, which he completed in 1620. One of his descendants, John Hobart, was created Earl of Buckinghamshire, in 1746. The second Earl rebuilt the west front in 1769, and made great improvements in the internal decorations of the hall. Charles II. and his queen visited it in their progress through the county, in 1671. On the death of the second Earl of Buckinghamshire, without male issue, in 1793, this estate passed to his second daughter, Lady Caroline Hans Hobart, who married the second Lord Suffield, and died without issue in 1850, when she was succeeded by her grand-nephew, the Marquis of Lothian, who was born in 1832, and graduated first class in classics at Christ Church, Oxford, in 1853, and first class in jurisprudence and modern history, in 1854. The Hall is nearly encompassed by magnificent trees; and as Gilpin says, "the moat, the bridges, the turrets, the battlements are all impressed with the ideas of antiquity." It contains many superb apartments, with richly decorated ceilings, chimney-pieces, and wainscots; and has been judiciously restored both externally and internally by its present possessor. The entrance-hall, 42 feet by 33, and 33 feet in height, opens to the staircase, which is ornamented with various small figures, carved in wood, and has a gallery at the top, with statues of Anne Boleyn and Queen Elizabeth, in niches. Among the portraits in the principal rooms are full-lengths of George III. and his Queen, by Sir Joshua Reynolds; George II., on horseback; Judge Hobart, in his robes; and a variety of other distinguished individuals. The library, which contains upwards of 10,000 volumes, occupies a room 127 feet in length, by 21 feet in breadth, with a ceiling divided into compartments, containing figures emblematical of the five senses, the elements, the passions, and a variety of drolleries and oddities in relief. In the drawing room, is a splendid piece of tapestry in a rich gilt frame, 20 feet by 16. It represents Peter the Great at the Battle of Ponton, and was presented by the Empress Catherine II. to the Earl of Buckinghamshire, when ambassador at St. Petersburg. The state bedroom contains a fine carved oak bedstead with rich hangings, on which Charles II. is said to have slept when he visited Blickling. The extensive park and gardens are ornamented by a fine lake, extending in a crescent shape, about one mile in length, and 400 yards in its greatest breadth, and skirted by verdant lawns and thickly wooded hills, rising in various forms from the pellucid water, over which the umbrageous foliage casts a shady but pleasing hue. The conduit and statues which formerly adorned the platform of Oxnead Hall, are preserved here. About a mile from the hall, is a stone Mausoleum, built in the form of a pyramid, upon a base of 45 feet, in which are deposited the remains of the second Earl of Buckinghamshire, his two wives, and three children; but the remains of 19 of his ancestors and relations are deposited in a vault under the north aisle of the church. The Marquis of Lothian occasionally resides here, but his principal seats are Newbattle Abbey, near Dalkeith, and Mount Teviot, Roxburghshire; and his town house is at 16, Upper Grosvenor street. The Church (St. Andrew), which stands on an eminence near the hall, and much needs restoration, comprises nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and low square tower with one bell. It contains many inscriptions to former lords of the manor, and fourteen fine brasses, seven of which have full-length figures upon them. Here are also several handsome monuments of stone and marble; one, dated 1600, is to the memory of Sir Edward Clare, a descendant of Claremont, who came over with the Conqueror; and another is to the late Marquis of Lothian, who died here in 1841, and was the son of the elder sister of the late Lady Caroline Suffield, who is commemorated by a splendid new east window of rich stained glass, which obtained a silver medal at the Paris Exhibition of 1855, and was designed and executed by Hardman, of Birmingham. The upper compartment of this beautiful window represents the Resurrection, below this are figures of St. Andrew and the four Evangelists, and at the bottom are Christ bearing the Cross, the Crucifixion, and the Taking down from the Cross. There is a good piscina on the south side of the chancel; and the font, which is octagonal, is ornamented with lions and other carvings. The parish chest is very ancient: it is of oak, strongly banded with iron, and has six curious old locks and keys. The registers date from 1559, and are in good preservation. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10.13s. 4d., and now at £882, with that of Erpingham annexed to it, is in the patronage of the Marquis of Lothian, and incumbency of the Rev. John Custance, B.C.L., who has a good residence near the church. The School is supported by the patron, and the tithes were commuted in 1839. Post from Norwich, via Aylsham.

BOOTON, a village and parish, 6 miles S.W. by W. of Aylsham, and 1½ mile E. by S. of Reepham, has 246 inhabitants, and 1040 acres of land, mostly the property of Hastings Elwin, Esq., the lord of the manor, and patron of the living, which is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 12s. 6d., and now held by the Rev. Whitwell Elwin, B.A., who has a handsome brick residence in the Elizabethan style, built in 1852, and having pleasure grounds attached. The Church (St. Michael) comprises nave, chancel, north porch, and square tower with one bell, and is chiefly in the perpendicular style. The rector supports a small School here. The Hall, a spacious red brick mansion, belongs to H. Elwin, Esq., but is occupied by Mr. Fras. Parmeter. The Grove, another handsome house, with pleasant grounds and a large farm attached, is the property and residence of Mr. Hy. Woods Butler. The tithes have been commuted for £294. 10s. per annum. At the enclosure, in 1811, an allotment of 20A., was awarded to the poor, for fuel. The chief residents are—The Rev. W. Elwin, B.A., Rectory; Hy. W. Butler (Booton Grove), Fras. Parmeter (Hall), Benj. Parsons, and Richard Rodman, farmers; Danl. Burrows, corn miller; John Pull, victualler, King's Head; Wm. Riches, shopkeeper; and John Smith, parish clerk. Post OFFICE at Mary Alden's. Letters despatched via Norwich at 4.40 p.m.

BRAMPTON, a small parish, on the river Bure, 2½ miles S.S.E. of Aylsham, has 195 inhabitants and 521A. of land, including 16A. of common. John Wright, Esq., owns most of the soil, and is lord of the manor, which was held by a family of its own name, till 1663. Roman coins, urns, &c., have been found here and in the adjoining parishes of Buxton and Burgh. The Church (St. Peter) is an ancient structure, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and tower. The latter contains one bell, and is round at the base and octagonal above. The nave is thatched and the chancel tiled. Here are some good brasses. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5, and now having 21A. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £154 in lieu of tithes, is in the patronage of the Rev. Hy. Philip Marsham, M.A., and incumbency of the Rev. Andrew Siely Warner, of Marsham. The church land is 2¼A: The Hall, now a farm-house, was built in 1595. Here is an Infant School, established in 1843, and chiefly supported by the Misses Wright. The chief residents are—Edw. Smith, farmer; Samuel Gambling Sayers, farmer, Hall farm; James Seaman, wheelwright and pump maker; John Moore, blacksmith; George Rushworth, shoemaker; John Barker and Henry Burton, shopkeepers; Sarah Seaman, victualler, Maid's Head; Thomas Mack, victualler, Cross Keys; and Emma Jane Marsham, schoolmistress. Post from Norwich, via Hevingham.

BURGH, or Burgh-next-Aylsham, is a village and parish, on the east side of the Bure, 2 miles S.E. of Aylsham, and contains 227 inhabitants and 789 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Rev. Edmund Telfer Yates, M.A., and Mr. Edmund Burr. The latter is lord of the manor; but the former owns and occupies the Hall, a spacious red brick mansion, which was rebuilt in 1842 and enlarged in 1862. Part of the old hall is still standing, and in the moat which surrounds it, a helmet and some arrows of the Cromwellian period and part of the stone work of a swing bridge were discovered a few years ago. The Church (St. Peter) is a thatched edifice, comprising nave, chancel, north porch, and fine tower with one bell. The holy-water stoup still remains in the porch. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 17s. 1d., is in the patronage of J. H. Holley, Esq. The Rev. Edward Holley, M.A., is the incumbent. The glebe is 12 acres, and the tithes have been commuted for £255 per annum. From its name, and many coins, urns, &c., found here, Burgh is supposed to have been a Roman station. A School is supported by subscription, and here is a small Primitive Methodist chapel. The chief residents are—The Rev. E. T. Yates, M.A., vicar of Aylsham and rural dean, Burgh Hall; Rev. Edwd. Holley, M.A., rector of Burgh; Edmund Burr, farmer and brick and tile maker; Jas. Smith, farmer, Old Hall; William Brown, corn miller; Henry Plant, victualler, Fighting Cocks; Chas. Wright, blacksmith, shopkeeper, and beerhouse; Jas. Mack, shoemaker; George Bloom, parish clerk; Isabella Murdock, schoolmistress; and Joseph Glistler and Wm. Murdock, shopkeepers. Post from Norwich, via Hevingham.

BUXTON is a pleasant and well-built village, on the west bank of the river Bure, nearly 4 miles S.S.E. of Aylsham and 8 miles N. of Norwich. The parish contains 640 inhabitants and 1274A. 2R. 23P. of land, the greater part of which belongs to Sir H. J. Stracey, Bart., the lord of the manor, with the advowson of the vicarage and the rectorial tithes, except those portions of the latter held by the other landowners. Dudwick House, half a mile W. of the church, is an ancient mansion, with a well-wooded lawn and good estate, belonging to Jno. Wright Esq., the occupant, and formerly the seat of the family of Dudwick. Buxton Old Hall, with a small estate, is the property of Mr. Thomas Lane. This manor had anciently the liberty of executing criminals on Gallows hill, which has long been levelled, though it still retains its ominous name. The Church (St. Andrew) comprises nave with aisles, chancel, and lofty square tower with five bells, and was thoroughly restored and re-seated with open benches about six years ago, at the cost of the vicar. All the windows are filled with stained glass, representing various scriptural subjects, and the floor round the communion table is laid with beautiful encaustic tiles. Here are many inscriptions to the families of Bedingfeld, Manning, Bulwer, &c. The Vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 13s. 9d. and now at £646, with the rectories of Skeyton and Oxnead annexed to it, is in the incumbency of the Rev. William James Stracey, M.A., who has here a good residence and 35A. 2R. 4P. of glebe. Here are also about 59A. of glebe belonging to the rectories of Skeyton and Oxnead. The tithes of Buxton were commuted, in 1842, for the yearly payments of £110. 15s. 6d., to the incumbent, £246 to the impropiator, and £12 to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich. The Baptists and Wesleyan Reformers have each a chapel in the parish. At the enclosure, in 1809, a large tumulus on the common was levelled and granted to the parish as a sand-pit. There were found in it some human bones, a large urn in the shape of a bell, and about a dozen smaller urns, all with their mouths downwards, and under them was a layer of red earth, covering an oval cavity (four feet by five,) filled with charcoal. On the river is an extensive water-mill. Buxton Reformatory is in Marsham parish (see page 683).

BUXTON CHARITY ESTATE, left by Sir John Pioto in the reign of Henry VII., and increased by the benefactions of Roger Docking, George Rogers, John Kemp, and others, now consists of eight tenements and about 30A. of land, mostly in Hautboys and Belaugh parishes, let for £70 a year, which, after paying the land-tax, &c., is distributed in coals and blankets amongst the poor. In 1693, Thomas Bulwer, Esq., left £500 to be laid out in land, the rents and profits thereof to be applied to the relief of the poor, except 6s. to be paid to the vicar or curate every Sunday when divine service is performed both in the morning and afternoon. The land purchased consists of 44A. 3R. 29P., let for £60 a year, which is all distributed among the poor, as also is the interest of £200, left by the same donor, who likewise charged his estates here with the payment of 20s. every fourth week for distribution among 20 poor widows or widowers attending the church, and with 18s. 4d. yearly to the churchwardens for their trouble. The dividends of £110 new $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cents, purchased with £100 left by Wm. Pearce, in 1826, are distributed among ten poor widows or widowers. In 1830, Elizabeth Tucket, in conformity with the desire of her first husband, John Wright, Esq., gave £900 three per cent. Consols for the support of Schools in Buxton for poor children. In 1833, John Wright, Esq., the son of the above-named, erected two School rooms near the church, and they are now attended by about 60 children. The dividends of the stock, amounting to £22. 10s. per annum, are paid to the master and mistress. Here is also a National School, built about 8 years ago with a sum of money left by the late vicar.

CALTHORPE, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. of Aylsham, has in its parish 187 inhabitants, and 1048A. of land, mostly the property of the Earl of Orford, the impropiator of the rectory and lord of the manor. The Church (St. Margaret) comprises nave, chancel, and square tower with one bell. The living is a discharged vicarage, certified at £27, and now valued at £143. The Norwich Charity Trustees are patrons, and the Rev. Saml. Marsh Shephard, B.A., of Erpingham, is the incumbent. The glebe is 24A. 1R. 17P., and the tithes have been commuted for £140 to the vicar and £195 per annum to the impropiator. The Town Lands, &c., given by unknown donors, were mostly exchanged at the enclosure in 1821, and now consist of a house, a barn, four cottages, and 14A. 1R. 1P., let for £29. 10s. a year. The School is supported by subscription. The chief residents are—Robert Ives, jun., Stephen Gillam, Richard Hook, and Wm. B. Robins, farmers; Robt. Chapman, vict., Saracen's Head; Robert John Brown, blacksmith, iron-founder, and agricultural implement manufacturer; Christopher Elden, wheelwright; Henry Lambert, shoemaker; Horatio Hall, grocer and druggist; Jeremiah Newstead, shopkeeper; Charles Ives, parish clerk; Mrs. Crask, schoolmistress; and George Newstead, carrier to Norwich, Wednesdays and Saturdays. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

CAWSTON is a considerable village and parish, 2 miles E. of Reepham and 4 miles W.S.W. of Aylsham, comprising 1019 inhabitants, 4296A. of land, and the scattered hamlets of Eastgate, Southgate, and Woodrow, the latter of which has a good inn on the Norwich and Holt road, 1 mile E. of the village. Three fairs are held here annually on Feb. 1st, and the last Wednesdays in April and August, the latter of which is a large sheep fair. W. E. L. Bulwer, Esq., owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manor, which he holds in free socage of the Duchy of Lancaster, in token of which he has carried before him (or his steward) on the court days, a brazen hand holding a ploughshare and a mace surmounted by a bearded arrow. The custom of the manor is gavelkind, with dower and arbitrary fines. In 1263, John de Burgh obtained a charter for a market here every Wednesday, and a fair on October 1st and 2nd, but these have long been obsolete. The Church (St. Agnes) is a noble cruciform structure of freestone, with a fine square tower containing six bells; the whole built by Michael de la Pole (Earl of Suffolk) and Catherine his wife, except the north aisle. In the windows are some fragments of ancient stained glass, and on the east wall of the south transept a painting of Saint Agnes was discovered some years ago. The ancient screen still remains, and its twenty lower panels have nearly-obliterated paintings of saints, including a remarkable one of John Schorn holding a boot, into which he has just "conjured the devil." The doors of the screen have figures of the four doctors of the church—St. Ambrose, St. Jerome, St. Gregory, and St. Augustine. The building has lately been restored. The Rectory, valued in K.B. at £15. 13s. 11d., is in the gift of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Theodore Hy. Marsh, M.A., who has a spacious residence and a yearly rent-charge of £1023, awarded in 1845 in lieu of tithes. The Church Land is 1A. 3R. In a small planting near Woodrow Inn, is a monument in memory of Sir Henry Hobart, who was killed there in a duel with Oliver Neve in 1698. On the north side of the parish is Docking farm, where, it is said, there was anciently a large village called Alvington. The poor ought to have the interest of £120, left by Robt. Mott in 1760, Edward Dewing in 1764, and Edward Lombe in 1740, but it has long been lost. In 1818, Dr. Baker, the late rector, left the interest of £100 for the support of a Sunday School. At the enclosure of the Heath in 1802, an allotment of 106A. was awarded to the parishioners for fuel. Here are two chapels belonging to the Wesleyans and the Primitive Methodists, the former built in 1829 and the latter in 1861. A National School is about to be erected. A Reading-room and Library were established here in 1863, and have about 50 members, who pay 1s. 6d. each per quarter.

COLBY, or Coleby, 3 miles N. by E. of Aylsham, has in its parish 269 inhabitants and 1115 acres of land, mostly the property of Lord Suffield, Mrs. Roper, and W. F. Windham, Esq., and forming part of the manor of Crackford. The Church (St. Giles) is a neat structure, comprising nave, chancel, south porch with parvise, and tower containing one bell. It was repaired in 1748 and 1834, and in the former year the north aisle was taken down. The east window was decorated about thirty years ago with ancient stained glass, collected by the rector, who also purchased the altar piece, a fine painting of Moses and Aaron. The font is richly carved with figures of the Holy Family, the Evangelists, &c., and the piscina and sedilia still remain on the south side of the chancel. There is a gallery at the west end, containing an organ. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 15s. 10d., in the gift of Lord Suffield and incumbency of the Rev. Geo. Coleby, B.A., who has a good residence. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £361. 16s. per annum, and the glebe is about 7A. The Church Land is 9A. 1R. 29P. An acre of land at Banningham, belonging to Colby, is let for £2. 10s., which is applied with the poor rates. In 1723, Richard Snelling left two yearly rent-charges, viz., 20s. for the aged poor, and 36s. for clothing poor children of Colby. Thomas de Colby, D.D., who died Bishop of Lismore and Waterford, in Ireland, in 1406, was a native of this parish. The chief residents are—The Rev. Geo. Coleby, B.A., Rectory; Thomas Carter, Wm. Lacy, Joseph Clover, Robert Barney, and Mary Eliz. Pegg, farmers; Thomas Heyhoe, bricklayer; Benj. Bugden, shopkeeper; George Gaze and Edw. Bunn, shoemakers; and Wm. Hall, carrier to Norwich, Wed. and Sat. Post from Norwich, via Aylsham.

COLTISHALL, a large village, with a fair on Whit-Monday, and a considerable trade in malt, corn, ale, &c., is pleasantly scattered on the east bank of the Bure, 7 miles N.E. by N. of Norwich. Its parish has 978 inhabitants and 1180A. of land, of which 951 acres are arable and 41A. woods and plantations. The soil belongs to a number of proprietors, the largest of whom are R. P. Kemp, Esq., the lord of the manor, who resides at the Manor House; and Wm. Burroughes, Esq., of the Hall. The houses at the west end of the village are in the parish of Great Hautboys. Henry III. granted by letters patent in 1231 "to all men, women, and children born, or to be born, in his village of Coltishall, freedom from all villainage of body and blood, and from toll, stallage, picage, and paunage, in all fairs and markets throughout England; and that all frays, transgressions, bargains, quarrels, and suits concerning the said town of Coltishall should be determined, twice every year, before the King's officers at the leets there." Henry VI. conveyed all his rights in this manor to King's College, Cambridge, to which the advowson is still attached. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 2s. 6d., has 22A. 3R. of glebe, and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Jph. Thackeray, M.A., of Horstead. The tithes were commuted for £340 per annum about 20 years ago. The Rectory House is occupied by the curate. The Church (St. John the Baptist) was built about 1284, and comprises nave, chancel, south aisle, north porch, and tower. The latter is 67 feet high, and contains six bells. The Wesleyans, Wesleyan Reformers, and Primitive Methodists have small chapels here. The National School, a spacious building of flint with freestone dressings, was erected by subscription in 1845, at a cost of £400, on land given by R. P. Kemp, Esq. The Free School, with the master's house, was built by the parish, and is endowed with £10 a year, left by John Chapman in 1718, for ten free scholars; and the dividends of £360 three per cent. stock, left by the Rev. Chas. Gape, D.D., in 1815. A road which crossed the lawn was given up in 1782 on condition that the owner of the Hall should pay 40s. yearly to the poor. In 1810, several Roman cinerary urns were found in a marl pit in this parish.

CORPUSTY is a village and parish, on the south side of the river Bure, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. by W. of Aylsham, and 6 miles S.S.E. of Holt, containing 425 inhabitants, and 1018A. 2R. 21P. of land, belonging chiefly to Jeremiah Ives and W. E. L. Bulwer, Esqs., the latter of whom is lord of the manor of Hinton and Heydon, which extends into this parish. The Church (St. Peter) comprises nave, chancel, and tower with one bell. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £4. 12s. 8d., and augmented from 1746 to 1810, with £1000 of Q.A.B., is now only worth £62 per annum. The Bishop of Norwich is patron, and the Rev. Samuel Ashby, M.A., of Saxthorpe, incumbent. The tithes were commuted about twenty years ago for £256 a year, of which £17 are payable to Mr. Pitman, who owns about 40A. in the parish, and the remainder belongs to J. Ives, Esq., the impropiator. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel with Sunday school attached, built in 1859. The common of 49A., has been enclosed under an act passed in 1863. ERPINGHAM, a village and parish on a rivulet, 4 miles N. of Aylsham, gives name to this and an adjoining Hundred, and contains 423 inhabitants and 1381 acres of fertile land, partly in the Earl of Orford's manor of Calthorpe, and the rest forming the Marquis of Lothian's manor of Erpingham, which was anciently held by a family of its own name, one of whom was the chivalrous knight, Sir Thomas Erpingham, who accompanied John, Duke of Lancaster, to Spain, in 1399, and was in all the wars of Henry IV. and V. He was a great benefactor to Norwich, where he built the cathedral gate which bears his name, (see page 199.) The copyholders are subject to fines certain. The Rev. Geo. Fish, Lord Suffield, the Rev. S. M. Shephard, and some smaller owners, have estates here. The Church (St. Mary) is a large edifice comprising nave, chancel, south aisle, south porch, and lofty tower. The latter contains four bells, and is adorned with shields and other ornaments, and formerly had four statues of confessors for pinnacles; but one of these fell down more than a century ago, and killed one of the parishioners. The building was begun by Sir Thomas Erpingham, and finished by Lord Bardolph and his lady. About twenty years ago it was reroofed at the expense of the parish, and handsomely reseated at the cost of the late Lady Suffield. In 1862, a new stained-glass window, representing our Saviour and Mary in the Garden, was placed in the church by the Aylsham Board of Guardians, in memory of the late John Shephard, Esq. Sir John Erpingham, father of Sir Thomas, was buried here, and his effigy in brass, dated 1370, still remains on the stone. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 18s. 9d., is consolidated with that of Blickling. (See page 671.) The tithes of Erpingham were commuted in 1832, for £474. 16s. 1d. per annum. The Rectory House is occupied by the curate. The School, a neat brick building, erected in 1862 by the Marquis of Lothian, is supported by subscription. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

HAUTBOYS (GREAT), on the north side of the Bure, eight miles N.N.E. of Norwich, is a small village and parish, with 195 inhabitants and about 610 acres of land, mostly belonging to Lord Suffield, the lord of the manor. The Church (St. Theobald) is a handsome building of flint with freestone dressings, erected in 1863-'4, at a cost of £1000, raised by subscription, and having sittings for 200 hearers. It is of early English architecture, and comprises nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, organ room, vestry, and bell turret over the chancel arch. It contains a fine old font. The roof is wagon-headed, and the floor is laid with encaustic tiles. The ancient round tower and the walls of the old church are still standing, at some distance from the village, and its chancel has been fitted up as a mortuary chapel, the churchyard being the only cemetery in the parish. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 6s. 8d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. John Colk Girling, M.A., who has a handsome residence, built in 1860, at a cost of £1500. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £218. 10s. per annum. A School is supported by the rector, and Emmeline Pratt is the mistress. At the head of Hautboys, or as it is vulgarly called, Hobbies Causeway, there stood a Hospital, founded about 1235, by Sir Peter de Alto Bosco, for the reception of travellers and poor people, and licensed by the Pope to have a chapel bell and chaplain. In 1312, Sir Robt. Baynard converted his manor-house here into a castle, of which the foundations alone remain. The only farmers resident here are—James Walter Mack, Church farm; Ephraim Wilkin Hinde, and Robert Hearne. The other inhabitants are included with Coltishall, to which their houses adjoin. Post from Norwich, via Coltishall.

HAUTOBOYS (LITTLE), which adjoins the above, was once a separate parish, but has long been united with that of Lammas. It has 25 inhabitants and about 338 acres of land. The Bishop of Norwich is lord of the manor, but the soil belongs chiefly to Sir H. J. Durrant, Bart., Capt. Davy, and the Norwich Charity Trustees. The latter own Hautboys Hall, a large brick house in the Elizabethan style, occupied by a farmer. The Church (St. Mary), stood near the Bure, but no vestiges of it are now extant. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7, is consolidated with Lammas, see p. 682. The chief residents are—William Taylor, victualler, Adam and Eve; and James Ladbroke (Hall) and Wm. Postle, farmers. Post from Norwich, via Coltishall.

HEVINGHAM is a considerable village and parish, three miles S. of Aylsham and nine miles N. by W. of Norwich, having 838 inhabitants and 2829 acres of land, belonging mostly to the Rev. Henry Philip Marsham, M.A., who is lord of the manor of Hevingham-Catts-cum-Cricketots, and resides at Rippon Hall, a handsome red brick mansion, which was rebuilt in 1843 in the Elizabethan style, and has a delightful lawn and pleasure grounds. W. H. Scott, Esq., of Aylsham, is lord of the manor of Hevingham-with-the-members-of-Marsham. Walter de Suffield, Bishop of Norwich, formed a park, and built a palace or country seat here in 1250, and had license for free-warren in all his demesnes. The moat which surrounded the house still remains, and the park now consists of about 200 acres of wood, containing some fine old timber. This estate remained in the hands of the bishops till Bishop Nix exchanged the revenues of the See in 1531, when it came to the crown, and was granted by Henry VIII. to Sir James Boleyn, from whom it passed to the Hobarts, who sold it to the Marshams in 1659. It is subject to a modus of £1 per annum. The Church (St. Botolph) was originally cruciform, but the north transept no longer exists. It has nave, chancel, tower, south transept, and handsome porch, and appears to have been at one period a very fine edifice, but has of late years been badly restored. The chancel is separately dedicated to St. Mary. Here are inscriptions to the families of Hobart, Thetford, Deynes, Leigh, Scambler, &c., and a curious hexagonal font, with mutilated figures under florid Gothic arches. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 16s., has 39 acres of glebe and a neat residence, and the tithes were commuted in 1841 for £550 per annum. The Rev. Edw. Rigby Beevor is patron and incumbent. The Wesleyans and the Primitive Methodists have chapels here. Buxton Heath, about a mile east of the village, is mostly in this parish, and many of the poor are engaged in making brooms. There were about 200 looms some years ago, but there are now very few. The Free School, for ten poor children, with the master's house, was built by John Hall, who endowed it in 1715 with 5A. 0R. 18P. of land (now worth about £11 a year) and the interest of £50, now invested in £73. 15s. 4d. three per cent. Consols. The Poor's Land, purchased with £100 left by Thos. Bulwer, in 1693, comprises eight acres in Aylsham, let for £20 a year. In 1806, some timber was cut on this land, and the produce was laid out in the purchase of £54. 14s. 3d. three per cent. Consols. The Poor's Allotment, 148A., awarded at the enclosure, in 1801, is used for the purpose of cutting fuel. The poor have an annuity of 10s. 6d., left by an unknown donor.

HEYDON, a pleasant village and parish, 5 miles W.N.W. of Aylsham, and 14 miles N.W. by N. of Norwich, has 302 inhabitants, and 1942 acres of land, belonging to Wm. Earle Lytton Bulwer, Esq., of HEYDON HALL, a handsome Elizabethan mansion of brick, erected in 1581, by Henry Dynne, Esq., and since considerably improved. The park comprises 500 acres, and contains a number of fine red deer. Mr. Bulwer is the elder brother of Sir E. G. E. Bulwer Lytton, Bart., M.P., the distinguished novelist, and is lord of the manors of Heydon-with-members, Stinton Hall, Sallkirk Hall, Oulton, Thurning, Guestwick, Cawston, Wood Dalling, &c., for which Mr. Henry John Ireland, of Wood Dalling Hall, is steward. The Church (St. Peter) is a handsome building, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and lofty embattled tower containing six bells, and crowned by four crocketed pinnacles. It has a fine roof of high pitch, and contains some elegant monuments of the Bulwer family, and a good modern brass to the memory of Mrs. Richardson, who died in 1836. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 16s. 10½d., has 24A. 3R. 20P. of glebe, and is consolidated with that of Irmingland, in the patronage of W. E. L. Bulwer, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. George Shand, M.A., who has a good residence, which was restored and enlarged in 1861. The tithes of Heydon were commuted in 1841 for £307, and those of Irmingland for £170. The School is supported by the rector, and occupies a neat brick building erected about 20 years ago by the patron. Erasmus Earle, who purchased the manors of Heydon, Sall, and Cawston, and died in 1667, was one of the most able lawyers of his time, and held many important offices. Tyros, or Turolde de Dalling, who was enfeoffed at the Norman Conquest in the manors of Wood-Dalling and Bingham, was founder of the Bulwer family. The father of the present Mr. Bulwer was a brigadier-general, and espoused the sole heiress of A. W. Lytton, Esq., of Knebworth Park, Hertfordshire. About 4A. of land, left to the poor by Lady Ann Townshend, in 1620, has long been lost in the Heydon estate, which is charged with the yearly payment of 20s. for the poor, and 10s. for a sermon, left by Frances Kemp, in 1632. The soil is chiefly a light loam, resting on strong blue clay, and there is a thick bed of valuable marl running through the parish, of which great quantities are sent to London and other parts of the kingdom.

INGWORTH, which gives name to the Deanery of this Hundred, is a small village and parish, in the vale of the Bure, 2 miles N. of Aylsham, containing 153 inhabitants and 512A. of land, and belonging to several owners; but part of it is a member of Blickling manor, and the rest is in the manor of Banningham. The Church (St. Lawrence) appears to be of the age of Wm. Rufus, and had a round tower, which fell down in 1822. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £5, in the patronage of W. F. Windham, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. George Fish, of Erpingham. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £166 per annum, and the glebe is 13A. 2R. The rector has also 21s. a year from the water-mill. The poor have a yearly rent charge of 3s. 4d., left by Ellen Gobart, about 1676. The chief residents are—Robert Dent, gentleman; Miss Sarah Dent; Edw. Amiss, horse breaker; Geo. and Standgroom Cook, butchers; John Wilson, shoemaker; William Flatman, parish clerk; John Burrell, mole catcher; John Fields, tailor; Henry Gardiner Hart, corn miller and farmer, Water-mill; and Geo. Watts, Sarah Harman, and Mrs. Goulder, farmers. Post OFFICE at Wm. Miles's. Letters desp. to Norwich by mail cart at 5.10 p.m.

IRMINGLAND, or Ermingland, a small parish on the Bure, 5 miles N.W. by W, of Aylsham, has only 15 inhabitants and 714A. of land, in two farms, occupied by Richard Clarke and Thomas Freeman Eglington. The former occupies Irmingland Hall, which belongs to S. Pitman, Esq., and was formerly a seat of the Smiths, and for a short time the residence of Oliver Cromwell. The other farm, called Elmundale, belongs to the Earl of Orford. The Church (St. Andrew) was taken down, and its site ploughed up many years ago, when the rectory, valued in K.B. at £5, was consolidated with Heydon. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £170. 5s. per annum. Post from Norwich, via Aylsham.

ITTERINGHAM, a pleasant village, 4 miles N.W. of Aylsham, has in its parish 364 inhabitants and 1442 acres of land, belonging to the Earl of Orford and the Marquis of Lothian, the former being lord of Itteringham and the latter of Bintry manor. The Earl of Orford is also patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £5. 17s. 1d., and is now consolidated with that of Mannington, in the incumbency of the Rev. Peter James Elwin, who has a good residence here. The glebe is 24 acres, and the tithes of the two parishes were commuted in 1841 for £346. 5s. The Church (Virgin Mary) comprises nave, chancel, south aisle or chapel, and tower with one bell. It was thoroughly restored and resealed in 1859. The east window and a window in the south aisle are filled with stained glass; the latter as a memorial of the late Rev. Robert Walpole, who built a School here in 1846. The Primitive Methodists and the Wesleyans have each a chapel here. The Poor's land, 2A., let for 8s. a year, was purchased in 1699 with £8, given by Lady Potts, and £12 subscribed by the parish. The chief residents are,—Rev. P. J. Elwin, Rectory; Jas. Brown, corn miller, maltster, and farmer; Wm. Berwick, Thos. Bayes, Robt. Ives, sen., and Robt. Palmer, farmers; William Thornton, victualler, Walpole Arms; Henry Hall, jun., blacksmith; Henry Bird, grocer, tailor, and draper; John Williams, shop-keeper; Horatio Brett, carpenter and parish clerk; Robt. Fowler and Edw. Slipper, wheelwrights; William Fowler, shoemaker; Jeremiah Bell, cattle dealer; and Frances Rudd, schoolmistress. POST OFFICE at Henry Bird's. Letters despatched to Norwich, via Aylsham.

LAMMAS, a pleasant village on the east bank of the Bure, 4 miles S.E. of Aylsham, has in its parish 291 inhabitants and about 500 acres of land, exclusive of Little Hautboys, which is united with it, as noticed at page 679. They contain together 316 inhabitants and 806 acres. Lammas is mostly the property of the Rev. Wm. Heath Marsh, B.A., who is lord of the manor, and patron and incumbent of the consolidated rectories of Lammas and Little Hautboys, which were valued in K.B. at £7. The Rectory House is a good brick building, the glebe is 39A. 0R. 19P., and the tithes were commuted in 1840 for £240 per annum. John Wright, Esq., Sir John W. Lubbock, Bart., Sir H. J. Stracey, Bart., and some smaller owners, have estates in the parish. The Church (St. Andrew) comprises nave, chancel, and low embattled tower with four bells, and contains mural monuments of the Marsh, Candler, Damant, and other families. The Baptists have a small chapel here; and near the west end of the village is a Friends' Meeting House, built about 200 years ago, and now rented by Wesleyans; but the Friends still use the burial ground attached to it. The chief residents are—The Hon. Harbord Harbord; Ransome Bransby, gentleman; Rev. Wm. H. Marsh, B.A., Rectory; Rev. Benjamin May, Baptist minister; Anthony Goodwin, wheelwright and victualler, Anchor; Benjamin Southgate, beerhouse; John Burton, grocer; James Goodwin, blacksmith and parish clerk; Benjamin Collins, organ builder; Charlotte Rayner, schoolmistress; George and John Rayner, plumbers and glaziers; William M. Sutton and William Stockings, farmers; and Jas. Daniels, carrier to Norwich, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays. Post from Norwich, via Hevingham.

MANNINGTON parish, 5 miles N.N.W. of Aylsham, has only 6 inhabitants and 549 acres of land, belonging to the Right Hon. Horatio William Walpole, 4th EARL of ORFORD, and Baron Walpole of Walpole and Wolterton, who occasionally resides at Mannington Hall, an ancient mansion, which has been recently re-edified and considerably improved. William Lummer, who built the Hall, had license to make a castle of it. The Mere, a large moated mansion, is so called from a pond, which is supplied by several copious springs. It is occupied by Mr. John Crowe, who farms all the parish. The Church has long been a neglected ruin, and its discharged rectory, valued in K.B., at £6. 13s. 4d., is consolidated with Itteringham. It contains a tombstone to Sir Charles Potts, Bart., who formerly lived at the Hall, and died in 1731. Post from Norwich, via Aylsham.

MARSHAM, a large village, pleasantly situated on the turnpike, 2 miles S. of Aylsham and 10 miles N. of Norwich, has in its parish 622 inhabitants and 1819 acres of land, belonging to J. H. Warnes, Esq., John Howlett, Esq., Rev. F. Kent, Rev. H. P. Marsham, and several smaller owners. It is in the manor of Hevingham, except a small portion, which is in the Rectory manor. The Hall, a neat white mansion, is now the Rectory House for the neighbouring parish of Brampton, having been purchased for that purpose nearly twenty years ago. Several Romano-British urns have been found in this parish, and traces of a Roman road, which crossed the Norwich and Aylsham turnpike near the ninth milestone, may still be seen. On Marsham Heath are many of those singular pits which have been described at page 39, and some very fine tumuli, near which stone celts are frequently picked up. The Church (All Saints) is a neat fabric, with a tower and eight bells. It has an ancient screen and a curious old font, on which are carved the sacraments of the Romish church, four Saints, four Confessors, and St. George and the Dragon. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 12s. 9d. It is in the gift of the Earl of Lichfield and incumbency of the Rev. John Gunton, B.A., for whom a new Rectory House was built in 1845. The glebe is 66A. 1R. 19P., and the tithes were commuted in 1839 for £344, exclusive of £30 per annum for the impropriate tithes of about 100 acres. The School is attended by 50 children, and chiefly supported by the rector, by whom it was built about 12 years ago. The Mutual Improvement Society was established in 1859, and has a good library of more than 200 volumes. In the winter season there are evening classes, lectures, &c., for the instruction of the members. There is a Friendly Society at the White Hart. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. The Town Meadow, 4A. 2R. 18P., held of the manor of Hevingham-with-Marsham, has belonged to the poor from time immemorial, and they have also 8A. 2R. 21P., purchased with £100 left by Thos. Bulwer, in 1693. To these lands an allotment of 3A. 20P. was awarded at the enclosure, and the whole now produces a yearly rental of £23. 15s. 6d. The Fuel Allotment, 181A. 6P., was awarded at the enclosure, in 1801, for the poor to cut fuel thereon. It is now thickly covered with Scotch firs. The poor have also two yearly rent-charges, viz., 20s., left by John Swan, in 1692, out of Feverill's farm, and 15s. left by Elizabeth Swan, in 1693, out of Wanley's closes. The notorious Titus Oates was the son of the Rev. Saml. Oates, a former rector of this parish, and is supposed to have been born here. BUXTON REFORMATORY, for juvenile criminals, stands in this parish, and was built by subscription in 1853. It occupies a healthy situation, and is a square brick building, with a courtyard in the centre. About 50 boys can be accommodated, but there are rarely more than 35. They are admitted from 11 to 15 years of age, and some are taught tailoring, shoemaking, &c., but the majority are employed in cultivating about 31 acres of land, which are attached to the house. The expenditure of the institution averages more than £600 per annum.

OULTON, a parish of scattered houses, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. of Aylsham, has 357 inhabitants, and 1849 acres of land, belonging to W. E. L. Bulwer, Esq., the Marquis of Lothian, Saml. Pitman, Esq., and others. Mr. Bulwer is lord of the manor, and Mr. Pitman owns Oulton Hall, a neat mansion in a small but well-wooded park, which is now unoccupied. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) has a tower and one bell. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8. 5s., and now having 13A. 28P. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £170, awarded in 1839, in lieu of the vicarial tithes. The Rev. Frederick Hunt is patron and incumbent, and has a good residence built about twelve years ago. The Marquis of Lothian is impropiator of the rectorial tithes, which were commuted in 1841 for £20. 10s. per annum. About half a mile N.E. of the church is an Independent Chapel, with a cemetery of 5A. 2R. 9P., and a house for the minister, who has £5 a year from the bequest of the late Thomas Bell, Esq., from whom Oulton Hall passed to its present owner. The Wesleyan Reformers have a small chapel in the village; and here is a Free School which was built and endowed in 1848 by the late Lady Suffield. It is a neat brick building in the Elizabethan style. The poor widows of Oulton have 10s. a year out of the Hall estate, left by Edmund Bell, in 1694. There is an Oddfellows' Lodge and also a Friendly Society at the Pitman's Arms.

OXNEAD, a small parish on the east side of the Bure, $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles S.S.E. of Aylsham, has only 57 inhabitants, and 644 acres of land, in two farms, occupied by Wm. Spinks and John Smith, and belonging to Sir H. J. Stracey, Bart., M.P., the lord of the manor, which from 1423 till 1732, was held by the Paston family, two of whom were Earls of Yarmouth, and one of them was the famous Clement Paston, whom Henry VIII. called his champion; Protector Somerset, his soldier; Queen Mary, her seaman; and Queen Elizabeth, her father. He erected the once splendid mansion of Oxnead Hall, in the reign of Elizabeth, to which additions were made by the first Earl of Yarmouth, who built the banqueting room to receive Charles II. and his royal and noble attendants, in 1676. The building was in the form of the letter H, but the whole was taken down many years since, except one wing, now occupied by John Leist Allen, Esq. William Paston, the second Earl of Yarmouth, died without male issue, in 1732. Six Tenements, built by the famous Clement Paston, in 1594, for the residence of the aged servants of his family, are now let by the lord of the manor to poor people at small rents. Here is a large corn mill, let to Mr. Wm. Allen, of Burgh. The Church (St. Michael) is a small edifice embowered in trees, and was restored and refitted with new open seats, stone pulpit, &c., in 1857, when the east window was filled with stained glass. The chancel is paved with black and white marble, and has a handsome marble tomb, on which lies the effigy of Clement Paston, who died in 1597. By him lies also the effigy of his wife, and at his feet is a pelican. Here is also an exquisite marble bust of Catherine, wife of Robert Paston, who died in 1636. The rectory, valued in K.B.

at £9. 1s. 5d., is consolidated with Buxton and Skepton. (See page 673.) The tithes of Oxnead have been commuted for £180 per annum. The chief residents are—John Leist Allen, Esq., Hall; Wm. Spinks, farmer, North farm; and John Smith, farmer. Post from Norwich, via Hevingham.

SAXTHORPE, 6 miles N.W. of Aylsham, and S.S.E. of Holt, on the north side of the Bure, has 328 inhabitants, and 2113A. 1R. 3P. of land, belonging to Colonel Astley, Mrs. Mary Dixon, Saml. Pitman, Esq., the Earl of Orford, and others. Here are two manors, called Lound Hall and Mickle Hall, of both which Miss Louisa Copeman is lady. Pembroke College, Cambridge, has the appropriation of the rectory and the patronage of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £4. 13s. 4d., and is now worth £144 per annum. It is in the incumbency of the Rev. Samuel Ashby, M.A., and was augmented with £400 by W. Trollope, and Q.A.B., in 1739. The glebe is 46A. 3R., and in 1842, the rectorial tithes were commuted for £302. 10s., and the vicarial for £91 per annum. The Church (St. Andrew) is an ancient building, comprising nave, chancel, porch, and square tower with one bell, and was built about 1490; previous to which, here was St. Dunstan's Chapel, founded by Aymer de Valence, in 1313, on the site still called Chapel close. In 1666, the Rev. John Vaughan, a late vicar, left £260 to the Boys' Hospital, in Norwich, and directed that half the boys admitted in consideration thereof, should be sent from Saxthorpe. (See page 226.) He also left £300 to be lent in sums of £30, free of interest, for seven years, to young men of this parish, commencing business. The parochial School was built in 1847, and is chiefly supported by subscription. The chief residents are—Rev. S. Ashby, M.A., vicar; Mrs. Mary Ann Ashby; Ann Bacon, victualler, Castle; Ezra Cornish, iron and brass founder, and blacksmith; Robert Carr, shoemaker; Joseph John Everard, grocer and draper; Thomas Hase, schoolmaster, land surveyor, and parish clerk; and Fisher Austin, John Seely, John Livick, Wm. Shelton, Jas. Farrow, and Geo. Jones, farmers. Post from Norwich, via Reepham.

SCOTTOW parish, on the banks of a rivulet, 5 miles S. by W. of North Walsham, and 2½ miles W. of Worstead, has 454 inhabitants, and 2120A of rich and well-cultivated land, mostly the property of Sir Henry Josias Durrant, Bart., the lord of the manor and lessee of the rectory, whose family seat, Scottow Hall, a handsome cemented mansion, with extensive wings and a finely wooded lawn, near a lake of 17 acres, is at present held on lease by George Hogge, Esq. About 100 acres belong to the Rev. James White, of Sloley. The Church (All Saints) is a fine edifice near the hall, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and lofty tower with five bells. It was thoroughly restored by the present vicar and his friends in 1857, when the windows were almost entirely reglazed, a new oak pulpit with stone base was purchased, the old Purbeck marble font was restored, new altar rails and choir seats were provided, and the chancel floor was raised one step. The organ was given by the late Sir Henry Durrant in 1844, and stands in the north aisle. In the chancel are several mural monuments of the Durrant and Blake families. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8. 13s. 6½d., and consolidated with the rectory of Belough. (See page 670.) The Bishop of Norwich is patron and appropriator, and the Hon. and Rev. John Horatio Nelson, M.A., the present rector, has here a good residence and 17A. of glebe. In 1839, the improper rectorial tithes of Scottow were commuted for £500, and the vicarial for £230 per annum; and the vicar has a yearly rent-charge of £16 out of the former. At the enclosure, in 1831, an allotment of 22A. 3R. 16P. was awarded to the poor; and here is also a public watering place for cattle, containing 1R. 22P. The parochial School, built in 1859 on land given by the late Sir H. Durrant, is a neat brick building, and is supported by subscription. Here is an Odd-fellows' Hall, built about twelve years ago.

SKEYTON, 3 miles E. by S. of Aylsham, and 11 miles N. of Norwich, has in its parish 341 inhabitants, and 1264A. of fertile land, rising in bold swells from a meandering rivulet, and belonging to Laverocke Leggett, Henry Bidewell, W. L. J. Blake, and John Postle, Esqrs., and some smaller owners. Wm. Hy. Scott, Esq., is lord of the manor of Skeyton Hall, and impropiator of the great tithes; but part of the parish is in the manor of Whitwell Hall, which belongs to L. Leggett, Esq., and is occupied by Mrs. Carter. The Church (All Saints) stands on a bold eminence, and was re-pewed about 14 years ago, when a new font was purchased. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 10s., and augmented with £200 of Q.A.B. in 1792, is now consolidated with Oxnead rectory and Buxton vicarage, in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. J. Stracey, M.A. of Buxton, and patronage of Sir H. J. Stracey, Bart., M.P. The joint benefices are valued at £646 per annum, and the tithes of Skeyton were commuted in 1840 for £343 per annum, besides £15 paid yearly to the rector of Swanton-Abbott. The Parsonage, a pleasant residence, erected in 1857, is occupied by the curate. The School, a good brick building with teacher's house attached, was built in 1856, and is supported by subscription. The Wesleyans and the Wesleyan Reformers have each a chapel here. Robert King, who died here in 1727, aged 103, had "an entire new set of teeth about ten years before his death." The commons were enclosed in 1814. Here is a good bed of clay, from which red and white bricks, chimney tops, &c., of excellent quality, are extensively manufactured. STRATTON-STRAWLESS is a small village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. by E. of Aylsham, and $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. of Norwich, comprising in its parish 202 inhabitants, and 1583 acres of land, including an open heath of 341 acres, and several large plantations. The whole is the property of Chas. Robt. Marsham, Esq., and the Rev. Hy. Philip Marsham, the former of whom is lord of the manor and owner of the HALL, which is now occupied by Colonel Hugh Fitz-Roy, and is a large white brick mansion in a well wooded park. This manor has been held, since the time of Edward I., by the Marsham family; one of whom, Robert Marsham, Esq., F.R.S., who died in 1797, aged 90, was a distinguished naturalist, and excelled much in the art of planting and rearing trees, as may be seen by the flourishing plantations round the hall. Several others of this family have been mayors of Norwich, and one of them represented that city in parliament about the middle of the 16th century. The Hall was built by Wm. Marsham, Esq., at the latter end of the 17th century. The Church (St. Margaret) has a massive but short square tower, rebuilt in 1422, and now containing six bells, all bearing inscriptions shewing them to have been cast in the early part of the 17th century. It has some curious specimens of stained glass, and several handsome monuments, one of which has the recumbent effigy in black marble of a man in armour, supposed to represent the last Sir Ralph de Stratton, who died about 1250; and on an altar-tomb of black marble is the white marble effigy of Thomas Marsham (ob. 1638), in his shroud, leaning on a pillow, above which are two angels, blowing trumpets. In a chapel is a very fine altar-tomb of black and white marble, with four effigies of Henry Marsham (ob. 1692), his second wife, and his son and daughter. Here were formerly many brasses of the Marshams, but most of them have disappeared. The building was re-roofed and repewed in 1844 at a cost of £240. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 8s., was augmented in 1794, with £200 of Queen Anne's Bounty, and is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Hy. Philip Marsham, M.A. of Rippon Hall, Hevingham. The glebe is 32A., and the tithes were commuted about 20 years ago for £287 per annum. The School is supported by the rector. In 1693, Thomas Bulwer left £100, to be laid out in land, &c., for the relief of the poor of the parish, whether resident in it or not. There are now belonging to this charity 21A. 2R. 6P. of land, let for £28, and £133 three per cent. Consols, purchased partly with money arising from the sale of timber. In 1683, Henry Marsham charged the Hall estate with the yearly payment of 20s. for the poor, 20s. for a sermon, and 20s. for the ringers. The chief residents are—Col. Fitz-Roy, Hall; Mary Ann Bowman, Jas. Burton, Wm. Case (Hill farm), Jas. Cory, Jno. Gladden (Ivy House), Jph. Laws, Thomas Laws, Peter Powell, and Jas. Smith, farmers; Jas. Barton, grocer and shoemaker; John Fiddy, wheelwright; Sarah Kerson, school-mistress; Wm. Rivett, parish clerk; and John Dunning, blacksmith. Post from Norwich, via St. Faith's.

SWANTON ABBOTT, a large scattered village, 2½ miles S.S.W. of North Walsham, and 12 miles N. by E. of Norwich, has in its parish 523 inhabitants, and 1130 acres of land, belonging chiefly to W. L. J. Blake and J. B. Petre, Esqrs.; but W. H. Scott, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Church (St. Michael) stands on a commanding eminence, and comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. It contains several handsome mural monuments to the Blake family, and a fine brass of the Rev. Stephen Multon, who died in 1477. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 10s., is in the gift of W. L. J. Blake, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Harris, B.A., for whom a rectory house is about to be built. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £275 per annum. The National School is supported by subscription, and attended by 86 children. Here is also an evening school supported by the patron. The Wesleyans and Wesleyan Reformers have each a chapel in the parish. The Hall, a neat mansion with a pleasant lawn, is the seat of Wm. Lubbock Jex-Jex. Blake, Esq., and was enlarged by the addition of a south wing in 1859. Ann Steward, in 1732, left a pigtle of land for the relief of poor widows. This land received an allotment at the enclosure in 1824, and the whole is now let for £5. The Poor's Allotments, awarded at the enclosure, comprise 25 acres, of which 3R. 6P. are let in allotments for £3. 14s., and the remainder is used for cutting fuel. The poor have also 15s. a year from a rood of land given by Andrew Garland, in 1710; and an annuity of 5s., left by Sarah Young, in 1732, out of Mr. Blake's estate. In 1732, Ann Steward left 5A. 24P. of land for repairing the church, and it is now let for £8. 5s. a year. Eliz. Hunt died here in 1847, at the age of 102.

THWAITE, or Thwayte, a small scattered village, on a pleasant acclivity, above a small rivulet, 4 miles N. of Aylsham, has in its parish 147 inhabitants, and 676 acres, of which 50A. are common. The Earl of Orford owns most of the soil, and is lord of the manor. The Church (All Saints) has a round tower, and the living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £7, and now having about 7A. of glebe, and a yearly rent charge of £200, awarded in 1840 in lieu of tithes. The Bishop of Norwich is patron, and the Rev. Thos. Dix B.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence. A late rector, the Rev. John Stewart, was author of several works which evince a fine poetical imagination and a pure devotional spirit, and obtained for the reverend author the name of the "Gessner of England." The National School was erected in 1835 by the late Miss Baret, at a cost of £800, including the teacher's house. John Cooke, Esq., of Thwaite Hall, has an estate here, and farms the whole parish, except 14A. in the occupation of Christopher Elden. John Sintern, parish clerk; Sarah Silence, schoolmistress; the Rev. Hy. Griffith, curate of Hanworth; and Geo. Bradford, shoemaker, also reside here. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

TUTTINGTON, a pleasant village and parish in a valley, 2 miles E. of Aylsham, has 202 inhabitants and 830 acres of land, partly in W. F. Windham, Esq.'s manor of Tuttington-with-Crackford (fines arbitrary), and partly in Geo. Copeman, Esq.'s manor of Aylsham Wood or Sextons (fines certain). Tuttington Hall is the property of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and is now held on lease by Thos. Hy. Case, Esq., of Hevingham, but is occupied by Henry Bidewell, Esq. Messrs. Wm. Postle, Benj. B. Bowles, Wm. Barnard Bowles, and R. M. Sutton, and others have estates here. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) is a neat edifice with nave, chancel, south porch, and round tower and one bell. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 0s. 7d., was augmented from 1769 to 1796 with £600 of Q.A.B., vested in 15A. of land at Halvergate; besides which the vicar has 15A. 3R. of glebe allotted at the enclosure in 1817, and a yearly rent-charge of £105, awarded in 1841 in lieu of the small tithes. The Bishop of Norwich is patron and the Rev. Samuel Hobson, LL.B., of Marsham, incumbent. The great tithes belong to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. In 1214, here was a Chapel dedicated to St. Botolph, but no vestiges of it are now extant. The Wesleyan Chapel was built and endowed in 1859 by Mr. R. M. Sutton. The chief residents are—Rev. John Postle, B.A., rector of Felmingham; Henry Bidewell, Esq., Hall; Wm. Miller, blacksmith; Wm. Spinks, parish clerk; John Lambert, shoemaker; Thos. Dyke, shopkeeper; Samuel Beck, vict., Ship; Jas. Grimes, grocer and farmer; and Benj. Brettingham Bowles, John Hall, Richard Merrison Sutton, and George Neave, farmers. Post from Norwich, via Hevingham.

WICKMERE, 5 miles N. by W. of Aylsham, has in its parish 268 inhabitants, and 975 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Earl of Orford, the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £9, and is consolidated with that of Wolterton. The Church is a small building, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, south porch, and round embattled tower with one bell. It was repaired and partly re-seated in 1856. The sedilia and piscina still remain in the chancel, and near them is an ancient monument with three kneeling figures but no inscription. There is another piscina in the north aisle. The Rectory House is situated in this parish, and was erected in 1856. The School was built in 1862 by the Earl of Orford. It is supported by the rector and attended by 40 children. George Gunton, Esq., of Aylsham, owns and occupies a farm here; and the chief residents are—The Rev. Robt. William Beauchamp, M.A., Rectory; Samuel Cubitt, Joshua Hook, and Elijah Sharpin, farmers; Robt. Hall, blacksmith; and John Davison and Stephen Lambert, shoemakers. Post from Norwich, via Hanworth.

WOLTERTON parish, 4 miles N.N.W. of Aylsham, and 9 miles S.S.W. of Cromer, has only 48 inhabitants and 722 acres of land, nearly all comprised in the beautiful park of Wolterton Hall, the now deserted seat of the Earl of Orford (see page 682), who is lord of the manor and owner of all the soil. The ancient family of Walpole derives its name from Walpole St. Peter, in Marshland, where its progenitors were settled even before the Norman conquest. The title of Earl of Orford, which had been granted to the celebrated Sir Robert Walpole, of Houghton, in 1742, became extinct in 1797, on the death of Horatio, the third earl of his family; but was revived in 1806, in the person of his cousin, Horatio, second Baron Walpole, of Wolterton, whose father (the first baron) purchased this estate about 1725. The old Hall being burnt down, he commenced the present mansion in 1727, and finished it in 1741, under the direction of Ripley, the architect. It is nearly a square pile, three sides of which have views on the park and pleasure grounds. The building is of brick, with quoins, cornices, door and window frames, chimneys, &c., of Portland stone. The interior has many spacious apartments, but the elegant furniture, valuable paintings, and fine Gobelin tapestry with which they were formerly adorned were sold by auction in 1859, together with the extensive library; and the present earl has removed to Mannington Hall, which he has recently considerably enlarged. The park is of great extent, and thickly studded with beech and oak trees, planted by the first Lord Walpole. On the south side of the hall is a bold terrace with a parapet surmounted by urns, adjacent to which is a beautiful garden, laid out under the direction of Mr. Gilpin, and sloping to the margin of an extensive lake, the opposite banks of which are richly clothed with wood—the whole forming, with the distant view of Blickling, one of the most striking pieces of park scenery in the county. The venerable ruins of the parish Church (St. Margaret) stand on the north side of the hall, embowered in lofty hollies. This building has long been deserted, and scarcely anything but the tower now remains. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8, is consolidated with that of Wickmere, in the patronage of the Earl of Orford and incumbency of the Rev. Robt. Wm. Beauchamp, M.A., who has a good residence and 36A. 2R. 14P. of glebe in Wickmere, and a yearly rent-charge of £564, awarded in 1840 in lieu of the tithes of the two parishes. In 1682, James Scambler charged his estates with several yearly payments to the under-mentioned parishes. His nephew, James Grey, in 1718, left Hickling Priory Farm (40 acres) charged with these payments, and directed that the remainder of the yearly rents thereof should be divided among the poor of Wolterton at Christmas. By an indenture, improperly agreed to by the trustees in 1802, Lord Walpole obtained a settlement of the farm, subject only to the yearly payments of £6. 2s. to Wolterton, £8. 1s. 8d. to Briston, £5. 10s. 2d. to Happisburgh, and £2. 14s. to Hickling, for the ministers, the poor, and the clerks of those parishes. Of the sum paid to Wolterton, £4 are for an anniversary sermon, 6s. for the clerk, and £1. 16s. for the poor. The chief residents are—Thos. Archer Walker, steward to the earl; Wm. Gay and Golden Cubitt, farmers; John Blyth, gamekeeper; and Geo. Peart, gardener. Post from Norwich, via Aylsham.

EYNESFORD HUNDRED

Is of an irregular oblong figure, 12 miles in length from north to south, and about seven miles in breadth; bounded on the south by Forehoe and Mitford; on the west, by Launditch and Gallow; on the north, by Holt Hundred; and on the east, by South Erpingham and Taverham Hundreds. The soil is in general a fertile loam, with substrata of chalk and marl, and a large portion of it lies in the vale of the river Wensum, which forms the western boundary from Guist to Bylaugh, from whence it crosses the hundred by a circuitous channel to Attlebridge, where it again turns to the south, and forms the western border as far as Ringland, flowing from thence in an easterly direction to Norwich. This river, in several places, expands into a broad stream, and the tides are said to have anciently flowed up as far as Billington. Several smaller streams also contribute to the beauty and fertility of this hundred, which comprises 30 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, showing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the county rate in 1843, and their territorial extent:—

* + UNIONS.—The ten parishes marked thus + are in Mitford and Launditch Union; the nine marked thus * are in St. Faith's Union; and the other 11 are in Aylsham Union. Before the formation of these Unions there was an incorporated Workhouse at Bawdeswell for seven parishes, and another at Reepham for four parishes.

§ Hackford, Kerdiston, and Whitwell comprise the chief part of the market town of REEPHAM, where there are two churches in one churchyard, for the four parishes.

⚖ PETTY SESSIONS for this Hundred are held every alternate Monday, at the Police Station, Reepham, and Fras. Saml. Bircham, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates.

ALDERFORD, on a declivity 3 miles S. by E. of Reepham, is a small parish of only 29 inhabitants and 432A. 1R. 19P. of land, in the manor of Swannington, and mostly the property of C. K. Tompson, Esq. The Church (St. John the Baptist) is a small ancient building, comprising nave, chancel, porch, and square tower with one bell. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 6s. 8d., and now at £219, with the vicarage of Attlebridge annexed, is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. Campbell Wodehouse, M.A., who has a good Rectory House. The tithes of this parish have been commuted for £149. 9s. per annum. The chief residents are—The Rector; Philip Leamon, farmer; Thos. Lynn, victualler, Bell; George Gedge, gamekeeper; and Robert Newstead, parish clerk. Post Office at the Bell. Letters desp., via Norwich, at 5 p.m.

BAWDESWELL, a neat village on the Norwich and Fakenham road, 3 miles S.E. of Foulsham, and 4 miles W. by S. of Reepham, has in its parish 515 inhabitants and 1196 acres. The Rev. Henry Evans Lombe is lord of the manor, but a great part of the soil belongs to Clarke Stoughton, Esq., Miss Leeds, and some smaller owners. Mr. Stoughton resides at the Hall, a red brick mansion of Elizabethan architecture, built in 1633, and recently restored. The ancient Church (All Saints), of which the nave was destroyed by the fall of the steeple in 1739, was taken down in 1844, and rebuilt by subscription. It is a small cruciform structure of flint, with 317 sittings, but no tower. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7, is in the gift of the Rev. H. E. Lombe, and incumbency of the Rev. Ferdinand Alfred Pynsent, who has a neat brick residence, built in 1857, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £330. 14s. 4d. The Free School was founded in 1728, for 12 poor boys of this parish and 8 of Foxley, by John Leeds, Esq., who endowed it with a house and 16A. 1R. 14P. of land, now let for £42. 10s. a year. It is conducted as a National School, for about 70 children, and is held in the building which was erected in 1781 as a Workhouse for the parishes of Bawdeswell, Billingford, Bintree, Bylaugh, Foxley, Lyng, and Sparham, which are now in Mitford and Launditch Union. At the enclosure of Bawdeswell, in 1808, two acres were allotted as a gravel pit and 35A. to the poor, who have also 20s. a year, left by Wm. Dewing, in 1719. The Primitive Methodists and the Wesleyan Reformers have each a chapel here.

BILLINGFORD, a village and parish on the east side of the vale of the Wensum, 1½ mile E. of Elmham station, and 6 miles W. by S. of Reepham, has 354 inhabitants and 1820A. of land. The Earl of Leicester owns most of the soil, and is lord of the manor and patron of the living, which is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 10s., and now having 27A. 2R. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £365. 10s., awarded in 1840 in lieu of tithes. The Rev. Chas. John Dashwood, M.A., is the rector, and has a good residence. The Church (St. Peter) comprises nave with aisles, chancel, porch, and octagonal tower with one bell. A School was built here by subscription n 1844. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel in the village. Beck Hall, a moated house, which gives name to a large farm extending into the parishes of Bylaugh and Foxley, stands on the site of a hospital for poor travellers, founded by Wm. de Beck, at an early period. Bedlam House, which gives name to another farm, was built about 40 years ago on the site of a tumulus, in which were found a Roman urn, and a variety of petrified shells and other fossils. The Fuel Allotment, awarded under an act of the 46th Geo. III., is 50A., the rent of which is distributed in coals amongst the poor, who have also the interest of £5 left by Mr. Ruggs.

BINTREE, or BINTRY, on an eminence, 6 miles W. by N. of Reepham, is a village and parish, containing 406 inhabitants and 1455A. 28P. of land, mostly the property of Lady J. Townshend (who has a neat residence here called Yarrow House), Lord Hastings, Mr. John Groom, and the Earl of Leicester. The latter is lord of the manor, which was purchased by Lord Chief Justice Coke, in 1608, for £625. The Church (St. Swithin) comprises nave, chancel, south aisle, south transept, south porch, and square tower with three bells. It is of considerable antiquity, except the chancel, which was rebuilt in 1806. The holy-water stoup remains in the porch, and here is a fine mural monument to Lord James Townshend. The building is in a dilapidated state, and needs judicious restoration. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, has 11A. of glebe, and a yearly rent charge of £415. 12s. 4d., awarded 1844 in lieu of tithes. It is united with that of Themelthorpe (£131 per annum and 19A. of glebe), in the gift of Lord Hastings and incumbency of the Rev. Saml. Fras. Wingfield Clark Homfray, M.A., who has a small Rectory House near the church. The Fuel Allotment, 16A. 39P., awarded at the enclosure in 1797, is let for £35. 5s. a year, which is distributed in coals. The Town Lands, which had been long vested in trust for the church and poor, were exchanged at the enclosure for 19A. 2R. 38P., let for £30 a year, and a house occupied rent-free by poor families. A legacy of £10, left to the poor by Thomas Lynn, was laid out in building a coal shed.

BRANDISTON and GUTON form a small parish, 3 miles E.S.E. of Reepham, and 5 miles S.W. by W. of Aylsham, containing 181 inhabitants, and 764 acres of land, mostly the property of the Rev. William Atthill, M.A., whose family has been seated for more than two centuries at Brandiston Hall, which has a manor attached to it, and contains a number of good family portraits and some rare specimens of carved oak, including a very handsome bedstead, a chimney-piece, several chairs, &c. Guton Hall (now occupied by the rector) is also the property of Mr. Atthill, but the manor to which it gives name belongs to Magdalen College, Oxford. Edward Fellowes, Esq., the Rev. H. E. Lombe, and Hastings Elwin, Esq., have small estates in the parish. Brandiston Church (St. Nicholas) comprises nave, chancel, porch, and short round tower with one bell. It was thoroughly restored about 20 years since, and in its windows are some ancient specimens of stained glass. Another church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is supposed to have stood in the same graveyard. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 12s. 8½d., and now having 11A. of glebe, and a yearly rent charge of £243. 10s., awarded in 1841, in lieu of tithes. The patronage is in Magdalen College, Oxford, and the Rev. John McMahon Wilder, B.D., is the rector. In the 9th of Elizabeth, Wm. Gurney left for the benefit of the poor parishioners, 20A. 3R. 31P. of land, now let for £33 per annum. In 1853, four almshouses were built with savings of income of this charity, and are let rent free to poor people. The chief residents are—The Rev. Wm. Atthill, M.A., rector of Durleigh, Somerset, Brandiston Hall; Rev. J. M. Wilder, B.D., rector of Brandiston, Guton Hall; John Shepherd Colk, farmer; and Stephen Pigg, parish clerk. Post from Norwich, via Alderford.

BYLAUGH is a picturesque parish, on the north bank of the Wensum, 6 miles N.E. of East Dereham, containing only 82 inhabitants, and 1546A. 2R. 19P. of land, mostly in two farms, belonging to the Rev. Henry Evans Lombe, who is lord of the manor, impropiator of the tithes, and patron of the living. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a small building, having a round tower with hexagonal belfry, and was thoroughly repaired in 1810, when the chancel was rebuilt and transepts were added by the late Sir John Lombe. It contains monuments of the Corbet, Bendysh, and Lombe families. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued at £75, and augmented in 1771-'2, with £200 of Q.A.B., and £200 given by the Dowager Countess Gower. With this £400, 53A. of land were purchased. The Rev. L. A. Norgate, B.A., of Foxley, is the incumbent. The tithes have been commuted for £208 a year, of which only £12 are paid to the rector. On the north side of the parish is a large plantation, &c., forming part of the Earl of Leicester's estate of Beck Hall. (See page 692.) The chief residents are—The Rev. Hy. Evans Lombe, Hall; Joseph Taylor, farmer and miller; Stephen Warnes, farmer; Wm. Darby, carpenter; Wm. Howard, gamekeeper; and Wm. Ashwell, gardener. Post from Thetford, via Dereham.

ELSING, a long straggling village on the south side of the vale of the Wensum, 5 miles E.N.E. of East Dereham, has in its parish 392 inhabitants, and 1511 acres of land, mostly the property of Richard Charles Browne, Esq. and the Rev. Hy. E. Lombe, the former of whom is lord of the manor and patron of the living. He resides at the Hall, an ancient moated mansion, which has been for several centuries the residence of a family connected with many celebrated houses. It was the property of the Foliot, until Sir Richard Foliot's daughter, Margery, married Sir Hugh Hastings, commander of the army of Edward III. in Flanders; and it was the residence of the Hastings family until it passed by the marriage of Anne, eldest daughter and co-heiress of Sir Hugh Hastings, to William Browne, shortly before the year 1554. The house appears to have been originally erected in the 13th century, as the foundations and some fragments built into the walls are evidently of that date; but it was probably rebuilt or considerably altered about 1550. During the last two centuries it has suffered much from alterations and destruction, though it still retains some features of considerable interest. The Church (St. Peter) was built about the year 1340, and is a small building of pure decorated architecture, comprising nave, chancel, north chapel or sacristy, north and south porches, and square tower with five bells. The chancel has been recently restored.

The large east window is of five lights, and has some fine ancient stained glass with figures of Sir Hugh Hastings and his wife as founders of the church. Several other windows contain fragments of coloured glass of the same date; and in the south wall of the chancel are plain sedilia and piscina. The remains of the once-splendid brass of Sir Hugh Hastings, who was buried here in 1347, still lie on the pavement of the chancel. The knight is represented in a mixed armour of mail and plate, with a loosely hanging jupon and sword-belt, a straight two-edged sword, and a shield. The head rests on a diapered cushion supported by angels, but the legs are gone. The canopy in which the figure is placed is of beautiful design and execution. Its sides were each composed of four canopied niches containing armed figures, several of which are lost; and the upper part has a figure of St. George and the Dragon in the foliated centre, and two figures on brackets representing the coronation of the Virgin Mary. The finial is formed by the crest of a tilting helmet. At the upper corners were angels (one only remaining) with censers, attending the soul of the deceased conveyed upwards in a sheet, which appears in the central cusp of the arch. Beneath the altar is a large slab, with marginal inscription in early characters and the indents of two shields in brass, supposed to be in memory of a former rector. The original font still remains, and its beautiful wooden cover is the earliest known to exist in England, and probably the only one of the decorated period. It is of simple yet elegant design, but its pinnacles are now much mutilated. A few years ago, a series of paintings was discovered on the south east wall of the church, apparently representing events in the life of St. John the Baptist. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 11s. 8d., is in the incumbency of the Rev. Julius John Culpepper Valpy, B.A., who has a good residence, and a yearly rent-charge of £330, awarded in 1841, in lieu of tithes. The Church Lands, which have been vested in trust since before 1560, consist of 24 acres, now let for £31. 12s., which is applied towards the repairs of the church. For distributions of money and bread, the poor parishioners have, or ought to have, the following yearly doles, viz., 10s. out of the church land, left by John Leman; £1. 15s. from land left by John Starling; 21s. from land enclosed from the waste; and £9. 16s. 8d. from £327. 17s. 4d. three per cent. consols, left by Thos. Ward, in 1806. Here is a small Primitive Methodist Chapel. The large corn mill in this parish, is occupied by Mr. Joseph Taylor, of Bylaugh. Post from Thetford, via East Dereham.

FOULSHAM is a small but well-built town, pleasantly situated 8 miles S.E. of Fakenham, 5 miles W.N.W. of Reepham, and 18 miles N.W. of Norwich, comprehending in its parish 1022 inhabitants, and 3226 acres of land, a large portion of which was in Themelthorpe common, enclosed in 1811. Lord Hastings is principal owner of the soil and lord of the manor; but about 600A., with Foulsham Hall, an old farm-house in the Elizabethan style, belong to G. A. Aufriere, Esq. Keeling Hall, one mile to the east, is the property of C. M. Tatham, Esq.; and the Rev. Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart., the Rev. H. E. Lombe, W. E. L. Bulwer, Esq., and Messrs. Robt. Woods and Robt. John Purdy have estates here. In Domesday Book, Foulsham is described as royal demesne, being one of the lordships of which Edward the Confessor died possessed. It continued to form part of the domains of the Crown till Richard I. granted it, with many other estates, to Baldwin de Betune, Earl of Albemarle and Holderness, whose daughter Alice carried it in marriage to William Marshal, Earl of Pembroke, with whose family it remained till the 10th of Edward II., when it passed by marriage to the Morleys. It was purchased in 1582 by Sir Thos. Hunt, Kt., whose grandson sold it to Sir Jacob Astley, Bart., an ancestor of Lord Hastings. The Market, formerly held here every Tuesday, has long been obsolete; but a Fair, for the sale of stock, &c., is still continued on the first Tuesday in May. The town suffered greatly by a Fire in 1770, which consumed 14 dwelling-houses, and reduced the church to a ruinous shell. The damage amounted to several thousand pounds, but a collection was made and a play performed at Norwich for the benefit of the sufferers. There was a church here at the time of the Domesday survey, but its site is unknown. The present Church (Holy Innocents) was probably founded by Sir Robert Morley about the middle of the 14th century, as the lower windows of the chancel, the porch and other portions are of the decorated style which prevailed at that period; but the greater part of the building is of late-perpendicular architecture, and appears to have been built by one of the Lords Morley about 1489, and restored to its original form after the great fire in 1770. It is a large and handsome edifice, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and lofty square embattled tower. The latter, which is of four stages, contains two bells, is ornamented with flintwork, and has diagonal buttresses at each corner, terminated by crocketed pinnacles. The porch is now used as a vestry, and before the fire had a parvise, which had served as a school-room from time immemorial. There is a clerestory over both the nave and chancel, lighted by numerous large windows, which, like those of the aisles, have nearly flat arches. The nave has a plastered wagon-headed ceiling, but the roof of the chancel is of high pitch. Several of the windows contain fragments of ancient stained glass. The interior of the building was restored and refitted with open seats in 1859. The sedilia and piscina remain on the south side of the chancel, and opposite to them, over the small north door is a monument to Sir Thomas Hunt, who died in 1616, and is represented in armour with his three wives kneeling behind him. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £27. 14s. 9½d., has 22A. 3R. 15P. of glebe, and a yearly rent charge of £780, awarded in 1840 in lieu of tithes. Lord Hastings is patron, and the Rev. James Waller Bird, B.A., who has a spacious residence, which was considerably enlarged and improved in 1862, is the incumbent. A National School for this and the neighbouring parishes was built in 1838 on land given by Colonel Packe, and is now attended by 120 children, and supported by subscription. The Baptists have a plain brick chapel here, built in 1826. The poor have 9A. of land at Guestwick, left by Richard Fenn in 1563; 6A. 3R. 14P. in this parish, left by Henry Semicroft in 1693; and 5A. 3R. 38P. allotted at the enclosure. The rents of these lands, amounting to £49. 10s. per annum, are distributed at Christmas and Easter among the poor of the parish, whether resident or not. To provide gowns, &c., for poor widows and other poor women of Foulsham, John Chapman, in 1661, left 10A. 2R. 6P. of land, now let for £20 a year. The Church Lands comprise 4A. at Sandhills; two allotments, containing 1A. 20P.; and about 3A. in four pieces; the whole producing a yearly rent of about £15. In October, 1846, a large solid gold torques, weighing 5½ ounces, and measuring 42 inches in length, was turned up by the plough on Bittering Common, in this parish, and is now in the possession of Lord Hastings.

FOXLEY, a pleasant village 3 miles E. of North Elmham, and 5 miles W. of Reepham, has in its parish 278 inhabitants, and 1620 acres of land, all the property of the Rev. Hy. Evans Lombe, of Bylaugh, except 290A. of wood in the Earl of Leicester's Beck Hall estate, and 274A. belonging to several small proprietors. The Church (St. Thomas) comprises nave, chancel, porch, and fine square tower with six bells, and is of perpendicular architecture, except the chancel, which is early English. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., has 21A. 1r. 26p. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £410, awarded in lieu of tithes. The Rev. H. E. Lombe, the lord of the manor, is patron, and the Rev. Louis Augustus Norgate, B.A., is the incumbent, and in 1842 erected a commodious Rectory House. At the enclosure, in 1814, two acres were set apart as a clay-pit for the parishioners, who participate in the Free School at Bawdeswell; and here is a National School, built in 1858, and attended by about 50 children. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel in the parish. The chief residents are—The Rev. L. A. Norgate, B.A., rector of Foxley, incumbent of Bylaugh, and rural dean of Sparham, Rectory; Wm. Howe, blacksmith and vict., Hare and Hounds; Hy. Purdy, carpenter and vict., Chequers; Chas. Jph. Woodhouse, parish clerk; Jonathan Woodhouse, wheelwright; John Meal, grocer and farmer; and Reginald Sparling Norgate, John Pegg (Manor House), Hy. Holl, Isaac Lewell, Edw. Phillippo, Geo. Fox, and Edw. Wright, farmers. Thos. Merri-son, of Worthing, occupies the corn mill. Post from Thetford, via Elmham. Here is a pillar letter box, which is cleared at 3 p.m.

GUESTWICK, a scattered village and parish, 5 miles N.W. of Reepham, has 203 inhabitants, and 1646A. W. E. L. Bulwer, Esq., owns most of the soil, and is lord of the manor, impropiator of the great tithes, and patron of the Church (St. Peter), which was appropriated to Waltham Abbey by Everard de Geiste, and comprises nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and tower. The latter stands at the east end of the north aisle, and its upper part is of brick. The building was reroofed and reseatad about ten years ago, when the small west window was filled with stained glass by the patron. Here are several mural tablets of the Bulwers. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 10s., and now at £75, has 18A. of glebe, and was augmented with £200 of Q.A.B., in 1809. It is in the incumbency of the Rev. Richard Gilbert, M.A., who has a small brick residence. The executors of the late Baron Alderson, Mrs. Heath, Daniel Twiss, Esq., and a few others have estates in the parish. Here is a large Independent Chapel, founded in 1652, but rebuilt in 1809, and repaired and partly rebuilt in the Tudor style in 1840. The minister's house was erected in 1721, and attached to it are 17A. of land. The poor have 20s. a year out of 3A., left by Wm. Bulwer, in 1678. Wm. Godwin, author of "Caleb Williams," and other works, was born here, and was the son of a late Independent minister. The National School, with teacher's residence attached, was built by the lord of the manor about fourteen years ago, and is supported by subscription. Post from Thetford, via Foulsham.

GUIST, or Geiste, 2 miles W. of Foulsham, 6 miles S.E. of Fakenham, and 3 miles N. of Elmham railway station, is a pleasant scattered village, on the northern acclivity of the vale of the Wensum. Its parish has 361 inhabitants, and about 1674 acres of land, mostly the property of William Norris, Esq., lord of the manor and impropiator of the great tithes. The Church (St. Andrew) contains several neat monuments of the Norris, Wiggett, Bulwer, and other families, and a very antique font. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 15s. 5d., and in 1831 at £160, was augmented, from 1745 to 1794, with £600 of Q.A.B., laid out in 38A. of land, at Elmham and Sprowston. It was consolidated with the rectory of Twyford, in 1860, and is in the alternate patronage of W. Norris, Esq., and the Rev. J. N. Spurgeon, B.A., the latter of whom is also the incumbent, and resides at Twyford. The Poor's Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1813, consists of 30A., of which 6A. are divided into 20 garden plots, let at rents amounting to £36, and the remainder is used by the poor for cutting fuel. On the garden plot are 11 cottages, the rents of which are distributed in coals. There are also two houses, divided into nine or ten tenements, and about 2½A. of land held by the overseers, who also receive £5. 5s. from 8A. of land, enclosed from the waste about 1785. The church and poor have a yearly rent-charge of 20s., left by Robert Wicks, in 1569.

HAVERINGLAND, 9 miles N.W. by N. of Norwich, and 3½ miles S.E. of Reepham, has in its parish 131 inhabitants, and 2062 acres of land, belonging to Edward Fellowes, Esq., M.P., who married the Hon. Mary Julia Milles, daughter of Lord Sondes, and about 20 years ago erected a splendid new HALL, in the Grecian style, on the eastern side of the extensive and well-wooded Park, about half a mile from the old Hall, which had long been the seat of his family. This elegant mansion is now one of the finest seats in Norfolk, and is a square building of Bath stone, with a handsome tower at the north-east angle. The pleasure grounds are tastefully laid out, and have spacious conservatories, hot-houses, &c. In front of the house is a fine sheet of water covering 17 acres. The museum, on the east side of the hall, contains a fine collection of fossils, shells, birds, and curiosities, arranged by the Hon. Mrs. Fellowes, who in 1848 built here a neat School, which she still supports. The present spirited proprietor of the parish has greatly improved his estate and added to the comfort of the labourers, by pulling down all the old thatched houses and building a number of model cottages, each of which contains three bedrooms, has a quarter of an acre of land attached, and is let for £3 a year. He also rebuilt the Church (St. Peter) in 1858, except the ancient round tower, which is still retained. This beautiful church comprises nave, chancel, transepts, and south porch; all its windows are filled with rich stained glass, the floor is paved with encaustic tiles, and the pulpit, reading desk, open seats, and other fittings, are of fine oak. The perpetual curacy, augmented with £400 of Q.A.B., in 1755 and 1809, and now valued at £63, is in the patronage of Mr. Fellowes, and incumbency of the Rev. Chas. Russell Cooke, M.A. Near the village was De Monte Jovis Priory, founded in the reign of John, by Wm. de Gisneto, for Austin Canons, and granted at the dissolution to Wm. Halse. On the north side of the parish is the lofty shaft of an ancient cross. The chief residents are—Edw. Fellowes, Esq., M.P., and the Hon. Mrs. Fellowes, Haveringland Hall (and Ramsey Abbey, Hunts.); Rev. Chas. Russell Cooke, M.A., incumbent; Dennis Wells, land agent; John Gray, dealer and victualler, King's Head; Amy Cousins, schoolmistress; Thos. Nash, corn miller, Water Mill; Thos. Blythe, wheelwright; Edw. Hobday, gardener; Jas. Savage, gamekeeper; and Wm. Muskett (Abbey farm), Mary Dixon (Manor House), and Eliza Tallent, farmers. Post from Norwich.

HINDOLVESTON, vulgarly called Hilderston, is a large village, 8 miles E. of Fakenham, and 7 miles N.W. of Reepham; and has in its parish 705 inhabitants, and 2487A. of land, chiefly belonging to Lord Hastings, who is lord of the manor (in which the fines are certain), impropiator of the great tithes, and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 1s., and augmented in 1810, with £1200 in parliamentary grants, laid out in the purchase of 28 acres of land at Saxlingham; besides which, here are 8 acres of glebe. The Rev. Arthur Gifford Durnford, M.A., who has a good residence, is the incumbent. The great tithes have been commuted for £434 per annum, but the vicar has only a yearly modus of £50. The Church (St. George) has nave, chancel, porch, and square tower with one bell. The National School, built about 14 years ago, is attended by nearly 60 children. The Independents and the Wesleyans have each a chapel here. The Poor's Allotments, awarded at the enclosure in 1812, comprise 24A. 3R. 31P.; and the Workhouse Land, enclosed from the waste, under Gilbert's Act, comprises 12A. 1R. 35P. These lands are let for about £41 a year, which is mostly applied with the poor rates. The sum of £35, left by John and Beatrice Bulleye, in 1586 and 1621, for the church and poor, was laid out in the purchase of 4A. of land, now let for £9, of which £2. 10s. are distributed among the poor, and the residue is applied in the service of the church. The poor have also a yearly rent-charge of £2. 13s. 4d., left by Sir Thomas Hunt, in 1615, out of land in Kent street, London. At the Chequers Inn is a lodge of Oddfellows, to which a widows' and orphans' fund is attached.

LYNG, a village on the south side of the river Wensum, 6 miles N.E. by E. of East Dereham, and 5 miles S.W. of Reepham, has in its parish a large corn and paper mill, 1899A. 2R. 22P. of fertile land, and 590 inhabitants, of whom about 80 are in EASTHAUGH, a small hamlet on an eminence, one mile S. of the village. The Rev. H. E. Lombe is lord of the manor, in which the fines are arbitrary; but a great part of the soil belongs to Lieut.-Col. Custance, and Messrs. Wm. Cadywold and Edward Wright. In the 17th of Edward III., Sir John de Norwich had license to make a castle of the manor-house, some traces of which are still extant on the crown of an acclivity west of the village. A fair is held here on Nov. 20th, for stock and pleasure. The Church (St. Michael) has a tower and six bells, and was thoroughly restored and reseated about four years ago. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £11. 0s. 6d., and now at £528, has 58A. 3R. 5P. of glebe. The Rev. H. E. Lombe is patron, and the Rev. Wm. Millett, B.A., incumbent. At the enclosure, in 1808, 16A. 1R. 9P. were awarded to the poor for fuel. In 1618, Solomon Leech left yearly rent-charges of £2. 12s. for the poor, 10s. for a sermon, and 1s. 4d. for repairing the bell ropes. The poor have also yearly doles of 20s., left by John Starling, in 1728; and 5s., left by the Rev. Thomas Roberts. REEPHAM is a small Market Town, on a rising ground watered by a small brook, 12 miles N.W. of Norwich, and 112 miles N.E. by N. of London. It extends into four parishes, which contain together 1801 inhabitants, of whom 346 are in Reepham St. Mary, 207 in Kerdiston, 761 in Hackford, and 487 in Whitwell. The first two maintain their poor conjointly, and the others separately. They are all in the Aylsham Union. (See page 661.) The spacious market place is all in Hackford parish, and in the churchyard are two Churches,—one for Reepham and Kerdiston, and the other for Whitwell and Hackford, the latter of which had anciently a separate church in the same burial ground, but it was burnt down with part of the town in 1500. The country around Reepham is celebrated for the growth of barley, and a considerable trade in malting and brewing has been carried on in the town by the Bircham family for more than a century. In Kerdiston are extensive brick and tile works, where excellent red and white bricks, tiles, drain pipes, and chimney tops are manufactured. A weekly Market for corn, swine, &c., is held at the King's Arms Inn every Wednesday afternoon at 4; and a stock Fair on the 29th of June. Under a charter obtained by Sir John de Vaux, in the 5th of Edward I., the market was formerly held on Saturday, and the fair on the eve, day, and morrow of St. Peter and St. Paul. The town was anciently called Refham, and gave that name to a resident family, one of whom was lord mayor of London in 1310. The united parishes of Reepham and Kerdiston contain 2250 acres of land, of which 570 acres are in Reepham, and 1680 in Kerdiston. The Rev. Sir Edward Repps Jodrell, Bart., is lord of the manors, and owner of a considerable portion of the soil, and R. B. Humfrey, Wm. Bircham, J. P. Leeds, Wm. B. Park, John Collyer, and T. F. Eglington, Esqrs., Miss Anne Atthill, and some smaller proprietors have estates here.

The CHURCH of Reepham St. Mary, with Kerdiston, stands at the north-east corner of the churchyard, and is a neat edifice, with nave, aisles, chancel, and square tower with two bells. In the chancel is a marble flagstone with a fine brass, representing Wm. de Kerdistone and his lady; and under an arched monument lies the recumbent effigy of a Knight Templar of the Kerdistone family with his hands and legs crossed and a lion at his feet, and round the base of the tomb are effigies of six boys and four girls. Both these tombs were erected about 1391. In 1863, Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart., presented new and beautiful cushions and covers of crimson velvet for the pulpit, reading-desk, and communion table. The benefice is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £18. 1s., and now at £700. It is in the patronage of Trinity College, Cambridge, and has 60 acres of glebe, and a good brick residence. A new cemetery for this parish was formed nearly seven years ago, and comprises about half an acre of land on the Norwich road, given by Mr. W. B. Parke. St. Mary's National School, a neat brick building in the Elizabethan style, on the Booton road, was built in 1847, and is attended by 60 children. Whitwell Church (St. Michael), which serves also for Hackford, stands west of the above, in the same burial-ground, and comprises nave, chancel, south transept, south porch, and tower with six bells and a clock. It has a high-pitched oak roof, and in the chancel are sedilia for three priests. The living is a vicarage, consolidated with Hackford rectory, the former valued in K.B. at £7. 12s. 4d., and the latter at £14. 10s. 4d. J. H. Holley, Esq., is the patron, and the Rev. Edw. Hunt Holley, M.A., is the incumbent. The joint benefices are now valued at £537 per annum. The tithes of Hackford were commuted in 1839 for £310 per annum, and the vicarial tithes of Whitwell in 1844 for £200 per annum. The Dean and Chapter of Norwich are appropriators of the great tithes of Whitwell, now held on lease by John Collyer and Robert Leamon, Esqrs. A new cemetery for Hackford and Whitwell was formed in 1856 on the Sparham road, and occupies 1½ a. of land, of which 1 a. is consecrated. St. Michael's National School is a spacious red brick building near the church, and was erected in 1860 at a cost of £500. It is attended by 170 children, and occasionally used for concerts, lectures, penny readings, &c. There was anciently a chapel dedicated to St. Mary, in Kerdiston, upon a hill still called the Chapel Close, but no vestiges of it now remain. The Primitive Methodists, Wesleyans, and Reformed Methodists have each a chapel in Hackford.

The POLICE STATION on the Dereham road is a spacious red brick building with two cells, a magistrates' room, and apartments for two constables. The Petty Sessions are held here every alternate Monday, and Fras. Saml. Bircham, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. There is a good Reading Room and Library in Hackford, established in 1864. The annual meeting of the Eynesford Association for encouraging industrious habits amongst servants, cottagers, and labourers, is held here in October. Richard Westall, R.A., the celebrated painter and engraver, was a native of Reepham. The Church Land of Reepham and Kerdiston, awarded at the enclosure in 1646, is 13 a. 3 r. 8 p., let for £14. The Poor's Land, belonging to the two parishes, is 4 a. 2 p., let for £14. Part of it was given by Thomas Neale in 1629, and the rest was purchased in 1617 with £30, given by unknown donors.

HACKFORD PARISH contains Reepham market place, 761 inhabitants, and 816 a. 0 r. 34 p. of land, belonging to a number of proprietors, the largest of whom is John Collyer, Esq., Judge of the Cambridgeshire County Courts, who resides at Hackford Hall, a neat white mansion in a pleasant lawn, with thriving plantations, 1½ mile W. of the town. The Ollands, a handsome Gothic residence with embattled towers and turrets and tasteful pleasure grounds, stands on a declivity north of the church, and was erected in 1830. It is the seat of Wm. Bircham, Esq. Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart., and R. B. Humfrey, Esq., have also estates here; and W. H. Scott, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WHITWELL PARISH forms the south-east division of Reepham, and contains 487 inhabitants and 1511 acres of land. John Collyer, Esq., owns a considerable portion of the soil, and is lord of the manor (fines arbitrary), which was anciently held by the families of Gyney and Ross, and afterwards by those of Messenger and Monsey. The eminent physician, Dr Messenger Monsey, left his estates at Hackford and Whitwell to his granddaughter, the wife of the late Archdeacon Collyer, and mother of the present owner Robert Leamon and Stephen Leeds, Esqrs., have estates and neat houses, and also own two extensive tanneries in the parish. Whitwell common comprises 50 acres, and was left open for the use of the parishioners at the enclosure. In 1844 the rectorial tithes were commuted for £367, and the vicarial tithes for £200 per annum. The poor of Hackford and Whitwell have 9A. 3R. 8P., purchased with £100, left by Thomas Bulwer in 1693; 5A. 3R., in Bawdeswell, left by Robert Philnpot, in 1672; 12 acres given by an unknown donor, and 6s. 8d. yearly in respect of half an acre in New Close, the donor of which is also unknown. The income derived from these sources amounts to £32. 11s. 8d., and is distributed on St. Thomas's day amongst poor aged widows, except 40s. given to poor communicants on four sacrament days, 10s. to the trustees, 18s. for land tax, and 6d. for quit-rent. The interest of £100, left by Sir R. P. Jodrell, Bart., in 1861, and invested in the three per cents., is distributed to the poor of Reepham in blankets.

RINGLAND, on the west bank of the Wensum, 7 miles N.W. of Norwich, has in its parish 360 inhabitants and 1210A. 2R. 22P. of land, mostly the property of T. T. Berney, Esq., and several smaller owners, but Lord Stafford is lord of the manor, which was anciently held by the Le Neve family. The Church (St. Peter) is a handsome structure, with a tower and five bells, and a richly carved antique font. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £3. 6s., was augmented in 1780 with £200 of Q.A.B., which were laid out in 10A. of land. It has also 12A. 1R. 21P. of glebe, and the vicarial tithes were commuted, in 1840, for £106. 4s. 2d. per annum. The Bishop of Norwich is patron, and the Rev. Richard Brickdale, of Felthorpe, incumbent.
 The Bishop of Ely is appropriator of the great tithes, which are held on lease by John Allen, Esq. There are about 95 acres of common and waste land. The Methodists have a small chapel here, built in 1832. Mrs. Ann Le Neve, in 1718, left £200, to be laid out in land, for the support of a schoolmistress, to teach 20 or more poor children of Ringland to read and work. £50 were lost, and the remaining £150 were laid out in the purchase of 16A. of copyhold land, in Weston, now let for £27 a year. The Poor's Land, 3A., is let for £5 a year, which is (or ought to be) distributed
 1806, out of Dike Hill Meadow. In 1700, Fras. Le Neve charged his estate here with the yearly payment of £6, for apprenticing poor boys, but it has not been paid in the memory of any of the parishioners. The rent of a small meadow is applied to the repairs of the foot bridge, which here crosses the Wensum. Post from Norwich.

SALL, a small village and parish, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. of Reepham, has 241 inhabitants and 1802 acres of land. The Rev. Sir Edward Repps Jodrell, Bart., who succeeded his father in 1861, owns most of the soil, and resides at Sall House, a large red brick mansion, which was restored in 1862, and stands in an extensive and well-wooded park; but W. E. L. Bulwer, Esq., is lord of the manor of Sall-Rick House; W. H. Scott, Esq., is lord of the manor of Moor Hall; and J. C. Woodcock, Esq., G. Copeman, Esq., and others, have estates here. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) is a stately pile, in the cathedral form, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, transepts, chancel, two porches, and a lofty embattled tower at the west end, containing six bells and crowned by handsome crocketed pinnacles. There is a parvise or chamber over each porch, and in one of them the School was formerly held. The screen remains, but the painted figures with which its lower panels were once adorned are nearly obliterated. There is a fine piscina in the chancel and another in the south transept. Some of the windows contain fragments of stained glass, and the ancient carved seats are still preserved. The building was restored in 1860. Here is a fine brass, with a skeleton figure of John Brigge, dated 1454. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12. 19s. 7d., has 30A. of glebe and a yearly rent-charge of £568. 10s., awarded in 1841 in lieu of tithes. The patronage is in Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, and the Rev. Charles Earle Marsh, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence, built about seven years ago. The School was erected in 1864, by Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart., at a cost of £500. The income derived from the Church land (8A. 1A.) and a cottage is applied with the church rates, except yearly distributions of 20s. on St. John's day and 10s. in Lent, among the poor, in consideration of the bequests of Mary and Elizabeth Bell and a Mr. Sendal, the latter of whom died before 1650. In 1789 Amy Howard left the interest of £30, for distribution among the poor at Christmas. The stock purchased with this legacy yields £1. 4s. 6d. per annum. The poor have also the interest of £100, bequeathed by the late Sir R. P. Jodrell in 1861. The chief residents are—The Rev. Sir Edw. Repps Jodrell, Bart., Sall Park; Joseph Leeds, victualler, White Horse; Fredk. Austin, farmer, Sall-Rick-House; Thomas Ireland, farmer, Manor House; James and Barnabas Lemon Seely, farmers; John Hall, blacksmith; Susannah Neal, school; Jph. Powley, gardener; and John Glister, farm bailiff. Post from Norwich, via Reepham.

SPARHAM, a pleasant village and parish on the Norwich and Fakenham turnpike, 4 miles S.W. of Reepham, has 353 inhabitants and 1770 acres of land. The Earl of Leicester is lord of the manor, and owner of most of the soil, but Clarke Stoughton, Esq., and Mr. Wm. George have estates here. The Church (Virgin Mary) has a tower and three bells, and the ancient screen still retains some painted figures on its lower panels. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 17s. 11d., has 92A. of glebe, a good residence, and a yearly rent charge of £481, awarded in 1842, in lieu of tithes. The Rev. H. E. Lombe is patron, and the Rev. Thos. Starling Norgate incumbent. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here, built of wood. At the enclosure, in 1806, an allotment of 20A. was awarded to the poor for fuel. They have also two tenements, purchased with £35, given by Benjamin Bourne and others. The School is attended by 16 children. The chief residents are—The Rev. T. S. Norgate, Rectory; Misses Amelia and Diana Stoughton; Thomas Patterson, grocer; Robert Farman, thatcher, basket maker, and victualler, Green Man; Charles Trowse, shopkeeper; Hamlet Millett, blacksmith; James Taylor, carpenter; Charles Harris, beerhouse; Wm. Hunter and Geo. Springall, shoemakers; and Robert Forby, Thomas Nelson, John Savory, Hy. Canham, and John Sarsby, farmers. Post Office at T. Patterson's. Letters. desp. to Norwich, via Attlebridge, at 2.45 p.m.

SWANNINGTON, a parish and scattered village, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.S.E. of Reepham and 9 miles N.W. by W. of Norwich, has 385 inhabitants and 1433A. of land, exclusive of 102A. of common. Mrs. Hastings Parker owns a great part of the soil, and is lady of the manor, in which the fines are arbitrary. She resides at The Lawn, a neat mansion, belonging to F. J. Rogers, Esq., and having some beautiful stained glass in its windows. Richard Symonds, Esq., Thos. Cooke, Esq., and others, have estates in the parish. The Church (St. Margaret) is in the early English style, and comprises nave with aisles, chancel, porch, and square tower with three bells. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 5s. 11d., is consolidated with the vicarage of Wood Dalling, in the patronage of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Fredk. Hildyard, M.A., who has here a neat residence 14A. of glebe, and a yearly rent of £408. 7s., awarded in 1841, in lieu of tithes. The Poor's Land, left by John Carter, in 1641, is 6A., let for £12. Stephen Sheering, in 1643, left a yearly rent-charge of £5, for the poor of Swannington, out of the King's Head and Boar's Head, in Bucklersbury, London. The School is supported by subscription. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here, built in 1864. Post from Norwich, via Alderford.

THEMELTHORPE, a small scattered village, on an eminence, 3 miles W.N.W. of Reepham, has in its parish 68 inhabitants and 652A. 2R. 1P. of land, mostly belonging to S. Leeds, Esq., Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart., and Mrs. Edwards; but Lord Hastings is lord of the manor, in which the fines are certain. The Church (St. Andrew) is a small fabric, with nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 2s. 8d., is consolidated with that of Bintree. (See page 692.) The glebe here is 19A. 1R., and the tithes of this parish were commuted in 1841 for £131 per annum. Themelthorpe Common was enclosed in 1811, and is mostly in Foulsham parish. The chief residents are—Joseph Burton, farmer and victualler, Fox and Hounds; Robt. Amiss, John Pumfrey, John Jarvis, and Edmund Yarham, farmers; and Wm. Comer, farm bailiff. Post from Thetford, via Foulsham.

THURNING, or Thirning, is a parish of scattered houses, 6 miles S. of Holt, and 4½ miles N. of Reepham, containing 178 inhabitants and 1584A. 1R. 19P. of land. W. E. L. Bulwer, Esq., is lord of the manor, but a great part of the soil belongs to James Gay, Esq., who resides at the Hall, a handsome mansion, which has been much improved by its present owner, and is beautifully situated on a well-wooded slope towards the river Thurne, which bounds the parish on the south, and passes through an ornamental sheet of water in the grounds. Lord Hastings owns a small estate here. CRIMES BECK gives name to a hamlet on the north side of the parish. The Church (St. Andrew) appears to have been built about the middle of the 14th century, and comprises nave, chancel, north aisle, south porch, and square tower with one bell, but the chancel has long been in ruins. About 35 years ago the building was thoroughly restored and re-seated at a considerable cost. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7, has 23A. 2R. of glebe, a good residence built in 1827, and a yearly rent-charge of £370, awarded in 1839, in lieu of tithes. The patronage is in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, and the Rev. John Fenwick, B.D., is the incumbent. The other chief residents are—James Gay, Esq., J.P., D.L., Hall; Edwd. Pointon, blacksmith; John Rudd, harness maker; John Stokes, gamekeeper; and James Barber, Wm. Laskey, Alfred Hopson, Richard Buck, Fredk. Everett, and Robt. Gilham, farmers. Post from Thetford, via Guist.

TWYFORD parish, 6 miles W.N.W. of Reepham, has only 60 inhabitants, and 529 acres of land, mostly the property of the executors of the late Col. Packe, who are lords of the manor. Mrs. Packe resides at Twynford Hall, a neat mansion with pleasure grounds. Benj. Francis, Esq., and Miss Robins have also estates here, and the former has a good residence, called Twynford Place. The Church (St. Nicholas) has a short brick tower over the south porch, surmounted by a wooden belfry, and contains a font supposed to be of the Norman period. It was thoroughly restored and reseeded in 1858. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 19s. 9½d., and now having 12A. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £155, awarded in 1838 in lieu of tithes, was augmented with £200 of Q.A.B., in 1792, and is now consolidated with the vicarage of Guist, in the alternate patronage of W. Norris, Esq., and the Rev. John Norris Spurgeon, M.A., the latter of whom is also the incumbent, and lives at Twyford House, which is his own property, the rectory house being in a dilapidated condition. The Fuel Allotment, 10 acres, let for £13, was awarded in 1796. The poor have also 15s. a year, from half an acre, given by an unknown donor. The chief residents are—Mrs. Eliz. Packe; Rev. J. N. Spurgeon, B.A.; Benj. Francis, Esq.; Edw. Nicholson, farmer; Isaac Hubbard, gardener; and Edw. Savory, parish clerk. Post via Thetford.

WESTON, or Weston Longville, is a parish of scattered houses, from 4 to 6 miles S. of Reepham, and contains 471 inhabitants, and 2737 acres of rich loamy land, mostly the property of Lieut.-Col. Hambleton Fras. Custance, the lord of the manor, who resides at Weston House, a neat cemented mansion, delightfully situated on the south side of the vale of the Wensum, about a mile north of the church, and south of Lenwade Bridge, in a beautiful park, which has been recently improved by the addition of two handsome lodges. The old hall, now a farm-house, was built by the Rokewoods, who had large estates in the neighbourhood at an early period. John Collison, Esq., the Rev. Hy. Collison, the Rev. H. E. Lombe, T. T. Berney, Esq., and some smaller owners have land in the parish. The Church (All Saints) has a tower and five bells. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 18s. 1d., and now having 47A. 3R. 1P. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £680, awarded in 1840 in lieu of tithes. It is in the patronage of New College, Oxford, and incumbency of the Rev. John Conyngham, B.C.L., who has a good residence, built in 1841. The Wesleyans have a small chapel on the Green, about one mile south of the church, built in 1839. A handsome School, in the Elizabethan style, with teacher's residence attached, was built in 1856 by Col. Custance, who still supports it. A cottage, barn, and about two acres of land, left to the poor by Wm. Chapman, in 1724, are let for £7. The poor have also three roods of land, left by Richard Sheffield, and three yearly rent-charges, viz., 10s., left by Thos. Spencer; 3s. 4d., by Richard Bunn; and 10s., by an unknown donor. In 1852, some men making a ditch in this parish came upon an urn, containing about 300 silver coins of the Iceni, many of which are now preserved in the British Museum. WITCHINGHAM (GREAT) is a parish containing 2245 acres, and 642 inhabitants, mostly in the hamlet or village of LENWADE, near Lenwade Bridge, on the north side of the river Wensum, 3½ miles S. of Reepham, and 10 miles N.W. of Norwich. The soil belongs chiefly to Henry Kett Tompson, Henry Thorne Knights, and John Middleton, Esqrs., and Mrs.

Ebbetts. The Hall, a large brick mansion, with embattled towers and pleasant grounds, on the north bank of the Wensum, is the occasional seat of Mr. Tompson; and Clay Hall, another spacious house, is the residence of Mr. Knights. John Norris, Esq., who died in 1777, founded the Norrisian professorship at Cambridge, and built Witchingham Old Hall, which is now converted into cottages. Peter Le Neve, Esq., who had a large estate here, and died in 1724, was the first president of the Antiquarian Society, and in 1704 was made Richmond herald and Norroy king-at-arms. Two other worthies of this parish were John Brettin, bishop of Hereford, who died in 1275, and Sir Wm. Wychingham, Judge of the Common Pleas in 1363. Eades Mill is partly in Whitwell parish. There are a corn mill and two large inns, near the bridge, at Lenwade. The Church (St. Mary) stands on an eminence, about a mile N. of Lenwade Bridge, and is a handsome structure, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, porch, and square tower with two bells. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5, is consolidated with the rectory of Little Witchingham, in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Howard, B.C.L., who has 35A. 0R. 12P. of glebe, and rebuilt the Vicarage House about 20 years ago. In 1843, the tithes of Great Witchingham were commuted for £261. 3s. to the Vicar, and £488. 12s. to the Master and Fellows of New College, Oxford, who are the appropriators and patrons, and also the lords of the manor. The Wesleyans and the Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. John Norris, Esq., in 1777, left £400 Three per Cent. Consols, in trust, to apply the dividends for the education of 12 poor children of Great Witchingham parish, who are now taught in the National School, erected about 35 years ago at the expense of the late C. K. Tompson, Esq. The Church Land is 15 acres, let for £24. 10s. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, in 1811, comprises 25A. 3A. 11P., of which 3½ acres are let in garden allotments, and the remainder is used by the poor, who cut turf upon it. In 1674, Oliver Le Neve charged certain lands with the yearly payment of £6, to be applied as follows:—£5. 4s., in a weekly distribution of 2s. worth of bread; 6s., for the poor, at Christmas; and 10s. to the trustees for their trouble. The poor have also 4 coombs of peas yearly, on Ash Wednesday, from the appropriators; and the rector of Weston Longville has a rent-charge of £5 a year from certain lands in this parish.

WITCHINGHAM (LITTLE), 2½ miles S.S.E. of Reepham, is a parish containing only 33 inhabitants, and 738 acres of land, belonging to Wm. Postle, Esq. and Norman's Charity School, Norwich. Mr. Postle resides at the Hall, and farms the whole parish. The Church (St. Faith) is an ancient building with a square tower, and the rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 7s. 11d., is consolidated with the vicarage of Great Witchingham. The tithes were commuted in 1844, for £238. 14s. 3d. per annum. Post from Norwich, via Reepham.

WOOD-DALLING, a scattered village and parish, including CRABGATE and TYBY, from 3 to 4 miles N. by W. of Reepham, has 508 inhabitants, and 2443A. 2R. 35P. of land, lying partly in a fertile dale, from which it was anciently called Dallinga. It was long held by the Dalling family, one of whom built the hall (now a farm house) about 1582. W. E. L. Bulwer, Esq., is lord of manors of Wood-Dalling, Monceaux, Halwood-Noijons, and Crabgate, but James Gay, Robert Ives, and John Sayers, Esqs., and some smaller owners, have estates here. The Church (St. Andrew) is a large fabric comprising nave with aisles, north and south porches, chancel, and lofty square tower with five bells. It contains a small organ, a fine piscina, and several inscriptions and brasses of the Bulwer family; and was reroofed and reseated about 15 years ago by subscription. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8. 8s. 4d., is consolidated with the rectory of Swannington. (See page 704.) The patronage with 110 acres of land and the rectorial tithes, belongs to Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The latter were commuted in 1839, for £379. 19s. 11d. per annum, and are held on lease, by W. E. L. Bulwer, Esq. The vicarial glebe is 56A. 1R. 38P., now let for £80. The vicar has also a yearly rent-charge of £38. 9s. 6¼d. The Vicarage House, a neat Elizabethan structure of brick, erected about 18 years ago, is occupied by the curate. Near it is the School, built in 1851, and supported by subscription. Here is an Independent and also a Primitive Methodist chapel. The poor have a yearly rent-charge of £6. 10s., left by Edward Bulwer, in 1658, out of land called Blooms. Post from Norwich, via Reepham.

WOOD-NORTON, a pleasant village and parish, 6 miles E. by S. of Fakenham, and N.W. of Reepham, has 250 inhabitants and 1726 acres of land. The Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford, are patrons of the rectory, lords of the manor, and owners of a great part of the soil, but their estate is leased to Lord Hastings and Mr. W. B. Gill. Here are several other proprietors, the largest of whom is W. Norris, Esq., who has a neat mansion in the parish. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel and porch, and has a brick tower, which was erected in 1700, and contains one bell. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 12s. 3d., was consolidated with that of Swanton-Novers, in 1738. The joint rectories are now in the incumbency of the Rev. John Shuldham, M.A., who has here 63A. 3R. 29P. of glebe, and a good residence. The tithes of this parish were commuted in 1841 for £446. 10s., and those of Swanton-Novers for £230 per annum. There was another church here, dedicated to St. Peter, but what remains of it is now a barn. The poor have 10s. a year from the rector, for the use of half an acre of land, enclosed from the waste. The Fuel Allotment, 20A., awarded at the enclosure in 1813, is let for £24 a year. Here is a small School. The chief residents are—Wm. Norris, Esq., J.P.; Rev. John Shuldham, M.A., Rectory; Saml. Cotts, joiner; Robt. Dack, blacksmith; John Dawson, farm bailiff; John Long, corn miller; Robt. Long, victualler, Sun; Wm. Wright, victualler, Horse Shoes; Elizabeth Harmer, shopkeeper; Sarah Ann Read, schoolmistress; Thos. Wright, parish clerk; Wm. Wright, tailor; and Geo. Blogg, Edw. England, Edw. Fox Long, Wm. Mitchell, Thos. Nicholls, and Saml. Warren, farmers. Post via Thetford.

BOROUGH AND PORT

LYNN is an ancient sea port, borough, and market town, and may be properly styled the emporium of the western division of Norfolk; its harbour forming the grand outlet of all the principal navigable streams in that district and several adjacent counties, and its markets being numerously attended by farmers, merchants, &c. It is a large, respectable town, much improved during the last fifty years, and seated on the east side of the Great Ouse river, within four miles of that large bay of the ocean called the Wash or Metaris Estuarium,—being in 52 deg. 45 min. 25 sec. North latitude, and in 1 min. 35 sec. East longitude from the meridian of Greenwich; and distant 42 miles W. by N. of Norwich; 98½ miles N. by E. of London; 46 miles N. by E. of Cambridge; 32 miles S.E. of Boston; 13 miles N.E. by E. of Wisbech; and 15 miles N.W. by W. of Swaffham. It has a Gaol, Quarter Sessions, and separate Commission of the Peace, and is locally situated in the Hundred of Freebridge Lynn, and bounded on the west by the Great Ouse river; on the opposite side of which are the parishes of West and North Lynn, and that extensive, level, but fertile district, called Marshland, to which there is a ferry from Ferry lane, opposite West Lynn. The country on the east side of the town rises in gentle swells, highly cultivated, interspersed with thriving plantations, and presenting a fine contrast to the flat alluvial district on the opposite side of the river. The town is about one mile and a quarter in length, from the South Gate to the North End, and above half a mile in breadth from the river to Littleport street, where the East Gate (which was taken down in 1800) formerly stood. Three small rivulets, here called Fleets, intersect the town from east to west, crossed by small bridges, and navigable for coal boats, but in some parts closely lined with buildings and now forming receptacles for a great part of the drainage of the town, which on the land side is encompassed by a deep wet fosse, formerly defended by nine bastions, and flanked by a strong embattled wall. Of the latter, extensive ruins still remain, together with the South Gate, a fine tower of the perpendicular period, having a lofty arch-way for carriages and two smaller ones of modern construction for foot passengers. A little outside this gate, the small river Esk, (commonly called the Middleton Stop Drain,) and beyond it the navigable River Nar, pass to the Great Ouse. Near the fosse on the east side of the town, is an octagonal tower, called the Lady Chapel, which stands on a conical mound, named the Red Mount,—perhaps a corruption of Rood Mount. At North End is a platform battery, called St. Ann's Fort, formerly mounted with ten eighteen pounders, planted there in 1627, and commanding the entrance to the harbour; but having no breast-work or defensive cover, the garrison could not have long withstood the attacks of a formidable enemy from the opposite side of the river. The streets and lanes are generally narrow and irregularly built, but cleaner and more open than those of Norwich. King street, Queen street, and Nelson street, run parallel with the river, and have extensive warehouses, granaries, and wharves behind them, extending from the Common Staith or Quay, to the Boal and the White Friars, where large numbers of vessels are usually at anchor. High street extends about 460 yards in a direct line from north to south, through the heart of the town, and is lined with well-stocked shops, like the Tuesday and Saturday Market Places, into which it opens, and Norfolk street, which branches from it to the site of the East gate. The town contains several large and handsome mansions, and among its public edifices are some curious and interesting specimens of antiquity, especially the extensive church of St. Margaret, the beautiful chapel of St. Nicholas, the Grey Friars' Tower, the Red Mount, St. George's Hall, and the Guildhall. In 1803, an Act of Parliament was obtained for paving, cleansing, lighting, and otherwise improving the town, the powers of which were further extended by other acts in 1806 and 1859; that of the latter year incorporating many of the most important clauses of the "Towns Improvement Act" of 1847, thus constituting the Paving Commissioners a sort of Board of Health, to whom J. J. Coulton, Esq., is clerk. By virtue of these Acts, all the streets have been well paved, obstructions and other nuisances removed, and the avenue from the South Gate, instead of opening, as formerly, through the narrowest and worst built streets, has been diverted in a direct line more to the east, and now presents to the traveller an entrance superior to that of most other maritime towns in the kingdom; being a broad and spacious street (called London road) lined with neat modern houses, terminated at one end by the venerable gateway, and at the other by the slender, but elegant and lofty hexagonal tower of the Grey Friary. The bridges over the "Fleets" have been made lower and wider, and the communication over Purfleet bridge, near the Custom-house, has been opened for carriages. It has been for some time in contemplation to tunnel or cover-in the Purfleet, which has long been little better than an open pestiferous sewer; and it is to be hoped that no "vested interests" will be permitted to prevent the speedy carrying out of this great sanitary necessity. Among other improvements made about 20 years ago, was the removal of Guanock Wall, which extended from the South Gate towards the Red Mount. Part of its site is now occupied by two rows of houses, called Guanock terrace and place; and in the same vicinity, a new and populous suburb has arisen.

From Guanock terrace, a PUBLIC WALK, margined with trees and shrubs, extends to the Red Mount, and thence along the inner bank of the dilapidated town walls, as far as Kettle-mills, at the north-east angle of the town, where there is a lofty circular tower engine house, erected about 30 years ago, for the use of the waterworks. This pleasant promenade is approached from the London road, by the New Walk, which extends in a direct line to a picturesque modern archway near the Red Mount, and is about 350 yards long and eleven broad; having on each side a range of lofty lime and chestnut trees, placed alternately, forming a fine shady avenue. At convenient distances are placed recessed seats, one of which is canopied by a group of elms called the Seven Sisters. This walk extends beyond the walls and through the archway just mentioned, about 200 yards across the meadows. In the suburbs are excellent turnpikes and rural footpaths to Gaywood, Reffley Spring, and Castle Rising, on the north-east; and to Hardwick, West Winch, North Runceton, Middleton, and Mintlyn, on the south and east; and on the west, the tourist may visit the fine churches of Marshland, by the ferry or by the turnpike, which passes by a circuitous route over the Bridges, one of which crosses the small river Nar, by the Gasworks; and the other, which is entirely of wood, crosses the Eau-Brink Cut, and is 800 feet long. A little south of the latter, the Sutton Bridge Railway crosses the cut by an iron bridge. Turnpike Acts were passed for improving the roads from Lynn to Wisbech, &c., in 1765, 1786, 1806, and 1823, and for amending the roads branching from the East and South Gates, in 1770, 1791, 1811, and 1831. J. J. Coulton, Esq., is clerk to the Trustees.

Under these acts, fine rampart roads have been made in all directions; and under another act passed in 1826, the long obstructed line of communication through Marshland to Lincolnshire, was entirely freed by the formation of the embanked road and bridge over the Cross Keys Wash. Lynn now possesses great railway facilities, lines branching from it to each of the cardinal points, and connecting it with all the great railways in the kingdom. The climate is rather cold and damp, and the annual rate of mortality is slightly above the average; but there is an abundant supply of pure and wholesome water, and if the drainage were more perfect, the town would be healthier than most others.

The BOROUGH OF KING'S LYNN increased its population from 10,259 souls in 1811, to 16,701 in 1861, and comprises the two PARISHES of St. Margaret and All Saints, extending over an area of 2620 acres, of which only 290A. are within the boundaries of the town, viz., 183A. in St. Margaret's, and 107A. in All Saints' Parish, the latter of which is commonly called South Lynn, and comprises all the land lying beyond the town, but within the borough, extending upwards of four miles southward, along the west bank of the river Nar, as far as the bounds of Watlington and the Wiggenhalls, and forming a rich grazing district of 2323 acres, including the hamlet of Seeche, or Setchy Parva, the Portland Arms Inn, and the farms called White House, Scales How, and Golden-Ball; the latter of which was formerly a public-house, and had near it an ancient manor house called God's-croft, on the site of which a brick coffin was dug up many years ago. All Saints' parish was a lordship, with several manors, at the Norman conquest; but in the 4th and 5th of Philip and Mary, it was granted as a member of the borough, to be under the same government, and exempt from any power or authority of the Sheriff of Norfolk. The Corporation and Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., own most of the soil, and the former are lords of the manor. The gross estimated rental of the land and buildings in St. Margaret's parish, is £38,340. 15s., and of All Saints parish, £18,621. 10s., giving a total for the whole borough of £56,962. 5s. The borough, for municipal purposes, is divided into North, Middle, and South Wards; but for parochial purposes it is divided into Ten Wards, of which nine form St. Margaret's parish, and the other is the parish of South Lynn, or All Saints. In 1861, it had increased its population since the year 1801 from 10,096 to 16,170 souls, as will be seen in the following enumeration of the ten Wards, shewing the number of inhabitants in each, in 1801, 1831, 1841, and 1861.

The 16,170 inhabitants returned in 1861, consisted of 7,163 males, and 9,007 females, living in 3,637 houses. There were also at the time of taking the census, 487 uninhabited houses and 3 building. In 1851 the population of the borough was 19,355 souls, occupying 3845 houses, besides which there were 146 empty houses and 54 building. St. Margaret's Parish had 14,583 inhabitants in 1851, but only 11,636 in 1861; and All Saints' Parish had 4772 in 1851, but only 4534 in 1861. The decrease of 3185 souls, between the years 1851 and 1861, is attributable partly to the fact of several hundreds of labourers having been engaged here in the former year in cutting the new channel from the harbour to the estuary, and in the formation of railways; and partly to the depression of the shipping trade, owing to the transit of coals, &c., by railway.

KING'S LYNN UNION, formed under the Poor Law Amendment Act, in 1835, comprises the two parishes of St. Margaret's and All Saints, in the borough, and the small parishes of North and West Lynn, on the opposite side of the river, in the Hundred of Freebridge Marshland. In 1861 it contained 16,701 inhabitants, of whom 7415 were males and 9286 females. It had then 4308 houses; of which 3763 were inhabited, 542 uninhabited, and 3 building. Of these, all were in the borough, except 531 souls and 181 houses. The four parishes of this Union comprise an area of about 4800 acres, and their aggregate average annual expenditure for the support of their poor, during the three years preceding the formation of the Union, was £9220. In 1838, their expenditure was £6683; in 1839, £7155; in 1843, £7775; and in 1863, £9398. South-Lynn Workhouse, in Friars' street, which had been used by the parish of All Saints more than sixty years, was purchased by the overseers about 1826, but was sold after the formation of the Union. St. James's Workhouse was used only by St. Margaret's parish until 1835, when it became the Union Workhouse, having been altered for that purpose at a cost of about £750. It consisted of the remains of St. James's Chapel and some additional buildings. This chapel was founded by Bishop Turbus, in 1146, but after the Dissolution it was refounded as a hospital for poor and impotent people, and endowed in 1545 with a tax of fourpence per chaldron on all coals brought into Lynn by strangers, now yielding about £100 per annum, which is applied with the poor-rates of St. Margaret's. The chapel having become ruinous in 1560, the nave, the spire, and part of the tower were taken down, and the materials used in repairing the lofty chancel and transept, which were again thoroughly repaired by the corporation in 1682, and divided into stories, the highest floor of which extended through the pointed arches, which sprang from lofty clustered columns. It was then a hospital for fifty poor men, women, and children. In 1687, the Corporation settled the building as a Workhouse for poor children, "to hold them to work and train them to trades and manual occupations," and endowed it with £6 a year out of premises formerly the Grey Friary. It was afterwards greatly enlarged, and placed under the control of the Guardians of the poor of St. Margaret's, and so remained until 1835, as already noticed. On Sunday, 20th August, 1854, the tower of this chapel fell down with a fearful crash, greatly damaging the whole building, killing two persons and injuring several others. The erection of a NEW UNION WORKHOUSE was soon afterwards commenced, and at midsummer, 1856, the building was ready for occupation, having been completed at a cost of £13,545, including £1100 given for the site, which comprises 3½ acres. This extensive workhouse is situated on Exton's road, and is constructed principally of red brick, faced with white and ornamented with crosses and other devices in black brick. It is of Tudor architecture, and its chief feature is a large chapel over the dining room, having a fine perpendicular window at each end. It has room for 468 inmates, and is so planned as to admit of the proper classification of the sexes, the able-bodied and the infirm, the aged and the young. The Court of Guardians of the poor of St. Margaret's parish was instituted by an Act of Parliament passed in 1701, which was amended by another Act passed in 1808. This corporate body still exists, and consists of the members of the Town Council, (ex-officio,) the two Churchwardens of St. Margaret's, and two Guardians elected triennially and one Overseer appointed yearly for each of the nine Wards, making altogether fifty-three. They have still the sole power of levying rates for the relief of the poor; but the expenditure thereof is now vested with the Union Guardians. One of them is elected governor, and another deputy-governor. In 1584, John Lonyson bequeathed £200, to be invested by the Corporation, for the benefit of the poor of St. James's Workhouse, and for the use of this sum they have since paid £10 a year, which is applied with the poor rates of St. Margaret's parish, as also are the coal tax (commonly called "groats") and the annuity of £6, named above. The Board of Guardians for the Union consists of 23 members, of whom 18 are chosen yearly for St. Margaret's parish, three for South Lynn, and one each for West and North Lynn. John James Coulton, Esq., is the union clerk and superintendent registrar, and Mr. Edw. Dow, jun., is his deputy. Edw. M. Beloe, Esq., is registrar of marriages, and Mr. Mattw. Smith is his deputy. The registrars of births and deaths are Messrs. Horatio Nelson, for the North District; John Wm. Chadwick, for the Middle District; and James Eccles for the South District; and the relieving officers are Messrs. H. Nelson, for the North District, and Alfred Dow for the South District. Mr. Richard Atkinson Brunskill and Mrs. Brunskill are master and matron; Rev. W. Leeper, chaplain; J. Rutter and Miss Colman, school teachers; and Robert Grimes, porter of the Workhouse. The union surgeons are Henry Smythe, Esq., M.D., Wm. Edw. Hunter, Esq., M.D., and T. M. Kendall, Esq.

ANCIENT HISTORY:—Lynn is supposed by Camden to have been a British settlement; and the name, he says, is derived from Llyn, a lake or expanse of water; but Spelman, with less probability, deduces this from the Saxon term lean, which signifies a tenure in fee, or farm; and observes that its ancient appellation was Len Episcopi, that is, the Bishop's farm. In Domesday-book, it is written Lun and Lena; and at the time of that survey belonged to Egelmar, Bishop of North Elmham, and Stigand, Archbishop of Canterbury. In the Saxon era, it had in its vicinity a great number of salt works, Gaywood alone having no fewer than 30 salt pans in the time of Edward the Confessor. That it was a place of some consequence and trade in the time of the Norman Conqueror, is evident, from its enjoying the privilege of certain duties and customs, payable on the arrival of any goods or merchandise by sea or land, of which the bishop of the diocese at that time was found seised of a moiety. Bishop Herbert, who removed the See to Norwich, and founded the cathedral there, also founded the church and priory of St. Margaret, at Lynn, in the reign of William Rufus. King Henry I. granted liberty to the priory of Norwich, which then possessed the fee of the town, to hold a fair at Lynn, on the eve, the day, and the day following the feast of St. Margaret, with sac and soc and other customs; and Henry II. confirmed these privileges. William de Newburgh, a writer who lived in the time of Richard I., describes it as "Urbs commeatu et commercii nobilis." Many Jews then resided here in the narrow street called Jew's lane, now Surrey street. These persecuted people were at that time celebrated as merchants over most of Europe, and by growing rich, and purchasing land and houses, had brought upon themselves the hatred of the Christians. Many of their ancient deeds are preserved, in the form of warrants of sale, &c. Being enraged at the conversion of one of their number to Christianity, the Jews "set upon him, in order to have slain him, to prevent which he took sanctuary in a church, but they broke open the doors, and would have taken him out by force. On this noise and uproar, a number of the Christians came to his rescue; but the inhabitants being in fear of the King, who had taken the Jews under his protection, acted on the reserve; on which many young strangers and foreigners, who were in the town on account of their trade, fell on the Jews, killed several, burnt and plundered their houses, and then to avoid the King's anger, took shipping directly with their booty." In 1205, King John, having chastised the revolted barons of Norfolk, halted here with his army, and on the petition of John Grey, Bishop of Norwich, who had lately erected a palace at the neighbouring village of Gaywood, that monarch granted Lynn a CHARTER to be a free borough for ever, the burgesses to choose a præpositus (provost), and have "soke, sac, toll, theme, infang-theft and outfang-theft, and be free of toll and every other custom in all parts of the kingdom, except London." The charter further grants that they shall not be impleaded out of the borough, of any plea other than the pleas of foreign tenures; that they do no suit in counties for tenures within the borough; that pleas belonging to the crown may be directed by themselves according to the custom of Oxford; "saving always to the aforesaid John, Bishop of Norwich, and his successors, and to William, Earl of Arundel, and his heirs, the liberties and customs which they have anciently had, and ought to have, in the aforesaid town of Lynn." In his letters patent, addressed to the burgesses in the last year of his reign, King John styles them "the Mayor and good men of Lenn." He visited the town in the same year, and after staying a short time (lodging, it is said, at a house which occupied the site of the present Mitre Inn) he crossed the Wash, with the loss of his baggage, to Swineshead priory, in Lincolnshire, on his road to Newark castle, where he died. Before his departure, he presented the corporation with an elegant embossed and enamelled cup and cover, of silver, double gilt, weighing 73 ounces, and holding about a pint. This celebrated piece of antiquity is in a high state of preservation, being placed in the safe keeping of every mayor for the time being, and used only on public occasions, when it is filled with sack, and shewn as a unique specimen of the manufactures of the 13th century. It is shaped like an inverted bell, and adorned with rich enamelled devices. The figures round the cover represent a hunting party; and one, on the bottom of the inside, has a drinking horn in one hand, and a hawk in the other. The costumes of the figures display much of the elegance of the dresses of the time of Edward III., to which period the cup probably belongs. It is still called King John's cup. The sword that is carried before the mayor is likewise said to have been the gift of King John, "taken from his own side;" but Spelman and Bishop Gibson assert that it was actually the gift of Henry VIII., when, on the town coming into his possession, he converted the burgesses into aldermen, granted the place many privileges, and changed the name from Lynn Episcopi to Lynn Regis. In confirmation of this, Spelman says, that the town-clerk of 1630, assured him that one side of the hilt was plain till 1580, when the sword-bearer had a Latin inscription engraved on it, relative to King John. The other side is inscribed, "Vivat Rex Henricus Octavius, Anno Regni sui xx." Besides this antique sword, four silver-gilt maces are carried before the mayor on public occasions, and seem to have been made or repaired in the reign of Queen Anne, whose initials appear upon them. The corporation also possesses several silver chains with badges, on which are shields with the Lynn arms. These chains were formerly worn by the town waits or musicians. The common seal of the corporation has on the obverse the figure of St. Margaret trampling on a dragon and wounding it with the Cross, and the inscription "Sub Margareta teritur draco, stat cruce leta;" and on the reverse an Eagle, the symbol of St. John the Evangelist, standing on a label inscribed—" In principio erat Verbum," and surrounded with the words—" Sigillum Communitatis Lennae." The earliest record to which this seal is attached is dated 1300.

The borough has sent two representatives to Parliament since the 26th of Edward I., and has been honoured with eighteen CHARTERS, dated 6th John; 17th, 39th and 52nd Henry III.; 9th and 33rd Edward I.; 6th Edward II.; 9th Edward III.; 4th Henry V.; 16th and 29th Henry VIII.; 2nd Edward VI.; 1st and 2nd and 4th and 5th Philip and Mary; 2nd James I.; 17th and 36th Charles II.; and 11th George II. The first of these charters, which appointed and fixed the municipal corporation, is that of the 16th of Henry VIII., which is called the first governing charter, and constituted the burgesses of "Bishop Lynn," a body corporate, under the government of a mayor, twelve aldermen, and eighteen common councilmen, with a recorder, town clerk, and other officers. It conferred on them the power of taxing the inhabitants from time to time, for the safeguard and defence of the borough, "against the violent raging of the waters hereafter happening, or for other necessary things to be done within the borough," and freed the burgesses from serving on juries out of the borough "against their wills." The charter of the 29th of Henry VIII. is considered as the second governing charter, and changed the name of the borough from Lynn Episcopi to Lynn Regis, the King having obtained this manor, with that of Gaywood and many others, of Richard Nix, Bishop of Norwich, in exchange for the abbey of Holme. This charter confirmed the previous municipal constitution, and granted the Guild-hall court, a civil court of pleas and plaints and court of record; the Tolbooth court, for complaints arising by water; and a Court Leet. It also appointed the mayor, aldermen, and recorder to be justices of the peace; excluded county justices from interference within the borough; confirmed former exemptions from serving on juries out of the borough; disqualified the sheriff of Norfolk, or his officers, for executing writs within the borough; granted two fairs, or marts, with court of Piepoudre yearly, and two weekly markets, on Tuesday and Saturday,—all tolls for groundage and stalls to be paid to the mayor and burgesses; and that they should have cognizance of pleas in the Courts of Common Pleas and Exchequer; have a prison, or gaol, within the borough, and take all fines to themselves, paying yearly 20 marks (£13. 6s. 8d.) into the Exchequer.

The charter of the 2nd of Edward VI., called the first property charter, granted to the corporation certain lands, tenements, &c., formerly belonging to the Guild of Merchants and Guild of St. George, for keeping up the defences against the sea and other purposes. The charter of the 4th and 5th of Philip and Mary, called the second property charter, annexed the parish of South Lynn to the borough, and vested the manor in the corporation, in consideration of their agreeing to rebuild and keep in repair the sea wall at the North End, described in the charter as being 340 feet long, and 9 feet thick at the foundation, which said wall had been repaired from time immemorial by the bishops of the diocese, but was then by the violence of the sea reduced to such a ruinous state as threatened the inundation of the whole borough. This charter, after adding South Lynn to the borough, subject to a yearly rent of 10s., added several other tenements to the corporation possessions in the lordship or manor of Lynn Regis, which it declares shall in future be held of the Crown, as of the manor of East Greenwich, “in common socage (and not in capite) by fealty;” subject to the yearly fee farm rent of £13. 13s. 6d., to be paid to the Exchequer, on the feasts of St. Michael the Archangel, and the Annunciation of the blessed Mary, by equal portions. The charter of 2nd James I. invested the mayor with the office of High Admiral, within certain limits, and granted a Court of Admiralty of Record, (now abolished,) with power to decide upon matters done on the High Seas, if one of the parties was a resident of the borough. It gave all fines and forfeitures to the corporation for the keeping up of the Port, together with tolls of anchorage, beaconage, ballastage, lastage, &c.; all royal fishes, and power to correct and hold pleas concerning fishermen and their nets. It likewise granted that the mayor, recorder, and aldermen should be justices of gaol delivery; that the coroners should make a return of prisoners to the justices before every gaol delivery, and erect a gallows for the execution of felons. The charter of 17th Charles II., called the fourth governing charter, confirmed the former charters and privileges, appointed a chief steward, commonly called the Lord High Steward, and fixed fines for refusing to serve office. The charter of the 36th of Charles II., being founded on a forced surrender by quo warranto, was considered illegal, and therefore never acknowledged or acted upon. Such parts of these charters as are contrary to that common standard of municipal jurisprudence—the Reform Act of 1835, are now repealed and annulled, as will be seen at a subsequent page.

Lynn has long been celebrated for its extensive commerce in wine, corn, coal, and timber, and appears to have been formerly engaged to some extent in the staple manufactures of the county, for we find that in 1571 many of the Dutch and Walloon artisans, who had fled from religious persecution in the Netherlands, were settled here as well as at Norwich, (see page 154.)

and Anthony de Potter, the dyer, in behalf of those who made mockades, at Lynn, obtained, after a long debate in the court, "that the warden of the Walloons, in that city, should search and seal all the commodities brought from Lynn." The Lynn chronology of REMARKABLE EVENTS exhibits many "accidents of flood and field," and shows conspicuously the infatuated conduct of the corporate magistrates of the 16th and 17th centuries, when they persecuted and burnt several unfortunate objects for WITCHCRAFT, and patronised Hopkins, the celebrated, but villainous "witch-finder," who persuaded the credulous and superstitious that he possessed the art of discovering such as were gifted with witchcraft, by pricking them with pins; and those placed under him to undergo this cruel test were generally condemned, as he was paid a certain sum per head for every person whom he declared to be guilty. Among some other persons executed here as witches were Margaret Reed, in 1590; Elizabeth Howson, in 1598; Mary Smith, in 1616; Dorothy Lee and Grace Wright, in 1645; and Dorothy Floyd, in 1650. The instances of fraud and credulity which this country has exhibited, age after age, under the delusion of witchcraft and demonology, are very numerous; but happily the belief in the existence of this kind of supernatural agency now no longer prevails, and the repeal of all the statutes relating to witchcraft has removed from our criminal code the reproach cast on the legislature by these ridiculous enactments. The town has been honoured with several ROYAL VISITS since the time of King John. The dowager queen of Edward II., and Edward III. and his queen, paid Lynn this compliment; and Henry VI. was here in 1441, when the sword was carried before him by the mayor. Edward IV. embarked here for Flanders, in 1469; and Henry VII. and his queen were both here in 1499, and lodged at the Augustine Friary. The French King, with the Duke and Duchess of Suffolk, was here in 1526. The latter was sister to Henry VIII., whose daughter, Queen Elizabeth, visited Lynn in her progress through Norfolk, in 1578. In 1797, Prince William of Gloucester dined with the corporation after reviewing the Downham Cavalry and the Lynn Volunteers. In 1807, the Duke of Clarence (afterwards William IV.) was presented with the freedom of the borough; and, after partaking of a cold collation at the Mayor's house, returned to Houghton Hall, attended by Earl Cholmondeley and suite. Cardinal Wolsey was at Lynn in 1519, attended by a number of lords and gentlemen. Lord Audley came here in 1553 to proclaim the unfortunate Lady Jane Grey, Queen of England. In 1555 and 1797, two whales were caught in the Lynn channel, one measuring 40 and the other 44 feet in length. In 1620, two large fish were cast ashore, one 30 and the other 51 feet long. About 30 years ago two "Bottle-nosed" whales, or "Finnerns," were captured a little below the harbour; and in September, 1842, a whale was caught here which weighed 25 tons, and was 18 feet in circumference and 50 in length. The burgesses were alarmed by severe earthquakes in 1575 and 1602; and in 1605 a house was burnt down in High-street, and the family perished in the flames. The ringing of bells was prohibited by the aldermen in 1581, and not resumed for several years. The PLAGUE raged here in 1585 and 1598. In the former year the mayor and four aldermen fell victims to the dreadful malady; and in the latter 220 persons were buried in St. James's churchyard, from March to July. This awful disease also visited the town in 1624, '35, '36, and '66; and in the two latter years it was so prevalent, that the great mart was not held. In 1633, twelve red coats were made for the officers who attended the mart, and in the same year the ferry boat upset and drowned 18 persons; similar disasters occurred on February 23rd, 1796, and Oct. 5th, 1811, when 11 persons were drowned. In 1635, five young gentlemen belonging to a boarding school were drowned while bathing near the Boal wharf. In the following year 12 grampuses were caught here, and 14 vessels belonging to Lynn were lost in a severe gale.

In the CIVIL WARS of the reign of Charles I. (see page 155) the mayor and burgesses of Lynn declared for the royal cause, and, aided by the country gentlemen, they placed the town in a posture of defence, and held out with great bravery against the attacks of 18,000 parliamentary soldiers, under the command of the Earl of Manchester, during a close siege of nearly three weeks, commencing August 28th, 1643, and not terminating till the 16th of September, when the garrison, consisting of about 5000 men, not being strengthened, as expected, by a reinforcement from the Earl of Newcastle's army, then lying near Lincoln, was obliged to capitulate, and paid a fine of £3200 to obviate the distress of being plundered. During the siege, on Sunday, September 3rd, when the minister and congregation were assembled for Divine worship, a 16-pound shot was fired from West Lynn into St. Margaret's church, where it did no further harm than to shatter a pillar into a thousand pieces and frighten the people away with the loss of many of their hats, hoods, books, &c. After the siege, the town was garrisoned for the Parliament, and so remained during the continuance of those civil broils which so long agitated and distressed the kingdom. In 1653, the corporation invited Cromwell to visit the town, and the mayor "was allowed £5 for his preparations for the entertainment of the Protector." In 1655 and '7, the river from Gaywood to Kettle-mills, and thence to the Red Mount, was cleansed, and the principal streets paved, chiefly by a tax levied on the ale-house keepers, of whom 36 were imprisoned at one time for non-payment. Preparatory to the Restoration of Charles II., in 1660, the fortifications of Lynn were restored by Sir Horatio Townshend, who was created by that monarch, Baron Townshend, of Lynn-Regis, in 1661, and Viscount Townshend, of Raynham, in 1682.

On September 7th, 1670, Marshland and a great part of Lynn were inundated during a high tide, in which haystacks swam about in the fields, many thousand sheep and cattle were lost, and boats rowed from the East-gate to Gaywood. A similar flood occurred in 1763. In 1587, John Wanker's wife and Widow Parker were tied to a "cart's tail," and dragged through the streets for incontinency; and in 1692, Amy Pointer was ducked as a scold. The EXECUTIONS of capital offenders at Lynn usually took place a little beyond the site of the Gas-works, where the cattle-market was formerly held; but these awful spectacles were happily of rare occurrence in this peaceful and prosperous town, where the last who suffered on the gallows was Peter Donnahue, a sergeant of the 13th regiment of Foot, who was hanged Nov. 13th, 1801, for uttering forged notes. The others who suffered on the gallows, in previous years, were Robert Fox and Joseph Beeton, in 1783, for highway robbery; Wm. Pilling, for a rape, in 1772; John Rudderham, for murder, in 1766; Thomas Jermyn, for felony, and Geo. Smith, for murder, in 1723; Michael Hammond and his sister, for felony, in 1708; Samuel Moor, for shopbreaking, and Richd. and Alice Ship, for murdering their servant-girl, in 1686; John Swift, John Page, and Wm. Peirson, for shopbreaking, in 1653, '76, and '77; Goody Say, for murdering her husband, in 1653; and Major Stanworth, for his attachment to the royal cause, in 1650. The latter suffered in the Tuesday Market-place, where a Dutchman was BURNT for heresy, in 1532; Mary Smith, as a witch, in 1616; Mary Taylor, for murdering her mistress, in 1723; and a woman, for killing her husband, in 1515. In 1531, a servant-girl was boiled to death, for poisoning her mistress. Perhaps this was considered a refinement of punishment more suited to the diabolical offence than the gallows or the stake, both of which were occasionally resorted to; but the fires in the market-place were much less numerous than those of Smithfield and many other places, in the ages of bigotry and superstition, when Lynn had its share of monastic institutions, as will be seen at a subsequent page.

On Sept. 8th, 1741, during a violent storm, the spires of St. Margaret's church and St. Nicholas's chapel were blown down, and both edifices materially injured. In 1780, an Armed Association was formed here for internal defence; and in 1794, E. Everard, Esq., was appointed captain of the Lynn Volunteers. On August 18th, 1784, a balloon ascended from the Tuesday Market-place, and after an aerial voyage of $2\frac{1}{2}$ hours, alighted in a field four miles from St. Albans, a distance of 94 miles from Lynn. Mr. Green ascended here in his balloon on June 21st, 1826, and Oct. 1st, 1827. On Sept. 27th, 1798, the brigs Aurora, of Lynn, and Countryman, of Wisbech, were lost, with all hands, in Lynn roads. On Nov. 21st, 1805, here were great public rejoicings, with a ball and supper at the Guild-hall, in celebration of Nelson's victory off Trafalgar. The grand National Jubilee, on Oct. 25th, 1809, when Geo. III. entered the 50th year of his reign, was observed here with great rejoicings and festivities. On Oct. 5th, 1811, the victories obtained by the Allied Armies over the French were the subject of much public rejoicing; a large bonfire was kindled in the Tuesday Market-place, and several barrels of beer were distributed among the populace. Similar demonstrations of public joy, with brilliant illuminations, took place, after other victories, on April 28th, 1814, and on the return of Peace, July 14th, 1814. In August, 1815, upwards of £300 were collected here towards relieving the families of the killed and wounded heroes of Waterloo. On June 24th, 1851, a fire broke out in High street, and destroyed more than £8000 worth of property. On October 26th, 1853, a dinner was given and an address presented to Lieut. S. Gurney Cresswell, who first brought home the news of the discovery of the North-west Passage. The conclusion of peace with Russia was celebrated in Lynn, May 21st, 1856, by a procession of 2300 school children, who were afterwards entertained to dinner on the Public Walks. There were several other public dinners, &c., and a display of fireworks in the evening. The marriage of the Prince of Wales and the Princess Alexandra, on the 10th March, 1863, was celebrated here in a most enthusiastic manner by processions, dinners, illuminations, and fireworks. Most of the other remarkable events which have taken place in the borough during the 19th century will be found in connection with the accounts of the various public buildings and institutions.

The HARBOUR at Lynn, formed in the Great Ouse river, within about four miles of its outfall into the large bay of the German Ocean, called "The Wash," is deep and capacious (the tide rising from 18 to 22 feet at spring-tides, and not less than 12 feet at neap-tides). It is capable of receiving upwards of 200 vessels, and is now one of the best harbours in the kingdom, ships of 1000 tons burthen being able to enter it; but at what period it was first used as a haven is unknown. Camden is of opinion that the port was originally at the village of West Lynn, on the opposite side of the river; but this is improbable, as no records exist to prove that that place was ever of more consequence than it is at present. The river, as it passed in ancient times between the two Lynns, was merely a small stream, consisting of the Little Ouse only, not more than 33 yards broad; but the outfall at Wisbech decaying about the reign of Henry III., the Great Ouse river was conveyed to the sea by a new cut, made from Littleport Chair to Rebeck, where it joined and gave its own name to the Little Ouse, from the borders of Cambridgeshire, whence it now flows northward to the sea below Lynn. By this vast accumulation of water, brought by that famous river from many of the midland counties, after a course of 150 miles, the channel was gradually worn wider; so that some centuries ago it was, in the narrowest part, upwards of 300 yards broad, and in some places the tides expanded upwards of half a mile in width, as would still be the case if they were not confined by high embankments, within which the high-water mark is frequently much higher than the surface of the adjacent cultivated lands, as may be seen in a perambulation up the river as far as the Wiggenhalls. After the reign of Henry III., when this change occurred, Lynn, being then connected as a port with six or seven of the midland counties, began to rise from its primitive obscurity to that high seat of commercial consequence which it now holds; but after the plans for draining the fens, called the Bedford Level, had been carried into execution, and the sluices called the Denver and Salter's Lode erected, the navigation of the river became much impaired, and the harbour obstructed by silt, which was thrown up at high spring-tides. Upon a petition of the inhabitants against the conduct of the commissioners for draining this extensive level, lying on the south side of Marshland, a survey and report were made by Colonel John Armstrong, in the year 1724, from which it appeared that all the injury complained of had arisen from the numerous obstructions made to the ascent of the tides up the river, and the confluence of the upland waters, particularly after the 100 feet drain and the sluice at Denver had been made. Previously, the reflux tide descended with such amazing rapidity that the ships in Lynn harbour were obliged to be moored with a stream cable. For cleansing the mouth of the river of the shifting sands, and otherwise improving the navigation, Col. Armstrong proposed that everything connected with the Great and Little Ouse rivers should be restored to the state, as nearly as possible, in which it was anterior to the execution of the new drainage scheme. By this report it appears that, in 1723, the tide of flood ran through Lynn haven ordinarily three hours and four minutes, and that the common spring tides rose in height at that time 14 feet 4 inches; but when propelled by a north-east wind, they sometimes flowed nearly 26 feet perpendicular, forcing ships from their moorings, and running over the quays into many of the streets. On some occasions the tide flowed very rapidly, and was called the bore, or eager, but since the opening of the new Cut this has not happened. The navigation of the Great Ouse and the drainage of the fens in and near the Bedford Level, and all the low lands near the river (amounting to about 320,000 acres), have been considerably improved by diverting the stream from the old channel, between Lynn and Wiggenhall St. Germain's bridge, into a new channel, called the Eau-Brink Cut, extending in a straight line $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles in length, and from 300 to 350 feet in breadth, and lessening the distance from Lynn to St. Germain's bridge from nearly 7 to $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles. A cut in this direction was recommended by Colonel Armstrong as early as 1723, and the expense was estimated by Mr. Kindersley at £15,000; but a much larger sum was expended in carrying the bill for the purpose through Parliament, in consequence of a powerful opposition; and a larger sum was subsequently awarded for purchasing the necessary land. The Act passed in 1795 appears to have been too much contracted in its power for the magnitude and cost of the work; so that it had to be amended, its powers for raising money increased, and the term for completing the work extended, by seven other Acts of Parliament, passed in 1796, 1805, '16, '18, '19, '21, and '31; and the total cost of the undertaking was about £600,000, borrowed by the Eau Brink Commissioners of Drainage (now the Commissioners of the Ouse Outfall), who, for the purpose of paying the interest, liquidating the debt, and keeping the cut, the bridge, and the banks in proper repair, are empowered to levy a yearly drainage tax on the 320,000 acres of fens, marshes, &c., which are drained by this great work. The Eau Brink Commissioners of Navigation also levy 5d. per ton on all vessels passing up the river, and E. L. Swatman, Esq., is their clerk. The Ouse Outfall Commissioners consist of the freeholders of 100 acres, or more, of the above-named 320,000 acres, the drainage of which appears to have been their first care, so that very little progress was made with the Eau-Brink Cut till 1818, and it was not completed till 1821. Though it averages only from 300 to 350 feet in breadth, it is 800 feet wide at the lower opening, where it falls into the river, nearly a mile above the Lynn Custom House, and is crossed by one of the largest wooden bridges in England. This "NEW BRIDGE" has a flat platform upwards of 800 feet long, resting on massive and lofty timber piers, and having in the centre two leaves, intended to have been drawn up by means of large iron wheels and chains; but as large vessels never pass above the bridge, this machinery is not used, and the whole platform is now bedded with gravel. It was opened to the public on June 28th, 1821, when it was crossed by a long and splendid procession, and a large party of gentlemen dined at the Coffee House, at the expense of Messrs. Jolliffe and Banks, the liberal contractors for the work. The Cut was opened July 31st, 1821, when the Swiftsure Steam Packet, from Gravesend, passed to the upper end, at the head of a procession of boats richly decorated with colours, and returned amidst the acclamations of many thousand spectators, a large portion of whom were assembled on the New Bridge, upon which the Royal Standard and many other symbols were displayed, to increase the éclat of this important epoch in the history of Lynn and the Norfolk Marshes and Fens. That broad and circuitous part of the river Ouse ($5\frac{1}{2}$ miles in length), avoided by the new cut, and lying between the New Bridge and the Old Free Bridge at Wighall St. Germain's, now consists of 800 acres of fertile land, which have been warped up to the height of from 25 to 35 feet above the level of the channel of the river and let for £2 per acre. In August, 1844, an Act of Parliament was obtained for draining the MIDDLE LEVEL OF THE FENS, by means of a New Cut, 100 feet broad and 12 miles long, extending in a direct line from the upper end of the Eau-Brink Cut, southward to the Sixteen Feet River. This work was finished in 1847, but it and all the other drains belonging to the Middle Level Commissioners were afterwards deepened, the total cost of the works being about £650,000. The outfall sluice was a substantial structure, consisting of a bridge of three arches, each of 20 feet span, resting on piers of great solidity, and flanked on both faces with wide-spreading wings or walls to support the adjacent banks. Each of the arches enclosed a pair of very strong oaken doors or valves, opening towards the river, and constituting self-acting sluices, which allowed the water to pass outwards, but prevented the tidal water from entering the drain. This sluice alone cost upwards of £30,000, and was situated about three miles above Lynn, and about half a mile below St. Germain's Bridge. Although apparently so strong, the water by some means gradually and for a long time imperceptibly undermined it, probably owing to the treacherous character of the soil; and on Sunday night, May 4th, 1862, the whole fabric gave way with a terrible crash, and the tide resistlessly rushed up the drain. Although great efforts were made to prevent further injury by the formation of dams, &c., the banks of the drain burst on Monday, 12th May, and more than 10,000 acres of land were speedily under water. The damage done to property of all kinds was immense, and the litigation consequent thereon will probably not terminate for years. In the following October the outfall sluice of the Marshland Smeeth and Fen drain, an important arterial drain running into the Ouse, about 200 yards north of the ruined Middle Level sluice, gave way in a precisely similar manner, and about 6000 acres were again submerged. This accident is supposed to have been caused by the unusual quantity of water, which had passed through the sluice in drawing off the water from the drowned lands, having weakened the foundations. Effectual measures have now been taken to prevent the recurrence of such disasters, and it is to be hoped that we shall never again hear of another Marshland flood. In 1831, an act was passed in consequence of the great damage done to the Ouse bank, in and near Magdalen Fen, by the Eau Brink Commissioners, under which a sum of £46,000 was paid by them to a Corporation created by the act, under the name of the Ouse Bank Commissioners, for the purpose of putting the bank into proper condition, and exonerating the owners of the adjoining lands from any further charge in respect thereof. In 1837, the powers of this act were enlarged by another, entitled, "An act to raise and apply funds for the future maintenance and repair of the Banks of the River Ouse, between Denver sluice and the Eau-Brink Cut." For this purpose, the Commissioners are empowered to borrow money and levy rates and taxes. Commissioners are also appointed under an act passed in 1790, "for empowering persons navigating with boats, barges, and other vessels in the River Ouse, in the county of Norfolk, to hale or tow with horses, or other beasts, on the banks or sea walls of the said river, and for making satisfaction to the owners of the said banks or sea walls." The opening of the Eau-Brink Cut gave the reflux tide such a strong bias to the west side of the Lynn Harbour, as to contract the channel and leave a broad and firm bank of silt on the east side; so that ships were obliged to anchor at an inconvenient distance from the granaries and warehouses, the owners of which obtained from the Eau-Brink Commissioners a large sum of money for the damage thus done to their respective premises; and afterwards a great portion of the accumulated silt was thrown up and formed into a useful quay or landing place. Though the channel receded from the warehouses, in many places to the distance of from 40 to 80 yards, it became much deeper than before; and in order to save West Lynn from the incursions of the tides, several large jetties were projected into the water on that side of the river, so as to force the current further to the east; and one of them forms a ferry-boat landing over the broad bank of soft silt which is left bare at low-water. A new quay, called the Boal quay, was formed by the Corporation, near the Friars, in 1856-7, at a cost of more than £9000. A tramway was laid down in 1855, from the main line of railway south of Lynn, along a portion of the harbour, and is intended to be carried along the whole of the quays at some future time. In 1863, the Great Eastern Railway Company submitted to the inhabitants a scheme for making a Dock on the south side of Lynn, and offered to defray one-third of the estimated cost (£40,000), on condition that the Corporation gave another third, and that the remainder was raised by subscription. The Corporation, with the sanction of the town, agreed to give £10,000 to the project, which would have conferred such immense advantages upon this port, but afterwards withdrew their promise, although notice of application for the bill had already been given to Parliament. It was calculated that at least 200,000 tons of coal would have annually passed through Lynn to the London market, if the dock had been made.

The ESTUARY of the WASH is an indentation on the north-eastern coast of Great Britain, bounded by Hunstanton Point on the Norfolk coast, and Wainfleet Point on the Lincolnshire coast, being nearly 17 miles long and 13 wide, and having a superficial area of about 220 square miles. A little more than two-thirds of this extent is dry at low water of spring tides, and the remainder varies from five to sixteen fathoms deep. A very large portion is covered with comparatively still water, and the shores for the most part consist of a soil that is easily abraded or scoured away by the currents, and this, combined with the alluvial matter brought down by the rivers from the interior of the country, forms together a mass held in mechanical suspension, varying in quantity from 1 in 150 to 1 in 600. This alluvial matter is only held in suspension so long as it experiences a certain degree of motion or agitation, and as soon as a period of still water occurs it is precipitated to the bottom, the quantity of course being greatest where the water is most stagnant. Adjoining the mouths of the Ouse and Nene, at the upper part of the Estuary, an extensive district of deposit has accumulated, comprising several thousand acres, a very large portion of which is covered only for a few feet by spring tides. Some of this has been already enclosed, other portions are in a fit state to be so, and the remainder, extending to low water mark, is in various stages of progressive development towards the same state. A considerable extent of this area is exposed to continued agitation by both tidal and fresh waters and waves formed by the prevalent winds, the result of which is that the sedimental matter is kept more or less constantly in a state of motion; and consequently, as soon as it is deposited in one place, it is taken up and carried away by the waves and currents to another; so that if the Estuary were left to the mere operation of nature alone, and not assisted by artificial works, a very considerable period must necessarily elapse before it arrived at that stage at which it could be advantageously reclaimed or embanked from the sea. The great desideratum in all reclamation works is the promotion of still water. To attain this end, it is necessary to confine the rivers and streams which discharge their waters into the Estuary, into channels of proper capacity, both for the tidal and fresh waters, and carry them in as direct courses as practicable to deep water or the general outfall at sea, so arranging the points of juncture of the several rivers and streams as to avoid the creation of eddies, or any interference with each other which can operate injuriously or check in any manner the discharge from, or the filling of, the several channels. In addition to this, works must be constructed to facilitate and encourage the deposit of the alluvial matter held in suspension.

In the year 1837, a few influential and really patriotic individuals, at the head of whom was the late Lord William Bentinck, formed an extensive plan of enclosing the whole, or a very large portion, of the Wash, which, with the rivers discharging their waters into it, Sir John Rennie was instructed to survey and report upon. The objects sought to be accomplished on the basis of his Report, which was presented in July, 1839, were the carrying of the four rivers—Witham, Welland, Nene, and Ouse—by one common outfall to sea, thereby affording a great improvement to navigation, and imparting a natural drainage to a vast district of low and fen lands in the counties of Lincoln, Cambridge, and Norfolk, and benefiting other lands in adjoining counties, through which these rivers flow, or in which they have their origin. In the accomplishment of this truly magnificent design, it was intended to reclaim and embank from the sea the flat land of the Estuary, which it was reckoned would be sufficiently valuable when enclosed, to defray the whole cost of the improvement, without imposing any charge upon the parties interested in the navigation through, or the drainage by, the rivers in question. In this gigantic plan it was proposed to deepen the outfall of these rivers, to correct and straighten their channels, confine them between substantial and well-formed banks, and then unite them all in one general channel in the middle of the Great Wash. The whole of the smaller channels and shoal water of the Estuary were intended to be closed. Artificial means were designed to check the currents and waves, so as to obtain still water, favourable for the deposit of the silt and warp held in suspension, and which, when deposited, would in a few years raise the whole bed of the Estuary sufficiently high to convert it into good land, when it might be wholly embanked from the tide. The quantity of land that might in this way be ultimately recovered from the sea, was estimated at 150,000 acres, about half as large as the County of Rutland, and it was proposed to give it the name of Victoria County, in honour of our beloved Sovereign. A company was projected, and Parliamentary powers were sought. The capital of this original scheme was to have been £2,000,000, divided into 20,000 shares of £100 each. Three unsuccessful applications were made to Parliament, but a fourth succeeded, and a company, with a much smaller capital and a greatly reduced scheme, obtained Parliamentary powers to improve, not the four rivers, but one only—the Ouse. This act was obtained in 1846, the capital was fixed at £500,000, in 10,000 shares of £50 each, and a tract of about 32,000 acres of land in the Estuary was granted to the company, in consideration of the works they proposed to execute. To enable them to carry out this reclamation, it was judged necessary to make a cut two miles in length through part of the North Lynn Estate, belonging to the Bentinck family, so as to prolong the river Ouse to Howard's Sluice, from which it was proposed to train another channel across a sand bank, called the Vinegar Middle, to the Breast Beacon. The state of the money market immediately after the passing of the act deterred the Company from proceeding with any works. Negotiations were also opened and concluded with the Corporation of Lynn and the Eau Brink Commissioners, whereby it was agreed that in consideration of the advantages that would accrue to the navigation and drainage, each of the above-mentioned bodies should contribute the sum of £60,000, on condition that the Company, at their own cost, introduced a bill, and endeavoured to obtain an act in the ensuing session of Parliament, to legalize the contributions and to provide the necessary power for raising the money; and that provision be made in the said bill for securing the execution of the proposed cut below Lynn to deep water, and the works connected therewith, with as little delay as practicable; and that the company should raise a sum sufficient, with the amount of contributions, for their execution; and to provide that such sum and contribution should be made specially applicable thereto. As in the act, the Company was prohibited from prosecuting any works of reclamation until the navigation and drainage requirements were complied with, it was also stipulated that the Corporation of Lynn should co-operate with the directors of the company in endeavouring to obtain the consent of the Admiralty for permission to proceed with the works of warping, contemporaneously with, or as soon as might be convenient after, the formation of the cut across the marshes. It was at this time (1848) that the late Mr. Robert Stephenson became associated with Sir John Rennie, as joint Engineer of the Company, it being thought that the adhesion of an engineer of such eminence would give a feeling of greater security to the shareholders, and entitle the undertaking to a larger share of public confidence. The bill was introduced into Parliament in the session of 1848-'9, but before it became law the Company sustained a severe loss by the sudden decease of their chairman, Lord George Bentinck, whose honourable and unremitting exertions on all occasions for the welfare of the Company, and the promotion and security of the interests of the shareholders, elicited, as they deserved, the deepest respect for the memory, and gratitude for the efforts of the lamented nobleman. The late Sir W. J. H. B. Ffolkes, Bart., succeeded Lord George Bentinck as chairman, and continued to act in that capacity till his death, in 1860. In the preceding session of Parliament an act was passed, known as the Preliminary Inquiries Amendment Act, under which the Tidal Harbour Commissioners, on behalf of the Admiralty, held an inquiry at Lynn, on the 12th and 13th of April, 1849. Captains Vetch and Washington were the inspectors appointed to make the inquiry, and the Company was represented by the late Thomas Wing, Esq. A large number of witnesses was examined on behalf of the Company, and some on behalf of the Corporation of Lynn and the Eau Brink Commissioners. Various plans, charts, estimates, and reports were submitted to the inspectors; the latter were printed with the evidence, and form a valuable record of opinions of talented and practical men. The report of the inspectors, so far as their inquiry extended, was favourable to the Company, and the bill was proceeded with; and notwithstanding a determined opposition on the part of the Eau Brink Commissioners, who, as a body, had actually agreed to the terms of the arrangement as sought to be embodied in the act, it passed both Houses of Parliament, and received the Royal Assent on the 1st August, 1849. The contributions of £120,000 thus authorized to be added to their funds, materially improved the position and prospects of the Company; but still the large allotments of land to be made to the frontagers in purchase of their rights, the one per centage to the Crown as a consideration for the cession of its claims, considerable sums paid to owners of land by way of obviating opposition in Parliament, or as compensation for alleged rights, and the still adverse though improving state of the money market, tended to retard the operations of the Company and the prosecution of the undertaking for nearly four years; but in 1850 a contract was entered into with Messrs. Peto and Betts to make the two cuts for the sum of £143,000, and to complete them in three years from the time of obtaining possession of the land; and on Nov. 8th, 1850, the first sod of the New Cut through the marshes was turned by the chairman, Sir W. J. H. B. Ffolkes, Bart, assisted by the Earl of Leicester, the Earl of Hardwicke, and the Mayor of Lynn, (Walter Moyse, Esq.,) in presence of about 10,000 spectators. There was also a grand procession of the Corporation and other authorities, benefit societies, &c.

The works of the first two mile Cut proceeded very vigorously until March, 1852, when the Eau Brink Commissioners filed a Bill in Chancery against the Company and their officers, to restrain them from proceeding with the construction of the Cut in the way they were executing it, namely, partly by excavation and partly by the scour of the tide. It seems very difficult now, to account for the hostility of the Eau Brink Commissioners. The lowering of the outfall of the Ouse was a very important matter for the owners of fen lands; and nearly all engineering testimony concurred, that the result of the company's operations must be a considerable lowering of the low water mark at Lynn. Indeed, unless this had been demonstrated, the contributors would never have assented to pay the sum of £60,000 towards the Company's works. The great advantage of a lower outfall was considered of such importance, that the Middle Level Drainage Commissioners expended above £400,000 in improving their outfall at St. Germain's to the extent of four feet. The operations of the Company, it was asserted, would effect a still greater lowering than this, and would be advantageous, not only to the Middle, but also to the South Level, both of which united formed the district under the charge of the Eau Brink Commissioners. The contribution of £60,000 was therefore a comparatively trifling consideration for the very large benefit which it was stated would accrue. The improvement effected in the drainage of the Fens rendered a still further lowering of the Outfall essential to its maintenance, and the consolidation of the land had so lowered the surface level, as really necessitated a still further lowering of the Outfall, to continue their relative positions. Excited public meetings of the owners of lands, and meetings of the Commissioners of Drainage were held, and opinions freely given that the proposed scheme would not effect the object—that instead of a gain there would be a loss in the drainage outfall—and a bar be created to the outfall of the waters. More moderate assertions were made that the gain would be six or seven inches instead of the three feet promised. These apprehensions, widely diffused and strongly insisted on, naturally excited the unwilling contributors to an animosity, which even at this short distance of time, appears scarcely credible, and the operations of the Company were seriously impeded and rendered very costly. The Acts of 1846 and 1849 require that the Company should commence their works by forming a Cut across the Marshes, and should also form a New Cut or channel across Vinegar Middle. In both acts the identical words are used for both Cuts, and nothing is stated about the mode of doing the work; nothing of digging or excavation. The question therefore was—whether the first Cut of two miles in length through the marsh, was to be done partly by manual labour and partly by scour, or wholly by manual labour. The contractors, Messrs. Peto and Betts, proceeded to do it partly by scour. The Corporation of Lynn (who contributed £60,000), and the Middle Level Commissioners, (whose lands were more than half of the whole of the Eau Brink lands,) were quite satisfied with the proposed mode of excavation. The Eau Brink Commissioners, however, filed a Bill to restrain the Company and their contractors from scouring any portion of the cut, and the Vice-Chancellor, after many days' discussion, decided against the Company, though he admitted it to be a case of difficulty. His judgment was confirmed on appeal to the Lords Justices. The Company, however, feeling that the course pursued was the scientific and economical one, and supported by Mr. R. Stephenson, Sir J. Rennie, Sir W. Cubitt, and a number of other engineers of eminence, endeavoured to effect an amicable arrangement with the opposing parties to prevent litigation and loss of time, and to avoid the heavy costs of applying to Parliament; but their proposals were not accepted, and the Company were necessitated to appeal for legislative powers to do that which scientific men declared was the proper way of doing it. An act was therefore applied for, and obtained in the session of 1853, fully authorizing the company to proceed with the works in the way the engineers considered the right mode; and so fully did the committees of both houses of Parliament concur in the course pursued by the Company, that their opponents were not allowed to add a single word to, or expunge one from the bill. The act received the Royal Assent on the 9th May, 1853, and the contractors resumed their work in the beginning of the following June—after a suspension of sixteen months. At the time the Injunction was obtained, the contractors had let the waters of the Ouse pass through the New Cut to assist in scouring out the bottom. The Court of Chancery required that the tide should be excluded from the Cut, and expensive dams had to be constructed at each end, to comply with the order of the court. The first operations of the contractors, under the powers of the new act, were to remove these dams, so as to employ the waters of the Ouse as a scouring power to remove the softer portions of the bottom of the new channel. At the same time, a dam called the Cross Bank was constructed across the old channel, so that it might be stopped as soon as it was safe, and the waters of the Ouse diverted down the new channel, to effect the greatest possible scour for its excavation. The dams at the upper and lower ends of the new Cut were partially removed, and the tide admitted through it on the 21st and 22nd July, 1853, and on the 25th November in the same year, the dam across the old channel was closed, and the whole of the fresh and tidal waters of the Ouse were diverted into the New Cut. Very shortly afterwards, the effect of the scour became most perceptible, and daily continued to increase, so that during the winter, very nearly one million of cubic yards of silt, earth, and mud were scoured away; and by the February following (1854) the low water mark was deemed to have been lowered two feet. The navigation too, derived an equivalent advantage, large vessels being able to come up to, and depart from Lynn, during any ordinary tide, whereas formerly, they were accustomed to be detained for ten days or a fortnight, waiting in the lower roads, before they could reach Lynn, to the great loss and inconvenience of the merchants and others. The natural process of silting or warping up the extensive space occupied by the old channel, became very evident immediately after the opening of the new Cut; and within three months, the deposit at the back of the bank or dam increased in perpendicular height from 8 to 10 feet, while lower down the channel it rose in some places 2, 3, and 4 feet. The average width of the magnificent Cut across the Marshes is about 420 feet at high, and 310 feet at low water. As the Cut became lowered in depth, the current being confined between banks soon scoured a channel through the Vinegar Middle. The banks of this lower channel are formed of fascines, clay, and cliff stone, which will be added to, as the works of the Company proceed. At present they are from six to eight feet above low water. As this latter work was carried out, the low water mark gradually lowered to the extent of 4 feet 6 inches, by February, 1855.

In 1857, another application was made to Parliament for an Act to alter, amend, and consolidate the acts relating to the Company. By the previous acts there were various charges and liens made upon all the land to be reclaimed, which in fact constituted so many distinct mortgages upon the Company's property; but by the Act in question they were entirely done away with and more simple arrangements entered into. The contributions of the Corporation of Lynn and the Eau Brink Commissioners were reduced from £60,000 each body to £55,000; and whereas before, they might claim the return of all the money they had paid, if the works were not completed by a specified time, the act of 1857 made every payment to the Company final, whether the works were completed or not. The owners of Green Marsh Lands were also required to contribute one-third of the full amount of benefit which the works would confer on their property. The lands to be embanked and reclaimed were previously only vested in the Company when reclaimed, but by the act of 1857 they became so vested as soon as the Royal Assent was given. The most important provision of this act was the permission given to the Company at once to commence works of reclamation, from which they were entirely prohibited by the first act of 1846, and on which they were allowed to spend only £5000 under the act of 1849 until the two Cuts were wholly finished. This Act also repealed the limitation of time for the completion of the works. There were also various other improvements and modifications, which materially benefited the Company, and enabled them to proceed more energetically with the works, which were calculated to accelerate the formation of land, by promoting the deposit of alluvial matter in the most eligible situations in the Estuary. On the east side of the Estuary a bank called the Babingley Shelter Bank has been constructed, and also a bank enclosing about 583 acres of green marsh, now the property of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and the Hon. Mrs. Howard. The effect of these works has been to silt up a very extensive tract of land, so rapidly, indeed, as to prevent even the samphire growing upon it. On the west side the construction of a bank at Admiral's Corner to protect Bentinck's Bank, and also to promote a deposit of warp, and other works were proceeded with, and the guide banks of the lower two-mile Cut at the upper end were raised to a little higher level than high water at spring-tides. These works have been carried on with various results, the direct result being very satisfactory, as the land they were intended to reclaim has been raised several feet in perpendicular height by the deposit of warp and other earthy matter upon it; and no doubt can possibly exist of the ultimate recovery of a large tract of fertile and valuable land. The process is necessarily very slow, and the tides and storms have frequently interfered to disappoint the hopes and expectations of the Company and their engineers. More than once the highest tides and the heaviest gales have simultaneously exerted their united power on the new works, and the result has been damaging to the property of the Company and retarding to their operations; but the works designed, have realised the intentions of the engineers, in promoting the formation of land. M. J. West, Esq., is chairman of the Company; Sir John Rennie and John Fowler, Esq., engineers; and James Botterell, Esq., secretary.

The Port of King's Lynn having a free communication with the German Ocean and all the north of Europe, and extending its inland navigation by means of the Great Ouse and its collateral rivers, into eight counties, enjoys many commercial advantages. It imports annually about 150,000 tons of coals, chiefly from the ports of Durham and Northumberland, and large quantities of oilcake from various parts. It formerly imported upwards of 2000 pipes of wine yearly; the number of tuns imported in 1771 amounted to 1030, and in 1801 to 1280. It appears to have been celebrated as a wine port as early as the reign of Henry III., whose purveyor sent him 36 tuns from Lynn, pursuant to an order sent by that monarch from Kenilworth. The chief exports are corn, coprolite, and sand; and of the former, 142,530 quarters passed through this port in 1863. It appeared by the report of the Commissioners for auditing the public accounts, in 1784, that the annual receipts of this port were then greater than those of any other in England, except London, Liverpool, Bristol, and Hull; but during the last 15 years they have become gradually much reduced. The number of vessels registered at the Custom-house, in 1776, was 85; but in 1835 they had increased to 122, exclusive of a great number of small craft, and about 50 fishing-boats. There are now, however, only about 160 vessels, inclusive of fishing-boats, and their aggregate tonnage amounts to 16,500. The fishing-boats* bring in shrimps, cockles, smelts, cod, &c., and harbour in a small creek at the North End, called Fisher Fleet. There are about 700 seamen belonging to the port. Lynn had formerly three or four ships employed in the whale fisheries of Greenland and Davis's Straits; but since the demand for oil has been greatly decreased by the introduction of gas, this hazardous, but often lucrative trade, has been here discontinued, though Hull, Whitby, and some other places on the eastern coast are still engaged in it to a considerable extent. Many large vessels have been built here in the ship yards at the South-gate and the Friars. In 1370, when Edward III. required all the seaports to furnish him with ships for his expedition against France, Lynn sent 19; Hull, 16; Harwich, 14; Ipswich, 12; and London, 24. In 1598, two men-of-war were fitted out by this town and Yarmouth.

RAILWAYS.—The Station at Lynn is a wretched wooden structure, which, it is hoped, will be shortly replaced by a more handsome and commodious building, better suited to the requirements of the town. From it, railways radiate eastward to Norwich, via Swaffham, East Dereham, and Wymondham; southward to Ely, via Downham Market, with a branch to Wisbech; northward to that pretty sea-bathing place, Hunstanton; and westward to Sutton Bridge, in Lincolnshire. There is also a short line extending along a considerable portion of the harbour. These great railway facilities will shortly be further increased by the construction of a branch from the Hunstanton line at Heacham, through Burnham to Wells.

The CUSTOM-HOUSE, on Purfleet Quay, is a square Dutch-looking building of freestone, with two tiers of pilasters, the lower of the Doric, and the upper of the Ionic order, surmounted by a curious pyramidal roof, from which rises a small open turret, terminating in a pinnacle at the height of 90 feet. In a niche, over the entrance-door, is a statue of Charles II. This edifice, which contains several commodious apartments, was erected in 1683, by Sir John Turner, Kt., as an Exchange for merchants, but was converted to its present use when the old Custom-House in Tuesday Market-place was disused. The founder was three times mayor of Lynn, and for many years one of its representatives in Parliament. The present officers are—James Turner, Esq., collector; Mr. Thos. Hollis, clerk; Angus McNab and Jph. Wm. Bullin, examining officers; and Robt. Platten, Saml. Thos. Pratt, Edw. Peeps, Mattw. Suggett, Wm. Wolsey, and Fredk. Southey, out-door officers. Lieut. Parke, R.N., is the inspecting coastguard officer. The jurisdiction of the port extends to Brancaster Staith on the east, and to the entrance of Wisbech harbour on the west. The Light-house at Hunstanton and the floating light at Lynn Well, off the Long Sand, belong to the Trinity House. The small PILOT OFFICE at St. Ann's Fort is about to be superseded by a new building on the Common Staith Quay, adjoining the Public Baths. This edifice will cost about £400, and comprise rooms for the Pilot Office and Mooring Dues Office, stores for buoys, &c. It will be of red brick, with stone dressings, and will be surmounted by an octagonal tower, about 50 feet high. In 1773, an Act of Parliament was passed "for the better regulation and government of the Pilots conducting ships and vessels to and out of the port of King's Lynn, for laying down Moorings in the harbour of the said port, and for preventing mischief by fire therein," &c. This was amended by another act passed in 1841, under the powers of which about £13,000 have been expended. There are now efficient moorings for 200 vessels, with ample accommodation for that number to discharge their cargoes simultaneously. J. O. Smetham, Esq., is Clerk to the Pilot Commissioners. The pilotage is 1s. 6d., 2s., or 2s. 6d. per foot on vessels, according to their draught of water. Here are 20 pilots, who have a station in the Lynn Roads, about 12 miles from Lynn. Mr. M. R. Garland is the head pilot and beaçoner, and Mr. Robt. Frankling is the office clerk. The three Legal Quays in Lynn are Purfleet, King's Staith, and Common Staith, the latter of which is large and commodious, extending behind the Tuesday Market-place. In front of a large house in King's Staith square is a statue of Charles I. The want of legal Bonding warehouses and yards for general merchandise was long a serious disadvantage to the Lynn merchants, who had to pay the duty on every article immediately after its importation, except on foreign corn. In 1832, three bonding timber yards were established here; and in 1835, the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury opened the port for the bonding of sugar, teas, &c., brought coastwise. In 1837, it was made a warehousing port for the importation of all foreign goods, except tobacco, tea, and East India goods, which may be removed here under bond from London or other ports, privileged with their direct importation: thus the risk of the duty upon these articles is saved, as in the event of goods being lost at sea, upon which the duty has been paid, the amount of the same is irrecoverable.

* Sticklebacks.—In December, 1800, and for several weeks after, the fishermen of Lynn caught an immense quantity of small fish, called sticklebacks. One boat, with two men, took in one night 200 bushels, which they sold to the farmers for manure, and for boiling to extract the oil, at the rate of 7d. per bushel. There was a similar influx of sticklebacks in 1770, when they drove away every other kind of fish out of the river.

The INLAND REVENUE OFFICE is in King's Staith square, and the "Lynn Collection" includes all Norfolk as far as Holt and Diss. Robert Burton, Esq., is the collector; Messrs. John Lazenby Kendall, and Michael A. Morris are the clerks; Alfred Sherriff, supervisor; Chas. Foster, inspector of corn returns; and Thos. Mackie, revenue officer. The TAX OFFICE is also in King's Staith square, and Wm. Smith Lecky, Esq., is surveyor for King's Lynn, and the Hundreds of Freebridge-Lynn, Marshland, Smithdon, and Brother-cross. John Ewing Jeffery, Esq., is clerk to the Tax Commissioners; and Mr. T. S. Share, of Valinger's road, is collector of taxes. The STAMP OFFICE is in King street, and Fredc. Kendle, Esq., is the distributor for Lynn district. In Queen street is the METERS' OFFICE. There are 20 fast meters, of whom Mr. Saml. Linay is the "headsman." These meters are appointed by the Town Council, and have the occasional assistance of several extra meters. The Town Council also appoints the collector of town dues (Mr. F. J. Swatman), the haven and harbour master (Mr. Robt. Eggett), the collector of Haling, Up River, and Petty Tolls (Mr. Thos. Hill), the collector of Eau-Brink Tolls (Mr. Thos. Davies), the collector of Mooring Dues (Edw. Self, Esq.), and the Beaçoner and Pilot-Master (Mr. M. R. Garland). The TOWN DUES, from the payment of which freemen are almost entirely exempt, form the largest item of the income of the Corporation, averaging for the six years ending Michaelmas, 1832, no less than £2521 per annum; but they vary with the commerce of the town, being levied as beaçonage, stakeage, anchorage, ballast, bulkbreak, lastage, and groats, &c., &c., in consideration of the Corporation keeping up the defences against the sea, and supporting the harbour, bridges, and other public works. In 1840, they amounted to £3399; in 1861, to £1716; in 1862, to £1892; and in 1863, to £1781. The MOORING DUES amount to about £900, and the ESTUARY DUES to £1300 a year. The annual earnings of the pilots average about £60 each man.

The MARKETS, held every Tuesday and Saturday, are well supplied with cattle and provisions of every description. That held on Tuesday is also an extensive corn market, numerously attended by farmers, merchants, carriers, and others, from the towns and villages within a circuit of from ten to twenty miles. Two fairs, granted by the charter of Henry VIII., are held here yearly; one, called the Mart, is proclaimed on St. Valentine's Day, and continues for a fortnight or three weeks, for pleasure and the sale of toys, &c.; the other, called the Cheese Fair, is held in King street, on the 17th of October, for cheese, cattle, pedlery, &c.; and on the same day there is a Horse Fair in the adjacent village of Gaywood, where there is also a stock fair on June 22nd. Two Cattle Fairs are held on the second Mondays in April and November. The TUESDAY MARKET-PLACE, one of the finest open squares in any provincial town, covers about three acres, and contains many large and handsome houses, the Corn Exchange, two good inns, and several retail shops. It formerly had in its centre a beautiful free-stone market cross, rebuilt by subscription in 1710, and consisting of a peristyle of sixteen Ionic columns, supporting an octagon room encompassed by an open gallery and ornamented on four sides with statues of the four cardinal virtues, the whole terminated by a cupola; but this building, being in a dangerous state of decay, was taken down in May, 1831. The old shambles and fish-market, which stood on each side of it, were removed in 1811 and 1812. The site of this cross is now occupied by an elegant drinking fountain surmounted by a public lamp, erected in 1858, by John Malam, Esq., at a cost of more than £300. The fountain is of stone, elaborately ornamented with foliage and scroll work, and having at the four corners beautifully designed pelicans, from each of whose bills a constant stream of water flows into an enamelled basin beneath. A tall and handsome fluted column of iron, with foliated capital, rises from its top to a height of about 25 feet, and supports four gas lamps. The CORN EXCHANGE is on the west side of the Tuesday Market-place, and extends backwards to the small poultry and meat market on Common Staith Quay. It is 161 feet long by 51 feet wide, and was erected in 1854 at a cost of £2500. The front is of stone, divided into three compartments by four three-quarter columns of the Ionic order with semi-pilasters at their sides, supporting an entablature with bracketed cornice, above which is a balustraded parapet. The central compartment rises considerably higher than the parapet, and is crowned by a figure of Ceres with a group of agricultural implements. Over the three entrances are sunk panels, the central one containing the arms of Lynn, and the others sheaves of wheat carved in high relief. The interior forms one large room, with a roof of glass resting on iron trusses, supported by slender iron pillars against the walls. The quantity of corn sold here in 1863 was 88,108 qrs. of wheat and 88,779 qrs. of barley. The average price of the former was £2. 4s. 10³/₄d., and of the latter £1. 15s. 7d. per qr. The SATURDAY MARKET-PLACE is at the other end of High street, adjoining St. Margaret's Church, where the area (still too confined) was enlarged, and a Market-House erected in 1802, with two rooms above it,—one used as a news-room and the other as a billiard-room. This Market-House is a plain brick building, spoiling the view of St. Margaret's Church, and standing on the site of the Chapel of St. John, a fine decorated structure, which having become ruinous was pulled down in 1779. The CATTLE MARKET, formerly held on the site of the Gas-works, now occupies Paradise field, which was converted to its present use in 1826. The land was granted by the corporation, and enclosed, fitted up with pens, &c., by subscription. It was enlarged by the addition of the site of Framingham's Hospital in 1848, and a further enlargement is in contemplation, as it is still too small for the great fairs held in it in April and November. It has entrances from Broad street, Norfolk street, and Paradise lane, and is well supplied with sheep and cattle on market days, especially every alternate Tuesday, when there is an extensive show. By an Act of Parliament obtained in 1859, the corporation acquired all the necessary powers for enlarging, altering, or improving existing market places, or providing new ones, so as to meet the requirements of the town.

The WATER WORKS belong to the corporation, and were established several centuries ago, on a small scale, but were greatly improved under an Act passed in 1819, and still further under another Act passed in 1859, "For making further provision for the better supply of water to the Borough of King's Lynn and adjacent districts," &c. In 1699, a ship was sent to Norway for pump wood, to make water pipes of, at the expense of the mayor and burgesses. Not having any fresh springs, the town was formerly much distressed for want of water; but a pure and abundant supply was ultimately obtained by cutting a canal from Kettle-mills to the Gaywood river, which has its grand source from three copious springs, near Grimston churchyard, about seven miles east of Lynn, and receives in its course the springs of Reffley and the drain water of a fertile valley. At Kettle-mills, near the north-east angle of the town, a water-wheel and three pumps formerly raised the water into a large reservoir; but this being found insufficient for the increasing wants of the town, a handsome circular tower engine-house was erected in 1829, with a cast-iron cistern at the top, into which the water, after being filtered through a bed of sand, was pumped by a steam-engine of ten-horse power. In 1830, the old wooden pipes, which conveyed the water through all the streets, were taken up, and cast-iron ones laid down in their stead. The cost of these improvements was about £10,000. In 1861, the works were reconstructed from plans prepared by the late George R. Stephenson, Esq., a new engine of forty-horse power (capable of lifting in twelve hours 1,000,000 gallons of water 100 feet high) was put down, and a new engine-house, a new stand pipe, and a house for the resident engineer were erected, at a total cost of £8000. In 1863, the pipes were extended to Gaywood, and that village has now a constant supply of water from these works. Under the act of 1859 the water rates average about a shilling in the pound on the rents at which houses are assessed to the poor rate. If supplied by meter, water is charged from 5d. to 9d. per 1000 gallons, according to the quantity consumed, and the rents of the meters vary from 5s. to 38s. a year. There are now two pumping engines of twelve-horse and forty-horse power respectively. Edwin Durrant, Esq., is manager; Mr. Joseph Wootton, resident engineer; Mr. Thos. Wootton, engineman; and Messrs. Wm. Begley, Robert Fuller, and Thos. Fulcher, collectors of rates.

The GAS WORKS, near the South Gate, were established by the father of the present proprietor, John Malam, Esq., in 1825, at a cost of about £14,000, including the expense of seven miles of piping laid through the streets, and since that time they have been very considerably enlarged. The entrance to the works is by a handsome cemented lodge gateway, surmounted by a circular dome. There are three gasholders, one of which will contain 70,000, and each of the others 16,000 cubic feet of gas, for which consumers pay at the rate of 5s. per 1000 cubic feet. Mr. S. Almond is manager.

The COUNTY COURT HALL, on the east side of the London road, opposite the venerable tower of the Grey Friars' Church, is a neat building of brick with Ancaster stone dressings, in the Italian style, erected in 1861. It contains all the requisite offices, together with a residence for the keeper; and the court room, on the upper story, is 47 feet 7 inches long by 27 feet wide. Lynn County Court District comprises the parishes of Anmer, Ashwicken, Babingley, Bawsey, West Bilney, Castle Rising, Clenchwarton, Congham, Dersingham, Flitcham, Gaywood, Gaywood-Highgate, Gayton, Gayton Thorpe, Grimston, Hardwick, Harpley, Heacham, Hillington, Holme-next-the-Sea, Hunstanton, Ingoldisthorpe, King's Lynn, North Lynn, West Lynn, Leziate, Great and Little Massingham, Middleton, Mintlyn, West Newton, Pentney, Roydon, North Runceton, Great Ringstead, Saddlebow, Sandringham, Sedgeford, Setch, Shernborne, Snettisham, Terrington St. Clement's, Terrington St. John's, Tilney All Saints, Tilney St. Lawrence, Tilney-cum-Islington, East Walton, East and West Winch, Wolverton, North and South Wootton, Wiggenhall St. Germain, Wiggenhall St. Mary Magdalen, Wiggenhall St. Peter, and Wiggenhall St. Mary-the-Virgin. Thomas Jacob Birch, Esq., of Wretham Hall, is judge; George Ebenezer

Foster, Esq., of Cambridge, treasurer; Philip Wilson, Esq., registrar; Mr. John Haycock Horsley, clerk; Mr. John Henry Scott Durbin, high bailiff; and James Smith, assistant bailiff. The court is held monthly.

The CORPORATION holds much property, and enjoys many privileges and immunities, conferred by eighteen Royal Charters, of which a brief, but sufficiently comprehensive survey is inserted from page 713 to 715. By the "Act to provide for the regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales," passed in 1835, the constitution of the corporation was changed, and the borough divided into three wards, and placed under the government of a TOWN COUNCIL, consisting of a Mayor, six Aldermen, and eighteen Councillors. The great majority of the inhabitants and principal ratepayers were excluded from the old corporation; and the freemen exercised no control over the corporate authorities. The municipal government and the administration of justice were vested in a self-elected body, without local responsibility, composed of a mayor, twelve aldermen, and eighteen common councilmen. The mayor was annually elected by the common councilmen; the aldermen and common councilmen mutually elected each other, and retained office for life. Aldermen only were eligible to the mayoralty, and the magistracy was composed of those who had served the office of mayor. The governing body was invested by the early charters of the borough with the functions of a local parliament. It had the power of conferring, by gift or purchase, the freedom of the borough, with important mercantile privileges, and had the unshackled control of revenues exceeding £6000 per annum and the administration of various charitable funds. The criminal jurisdiction of the magistracy extended to all crimes except high treason, and the civil jurisdiction of the mayor to actions of every kind. By the Municipal Act, Lynn was appointed one of the boroughs to have a Commission of the Peace, consisting of the mayor, the ex-mayor, and about a dozen magistrates. The court of Quarter Sessions is continued; but the Court of Conscience, established by an act of the 16th George III., for the recovery of debts under 40s., has been superseded by the County Court. The Guildhall Court, established by the charter of the 29th of Henry VIII., was held monthly, for trial of all sorts of pleas and plaints; but its constitution was changed by the Municipal Act, under which it is called the Borough Court of Record, for the trial of civil actions. This court is, however, never held now, as plaintiffs usually prefer to bring their actions in the County Court, or in the Superior Courts of Westminster. The Admiralty Court, which was held monthly, was abolished by the Municipal Act, but the corporation still has jurisdiction over the Lynn waters for fishing purposes, in accordance with the charter of King James. A Court Leet is held yearly, on the 28th October, by the Town Council, to whom the manor belongs. The Leet Jury consists of 20 burgesses styled Headboroughs, who have the inspection of weights and measures. Petty Sessions are held every Monday at the Guildhall.

The REAL PROPERTY OF THE CORPORATION consists chiefly of lands and houses, partly within the borough and partly at a distance. The estates within the borough produce a rental of £1856; the Gaywood estate is let for £161; St. Mary's estate for £35; St. Germain's and St. Peter's estate for £551; West Winch and Setchey estate for £69; and Snettisham estate for £677. The town dues amount to about £1800 a year; the wharfrage and market tolls to £1450. These sums with a few smaller items swell the total yearly income to upwards of £8000. Among the chief items of expenditure are £800 for rates, taxes, repairs, &c., of property; about £1200 for salaries to municipal officers; £300 for sessions' expenses; £430 for gaol and maintenance of prisoners; £1260 for police establishment; £500 for cemetery; £350 for quays, bridges, and sluices; £390 for annuities, &c., &c. In 1832 their bonded debts amounted to £7800; and the life annuities, which had been purchased of them for about £14,000, then amounted to £1200 a year.

This has since been considerably reduced by deaths. The Mayor had usually an allowance of £200 per annum towards his expenses till 1830, when it was discontinued. One of the most valuable privileges of the freemen (especially merchants) is their exemption from the greater part of the town dues. Until the passing of the Reform Act, in 1832, they had the exclusive right of voting for two Members of Parliament, which the borough has returned since the reign of Edward I., as noticed at page 714. The greatest number of electors polled within 30 years previous to 1831 was 283. In 1835, the number of registered voters was 857; but in 1837 they had increased to 930, of whom 248 were freemen and 682 burgesses in right of occupation. The lists of the latter, published in 1863, contain about 830, but many of them are also in the list of freemen, and some of them appear on the lists of both parishes. There are scarcely 100 freemen at the present time. Sir Robert Walpole represented this borough in seventeen successive parliaments, and was returned notwithstanding his expulsion from the House of Commons. (Vide Houghton Hall.) Its present representatives are the Right Hon. Lord Stanley, D.C.L., (son and heir of the Earl of Derby,) and John Henry Gurney, Esq. The number of municipal voters in 1863 was 1112, of whom 307 were in the North Ward, 417 in the Middle Ward, and 388 in the South Ward.

The regular POLICE FORCE consists of 1 superintendent, 3 sergeants, and 15 constables, of whom 4 are river police. The office is in Queen street, and Lieut. C. W. Reeves is the superintendent, and Harry M. Butcher, John Carr, and John Chase, sergeants. During the last sixty years, there have been in the borough only four or five popular breaches of the peace requiring the aid of special constables; one of which was in 1814, when there was a riot amongst the sailors, originating in a strike for wages: the ringleaders were apprehended and lodged in goal, but the mob speedily dispossessed the special constables of their staves, broke open the goal, and released the rioters, after which the military were sent for, and the offenders were retaken, and subsequently tried at the assizes. At the contested election in 1822, a turbulent body of bankers employed in the Eau Brink cut, pulled down and burned the hustings; the election was consequently postponed, the military called in, and the ringleaders being secured, were sent to Norwich, where they were tried, convicted, and punished. A similar riot took place at the election in July, 1852, when the hustings were again burned, to the great danger of St. Margaret's church; the police were attacked, and peace was not restored till after the riot-act had been read.

The GUILD-HALL, sometimes called Trinity-Hall, from its having been anciently the hall of the Trinity Guild, is a venerable building, in the Saturday Market-place, presenting a chequered front of flint and stone, and having behind it several modern additions of white brick, comprising elegant Assembly and Card Rooms, which by means of large folding doors, can be opened out so as to form one apartment 87 feet long, 27 broad, and 22 in height. Adjoining these are the Council Room and the Magistrates' Room, each handsomely furnished. The Stone Hall occupies the greater portion of the ancient part of the building, being the front chamber, lighted by an extremely bold seven-light perpendicular window, and having under it the old prison cells. It is 58 feet long, 27 broad, and proportionally lofty, and is approached by a stone staircase. In it are held the Borough Courts, and also the adjourned Quarter Sessions for the County of Norfolk. In the assembly room and other apartments are many excellent paintings; amongst which are portraits of Charles I., Lord George Bentinck, Sir Thomas White, Lord Walpole, Sir Robert Walpole, Sir Benjamin Keene, King John, Henry IV., Edward VI., William III. and Mary, George III., and Lord Nelson. Amongst other curiosities preserved here is the old ducking-stool which formerly stood at Purfleet. The "Red Register of Lynn," which was repaired and rebound a few years ago, is supposed to be the oldest paper book in existence. It consists of 150 leaves, on which are transcribed wills, deeds of conveyance, and other memoranda, the earliest being a copy of a will dated 1309.

The BOROUGH GAOL, which adjoins the Guildhall, was enlarged and improved in 1831, at a cost of £2300. It has a neat white brick front, with apartments for the gaoler; and in the rear are cells and lodging-rooms with four day-rooms and four small yards for the inmates. It has accommodation for about fifty prisoners, but the number incarcerated at one time seldom exceeds ten or twelve, as those sentenced to more than two months' imprisonment are sent—the males to Norwich and the females to Wymondham, there being no proper means of classification here. Mr. John Batterbee is gaoler and hall keeper, Mrs. Batterbee, matron, Rev. John Fernie, M.A., chaplain, and T. M. Kendall, Esq., surgeon.

CLERK TO CHARITY TRUSTEES: Edw. Lane Swatman, Esq.

Under the Municipal Reform Act of 1835, the ten old wards of the borough (see page 711) are consolidated into three new wards, viz., NORTH WARD, comprehending North end, Jews' lane, Kettlewell, and Chequer Wards; MIDDLE WARD, including Trinity Hall, New Conduit, Sedgford lane, and Paradise Wards; and SOUTH WARD, containing Stonegate and South Lynn All Saints. As has been seen at page 709, the town has on the land side a wet fosse, and was formerly encompassed by a strongly fortified WALL, of which some ruins still remain, between the Red Mount and Kettle Mills; but the whole of that part of it called Guanock Wall, extending to the South Gate, has been removed, and its site is partly occupied by two rows of houses. Respecting the walls and fortifications, Blomefield is entirely silent, though Stow, in his chronicle, records the fortifying of Lynn in the reign of John, who made Savaric de Malione captain of the town. Mackerell affords no further information, than that the South Gate was built by Thomas Thirlby, in 1502; but the East Gate was evidently of the time of Edward III., and being inconveniently low, was taken down in 1800. The SOUTH GATE still remains, and is a large and handsome tower of the perpendicular period, forming a noble entrance to the town, having a lofty pointed archway for carriages, and two small ones for foot passengers. The external front is of stone, and the other sides of brick with stone quoins; the former is washed by the Esk rivulet, or Middleton Stop Drain, which was formerly crossed by a draw-bridge, but now by a brick arch. In the upper part of the tower, is a large apartment, lighted with square-headed windows of three lights each; and the whole is surmounted by a battlemented parapet. The WALL was constructed of brick, with rough flint and other stones imbedded in strong mortar, and strengthened on the inner side by pointed arches, springing from each other, and covered by a platform of earth, forming the rampart, above which rose the parapet and battlements, of which but little now remains. The best portion still existing lies north of Norfolk street and East gate. The RED MOUNT, or Our Lady's Chapel, (vide page 709,) stands on a conical mound in the Public Walks near the fosse, and consists of an octagonal tower of red brick; but within the external walls is a handsome cruciform chapel of stone, measuring from east to west 17 feet 7 inches, by 14 feet from north to south, and 13 in height. The roof of this chapel has numerous groins, &c., and exactly resembles the much-admired ceiling of the chapel at King's College, Cambridge. The chapel rises a story higher than the tower, and sufficient space is left to walk between the former and the external walls, which are about twenty-six feet in diameter, with buttresses at the angles, faced with stone. Beneath the chapel are two apartments, and from them an arched passage leads down to the vaults, or cells, below the surface of the mount, formerly lighted by small gratings near the roof. This very elegant and singular little building was for many years neglected, and consequently reduced to a filthy and dilapidated state; the lower apartment being used as a stable; but it was thoroughly cleansed and repaired about 35 years ago, by its owners, the Corporation, to whom its wanton destruction would have been a perpetual reproach. Its origin and founder are unknown, though it is supposed to have belonged to the "Guild of our Lady,"—a fraternity which was formed here in 1329. The Guild of St. Fabian and St. Sebastian also occasionally assembled in this chapel; where the profits, and offerings at the shrine of the Virgin, amounted in the first of Henry VIII., to £16. 10s., whilst those at St. Nicholas' chapel only produced £6. 4s., and those at St. James's, £2. 6s. 9d. Besides this, there were formerly here five other ancient chapels, viz., our Lady's, on the Bridge; St. Ann's, at the North End; St. Catherine's, on the Gaywood road; St. Lawrence's, which probably stood at Hardwick, outside the South Gate; and St. James's; but no vestiges of these are now extant, except part of the transept of the latter, which still remains behind the County Court Hall, adjoining St. James' burial ground, which is now disused.

The MONASTIC INSTITUTIONS of Lynn comprised a Benedictine Priory attached to St. Margaret's church and a College of Priests near it, the hospitals of St. John and St. Mary Magdalen, four lazaret houses, and five priories, most of them founded in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, in and before the reign of Edward I.; but of these, like the above-named chapels, only few vestiges now remain, except the hospital of St. Mary Magdalen, (see Almshouses,) and the lofty and elegant hexagonal tower of the Franciscan or GREY FRIARY, founded in 1264, by Thomas Feltham, on the site of the original town-mill. This tower formerly served as a landmark for ships entering the harbour, and being in the Grammar School garden, near the London road, forms an interesting object in the approach from the south. It is of red brick and stone, surmounted by a battlemented parapet, and lighted in two stories by handsome perpendicular windows with transoms. It is ascended by a spiral staircase, in a small turret on its northern side, and rests on the lofty groined arch, which formed the intersection of the transepts with the nave and chancel of the priory church. The Dominican or BLACK FRIARY which stood in Clough lane, and behind the site of the present Athenæum, where, in making some alterations in the stable about 25 years ago, several human skeletons were dug up, was founded by Thomas Gedney in 1272, and the last remains of it were swept away on the formation of the railway. The AUSTIN FRIARY was a stately edifice, standing between Austin street and Chapel street, partly on the site of the Black Horse public house. An arch of a gateway, now bricked-up, is all that remains of this convent of Augustine friars, which was granted at the Dissolution, with the Black and Grey Friaries, to John Eyre. The Friars de Pœnitentia settled at Lynn before the 5th of Henry I.; but where their house stood cannot now be ascertained. The College of priests, who had the charge of the Grammar School, was founded by Thomas Thorisby, who was mayor of Lynn in 1477, 1482, and 1502. Much of the building still remains in College lane, and the carved oak door is a good specimen of perpendicular woodwork, and bears a mutilated Latin inscription. The site of St. John's Hospital is unknown, though in it William Sautre, priest of St. Margaret's, when taken up for heresy, was obliged to read his recantation. The Carmelite or White Friary, in South Lynn, stood near the confluence of the rivers Nar and Ouse, in the field still called the Friars; but the whole has disappeared, except the small outer gateway, which is now fast falling into ruin. Two ancient houses, viz., the Mitre Inn, in Baker lane; and the Greenland Fishery public-house, in Bridge street; are supposed to have been monastic institutions. The former is said by tradition to have been a nunnery; and in the latter is a chamber, curiously painted in panels, with verses of Scripture, and figures representing the rich man and Lazarus, Faith, Hope, Charity, &c., all of which were completely covered with many coats of whitewash, till about 30 years ago, when they were accidentally discovered, and the walls scraped and washed down to the paintings, which appear to have been done in the latter half of the 17th century. There is no evidence to support the notion of these buildings having been religious houses, and they appear to have been erected long after the suppression of the monasteries, probably in the time of James I. Among the numerous GUILDS, or fraternities, associated here, for religious, as well as social and commercial purposes, the largest and most respectable was Trinity Guild, which had its rise previous to the reign of King John, and was endowed with the Common Staith Wharf and its appurtenances, valued at £42.6s. 8d. per annum, out of which £30 were distributed yearly among the poor brethren and other distressed persons. The possessions of this society were granted, on its dissolution, to the corporation, and its hall is still the Guild or Town Hall. Here were also a Merchants' Guild, and a Guild of St. George. The latter occupied a building in King street, adjoining the Shakspeare Inn, called St. George's Hall, and after being successively converted into a school, an exchange, and a court-house for the quarter sessions of the county, it was for some years used as a theatre, but is now a wool warehouse.

ST. MARGARET'S CHURCH, and the Benedictine Priory, which stood on the south side of it, in Priory lane, were founded in the reign of William Rufus, by Bishop Herbert de Losinga, the munificent founder of Norwich cathedral. The bishop, having laid the foundation, granted forty days indulgence to all who would contribute to the church and priory, the latter of which he made a cell to that of Norwich, and on its dissolution it was granted to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, together with the patronage and appropriation of the church. The greater part of the priory was soon afterwards pulled down to enlarge the churchyard, but fragments of the old wall, an arched gateway, and several windows varying in style and now forming parts of modern dwellings, may be seen in Priory lane, though none of them is of the date of the monastic building. The Church, though curtailed of its original dimensions, is still a noble pile, chiefly of freestone, and founded, no doubt, on the site of a more ancient structure. It is a cruciform edifice, comprising nave and chancel with aisles and clerestory, north and south transepts, two fine western towers, and a small chapel at the north-west angle. The towers are each 86 feet high, and one of them contains a good clock, and a fine peal of eight bells, re-cast about 1750. Both stand upon the original Norman foundations, and the interior of the south-west tower has a rich display of Norman columns, arcades, and arches of very early date. This tower has externally three stages of different styles of architecture, the basement being transitional Norman, the second story early-English, and the upper part decorated. The buttresses at the angles are square and very massive, and consist at the base of a series of lofty but slender clustered columns, with pointed arcades above. This tower is now embattled, and has crocketed pinnacles at the four corners, but was formerly surmounted by a spire 258 feet high, which was blown down on September 8th, 1741, and destroyed in its fall the nave and also the lantern tower, which rose from the four main arches at the intersection of the transepts with the nave and chancel. The north-west tower is all in the perpendicular style, and of four stages. It is terminated by a battlemented parapet enriched with quatrefoil panels, and has eight crocketed pinnacles. There is a small porch over the western door, above which is a large seven-light window of the perpendicular period, and in the gable is a niche containing a time-worn statue of St. Margaret. On the north side of the north-west tower is a small chapel, with a fine west window of five lights. It is known as Thorisby's chapel, being supposed to have been the burial place of that munificent benefactor of the town in the 15th century. The chapel of St. John, which formerly adjoined Thorisby's on the north, was a beautiful building in the decorated style, similar in character to the Grammar School at Norwich, and having, like it, a charnel house beneath; but it was pulled down in 1779 and a butchers' shambles erected on its site. The nave and transepts were rebuilt in 1747, when the whole building, which had been much injured by the fall of the spire, was repaired and re-roofed at a cost of £1000, half of which was given by Lord Orford. The east end of the church is of two stages, the lower being enriched with a band of rich quatrefoils with shields in the centre, above which are three niches with projecting brackets and canopies: the upper stage is almost filled by a large circular window having perpendicular mullions and being almost unique in design. The interior of this fine church would have a grand effect if it were judiciously restored and cleared of the unsightly pews and galleries which now disfigure it. The length of the church is about 240 feet and its width 132. It is lighted by above 70 windows, nearly all of which were formerly filled with stained glass, and its roof is supported by 22 clustered columns, from which spring depressed arches. The chancel is of the transitional Norman style, but perpendicular windows have been inserted in the clerestory, and the ceiling is flat. It is separated from the aisles by beautifully carved screens of the decorated period, and from the nave and transepts by one of Elizabethan character. The ancient carved stalls remain in the chancel, and the misereres are in good preservation, and are enriched with shields, clusters of foliage, heads of Edward III., Queen Philippa, Edward the Black Prince, &c. That formerly used by the prior bears the portrait and arms of Bishop Spencer. The pulpit, which is handsomely carved, was set up in 1609, when the old one was sold for 40s. to be put in East Winch church. The altar, with an ascent of four steps, was erected in 1684. The panelled screen or reredos, on which are painted the ten commandments, the creed, and the Lord's Prayer, is in very bad taste, and should be removed. The organ, in the gallery at the west end, was erected by the celebrated Snetzler, in 1754, at the expense of the Corporation, and was the first instrument in this country in which he introduced the Dulciana stop. It was carefully repaired some time ago by Holditch, of London, who added pedal pipes, and it now contains forty stops. The lectern is a fine old brass eagle. Most of the ancient brasses which formerly adorned the church are gone, but amongst those remaining are two which may justly take rank with the finest in the kingdom; indeed, one of them is perhaps unequalled. This magnificent brass is in memory of Robert Braunche and his two wives, and is 8 feet 2 inches long by 5 feet 2 inches wide. The figures are fine examples of the costume of the time of Edward III., and the canopies and diaper work are richly and elaborately wrought. At the foot of the brass a festival is represented, probably some banquet given by Braunche, who was mayor of Lynn, on the occasion of a royal visit. A peacock served up in his plumes appears to be the leading dish, and is placed before the chief guest by a kneeling figure, perhaps Braunche himself. The other large brass portrays Adam de Walsoken and his wife, and on its lower part is the representation of a vintage, with a large number of figures. It is dated 1349, but is now much defaced. Both these fine brasses have Latin inscriptions round them, and have been removed from their original position near the chancel entrance and placed within the altar rails. They are supposed to have been imported from Flanders. Here was formerly another splendid brass of Robert Attelath, of which the only memorial is a rubbing preserved in the British Museum, the plate having been sold for 5s. by a dishonest sexton, who is said to have hung himself through remorse. The perpetual curacy of St. Margaret has long had that of St. Nicholas attached to it, and since 1850 has been consolidated with the rectory of North Lynn, a small churchless parish of only 62 souls and about 700 acres of land, now intersected by the new outfall channel of Lynn Haven. The value of the consolidated benefices is £549 per annum. The Dean and Chapter of Norwich are the patrons; the Rev. Edw. Fras. Edwards Hankinson, M.A., is the incumbent; the Revs. John Fras. James, B.A., Jas. Whytt, M.A., and H. E. Smallwood, B.A., curates; Mr. Josiah Reddie, organist; and Joseph Walker, clerk. In 1601, Mrs. Titley left £40 to the Corporation, in trust, to employ the profits towards the preaching of the word of God. In consideration of this gift, 20s. are paid yearly for two sermons. St. Margaret's Church Estate produces £13. 5s. 8d. a year, which is applied with the church rates, and arises as follows:—£6 out of Paradise field; £3. 6s. 8d. paid by the Corporation; £1. 4s. 8d. from two houses in Tower street; 6s. 8d. from a house in Codling lane; £1. 8s. 6d. from six tenements in Clough lane; and 5s. from a house in Littleport street. The latter was left by Fras. Kennett, in 1584; but the donors of the others are unknown.

ST. NICHOLAS' CHAPEL, in St. Ann's street, near the north extremity of the town, is a chapel of ease to St. Margaret's. It measures 200 feet in length and 78 in breadth, and is open from end to end, the whole forming a spacious nave with aisles, separated by two rows of slender columns supporting lofty and acutely pointed arches, above which are eleven clerestory windows on each side. The windows in the aisles are each of three lights, and although they have depressed arches, the beautiful form of the pointed arch is preserved in the novel, yet elegant, tracery with which they are filled. The east window is of nine lights, and was enriched in 1860 by Mr. H. Hughes, of London, with stained glass representing most of the principal events in the life of our Saviour. Next to this, but in the south wall, is a window, painted by Warrington, in memory of Fredk. Lane, Esq., the late esteemed town clerk. It exhibits eight canopied niches, with figures illustrative of the Parable of the Talents. The great west window of eleven lights is much admired, and would add greatly to the appearance of the chapel, if it were decorated with coloured glass. The roof of the nave is of oak, supported on brackets by carved figures of angels with expanded wings, and ornamented with trellis work, strawberry leaves, &c. At the east ends of the aisles are small chapels or vestries, in one of which is the bowl of a very fine holy-water stoup, and in the other an ancient painted door, on which is the figure of St. Peter, from which it is called the "Peter Door." Remains of the sedilia still exist, and in the south aisle is a piscina. The brass eagle lectern is of good workmanship, and the font, given by Bishop Harsnett in 1627, is of finely wrought stone, and stands on a pyramidal flight of steps. The whole building appears to have been erected at that period when the decorated was fast merging into the perpendicular style, except the small tower, which occupies the western bay of the south aisle, and is of very early geometrical work. This tower contains a peal of eight bells, and was till 1854 surmounted by a short octagonal spire, which had replaced a more lofty one blown down on Sept. 8th, 1741, by the same storm that destroyed the spire of St. Margaret's. The western doorway is divided by a central column, over which is a small niche containing a time-worn figure of St. Nicholas; and the outer arch springs from bold corbel heads. The beautiful south porch is surpassed by few in the kingdom, and has a finely proportioned entrance arch, with rich and deeply recessed mouldings, above which are ten niches with pedestals. The spandrils of the arch contain shields, one bearing the emblem of the Trinity, and the other a cross flory with the reed and spear in saltire; and on each side is a buttress, in the higher portion of which is a canopied niche. The upper story or parvise has three large niches in front, and all the other parts are covered with elaborate panelled work. On the east and west sides are windows, two lighting the porch and two the chamber above it. The roof of the porch is groined, the ribs springing from bold corbel heads and diverging into a variety of elegant forms, with carved bosses at the points of intersection, bearing angels' heads, &c. On the central boss is a crowned figure with glory round the head, having an orb in his left hand and his right raised in the attitude of benediction. A new organ has recently been placed in the north aisle; and in 1852 the chapel was restored, the unsightly pews and galleries were replaced by open benches of solid oak, and other improvements effected, at a cost of about £1600. This elegant chapel is said to have been built in the reign of Edward III., on the site of a smaller edifice, founded about 1160, by Wm. Turbus, bishop of Norwich, who gave it to the monks of Norwich as a chapel of ease to St. Margaret's; but several fruitless efforts have been made to make it parochial, the last of which was in 1609. Among its numerous monumental memorials is an elegant sarcophagus of white marble, having on one side a figure of peace, and on the other a medallion bust of Sir Benjamin Keene, K.B., who was born in 1697, and, under the patronage of Sir Robert Walpole, filled several important offices of state, and was sent ambassador extraordinary to Spain. He died at Madrid in 1757, but his remains were brought to England and interred in this chapel. Here are also two Jacobean monuments and one of the time of Charles II., each containing a number of kneeling and recumbent figures; besides many mural tablets of the Bagge, Brown, Cooper, Wilson, Kirby, Partridge, Turner, Archdall, Say, Miller, Lane, Oakes, Ingle, Cary, and other families. The Bishop holds an annual confirmation in this chapel. The officiating ministers are the same as at St. Margaret's. Mr. Thos. C. Carey is the organist; and Wm. Pemment clerk and sexton. The Estate belonging to St. Nicholas's Chapel, for repairs, &c., has been vested in trust from an early period, and consists of a number of houses and other premises and ground rents in the town, and a number of gardens at Gaywood, let at rents producing about £304 per annum. A yearly rent-charge of 40s., for the use of this chapel, has been paid by the Corporation since 1658. The Chapelry of St. Nicholas comprises Paradise, Jews' lane, Chequer, New Conduit, and North-End Wards.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, in Blackfriars road, is a neat building, of early English architecture, erected in 1845-'6, at a cost of £5000, on land given by the Corporation. It consists of nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, north porch, vestry, and two side chapels, and its western front has turrets at the angles. The roofs of the nave and chancel are supported on corbel heads, carved in stone, and the clerestory has circular windows with trefoil lights. The interior is fitted with open benches, and the pulpit, reading desk, and communion table are of oak. The font is octagonal, and its sides are enriched with columns and arches. The triple-lancet window at the east end is filled with stained glass by Wailes, containing in medallions the Crucifixion, the Ascension, the Emblems of the Evangelists, &c. The church contains 1008 sittings, of which 800 are free. The Church Building Society contributed £400 towards the cost of the edifice, and the munificent sum of £2000 was given by J. Motteux, Esq., a former owner of the Sandringham estate. The district assigned to St. John's comprises the eastern parts of St. Margaret's parish, and has about 4200 souls. The perpetual curacy is endowed with £150 a year out of the proceeds of the rectory of North Lynn, in accordance with an agreement made when that benefice was consolidated with the living of St. Margaret's. The Bishop of Norwich is patron; the Rev. John Fernie, M.A., incumbent; and George Richard Oswald clerk. A Parsonage House is about to be erected.

ALL SAINTS, the parish church of South Lynn, (see page 711,) is a cruciform structure, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, transepts, and chancel, and is mostly in the perpendicular style; but some remains of the original Norman building may still be seen on the exterior of the south wall of the chancel. In 1860 the nave and transepts were thoroughly restored, re-seated with open benches, and otherwise improved, at a cost of £1400. There was formerly a tower at the west end, but it fell down in 1763, and the bell is now hung in an ornamental turret on the western gable. The nave is of four bays, and the arches spring from slender clustered columns. The transepts are spacious, and the principals of the roof rest on carved stone corbels, enriched with foliage, grotesque animals, &c. The organ is at present in the chancel, which much needs restoration. A portion of the old rood-screen, ornamented with six painted figures of apostles, was brought to light during the restorations, and is now preserved in the vestry, where there is also an ancient chest of the same date as the church, in which the valuable communion plate was until recently kept. There is a piscina in the chancel, and another in the south transept. The font is octagonal, with panelled sides, and for many years lay neglected amongst the weeds and rubbish of a neighbouring garden. The east window of the chancel is filled with stained glass, in memory of Commander Curtis, R.N., and represents Christ walking on the Sea, and a variety of symbolical devices. The east window of the south transept represents the Transfiguration, and was inserted in 1861 by Mr. John Sugars. The west window of the north transept depicts Christ among the Doctors and the Flight into Egypt, outlined in the Albert Durer style on Munich glass of a golden hue. It was the gift of the Rev. W. W. Clarke, of North Wootton. Many years ago, when the church was repaired, all the fine brasses were torn up, and sold for £1. 7s., at the rate of 6d. per lb. In the chancel is a handsome mural monument in memory of Harvey Goodwin, Esq., an eminent attorney and charitable friend of the poor. He died in 1819, and this memorial of his worth was raised at the cost of more than 200 subscribers. The benefice is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £18. 6s. 8d., and now at £180. The Bishop of Norwich is patron; the Rev. Wm. Leeper, M.A., incumbent; Rev. R. H. Prowse,

M.A., curate; Mr. Walter Owen Jones, organist; and Alexander Foreshaw, clerk and sexton.

A neat SCHOOL-CHURCH was erected in 1863 at Seeche or Setchy Parva, near Saddlebow, in South Lynn parish, at a cost of £430, chiefly contributed by H. W. Allen and John Marsters, Esqrs., the former of whom also gave the site. It is a small structure of perpendicular architecture, built of flint with brick and stone dressings, and having a small bell turret and spire at the west end. That portion used as a school forms a sort of aisle on the north side, and is separated by a low traceried screen and curtain. The seats are open benches, and like the roof are stained and varnished. They will accommodate only about 160 persons. Part of the east window is decorated with painted glass representing the Crucifixion and our Lord seated in Glory, in memory of four children of Mr. and Mrs. Marsters. The building is licensed for Divine service, which is performed here every Sunday afternoon by the vicar of South Lynn or his curate.

The ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, stands in London road, and is a small but handsome brick edifice in the Geometrical Decorated style, erected in 1845 from a design by the late A. W. Pugin, Esq., and comprising nave, north aisle, chancel with lady-chapel and sacristy, and south porch. The rood-screen is elegantly carved, and the chancel, which contains sedilia and a piscina, is paved with encaustic tiles. The east window is enriched with stained glass executed by Wailes, and representing the Virgin and Child, St. George, and St. Thomas of Canterbury. The Rev. Wm. Poole is the priest, and has a residence adjoining the church. The total cost of the land and buildings was about £2600. Many years ago two ladies of the name of Collinson left £40 a year for the support of a Roman Catholic priest at Lynn.

The DISSENTERS of Lynn are numerous, having eleven chapels, some of which are large and handsome buildings. The FRIENDS' MEETING HOUSE, behind New Conduit street, is a plain brick structure, rebuilt in 1774, and having a small burial ground and two dwelling houses attached to it. Their founder, George Fox, visited Lynn in 1655 and 1662. The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL, in New Conduit street, was built in 1838, and is now under the ministry of the Rev. Wm. Jones. It is a neat and spacious fabric, erected at a cost of about £3000, in lieu of the old chapel, in Broad street, which was built many years ago by Presbyterians. The UNITARIAN CHAPEL, in Court 127, Norfolk street, was built in 1811, at a cost of about £1000, and is under the pastoral care of the Rev. Thomas Jones Read. The PARTICULAR BAPTIST CHAPEL, called "Stepney Chapel," in Blackfriars road, was erected in 1840-'1, at a cost of about £2400. It is a neat building, with about 1000 sittings, and attached to it is a school room, erected in 1850. The Rev. John Thomas Wigner is the minister. The Baptists originated here in the reign of James II. The UNION BAPTIST CHAPEL, between Market street and Paradise lane, was built in 1859, at a cost of £3000, by a congregation composed of persons who had seceded from the Baptist and Independent congregations. It is a cruciform structure of early English architecture, with a small spire turret, and has 500 sittings, but no regular minister. There is another small Baptist Chapel, called "Zion," in Blackfriars road, also without pastor. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL, in Tower street, is a large brick edifice, erected at a cost of £4500, in 1812. It will seat about 1500 hearers, and has a good house and Sunday school attached to it. The Wesleyans have two other smaller chapels here, one in Pilot street, at the North End, and the other in London road. The ministers are the Revs. John Hearnshaw, T. Smith, and J. R. Berry. The PRIMITIVE METHODIST CHAPEL, in London road, was erected in 1857, at a cost of £1900, and is a neat building in the Italian style, with 800 sittings and an illuminated clock. The Primitive Methodists have also a preaching room and Sunday school at the North end, and their ministers are the Revs. J. Scott, Wm. Wainwright, and Wm. Rudderham. The METHODIST NEW CONNEXION CHAPEL or "Tabernacle," in Railway road, is a plain brick building, erected at a cost of £2000, in 1853, and having sittings for 500 persons. There is a school room beneath it, and the Rev. George Hallatt is the minister.

The BOROUGH CEMETERY, on the Hardwick road, comprises $9\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land, of which $6\frac{1}{2}$ acres are consecrated for members of the Established Church, 2A. 3R. are unconsecrated, and 1 rood is appropriated to Roman Catholics. It is prettily laid out and planted, and contains two chapels of decorated architecture, connected by a carriage porch, which spans the road and is surmounted by a lantern and spire rising to the height of 77 feet. This cemetery was formed by the corporation in 1855-'6, after the burial grounds in the town had been closed; but two acres of the land had been previously consecrated in 1851, as a cemetery for the parish of South Lynn. The total cost of the land and buildings was about £3600. There is no regular chaplain, as the clergy perform the burial service for their own parishioners, and any dissenting minister may officiate in the unconsecrated part. T. G. Archer, Esq., is clerk to the Burial Board; and Mr. Joseph Whitting, curator of the cemetery.

The GRAMMAR SCHOOL originated from the will of Thomas Thorisby, who, about the 12th of Henry VIII., devised to the mayor and burgesses four pieces of pasture ground in Gaywood, upon condition that they should appoint a priest to be master of the Charnel chapel in St. Margaret's church, who should teach six poor children in grammar and singing, which children should daily, on their knees before the tomb of the donor's father, pray for the souls of the donor and other persons, and repeat certain psalms. By reason of the superstitious uses annexed to this gift, the property in Gaywood became, by the Act of the 1st of Edward VI., vested in the Crown, but it does not appear ever to have been seized, and no doubt, forms part of the property in Gaywood, still held by the Corporation, who, in the reign of Elizabeth, allowed 20 marks a year to the master, with the use of the "house in St. James's End, by the myll," and £10 a year to the usher, out of the "town stock." About 40 years ago, they rebuilt the master's house at great expense, so as to be capable of accommodating sixty boarders. Behind it is a large playground, in which stands the schoolroom, which was rebuilt four years earlier. Previous to the appointment of the present head master, in 1858, the Corporation established certain new regulations, in virtue of which the master is required to teach classics, mathematics, the French and German languages, drawing, and the usual branches of an English education. There are no free boys, but the master is not entitled to charge more than ten guineas per annum for the sons of townsmen. Since 1852, the school has been in a flourishing condition, and has had numerous scholars, both as day boys and boarders. The Prince of Wales gives annually a gold medal of the value of ten guineas for competition amongst the boys, and there are other annual prizes given by the Corporation, and by the Borough Members, the Right Hon. Lord Stanley, D.C.L., and J. H. Gurney, Esq. There are EXHIBITIONS for boys from this school, of the following yearly amounts, viz.:—£11 for two boys at Emmanuel College, left by John and Eliz. Titley, in 1585 and 1595; £2 each for two boys to any College, left by John Peirson and Alex. Hall, in 1623 and 1597; £3. 8s. 8d., left by the Rev. Thos. Hope, in 1615, for a boy at Trinity College; and £6 for a boy at St. John's College, left by the Rev. Thos. Thurlyn, D.D., in 1708. Hope's is paid out of the tithes of Notley, by the rector of North Runciton; and Hall's, out of a house at the corner of High-bridge, next to New Conduit street. The funds of these exhibitions, except Hall's, accumulate when not claimed, and the Corporation award out of these accumulations such sums as they please, not exceeding £30 per annum for three years, to boys proceeding from the school to the University. A large cricket field in the Chase is appropriated to the use of the scholars; and opposite the school, in the master's garden, stands the lofty tower of the Grey Friars', a beautiful specimen of perpendicular architecture. Eugene Aram, a former usher of this school, was apprehended here in 1759, for a murder committed at Knaresborough, in 1744. His defence at his trial in York, was plausible and masterly, but availed him nothing, and the story of his life forms the groundwork of one of the most fascinating of Sir E. B. Lytton's novels. The Rev. Thomas White, M.A., is the head master; H. B. Elwell, Esq., B.A., second master; A. Goddard, Esq., third master; Mons. Goebbels, foreign master; and Mr. J. S. Bower, lecturer in Physics.

NATIONAL SCHOOLS.—St. Margaret's form a good Elizabethan structure, in Grey Friars' road, and were built in 1849, at a cost of upwards of £1600. They are attended by 130 boys, 80 girls, and 80 infants. There is also an Infant school, attended by 100 children, in St. Ann's street. All Saints', in South Everard street, South Lynn, were built in 1852 and 1857, at a total cost of about £1000, and consist of two separate buildings, one attended by 150 boys and 100 girls, and the other by 120 infants. St. John's, in Albion street, were erected in 1853, at a cost of £1900, including the site and teachers' residences. They are attended by 300 boys and girls. There is also an Infant school in Norfolk street, attended by 76 children.

The BRITISH SCHOOLS, in Blackfriars' road, were built in 1842, at a cost of about £1400, and are attended by 220 boys and 110 girls. The RAGGED SCHOOL, in St. Ann's street, is supported by subscription, and attended by about 84 children. The ROMAN CATHOLIC SCHOOL, in Coronation square, is held in the old chapel, which was built in 1828, by the Rev. Peter Louis Dacheux, a French refugee, at a cost of £600. It is attended by 36 children. The INFANT SCHOOL, in Broad street, is principally supported by Mrs. Rachel Cresswell, and attended by 120 children.

The ATHENÆUM, in Baxter's plain, is a handsome and commodious brick building in the Italian style, erected in 1854, at a cost of £6400, raised by debentures, mortgages, and donations, for the purpose of providing a home for the various literary, scientific, and artistic societies of the town, and a spacious public room capable of holding nearly 1000 persons, for concerts, lectures, and general purposes. In consequence however of the withdrawal of the grant of £50 a year, promised by the Corporation, and the income from rents, lettings of hall, &c., not being sufficient to pay the interest on mortgages and meet the necessary expenses of the institution, there is some danger of the edifice being disposed of for other purposes, at perhaps a third of its value, unless the burgesses take the matter at once vigorously in hand and prevent so great a disgrace befalling the town. The SUBSCRIPTION LIBRARY, which occupies part of the Athenæum building, was commenced in 1797, and now possesses about 10,000 volumes, belonging to 100 shareholders, who subscribe 21s. each per annum. It has a reading room attached to it. J. J. Coulton, Esq., is the librarian, and Mr. W. Bonner, sub-librarian. The MUSEUM was established in a hired house in Union street, South Lynn, in January, 1844, but on the completion of the Athenæum, its already large collection of antiquities and specimens illustrative of natural history was removed thither, special rooms having been prepared for its reception, the largest of these being open to the top of the building and galleried throughout. It contains an extensive and valuable collection of birds mostly given by John Hy. Gurney, Esq., who also liberally provided at his sole cost, the noble range of glass cases in which it is displayed. The mineralogical, geological, conchological, and botanical specimens are very numerous, and here are also many relics of antiquity, coins, foreign curiosities, &c. The museum is exceedingly well arranged, and ranks in importance and value amongst the best in the provinces. Daniel Gurney, Esq., F.S.A., is president; and David Ward, Esq., honorary secretary. The STANLEY LIBRARY, for the benefit of the working classes, was founded in 1854, by the Right Hon. Lord

Stanley, one of the borough members, who gave £1000 towards its formation, and also contributed £600 towards the building fund of the Athenæum, on condition that a 99 years' lease of the requisite rooms in that edifice should be granted at a nominal rent. The library now comprises about 6000 volumes, and includes the books which belonged to the defunct Theological and Architectural Societies, and were transferred to it soon after its formation. Attached to it is a good reading room. There are about 350 subscribers, who pay from 3s. to 10s. per annum each. Mr. Richard Oswell is the librarian. The CONVERSAZIONE AND SOCIETY OF ARTS was instituted in 1842, for the promotion of a taste for literature, science, and art, and occupies rooms in the Athenæum building. It has about 140 members, who subscribe 7s. 6d. each annually, except ladies and youths who only pay 5s. each. Meetings are held every alternate Friday evening during the winter months, when papers are read or lectures delivered by some of the members. A section called the "Dialectic" meets every intermediate Friday, for the purpose of discussion on various topics; and the Chess section meets every Thursday evening. The reading room is open every day, from ten in the morning till ten at night, and is well supplied with daily and weekly papers. Mr. J. G. Wigg is president, and Mr. E. L. King hon. secretary. The CHURCH OF ENGLAND YOUNG MEN'S SOCIETY is also located in the Athenæum, and by means of classes, lectures, a reading room, &c., carries out its object. It was commenced in 1860, and the Rev. Thos. White, M.A., is the president. The CHURCH LIBRARY, at St. Nicholas's chapel, was founded in 1617, and was consolidated some years ago with that of St. Margaret's, which was commenced about 1630. This bibliothecal collection comprises 1700 volumes, of which 441 were bequeathed by Dr. T. Thurlyn, rector of Gaywood. The PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY and the CHORAL UNION, give several concerts during the season, and meet frequently for practice in the lecture room of the Athenæum. Mr. B. J. Whall is conductor of the former and Mr. T. Collison Carey of the latter. The PHILANTHROPIC LODGE OF FREEMASONS, No. 107, was established in 1759, and meets on the first Monday in each month at the Duke's Head Hotel. Attached to it is a Royal Arch Chapter. A HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY has recently been formed, and held its first exhibition in June, 1864: T. M. Wilkin, Esq., is the honorary secretary. The 5th, or LYNN COMPANY OF RIFLE VOLUNTEERS was formed in 1859, and comprises about 100 men, exclusive of the band. The uniform is grey with black facings. F. J. Cresswell, Esq., is captain; S. A. Gurney, Esq., lieutenant; Hy. Edwards, Esq., ensign; and Dr. Lowe, surgeon. FOUR NEWSPAPERS are published here every Saturday, viz.—The Lynn Advertiser and West Norfolk Herald, by Messrs. Thew and Son; the Lynn Gazette, by Mr. F. Wade; the Lynn Record, by Mr. T. F. Cadman; and the Lynn News and Wisbech Chronicle, by Mr. A. S. Page. The first named, which is a conservative journal, was established in 1842, and is charged 2d., but all the others are of much more recent date, and sell for 1d. each.

The THEATRE, a large building of white brick, near the Grey Friars' Tower, was built in 1815. It opens at Lynn mart for about six weeks, and sometimes for a short season in the autumn. The BATHS, on Common Staith quay, form a neat brick building, having in front a portico of three arches, with an office and a dwelling for the superintendent, and in the rear a good swimming bath, supplied daily with fresh sea water and surrounded by twenty dressing rooms. Here are also hot and cold slipper and shower baths, &c. Edgely Hodgson is the superintendent. RACES are held about the middle of July, on a fine Course adjoining the Sutton Bridge Railway, and here is an annual REGATTA, of which the Prince of Wales is patron.

Among the EMINENT MEN to whom Lynn has given birth, are the following:—Nicholas of Lynn, the friar, distinguished as a musician, mathematician, and astrologer, died in 1360; Wm. Sautre, the first martyr for the Reformation in England, being burnt at Smithfield, in 1401; Wm. Gale, an Augustine friar, eminent for literature and piety, died 1507; Sir B. Keene whose monument is noticed at page 738; W. Whittingham, bookseller and editor of "Parkin's Continuation of Blomefield's Norfolk," &c., died 1797; Capgrave, a Franciscan friar, author of "The Chronicles of England," and, other works, published a few years ago by the authority of the Master of the Rolls; Mr. Baines, the African traveller, who went with Dr. Livingstone in the capacity of artist, but has since led an expedition of his own across that continent; and Capt. Cresswell, R.N., who accompanied Capt. McClure in the famous arctic expedition, which resulted in the discovery of the north-west passage. Benj. Mackerell and Wm. Richards, the historians of Lynn, were not natives of the town. The former resided at Norwich, where he published his history of Lynn, in 1737. Mr. Richards was a native of Wales, but for some years a Baptist Minister in Lynn. He died 1818.

THE WEST NORFOLK AND LYNN HOSPITAL is a spacious and handsome building of white brick, erected in 1835, at a cost of more than £2500, on three acres of land adjoining the London road. It was enlarged in 1848 and 1852, by the addition of two new wings, and is for the relief of the sick and lame poor, either as in or out patients, on the same liberal principle as the Norfolk Hospital, at Norwich. It has accommodation for about 60 in-patients; and the total number who had partaken of its benefits in January, 1864, from the opening of the institution in April, 1835, was 7339 in and 8883 out patients, about half of whom had been discharged cured. Its yearly expenditure is upwards of £1800, which being greater than the regular income, the Committee are occasionally obliged to resort to collections in the churches of West Norfolk, from which they received £482 in 1863. The Lynn Dispensary, which was established in 1806, was discontinued about 25 years ago, when its remaining funds (£285) were transferred to this Hospital. A donation of £31. 10s., or an annual subscription of £2. 2s., constitutes a governor, who can recommend annually one in and two out patients. A yearly subscriber of £1. 1s. can recommend two out patients; and a subscriber of 10s. 6d. one out patient annually. The Prince of Wales is patron; the Marquis Cholmondeley, president; the Bishop of Norwich, the Members for West Norfolk and Lynn, the Mayor of Lynn, and many of the neighbouring nobility and gentry are vice-presidents; F. J. Cresswell, Esq., is treasurer; J. V. Hawkins, Esq., M.D., physician; T. M. Kendall and J. Lowe, Esq., M.D., surgeons; Fleetwood Buckle, Esq., house surgeon and secretary; and Mrs. Eliz. Brightman, matron. Daniel Gurney, Esq., F.S.A., is chairman of the weekly board, which meets every Saturday. The Lynn Self-Supporting Medical Institution was established in 1834, and those poor who participate in its benefits contribute a penny per week each, but children under 14 years of age pay only a halfpenny each. Here is also a Lying-in Charity, (instituted 1791); a Society for Visiting and Relieving the Sick and Indigent, (established 1826); and several other benevolent societies for the relief of the poor.

THE SAVINGS' BANK is a good Tudor building in St. James' street, erected in 1860, at a cost of £2000. It is open every Monday from 11 to 1; and in November, 1863, had deposits amounting to £89,754, belonging to 2723 individuals and 34 Friendly and 54 Charitable Societies. F. J. Cresswell, Esq., is treasurer; Mr. John Burch, secretary; and James Eccles, clerk. The PENNY SAVINGS' BANK is open at the Athenæum every Saturday evening, from 7 to 8, and has about 800 depositors, with balances amounting to upwards of £500. Mr. E. L. King is the honorary secretary. Here are several Oddfellows' Lodges, a Shipwrecked Seamen's Society, a branch of the Seamen's United Protection Society, a Mutual Maritime Insurance Association, and a number of Friendly Societies and other provident institutions.

THE HOSPITAL OF ST. MARY MAGDALEN, which stands in Gaywood parish, near Lynn, was founded by Petrus Capellanus, in 1155, for a prior and twelve brothers and sisters. After being some years dissolved, it was re-founded by letters patent of the 9th of James I., for the support of one poor man and nine or ten poor women, to be placed therein by the mayor and aldermen of Lynn, who were appointed governors, and vested with power to make wholesome statutes for the government of the almspeople, with the consent of the Bishop of Norwich. The letters patent conferred upon the hospital all its ancient possessions in Gaywood and elsewhere; and its estates are now let for about £290 per annum, of which £224. 10s. arise from 67A. of land in Gaywood; £18 from 11A. in Seeche or Setchey; £7. 10s. from land in Great Dunham; and £40 from land in East Lexham. There are also belonging to the charity £1148. 17s. 10d. three per cent. Consols; £735 new $3\frac{1}{4}$ per cents.; and £863. 17s. 6d. new 3 per cents. These sums have been principally derived from the sale of charity land to the railway companies; and the hospital has £3 a year, left by Robert Awborne, in 1727; and the interest of £100, left by Thomes Oldmeadow, in 1833, and of £100 left by George Hogge, in 1847. The hospital was burnt down during the siege of Lynn, in 1643, and rebuilt in 1649. It consists of 12 tenements and a chapel, forming a quadrangle, with a grass-plot in the centre and small gardens round the exterior. The establishment consists of a reader and eleven poor widows, of the age of sixty or upwards, selected from the residents of Lynn. The man, who reads prayers daily to the almswomen, receives 11s. 6d., and each of the women 8s. 6d. per week. The latter have each $1\frac{1}{2}$, and the reader 2 chaldrons of coal, yearly. Richd. Bagge, Esq., of Gaywood Hall, is the governor.

FRAMINGHAM'S HOSPITAL was founded in 1676, by John Heathcote, Esq., who having in that year obtained a grant from the Corporation of part of the land formerly called Paradise Garden or Field, commenced the erection of a hospital thereon, which was completed after his decease by his friend, Henry Framingham, alderman, who, by will, dated 1704, endowed it with £1000, for the maintenance of ten aged poor of St. Margaret's parish, one of them to be master, and read prayers twice a day, for which he "should have £3 per annum more than any of the others." By indenture, enrolled in Chancery, in 1714, the almspeople were incorporated by the name of the "Master and Brethren of the Hospital of Henry Framingham, Esq., in Paradise-garden, in King's Lynn," under the government of the Corporation. The £1000 were laid out in the same year, in the purchase of an estate at and near Setchey, except about £300, supposed to have been expended in fitting up the hospital, &c. The estate is let for the clear yearly rent of about £150, and comprises the Lynn Arms Public-house, in Setchey, and about 86 acres of land. In 1700, Edward Robinson left a house and garden in Nelson street (now let for £20 a year) to the Corporation, in trust, to pay yearly 20s. for a sermon at St. Margaret's church, 20s. to the poor of Thornham, and 10s. a-piece to 12 poor decayed seamen, or other poor decayed men of Lynn; and to distribute the residue of the rents among the 12 inmates of the "new erected almshouses, in Broad street." After the payment of the two yearly sums of 20s., the whole residue is applied to the almspeople. The endowment has been augmented with an annuity of £3 from Awborne's charity; £104 left by John Goodwin, in 1728; £70 by Sarah Dexter, in 1753; £105 by George Hogge, in 1760; £250 by William Pagan, in 1769; £200 by Philip Case, in 1785; £230 three per cent. Consols, by Ann Carleton, in 1790; £250 stock by Eliz. Bateman, in 1802; £2100 three per cent. Consols, by Thomas Cooke, in 1810; £200 each by Alderman Everard and Wm. Bagge, in 1816 and 1834; £68. 12s. 6d., three per cent. Consols, by Fras. Boyce, in 1824; and £100 each left by Thos. Oldmeadow and George Hogge, in 1833 and 1847. The dividends of the stock, and the interest of the money arising from these benefactions, swell the gross yearly income of the charity to £300. In 1848, with the sanction of the Lord Chancellor, the old hospital was taken down, and its site added to the cattle market; and the Corporation, as an equivalent, erected the present building on the London road, close to the Public Walks, at a cost of nearly £3200. It is a brick edifice in the Tudor style, consisting of a centre and two wings, and comprising a chapel and twelve tenements. There is a lawn in front, and behind are small garden allotments for the inmates. The twelve almsmen are all settled inhabitants of the borough; no distinction being made whether they are married or single, but it is required that they should be at least 60 years of age. Persons of good character, who have seen better days, are generally selected. The master has 8s. 3d., and each of the other almsmen 7s. per week, besides a yearly allowance of coals and several small payments, pursuant to the wills of the above named donors. T. A. Carter, Esq., is the governor.

ST. JAMES'S HOSPITAL (or Bedehouses) was founded in the 14th century, and granted to the Corporation after the dissolution of the lesser monasteries. The expenses of repairing it were always defrayed out of their funds; but, in 1822, it was rebuilt at a cost of £750, by Benj. Smith, Esq. It consists of a chapel and twelve tenements, occupied by a reader and eleven aged women. It stands near St. James's burial-ground, and has an endowment of about £150 per annum, which, till 1836, was augmented with several voluntary payments made by the Corporation. The principal benefactions left for its support are—£30 by Joan Mayes, in 1650; £100 by Giles Bridgeman, in 1690; £3 per annum by Robt. Awborne, in 1726; £50 by James Bordman, in 1740; £70 by Sarah Dexter, in 1753; £300 by Martha Kett, in 1764; £300 by Ann Carleton, in 1790; £230 by Eliz. Bateman, in 1802; an annuity of 40s. by John Pierson, in 1623; £2300 three per cent. Consols, left by Thomas Cooke, in 1810; £100 by Thos. Oldmeadow, in 1833; and £100 by George Hogge, in 1847. The Charity Trustees pay to this hospital the sum of £31. 4s. out of Crane's charity. The reader has 7s. 7d., and each of the almswomen 4s. 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. per week. They are selected from the most deserving parishioners of Lynn, of the age of 60 years or upwards. Lionel Self, Esq., is the governor.

THE WESLEYAN ALMSHOUSES, which stand near St. James's, have rooms for eight poor women of any religious denomination, of the age of 60 years or upwards. They were built and endowed at the cost of Benj. Smith, Esq., who, in 1829, vested £1000 with the Corporation for that purpose. The endowments consist of the rent of an adjoining house, let for £9 a year; the interest of £250, left out of the £1000, after the erection of the building; £14 a year as the interest of £500, vested with the Corporation in 1848; £9 by Miss White; £9. 14s. 10d. from Hall's charity; £2 from £138. 10s., left by Chas. Goodwin, Esq., in 1861; and about £21 from Crane's charity. The almswomen have each 3s. 3d. per week. C. Willett, Esq., is governor.

VALINGER'S ALMSHOUSES, in South Lynn, were founded for four poor women of that parish, by Thos. Vallinger, town-clerk, who, in 1611, endowed them with £20, which were laid out in the purchase of 3a. 3r. of land, at Wiggenhall St. Germain's, now let for £10 a year. They were rebuilt by subscription, about 1826, and are further endowed with the dividends of £700 three per cent. Consols, left by Thos. Cooke, Esq., in 1810; the interest of £20, left by Fras. Boyce, Esq., in 1824; and about £10. 10s. per annum from Crane's charity. Including an allowance from the poor rates, each inmate has 5s. per week and a chaldron of coals yearly.

JOHN CRANE, in 1658, left an estate of 176a. 2r. 31p., at Fleet and Holbeach, and directed the yearly rent to be given in rotation to poor sick scholars of the University of Cambridge, and to the poor of the towns of Cambridge, Wisbech, Lynn, and Ipswich. In accordance with this bequest the poor of Lynn had, every fifth year, about £320 distributed amongst them in sums of from 10s. to £2; but, in November, 1859, a new scheme for the regulation of this charity was obtained from the Court of Chancery, in accordance with which Lynn receives annually a fifth part of the rent of the estate, which is applied in the payment of 1s. a week to each of the occupants of Smith's, Valinger's, and St. James's almshouses, in augmentation of their stipends. The sum of 40s. is also received every fourth year for a sermon.

BENEFACTIONS:—Robt. Awborne, in 1726, bequeathed to the Corporation £600, in trust, to distribute the interest thereof yearly as follows:—£9. 10s. in money, and £9. 10s. in coals, among the poor of both parishes; £9 among the almspeople of St. Mary Magdalen's, St. James's, and Framingham's Hospitals; 20s. for the poor in St. James's Workhouse, and 20s. for a sermon at St. Margaret's Church. The Corporation pay £4. 10s. yearly as the interest of £100, left in 1743, by James Bordman, for a distribution at Christmas among the poor of Chequer and Trinity-Hall Wards. In 1598, Thomas Grave bequeathed to the Corporation £200, on condition that they should distribute yearly, among the poor, £6. 13s. 4d. in coals, and £6. 13s. 4d. in money. The yearly sum of £19. 15s. 2d. is distributed in coals, among 48 poor widows. This "Widow's Coal Fund" arises from £20, left by Margery Brock, in 1721; £50 by Rebecca Everard, in 1753; £100 by the Rev. Wm. Everard, in 1777; and £392. 0s. 10d. three per cent. Consols, left by Catherine Barwell, in 1792. The yearly sum of £48. 0s. 8d. for distribution, among the poor of the borough, on St. Thomas's Day, arises from Grave's, Bordman's, and Awborne's Charities, and the interest of the following benefactions, viz.:—£100, by Benj. Holly, in 1704; £100, by Samuel Browne, in 1784; and £100, by Edward Everard, in 1816. Joan Mayes, in 1650, gave to the Corporation £30, to be employed in clothing four poor widows, and £10 for their trouble. In 1797, ELIZ. MARSHALL gave to the Mayor and burgesses £200, to distribute the interest equally among four poor widows of the borough, to be nominated by E. and S. Everard, Esqrs., or their legal representatives. Out of the pew rents of the Wesleyan Chapel £20 are distributed in money and coals among the poor, as the interest of £400, given by Benjamin Smith, in 1821.

LOAN FUNDS:—Lynn is one of the towns which is entitled to £100 every 24th year, from Sir Thos. White's Charity, to be lent out without interest, in sums of £25 each, to poor young men, as noticed at page 236. This Loan Fund now amounts to upwards of £1000, invested in government securities, the last payment having been received 12th January, 1864. By an order, made by the Court of Chancery in 1838, three fourths of the expenses of managing the Lynn Charities are paid out of the proceeds of this fund, and consequently, as about £70 a year are swallowed up in this way, there is little or nothing left wherewith to fulfil the donor's intentions. By the same order, the remaining fourth of the expenses is directed to be divided between Crane's and Sparrow's Charities. John Crane left £160 and Jane Girling £20, to be lent free of interest to poor industrious tradesmen.

CHARITIES FOR APPRENTICING:—In 1714, Robert Sparrow left, in trust, with the Corporation, £200, the interest thereof to be applied in apprenticing the sons of poor freemen, to such freemen as the mayor and six senior aldermen should approve. The Corporation pay 4 per cent. interest for this sum, and there is at present a balance in hand of about £86. In 1732, they received £680, left by John Horn, who directed the yearly interest (3½ per cent.) to be employed "for the binding out of poor children apprentices," and there is now a balance in hand belonging to this charity of nearly £40. The interest of £200, left by Mary Leake, in 1781, is also applied in apprenticing poor boys lawfully settled in Lynn, and there is now a balance in hand of about £30.

The Parish of St. Margaret has the exclusive benefit of the following yearly doles for the poor, viz.:—£4. 4s. from a large house in High street, left by Wm. Cleave, in 1665, and rebuilt by the lessee in 1787; £1. 16s. from £36 left by John Keed, in 1715; and £5 (half for schooling two poor boys) from £100 left by Peter Ward, in 1720. The poor inhabitants of North end, Jews' lane, Chequer, and New Conduit Wards, have the interest of £240, left by Fras. Boyce, in 1824, and vested with the Corporation at 4 per cent. The oldest poor widows of Paradise Ward have 36s. yearly, from £36 left by James Stapleton, in 1786. Samuel Lane, Esq., in 1813, gave the dividends of £85. 12s. 4d. three per cent. stock, for the relief of the pensioners on the muster-roll establishment at Lynn. The interest of £400, left by Henry Birkbeck, is applied, one half to the West Norfolk and Lynn Hospital, and the other to the relief of disabled seamen.

FREEBRIDGE-LYNN HUNDRED.

Freebridge-Lynn, one of the largest divisions of Norfolk, lies at the west end of the county, and extends from 12 to 15 miles in length and breadth, stretching east, north, and south from the borough of King's Lynn. It extends southward to Setch and Pentney, eastward to Castle Acre, Massingham, and Harpley, and northward to Dersingham and Anmer, and lies east of Marshland, with which it was formerly comprehended under the name of Freebridge Hundred and a Half, an appellation said to have been derived from St. Germain's Bridge being toll-free, and once the only bridge that crossed the Great Ouse river between the two districts, which, in ecclesiastical affairs, constitute the Deanery of Lynn, in the Archdeaconry of Norwich. Freebridge-Lynn is bounded on the north by Smithdon Hundred, on the east by Gallow and Launditch Hundreds, on the south by the river Nar and the parish of Watlington, and on the west by the Borough of Lynn, the Great Ouse river, and the Wash. Freebridge-Lynn affords a pleasing contrast to the flat district of Marshland on the opposite side of the Ouse, having an undulated surface rising in picturesque swells from the marshes on the coast and from the rivers Ouse, Nar, and several smaller streams. The soil is of different kinds, being in some parts rich and loamy, and in others a light sterile sand ; indeed, the latter prevails either on the surface or as a substratum, throughout the whole district, and much of it is of a whitish colour, well adapted for the manufacture of glass, for which purpose large quantities are regularly shipped at Lynn. Many of the commons have been enclosed during the last forty years, but there still remain here several extensive sandy heaths in a state of nature or partially planted. One of them, between Castle-Rising and Dersingham, forms a prolific rabbit warren of 1900 acres ; and the abrupt acclivities by which it rises from the marshes, bear evident marks of having been, at some distant period, the boundary of the ocean, the tides of which formerly flowed up to the decayed borough of Castle-Rising, whence a small but once navigable stream still flows westward to Lynn Deep. Indeed, marine productions are found in the gravel pits in various parts of the Hundred ; and the rounded cobbles, pebbles, flints, and other stones procured therefrom for the reparation of the roads, are similar to those thrown up by the tides on the beach near Hunstanton, Brancaster, and Wells. The eastern side of the Hundred is traversed by branches of the Great Eastern Railway extending from Lynn to Ely and Hunstanton, and its southern part is crossed by the line from Lynn to Dereham. At the Norman Conquest this Hundred was a fee of the Crown, but was granted by the Conqueror to his butler, William de Albini. The Hundred Court was anciently held at Fritcham, on a remarkable hill or tumulus, surrounded by a ditch, in the form of a square; but it was afterwards held under an oak tree at Gaywood, whence it was removed to Fitton Oak, in the parish of Wiggshall St. Germain, where it was continued till 1710, when the Duke of Norfolk was lord paramount. Petty Sessions are now held at Hillington and Gayton alternately, on the 1st and 3rd Mondays in every month, and R. H. Aldham, Esq., of Lynn, is clerk to the magistrates. The Hundred contains many large and well built villages, and 34 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, showing their population in 1861, the annual value of their land and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent:—

* Castle-Rising is an ancient disfranchised Borough, and a Peculiar Jurisdiction, including the three parishes of Roydon and North and South Wootton.

FREEBRIDGE-LYNN UNION comprises all the parishes in the foregoing table, except Anmer and Dersingham, which are in Docking Union. These 32 parishes had 12,580 inhabitants in 1841, and 13,486 in 1861, and extend over an area of 111 square miles, or about 70,000 acres. Their average annual expenditure for the relief of the poor, &c., during the three years preceding the formation of the Union, was £8952, and it is now about £7500. The UNION WORKHOUSE is at Gayton, and was built in 1836 at a cost of £5146, and enlarged in 1854 at a cost of £852. It has room for 212 inmates, but has seldom more than 100. Thirty-six guardians are elected yearly, viz.: two each for Castle-Acre, Gaywood, Grimston, and Great Massingham; and one for each of the other parishes. Robert Huxley Aldham, Esq., of Lynn, is union clerk and superintendent registrar; and Mr. William Woods, of Gaywood, registrar of marriages. The registrars of births and deaths are,—Messrs. William Woods, for Castle-Rising District; W. R. Dawson, for Gayton District; James Rowe, for Hillington District; and James Wake, for Middleton District. The relieving officers are Mr. Joseph King, of Roydon, for the North, and Mr. W. R. Dawson, of Gayton, for the South District. Mr.

John and Mrs. Eliz. Rogers are master and matron of the Workhouse; the Rev. W. Leech, M.A., of Flitcham, is chaplain; Sarah Williams, school-mistress; and Wm. Gates, porter. Messrs. John Headley, Joshua Love, Frederick Manby, Alfred Edward Barrett, Walter Shaw Black, Rowland Flockton, and Thomas M. Kendall, are the union surgeons.

ANMER parish, 11 miles N.E. by N. of Lynn, contains only 142 inhabitants and 1420 acres of land, all belonging to, and in the occupation of Henry Waller Coldham, Esq., the lord of the manor and patron of the living, who resides at Anmer Hall, a neat mansion surrounded by a park and extensive plantations. The latter are in a very flourishing state, and were greatly improved by the late James Coldham, Esq. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave with chapel on its south side, chancel, south porch, and battlemented tower with two bells. The south chapel, which was built by Sir Oliver Calthorpe, contains a piscina, and is of decorated architecture, but the remainder of the church is of the perpendicular period. There is a priest's doorway, with a window over it, in the chancel, and the stairs which led to the ancient rood loft still remain. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9, and now at £222, is in the incumbency of the Rev. John Coldham, M.A., of Snettisham. The chief residents are—H. W. Coldham, Esq., Hall; Hy. Jervis, parish clerk; James Steel, shopkeeper; and James Derisley, farm bailiff. Post via Lynn.

APPLETON is an ancient decayed parish, 8 miles N.E. by E. of Lynn, lying in the vale between West Newton and Flitcham, and united with the latter for the maintenance of the poor. It contains only two farm houses, two cottages, and about 700 acres of land, belonging to H. R. H. the Prince of Wales and the Earl of Leicester. The ancient lords of the manor were the Pastons, whose handsome mansion here was burnt to the ground in 1707, to the great danger of the family, who were in their beds when the conflagration was discovered. The hall was never rebuilt, and since then the small Church (St. Mary) has been a deserted ruin, of which the ancient round tower, the walls of the nave, and part of the south porch are all that remain. The discharged vicarage, which has only a yearly modus of £8, is in the patronage of Edmund Kent, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Allen, M.A., of Narborough. The two farms are occupied by Gerard Oswin Cresswell and Wm. Griggs. Post from Lynn.

ASHWICKEN, a small parish with only 108 inhabitants and 1282 acres of land, lies 5 miles E. of Lynn and $1\frac{1}{4}$ mile N. of East Winch railway station, in the picturesque vale of a rivulet which flows westward to that port. John Groom, Esq., owns about 500 acres of land, and the Hall, a large brick mansion formerly surrounded by a moat, and the rest of the parish belongs to Chas. Leamon, Esq. Upwards of 100 acres of sandy heath, at the west end of the parish, being unfit for cultivation, were planted about thirty years ago. The Church (All Saints) occupies a lofty situation in a large meadow overlooking the valley, and was formerly a much larger edifice. It now comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and tower. The latter is of the decorated period, but the rest of the building is in the perpendicular style, and in 1860 was handsomely restored and refitted with open benches of oak with carved poppies, &c., at a cost of £1000. The font, a fine octagonal one of the decorated style, was carved by Major Markham Kittoe, at Benares, and presented to the church by that gentleman, in memory of his daughter who died in 1850. The lectern is of oak and represents an eagle with outspread wings. There is a priest's door in the chancel, and in the lower part of the tower, which is open to the church, are two mural tablets of the Borrett family. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., is consolidated with Leziate, a churchless parish on the opposite side of the turnpike. The Rev. John Freeman, M.A., is patron and incumbent; and has a neat Rectory House built in 1843, 13A. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £520, awarded in lieu of tithes in 1844. The National School, with teacher's house attached, was built in 1845, and is attended by 45 children. The chief residents are—The Rev. John Freeman, M.A., J.P., rector and rural dean, Rectory; Horace Matthews Waters, farmer, Valley farm; Miss Mary Logan; Wm. Garner, farm steward, Hall; and Ellen Thew, schoolmistress. Post from Lynn, via East Winch.

BABINGLEY, a small parish 1 mile N.W. of Castle Rising, and $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.E. of Lynn, has only 67 inhabitants, and 849 acres of land, a great part of which is in swampy meadows, through which a rivulet runs westward to the Wash. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is owner of the soil, lord of the manor, and patron of the rectory, which is valued in K.B. at £4. 13s. 4d., and united with Sandringham in the incumbency of the Rev. George B. Moxon, B.A. The Church stands in the meadows, and is said to occupy the site of the first Christian Church erected in the county,—its patron saint being Felix the Burgundian, who converted the East Angles. It originally comprised nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and lofty square embattled tower, but the north aisle has entirely disappeared, and the chancel is in ruins. Remains of the sedilia and piscina, and a place for an aumbry, may still be seen in the ruined chancel, and the east window retains some of its tracery, but the chancel arch is now built up, and contains a square headed window of two lights. The whole building appears to be of the decorated period, and though partially repaired in 1849, is much in need of a thorough restoration. Chas. Bradfield, farmer, and Fredk. Potter, farm steward to T. R. Tingay, Esq., occupy the two farm-houses, and the other dwellings consist of about a dozen cottages. The base and part of the shaft of a roadside cross of the 14th century, still stand at the junction of the West Newton and Hunstanton roads. Post from Lynn.

BAWSEY, another decayed parish, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by N. of Lynn, has but 32 inhabitants and 1090 acres of land, including about 300A. of sandy heath, forming an ancient rabbit warren, in which great quantities of grey sand are got, and sent to the glass houses in various parts of the kingdom. For every cart load of this sand, 1s. 6d. is paid to the lord of the manor, A. Hamond, Esq., who owns most of the soil, and is patron of the sinecure rectory, valued in K.B. at £4, and now at £90, in the incumbency of the Rev. E. M. D. Pyne, B.A., of East Winch. The Church has been a roofless ruin for more than a century, and appears to have originally consisted of nave, chancel, bold central tower, and south transept, but the latter has entirely disappeared. It is mostly of Norman architecture, but decorated windows have been inserted in the chancel, and buttresses appear to have been added for the purpose of strengthening the building at the same period. The windows of the tower are good specimens of the Norman style, being of two lights, separated by the usual small column, under one semicircular arch. Traces of the piscina, sedilia, and aumbry may still be seen in the chancel. Here is only one farm house, occupied by Mr. John Gray, in whose possession is the parish register, a small octavo volume of parchment, which commences in 1539 and ends in 1773. Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., has 160 acres of land here, occupied by Mr. Emerson, of Grimston. Post from Lynn.

BILNEY (WEST) is a small scattered village with several neat houses, pleasantly situated on and near the Swaffham turnpike, $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles E.S.E. of Lynn; comprising in its parish 253 inhabitants, and 2750 acres of land, including 150 acres of plantations, all belonging to Samuel Dalton, Esq., the lord of the manor, and patron of the perpetual curacy, certified at £20 per annum, paid by the lord of the manor, but augmented from 1762 to 1817, with £800 of Q.A.B., of which £429. 14s. remain at interest, and the rest was laid out in the purchase of $13\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land. It is now valued at £60 a year, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. St. John Mitchell, M.A., of Pentney. The Church (St. Cecilia) comprises only nave and tower, the chancel being entirely gone. There is one bell, and the font is of the perpendicular period and ornamented with quatrefoils. On the south wall is a marble tablet in memory of several members of the Dalton family. Bilney Lodge, a handsome mansion embowered in thriving plantations, is occupied by Thos. Wm. Coke, Esq. The National School for Bilney and Pentney was built in 1833. Car stone, containing 23 per cent. of iron, is found in this parish, and here is a station on the Dereham branch of the Great Eastern railway. The chief residents are—T. W. Coke, Esq., Lodge; Samuel Dalton, Esq.; John Back, draper and shopkeeper; Thos. Dorman, parish clerk; Richd. Hammond, blacksmith; Thos. Hubbard, shopkeeper; Margt. Robinson, schoolmistress; Lionel Self Wells, station master; and Wm. Duckitt Badley, Thos. Clark, Wm. Denton, Wm. Dodd, Abm. Spinks, and Thos. Valentine, farmers. Post from Lynn, via East Winch.

CASTLE-ACRE, 4 miles N. of Swaffham, and 14 miles E. by S. of Lynn, is a considerable village of great antiquity, consisting chiefly of two streets, one on the crown, and the other on the abrupt declivity of the north bank of the river Nar, which, although now but an insignificant stream, was considerably broader in the time of the Romans, and easily navigable for small craft. The parish contains 1405 inhabitants, and 3249 acres of fertile land, broken into bold and picturesque swells, and including two commons on which the poor have pasturage for their stock. The early British warriors appear to have recognised the importance of the position, and formed here lofty and massive earthworks, which the Romans afterwards incorporated in their own more extensive entrenchments. At the time of the Norman Conquest, Castle-Acre belonged to a wealthy Saxon Thane, named Toch or Toke, and formed part of his fertile and richly wooded estate of Acre, which comprised several neighbouring parishes including those of South Acre and West Acre. The Conqueror granted it, with 146 other lordships, to William Earl of Warenne, and afterwards Earl of Surrey, who founded here an immense Castle and a beautiful Priory, the former of which was long the baronial seat of his descendants, who received in it several kingly visits. On the death of John the last Earl Warenne, in 1347, this estate passed into the hands of the female branch of the family, who had intermarried with the Arundels, ancestors of the Dukes of Norfolk; and after changing owners several times, was purchased in the early part of the 17th century by the celebrated Lord Chief Justice Coke, from whom the Earl of Leicester, its present possessor, is lineally descended. The earthworks, of which considerable portions still remain, cover an area of about twenty acres, and consist of a lofty circular hill, 150 feet in diameter; an outer ballium on the south side, shaped like a horse-shoe, and measuring 300 feet by 280; an irregular parallelogram to the west, 675 feet by 630; and a small earthwork at the north-east angle. The circular and horse-shoe works were doubtless constructed by the Britons, and the Romans finding the situation advantageous for a summer camp, formed the remaining banks and ditches in such a way as to include the existing ramparts, without deviating much from their established plan of castrametation. After the departure of the Roman Legionaries, the deserted fortress probably became alternately the property of the Saxons and Danes, and most likely Toch the Thane had here his Aula, or seignorial abode, till William de Warenne drove him forth, and commenced the erection of his magnificent Norman CASTLE, of which considerable ruins still exist. The principal entrances to the Castle were from the north and south, and gave admittance to the bailiwick through double gateways flanked by circular turrets of solid flintwork, formerly machicolated and provided with a portcullis. The northern gate still remains, and is a poor, rude specimen of early English work, of later date than the original castle. It stands at the top of Bailey street, the chief street of the village, which crosses the middle of the Roman camp, and was the place of residence of the numerous dependants, armourers, and other traders, whose business was almost exclusively connected with the castle. A similar double gateway, of which scarcely anything remains, gave entrance to the outer ballium, or horse-shoe work, in which the principal habitable portions of the castle were situated, but only a few traces of their foundations can now be discerned, and the curtain wall which surrounded and protected them is also nearly gone. From this enclosure the inner ballium or circular work, which is more elevated than the other, seems to have been gained by a stone stair, of which some steps are still visible on the steep slope of the bank. Here stood the keep or donjon, a lofty and massive tower of oblong form, of which only the foundations remain, though the ruins of the buttressed curtain wall which encircled it are still extensive. The ditches were evidently always dry, and had walls built across them in various places to prevent an enemy from completing the circuit of the defences, in case of attack. The small earthwork at the north-east angle of the castle appears to have never had any wall, but access to it was gained from the inner ballium by means of a small postern gate, and it was probably a feeding ground for cattle. West of Bailey street is an enclosure of considerable extent, commonly called the Barbican, the bank and ditch of which, on the west and south sides are very perfect, and of noble proportions, but the north-west angle and north side have been to a great extent destroyed, though they are still easily traced. Nearly in the centre of this space is a house, now occupied as a cottage but formerly of more imposing dimensions, with an ancient dove-house in front, one or two quaint doorways, a slender finial at the western gable, and three heraldic devices on the front, in moulded red earth. This abode appears to be of the time of Henry VII. or VIII., and was doubtless the residence of a bailiff or steward. The ancient British or Roman road called Peddar's Way, which crossed the county from the neighbourhood of Thetford to the sea at Hunstanton, and of which considerable portions are even yet in use, passed through the encampment at Castle-Acre in the line of the present Bailey street.

About half a mile to the east of the castle are the interesting ruins of the PRIORY, occupying a pleasant situation in the valley, and founded by the great Earl Warenne, in 1078, for monks of the Cluniac order, subject to the abbey of Lewes, in Sussex, and enclosed by a strong outer wall, encompassing an area of 29A. 2R. 10P. In the 24th of Edward I., the revenues of this religious house, which had been augmented by numerous benefactions, were seized, under the pretence of its being an alien priory, but were subsequently restored; and Edward II., in the 18th year of his reign, ordained that it should not in future be molested as foreign, it having, in his father's time, been proved indigenous, all the monks being English, subject only to the visitation of the Abbot of Cluny, when he came to England. On its dissolution, in the 26th of Henry VIII., its yearly income was valued, according to Speed, at £324, 17s. 5½d., and the site was granted to Thomas Duke of Norfolk, but was afterwards purchased, with the castle and other estates, by Lord Chief Justice Coke. The remains of the Priory, with its conventual church, form, perhaps, the finest and most venerable ruin in the county. The church (Virgin Mary) comprised nave, choir, and transepts, of which the west front, the south-west tower, and the north and south transepts present the most extensive remains. The choir is almost entirely destroyed, and little more than the foundations are visible. The west front, standing to the height of 64 feet, presents a beautiful Norman façade, filled with tiers of arches and columns enriched with beautiful chevron, billet, cable, and other mouldings and tracery, and formerly terminated on each side by elegant towers. The entrance is under a highly-wrought Norman arch, and above it is the complete outline of the great west window, the arch of which is admired as one of the finest specimens of the perpendicular style in the kingdom. With the exception of the west front, which is entirely faced with freestone, all the walls are of rubble, plastered over; even the pillars have only a facing of stone, and the piers, mouldings, shafts, and quoinings of the external walls alone are of freestone. The upper portion of the southwest tower is of the transition style, all the windows being pointed. The nave was 180 feet long, and, with the two aisles, 54 feet broad. The choir was of the same breadth, but much shorter; and the east end of it was in the form of a chapel. The chapter-house was a noble vaulted chamber of fine proportions, and the thirty-six stalls which it once contained may still be clearly traced. The dormitory, approached by a flight of stone steps, adjoins the chapter-house on the south, and beneath it is a vaulted room, supposed to have been the calefactory. On the south side of the cloister was the refectory, of which but little remains, and between it and the dormitory is a small square room, which was probably the locutory. The buildings on the west side of the cloister now form part of a farm-house and out-offices, and appear to have been so frequently altered that it is difficult to decide what was their original use. Most likely the strangers' hall and the guest chambers were situated here over the conventual cellars, but were destroyed in the perpendicular period, and replaced by a number of lofty rooms, with handsome windows, many of which still remain. The principal entrance to the monastery was in this part of the building, through a vaulted passage, over which is a small chapel, still having a fine Norman arch spanning the altar space at the east end, and a very beautiful sellium of the early decorated period in the south wall, but covered by a nearly flat roof of the time of Henry VII. Opposite the farm-house, at a distance from the north-west angle of the priory, stands the porter's lodge, or gatehouse, in a tolerable state of preservation. Though enough is left of this monastery to indicate its pristine magnificence, great dilapidations have been made at various periods by the corroding tooth of time, and the mercenary hands of former parishioners; indeed, almost every house and cottage in the adjacent village bear evident marks of the plunder of the priory and the neighbouring castle. This mischief, however, was stopped many years ago by a late lord of the manor. In removing some of the rubbish from the nave, 35 years since, a small part of the tessellated pavement was bared, and near it was found a complete skeleton, supposed to be the remains of the founder, who, according to some authorities, was buried at Lewes, in Sussex, near his wife, Gundreda, a daughter of William the Conqueror.

The PARISH CHURCH (St. James) stands on the crown of an acclivity, above the priory, and is a large fabric, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, north porch, and lofty square embattled tower with five bells. It was probably erected by one of the priors, and although in a wretched state of repair, and sadly needing judicious restoration, it still possesses some fine specimens of ancient architecture. The fine east window is of the early English period, and consists of five lights with a wheel or rose device above, but is sadly mutilated and partially blocked up. The priest's door on the south side of the chancel is also a good specimen of the same style; and its mouldings are chaste, well proportioned, and sharply cut. On the north side are three windows of the flamboyant style, and on the south side is a range of good perpendicular windows, but nearly all the others are poor. The tower, which is of three stories, is well proportioned, and has quatre-foils as sound holes for the clock chamber, and good unglazed windows in the belfry above. The lower part of the rood-screen remains, and is decorated with paintings of the twelve apostles; and the pulpit, which is remarkably small, has the four doctors of the church painted upon its panels. The most attractive object is the antique font cover, a beautiful piece of wooden tabernacle work of the perpendicular period, twenty-six feet in height, formerly richly gilt and painted, but now sadly disfigured by coarse red paint. Three of the ancient misereres carved with quaint devices still remain; and at the east end of each aisle is a small chapel protected by a screen. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 6s. 8d., and possessing only about two acres of glebe, was augmented with £200 of Q.A.B. in 1796, and a Parliamentary grant of £400 in 1813. The Earl of Leicester is appropriator of the great tithes and patron of the vicarage, which is in the incumbency of the Rev. John H. Bloom, B.A., who has published a history of the parish. In 1840, the rectorial tithes were commuted for £900, and the vicarial for £168 per annum. In the village are two chapels belonging to the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists, and two to the Baptists. The poor have £2. 2s. per annum, left in the 17th century by Mr. Coney and William Lee, out of land at South Acre and East Lexham. The National School was built in 1839 at a cost of £180, and is attended by 90 children. Two small annual fairs, chiefly for pleasure, are held here on August 5th and May 1st.

CASTLE-RISING, though now only a village with 377 inhabitants, pleasantly seated on the crown and slope of a declivity, on the Hunstanton road, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.E. of Lynn and $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile E. of North Wootton railway station, is an ancient borough by prescription, and said to have been a considerable sea port "when Lynn was but a marsh." Spelman says it is "a burgh of such antiquity that the royal archives and records give no account of it;" and he considers the Romans had a place of defence here, from some of their coins having been found on and near the Castle-hill. That a large arm of the sea once flowed up to the town is evident from the low swampy marshes between it and Babingley being often inundated by the spring tides, though distant more than two miles from the Wash. The lane which descends from the town to these marshes is still called Haven-Gate, where a piece of an anchor was dug up many years ago. At the conquest, Rising was a beruite of the lordship of Snettisham, and together with that manor and the hundred of Smithdon and hundred and half of Freebridge, was forfeited by Stigand, Archbishop of Canterbury. These possessions were given by the Conqueror to his half brother Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, and on his rebellion against William Rufus were granted to William de Albini Pincerna, whose son and namesake married Adeliza, widow of Henry I., and assumed in her right the title of Earl of Arundel. He was shortly afterwards created Earl of Sussex, and to him is usually ascribed the erection of Rising Castle. On the death of Hugh de Albini without issue in 1243, this estate passed to his sister Cecily, who had married Roger, Lord Montalt. In 1329, Robert, the last of the Montalts, died, having previously made an agreement with King Edward III. by which these estates were settled on himself and wife for life, and afterwards on the Dowager Queen Isabella, to whom his widow surrendered her life interest in 1331 in consideration of an annuity of £400 a year. Queen Isabella spent here the greater part of the remaining 27 years of her life, after the execution of her paramour, Mortimer, and was occasionally visited by her son, Edward III. She appears, however, to have sometimes stayed for short periods at Hertford Castle, where she died August 23rd, 1358, and not, as has been erroneously stated by so many writers, at Rising. Edward Prince of Wales then became possessed of the estate, and from him it passed to his son Richard II., who in 1379 exchanged it with John Le Vaillant, Duke of Brittany, for the Castle of Brest; but in 1397 the exchange was avoided, the Castle of Brest being restored to the Duke and Rising reverting to the King. It remained in possession of the royal family until 1545, when it was exchanged by Henry VIII. for certain estates in Suffolk with Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk. It continued in the family of the Dukes of Norfolk till it was sold in 1693 to Thomas Howard, grandson of Thomas, Earl of Berkshire, and from that time it was inherited by various members of the Howard family, and now belongs to the Hon. Mary Howard, widow of Lieut.-Col. Fulke Greville Howard, son of the first Lord Templeton. She is lady of the manor and owner of most of the parish, which contains 2096A. of land, including 200A. of heath, and 168A. of marsh common.

On the south side of the village are the stupendous earthworks which encompass the remains of the once splendid CASTLE, consisting of an extensive circular space surrounded by a bank and ditch, with square additions to the east and west protected in a similar manner, that to the east being the larger and more perfect of the two. The circular work was probably of British construction, and the square additions of the Roman period. The early Norman possessors of the lordship, finding such formidable defences already in existence, built upon them a spacious and almost impregnable castle, which was altered and enlarged by succeeding owners. The exact date of the original erection is unknown, but William de Albini, Earl of Sussex, is usually considered to have been the founder about the middle of the 12th century. It appears to have only occupied the central earthwork; but of the numerous buildings which once filled that large area, nothing now remains but the keep, the chapel, the gatehouse, and a few foundations and walls of the constable's lodgings. The wall and towers which formerly crowned the bank are gone, except a fragment or two of a brick wall. The road to the castle crosses the ditch by a bridge of the perpendicular period, nearly in the centre of the eastern side of the enclosure, and passes through a Norman gatehouse, opposite to which is the great tower or keep, a massive square building of the Norman period. The only means of gaining access to the ground floor of this tower was by newel staircases at the north east and south west angles, descending from the upper story, which is reached by a covered staircase on the eastern side, at the top of which an arch of fine proportions opens to a room in the first floor of the entrance tower. This room is lighted on three sides by Norman windows, and the fourth contains a beautiful recessed Norman doorway, originally forming the main entrance to the hall of the great tower, but now walled up. In the decorated period this room received a heavy vaulting, which rests on corbels and supports a third floor, above which is a shingle roof with ancient brick gables. The roof and floors of the great tower have long since disappeared, and the building is now a mere shell, but most of the interior walls, some portions of vaulting, and several of the piers and corbels on which the beams rested still remain. To the north of the great tower are the remains of a chapel of very early Norman workmanship. This building appears to have consisted of nave with chancel and semicircular apse, and was completely buried till about 25 years ago, when the late Col. Howard levelled the area of the castle yard to the base line of the great tower, and judiciously repaired that structure in such a manner as to render it capable of standing for centuries. The two upper rooms of the entrance tower are now furnished and inhabited by the custodian of the building, placed there by the Hon. Mrs. Howard, who fully appreciates the value of the splendid relic of antiquity which has fallen into her hands, and takes every means to preserve it from the ravages of time, or the wanton destruction of ignorant or mischievous persons.

The Borough of Castle Rising is of such antiquity that its origin is unknown, and the mayor was always named before the mayors of any other borough in the county, at the reading of the Royal commission of the peace before the judges of assize. It was formerly governed by a mayor, recorder, high-steward, 12 aldermen, a speaker of the commons, and fifty burgesses. For some years before it was abolished by the Municipal Act of 1835, the corporate body consisted of only two aldermen, who alternately served the office of mayor. Until disfranchised by the Reform Bill of 1832, it sent two representatives to the House of Commons, and the right of electing them was confined to the mayor, aldermen, rector, and the owners of about sixty burgage tenements, which have long been held by three individuals; most of them belonging to the Hon. Mrs. Howard and Lord Cholmondeley, and the remainder to Anthony Hamond, Esq. The parishes of North and South Wootton, and Roydon, lie within the purlieu of the borough and the baronial jurisdiction of the castle, being subject to the courts leet and baron, held yearly in November or December. Within these parishes the mayor formerly exercised magisterial authority. The burgesses had an ancient charter for weekly markets on Monday and Thursday, and a fair on the feast of St. Matthew and fifteen following days; but they have long been obsolete, though a pleasure fair is still held on May 3rd.

The Church (St. Lawrence) is a fine specimen of Norman architecture, with some transitional and early-English additions, and comprises nave, chancel, south transept, small chapel on south side of nave close to the transept, vestry on north side of chancel, and a gabled tower at the junction of the nave and chancel. The west front is very beautiful, and presents a rich profusion of Norman ornamentation. Over a deeply recessed doorway is a large and handsome window, with an arcade of interlacing arches of great richness on each side, and above this a plain arcade of four arches beneath a small circular window. There are six narrow Norman windows high up in the south wall of the nave, but none on the south side. The south doorway is enriched with the chevron, but the north doorway is blocked up. The south transept is entirely new, and in the early English style, the former transept having been of that period. The nave is separated from the chancel by the arches supporting the tower, which are of three different periods, the one opening to the nave being Norman, and having an arcade of three arches with beautifully varied details above it, whilst that of the transept is early-English; and the chancel arch is a fine specimen of the transitional Norman style. The tower has a good groined roof ornamented with zigzag mouldings, and the space beneath it is furnished with stalls for the choir; the organ standing in the adjoining transept. The font stands between the north and south doors, and has a square bowl resting on a massive circular shaft. It is of bold outline, and the basin on two sides is elaborately sculptured with grotesque heads surrounded by ornamental interlaced tracery. The other two sides are plain, as if the font had originally stood in a corner. At the north-east angle of the nave is a Norman recess, containing a mural painting of the Crucifixion, in outline, under which there was probably once an altar. There appears to have been another altar in a similar position at the other side of the nave, under an early English canopy with a niche over it; and the piscina and hagioscope adjoining it still remain. The chancel is lighted by two early English single-light windows in the south, and one in the north wall, and a richly ornamented triple lancet window at the east end, all filled with beautiful stained glass. It contains sedilia for three priests, a piscina, an aumbry, and a fine niche; and the reredos consists of an early-English arcade with Purbeck marble pillars. The interior of the church is furnished with open benches and has a solemn and impressive appearance, having been judiciously restored at different periods during the last forty years, chiefly at the expense of the late Colonel Howard, to whose memory a "grateful tenantry" placed a chastely designed monument on the north wall of the nave, whilst his widow filled the west window with rich stained glass. Here are also mural tablets of the Bagot, Bellamy, Parry, Fawcett, and Beck families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8, and now at £484, with that of Roydon annexed, is in the patronage of the Hon. Mrs. Howard, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Walter Bagot, M.A., chancellor of the diocese of Bath and Wells, who has here 15A. of glebe and a good residence. On the green, a little east of the church, stands a lofty Cross, on the site of the ancient market cross, the foundations of which were brought to light some years ago.

TRINITY HOSPITAL, east of the churchyard, consists of a neat building surrounding a court, with apartments for a governess and twelve women, a common-hall, and a chapel; a garden surrounded by a wall, and divided into portions for the almspeople; and another garden on the north-west, divided in the same manner. It was founded in the 13th of James I., by Henry, Earl of Northampton, who endowed it with a yearly rent-charge of £100, out of his estate here, and with the interest of £100, vested with the hospital founded by him at Greenwich. The founder directed that this endowment should be for the support of thirteen poor spinsters or widows, of the age of 50 years or upwards, and that six of them should be parishioners of Castle Rising, four of Roydon, and two of North Wootton; but there are now only eleven almswomen and a governess. About 1834, a balance of unapplied income was invested in the purchase of stock, now yielding an additional £5 per annum to the endowment; and in 1846, the Hon. Mrs. Howard gave £100 to increase the stipends of the inmates, who now receive 3s. 9d. each per week, but the governess, who reads prayers, has 5s. a week. Each has also 8d. on thirteen festival days appointed by the founder, a chaldron of coals, and a brown woolsey gown, yearly; and on every seventh year, a high-crowned beaver hat, with a livery gown, of fine blue cloth, having the founder's badge or cognizance set on the breast. They are appointed by the Hon. Mrs. Howard, who, as owner of the Castle Rising estate, pays the yearly rent-charge of £100; but the management of the hospital is left principally to the rector. In the village is a School, built by the late Mrs. Howard in 1815, and considerably enlarged in 1843, and supported by the Hon. Mrs. Howard and the rector, who pay half the master's charges for educating poor children. This parish is entitled, in rotation with Bungay, to send a poor man to Trinity Hospital, Greenwich, in case a sufficient number is not sent from Shottesham.

CONGHAM is a scattered, but pleasant village, with several neat houses, 7 miles E.N.E. of Lynn, comprising in its parish 315 inhabitants and 2850 acres of land, with extensive woods and plantations, most of them embowering Congham Lodge, which belongs to Sir Wm. H. Ffolkes, Bart., and is occupied by Mrs. Keppel. The common was enclosed in 1812. Robert Elwes, Esq., and Miss Hamond, of Swaffham, own most of the soil. The former is lord of Rusteyns, Beleters, and Reed Hall manors, and resides at Congham House, a neat Elizabethan mansion, erected in 1858; and the latter is lady of the manor of Congham, which was held successively by the Paston, Daniel, Wodehouse, Spelman, Mordaunt, and other families. That eminent English antiquary and lawyer, Sir Henry Spelman, was born here in 1564, and served as high sheriff of Norfolk in 1604. He died in London, in 1641, and lies buried in the south transept of Westminster Abbey. J. E. Everard, Esq., has a pleasant seat and estate in the parish, on the Grimston road, near Roydon. The Church (St. Andrew) is of the decorated period, and comprises nave, chancel, chapel on north side of nave, and west tower. There is a piscina at the east end, and a lychnoscope or low side window in the south wall of the chancel. The churchyard is about to be enlarged. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12, was endowed in 1718, by Ellen Spelman, with houses, land, and tithes, then of the yearly value of £53. 18s. 6d. Miss Wright, of Lynn, is patroness, and the Rev. Thomas White Holmes, B.A., is the rector, and has a good residence, a yearly rent-charge of £550, and glebe producing £13 a year. The School is a neat Gothic building, supported by Miss Hamond, of Swaffham. There is a small Methodist Chapel. The parish register dates from 1580. The Fuel Allotment, on which the poor cut turves, &c., is 19A., awarded at the enclosure in 1813. The poor have also the interest of £10, left by John Bailey, in 1712. The chief residents are—Mrs. Keppel, Lodge; Miss Sarah Hamond, Manor House; Rev. T. W. Holmes, B.A., Rectory; James Elsdon Everard, Esq., Hall; Robt. Elwes, Esq., Congham House; John Groom, farmer; Sarah Eliz. Bennett, schoolmistress; Thos. Catten, carpenter; Hy. Hall, parish clerk; James Rudd, coal dealer; and Wm. Smith, shoemaker. Post via Lynn.

DERSINGHAM is a large well-built village, on the Hunstanton road, 8½ miles N.N.E. of Lynn, sheltered on the north by rising and well-cultivated fields, and bounded on the south by a sandy heath and rabbit warren of 1900 acres, of which 1500A. are in Wolferton, and the rest in Sandringham, West-Newton, and Dersingham. The parish contains 822 inhabitants and 3472 acres of land, extending nearly two miles westward to Lynn Deepes, and three miles eastward to Ling House. At the enclosure, in 1779, 160 acres were allotted in lieu of the vicarial tithes, and 457 acres were enclosed within a ring fence for the use of the parish, viz.:—329A. of marsh, as a stinted common, and 128A. of heath, for providing whins and turf. John Bellamy, Esq., and the Marquis Cholmondeley own a great part of the soil, and are lords of the manors of West Hall, Pakenham, Gelham, Shouldham Priory, and Brook. The copyholds are subject to small fines, and the quit-rents amount only to £10. 14s. 8½d. The Hon. C. S. Cowper is lessee of the rectorial tithes, under the Bishop of Norwich. The Church (St. Nicholas) is a large edifice, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, south porch, and lofty square tower with six bells. The chancel is of the decorated, and the rest of the building of the perpendicular period, but the whole is in a somewhat dilapidated state and needs judicious restoration. The sanctus bell-cot still remains on the east gable of the nave, and there is a priest's door and also a low side window on the south side of the chancel. The nave consists of six bays, with panelled pillars and finely moulded arches. The tower arch is lofty, and the west window is of five lights with embattled transom. There are some old poppy-headed benches in the nave, and in the windows of the north aisle are some fragments of ancient stained glass, containing figures of angels, &c. Part of the old rood-screen remains, with painted figures of saints, much defaced, on its panels; and a small portion of the sedilia is visible in the chancel, the remainder being hidden by plaster. At the east end of the south aisle is a fine altar tomb, having a black marble slab on the top, with incised figures of John Pell (ob. 1607), mayor of Lynn, and his wife, and on the sides are representations of their six sons and three daughters. There are also many slabs of the Pell family, and mural tablets of the Postlethwaite, Hodson, and Kerrich families. The vicarage was valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., and is now worth £155. The Rev. Edw. Bellamy, B.D., of Ingoldisthorpe, is incumbent, and the Marquis Cholmondeley patron. The poor parishioners have the following yearly doles, viz.:—£5 from 2A. 8P. of land at Snettisham, left by Jeffery Bummer, in 1689; 10s. left by Nicholas Ground, out of half an acre; 25s. from 1R. 7P., left by an unknown donor; 10s. out of land occupied by Mr. Waters; and £33, as the rent of 8A. 2R. 36P., allotted at the enclosure, in lieu of land purchased with £100, left by Elizabeth Pell, in 1730. Of the latter, 16 pennyworth of bread is distributed every Sunday, and the residue is disposed of in coals. Here is a station on the Lynn and Hunstanton Railway. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels in the village, and the Parish School is attended by about 45 children.

FLITCHAM-CUM-APPLETON is an ancient village, lying in a picturesque valley, north of Hillington Park, 9 miles N.E. of Lynn, and including within its parish several scattered farm houses, 533 inhabitants, and 4200 acres of fertile land, including about 20 souls and 700 acres in Appleton, which is united with it for the support of the poor, as has been seen at page 774. The Earl of Leicester is lord of the manor, owner of the soil, and patron of the perpetual curacy, which was certified at £20, and is now worth £80 a year, having been augmented from 1780 to 1812 with £800 of Q.A.B., and in 1853 with £300, given by Miss West, who also built a neat Elizabethan Parsonage House in the same year, at a cost of £700. The Rev. Wm. Leech, M.A., is the incumbent. The Church (Virgin Mary) comprises nave with south aisle and clerestory, south porch, and tower. The chancel has long been destroyed and the south transept is in ruins; so that the tower, which formerly stood in the centre, is now at the east end, and its lower part is of the Norman period, but the rest of the building is perpendicular. The school is attended by about 50 children. In the outbuildings of a farm house are some remains of Flitcham Priory, founded in the reign of Henry III., by Sir Robert Aguillon, for Augustine canons, subject to the Prior of Walsingham, and valued at the dissolution at £62. 10s. 6½d. per annum. On the hill above the village is a remarkable tumulus, called Flitcham Burgh, where the Hundred Court was anciently held. The chief residents are—The Rev. W. Leech, M.A., Parsonage; John Bridges, blacksmith and victualler, Bell; Martin Rippingill, cattle dealer and victualler, New Inn; John and James Lambert, grocers and drapers; Thos. Billing, wheelwright; James Bretten, carpenter; John Howard, butcher; George Burrell, shoemaker; Eliz. Wagg, schoolmistress; James Linford, parish clerk; James Bretten, jun., Susan Creamer, and Samuel Curson, shopkeepers; and Wm. Betts (Harpley Dams), George Brereton (Hall), Mary Burrell, and William Wiley Middleton (Abbey), farmers. POST OFFICE at Henry Creamer's. Letters despatched, via Lynn, at 6.5 p.m.

GAYTON, a fertile parish and an extensive and well-built village, pleasantly situated on the Litcham road, 6½ miles E. of Lynn, increased its population from 397 in 1801, to 789 in 1841, and to 920 in 1861, including the inmates of the large Union Workhouse, which was built here in 1836, and is already noticed at page 773. The parish comprises 3272 acres of land, under which are beds of excellent lime and flint. It is in three MANORS, viz.:—Gayton Hall, (about 1500 acres,) belonging to Andrew St. John, Esq., of Dover; Well Hall, (nearly 1000 acres,) belonging to Chas. B. Clough, Esq.; and West Hall, of which Sir Willoughby Jones, Bart., is lord and owner. The Church (St. Nicholas) is a building of the decorated period, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, south porch, and a lofty battlemented tower with figures of animals for pinnacles. The east window is a perpendicular insertion, and it and the window under the tower were filled with stained glass in 1852, by Alex. Simson, Esq. There is also in the north aisle a small stained window given by Mr. Wm. Curtis. The chancel contains sedilia for three priests and a piscina; and at the east end of the south aisle are a piscina, an aumbry, and a small bracket for an image. There are mural tablets of the Treadway and Trundle families. In 1850, the church was re-pewed and the chancel re-roofed and repaired, at a cost of £300. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8. 6s. 8d., is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Thos. Jex-Blake, M.A., who has a good residence, built in 1864, and 23A. 2B. 3P. of glebe. A. St. John, Esq., holds the rectorial tithes, on a renewable lease for three lives, under the Bishop of Ely. In 1839, the rectorial tithes were commuted for £483. 18s. 6d., and the vicarial for £310 per annum. The poor parishioners have £3. 8s. 8d. yearly, left by the Rev. Thomas Hopes, in 1616, out of the tithes of Notley in North Runcton and Middleton, and 30s. from two rent-charges, left by unknown donors, out of land now belonging to the St. John and Simson families. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1810, comprises 30A. 1R. 22P., let for about £40 a year, which is distributed in coals. The Wesleyans, Wesleyan Reformers, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. The parish School, built by subscription in 1851 on ground given by Sir W. Jones, Bart., is attended by above 90 children.

GAYTON-THORPE, a small retired village, nearly a mile S.E. of Gayton, and 8 miles E. by S. of Lynn, has in its parish 169 inhabitants, and 2355 acres of land, inclusive of about 100 acres of plantations. It is all the property of Anthony Hamond, Esq., the lord of the manor, and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £6, and is now worth £490. The Rev. Geo. Coldham, M.A., of East Walton, is the incumbent. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and round tower with two bells, one of which is cracked. The tower is of the late Norman period, and its upper windows are enriched with the chevron and other ornaments. The rest of the building is in the perpendicular style, but the porch is modern. The font is octagonal and has carvings of the seven sacraments and another subject on its sides. The chief residents are—Joseph Hall, victualler, Gate; Geo. Rix and Richd. Palmer, farmers; Wm. Copeman, shopkeeper; and Edw. Kye, parish clerk. Post from Lynn, via Hillington.

GAYWOOD is a considerable village, at the junction of the Castle-Rising and Gayton roads, 1 mile E. of Lynn; adjoining to which town it has in its parish a suburb of cottages called Highgate, a modern row of neat houses called Albion Place, several windmills, and the Hospital of St. Mary Magdalen, already described with Lynn, to which it belongs. (See page 744.) The parish of Gaywood has increased its population since the year 1821, from 474 to 1368 souls, and contains 2335 acres of land, of which nearly 1400 acres belong to Richd. Bagge, Esq., lord of the manor. Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., W. Burch, Esq., and the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, have also estates here. The common, about 500 acres, was inclosed in 1808. A great part of the soil is in grass, and a rivulet runs through the vale on the north side of the parish, from the springs of Grimston, Reffly, &c., to the water-works at Lynn. Two fairs are held here annually, on June 22nd and October 17th, the former for stock, and the latter for horses. A cheese fair, formerly held here on Oct. 17th, is now held in King street, Lynn. The Church (St. Faith) is a plain cemented building, comprising nave, chancel, transepts, north porch, and brick tower with three bells. It is all of the decorated period, except a bold Norman arch with the zigzag ornament, now forming the entrance to the porch. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5.13s.4d., and now at £633, is in the gift of Richard Bagge, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Robt. Wilson Pearse, M.A., who has a handsome residence. The National Schools were built in 1854-'5, at a cost of £500, and are attended by about 140 children. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel at Highgate. In the reign of Henry II., the Bishop of Norwich held Gaywood and Lynn in capite, and would not suffer the King's bailiffs or coroners to enter the lordship, where he had officers of his own, a gallows, assize of bread and beer, and other royalties. Bishop Grey built a Palace here on the site now occupied by Gaywood Hall, the seat of R. Bagge, Esq., nearly half a mile south of the village. About one mile to the north is the wood and chalybeate spring of Reffly, belonging to Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., but appropriated by the first Baronet, as a place of resort for the people of Lynn, whom he long represented in Parliament. Reffly Spring is a fine rural fountain, over-canopied with foliage, and having a handsome obelisk rising from its centre. Round it are seats, and at a short distance is an elegant octagonal temple, built and supported by subscription, at the head of a verdant lawn encompassed by umbrageous trees and shrubs. At the enclosure, an Allotment of 21A. 2R. 7P. was awarded to the poor parishioners, and it is now let in 23 lots to labouring men, at rents amounting to about £10, which is distributed in coals. The yearly sum of £2, left by Dr. Thomas Thurlyn, in 1708, to provide coats for three poor men, is paid by the Corporation of Lynn. The Church Estate comprises a house, seven cottages with gardens, and 3A. 1R. 36P. of land, the whole producing £73 a year.

GRIMSTON is a large parish and well-built village, 7 miles E. by N. of Lynn, comprising 270 houses, 1300 inhabitants, and 3483A. 2R. 12P. of land, of which 800A. are heath, and 800A. in roads and drains. The parish extends about 6 miles in length E. and W., and includes a number of scattered houses and a hamlet called Pott-Row or Pottery Row, from an ancient pottery on the heath, one mile W. of the church. The principal landowners are the Marquis Cholmondeley, who owns 600A.; Sir Wm. H. Ffolkes, 400A.; Miss Hamond, 1500A.; and the Rector, 620A. The Marquis is lord of the manor of Grimston, and the rector of the Rectory manor. The soil is various, in some places a fertile loam, and in others a light sand, resting on chalk and gravel. The Church (St. Botolph) is a fine cruciform building, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, north and south transepts, chancel, south porch, and fine lofty tower containing six bells, cast out of the four old ones about 50 years ago. The edifice was neatly restored about 20 years since, and is mostly of the decorated period, but the south doorway is a good specimen of early English work, enriched with deep mouldings, the tooth ornament, &c., and the tower and windows of the aisle are in the perpendicular style. There are a few old benches with carved ends in the nave, and in the chancel are six curious stalls, five of which have carved misereres. The lower portion of the old rood screen still remains, and in the chancel is a painted window in memory of the Rev. Geo. Barnes, B.D., formerly rector of this parish. It represents St. Paul preaching before King Agrippa. There is a piscina in the south transept. The church was re-roofed in 1832, and the vestry was rebuilt by the present rector in 1856, having previously been used as a schoolroom. In the churchyard is an iron anvil, serving as the headstone of a late blacksmith; and a little to the west of the churchyard issue forth three copious springs, which form a pool on the opposite side of the road, and from thence flow in a pellucid stream to Lynn, forming the chief supply of the Water Works of that town. The Rectory, valued in K.B. at £26. 13s. 4d., and now worth £640 a year, is in the patronage of Queen's College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. John Rowlands, B.D., who has about 600A. of land awarded in lieu of tithes at the inclosure. The Rectory House, a pretty building in the Elizabethan style, pleasantly situated in a wood, and surrounded by a moat of pure flowing water, was rebuilt by the present rector in 1855. In the east end of the house is retained a portion of the wall of the old rectory, once forming part of a room in which Oliver Cromwell slept, and where he is said to have seen a Ghost in the form of a Stag, during a visit he paid from Castle Rising to his old friend Waller, as he called him, at Grimston. The Free School is endowed with a house for the master, and five acres of land called Butland, left by Sir Jno. Thorowgood about 1726, for the better maintenance of the schoolmaster,* and a certain sum appropriated from Talman's charity, for which the master is to teach the rudiments of grammar, writing and arithmetic, to all the sons of parishioners, as free scholars, on payment only of 5s. as an entrance fee. The school and master's house, barn, &c., were rebuilt in 1830, at a cost of nearly £1000. The present Feoffees are, the Marquis Cholmondeley, D. Gurney, A. Hamond, R. Elwes, and H. B. Coldham, Esqrs., the Rev. Henry Ffolkes, and the Rector. The Girls' and Infants' Schools, form one pretty building, an ornament to the village, and were built in 1852 by Miss Hamond, who still supports them. There is also a Juvenile or Mixed School at Pott-Row, supported by D. Gurney, Esq., and the Rector. The attendance at all the Schools amounts to about 200. John Talman, in 1394, left 6 messuages and 44 acres of land for the discharge of the moiety of all fifteenths from the parish to the King. Since the inclosure of the parish in 1780, this charity has consisted of 56 acres of land and one cottage, producing at present an income of £99. 12s. In different conveyances to new trustees, there has been an extension at various times of the object of the charity in the various declarations of trust, the original intention of the benefactor being always kept in view. In the reign of Charles I., the first grant was made towards the maintenance of a schoolmaster. This has been increased from time to time as the value of the property increased. The present purposes to which according to the last declaration of trust in 1829 it is now to be applied, are—the maintenance of the schoolmaster, the repairs of the master's house and premises, and the discharge of all rates and taxes for the same, and the repairs of the parish church and churchyard walls. If any overplus remains, it is applied towards the apprenticing of poor boys, or the benefiting of the parish in any other way. At the inclosure in 1780, 459A. 3R. 21P. were set apart as a stinted common for the use of freeholders and others having common rights; three fens, containing together 192A. 3R. 26P., were also awarded for the parishioners to cut fuel and feed geese upon; and 8A. to provide them with sand, gravel, and clay. An allotment of 56A. 3R. 26P. was at the same time made for the purpose of raising a fund for keeping in repair the gates, fences, bridges, and drains of the public allotments, and a portion of it is let in garden plots to the poor at low rents. Here is a neat police station, with houses for the inspector and one constable, built in 1855.

HARPLEY is a pleasant village on the crown and declivities of a lofty eminence, 12½ miles E.N.E. of Lynn, comprising in its parish 479 inhabitants and 2193 acres of land, including an extensive sheep walk. The Marquis Cholmondeley is lord of the manor and owner of about 1650 acres, and the rest belongs to the Rev. N. J. Raven, except 90A. of glebe and 14A. of church land. The Church (St. Lawrence) stands near the summit of the hill, and commands an extensive view of the surrounding country. It was built by Sir Robert Knowls, a famous general in the reigns of Edward III. and Richard II., and comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, south porch, and south-western tower with five bells. It is of mixed decorated and perpendicular architecture, and is about to be restored. Some of the windows contain fragments of ancient stained glass. The rood screen, painted and gilt, and the staircase which anciently led to the rood loft, still remain. In the nave is a number of old benches with carved poppies and figures of bishops, much mutilated. The chancel contains sedilia, and a piscina with a double drain; and the south aisle is similarly provided. On the south side of the chancel is a small lychnoscope, and in the north wall a recess for the Easter sepulchre. In the pavement is a slab, stripped of its brasses, having a marginal inscription to John de Gurnay, a former rector, and covering a grave, in which a chalice was found in 1820. The south doorway bears mutilated figures of bishops and angels, and the porch has two windows on each side, and three niches in front. The parapet of the south aisle is richly panelled. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £22, is in the gift of Anthony Hamond, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. William Pratt, B.A., who has a good residence, and a yearly rent charge of £460 in lieu of tithes. The School was built by the lord of the manor, in 1845, and is attended by 50 children. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a small chapel here. In the 35th of Edward I., John de Gurnay obtained a grant for an annual fair to be held here on July 25th; but it is now only held for pleasure. Harpley participates in the benefits of the free school at Great Massingham, and the poor parishioners have yearly doles of 16s., left by John Martin, in 1637; and £3. 10s. from Gonville and Caius College, as the gift of Stephen Peirse, who died in 1615. In 1849, Wm. Herring, Esq., left five tenements for ten poor people, and endowed them with 4s. a week for each inmate; but in 1850 Mr. Edward Beck built eight neat almshouses in lieu of them. Mr. Herring also left £20 per annum for a distribution of coals to the poor, £10 a year towards the support of the school, and £200 as a repairing fund for the church.

HILLINGTON is a well-built village, pleasantly situated on the Fakenham turnpike, 7 miles N.E. by E. of Lynn, and has in its parish 330 inhabitants, and 2529 acres of fertile land, nearly all belonging to Sir Wm. Hovell Ffolkes, Bart., the lord of the manor, who resides at HILLINGTON HALL, a handsome mansion, seated in a spacious and well-wooded lawn and park, on the north side of the village, commanding a fine prospect of the vale down to Lynn Deep. The hall was erected in 1627, by Richard Hovell, Esq., whose father purchased the estate in the reign of Elizabeth. Most of his descendants made additions and alterations, and the late Sir W. J. H. B. Ffolkes, who succeeded to the title in 1821, made great improvements both in the house and grounds. From 1828 to 1838, the mansion was considerably enlarged by the erection of a noble entrance hall, staircase, library, and other apartments; and the exterior walls of all the old parts were rebuilt, so that the whole has now a modern and uniform appearance, and a very picturesque effect,—being constructed of large iron-coloured carstone, except the quoins, battlements, pediment, &c., which are of brick, cemented in imitation of freestone. The north front presents an elevation of the early style of the 15th century, and in the centre rises a large square tower. The rivulet which flows through the estate has been opened out into a beautiful serpentine lake, and handsome lodges have been erected on the south and east sides of the park. The present baronet was born in 1847, and is consequently still a minor. He is the eldest son of the late Martin

Wm. Ffolkes, Esq., and succeeded his grandfather in 1860. His brother, Martin William Ffolkes, is the heir presumptive. This family is descended from Martin Ffolkes, attorney-general to Catherine Queen Dowager of Charles II., and the baronetcy was created in 1774. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel with north chapel, and western tower. The nave was rebuilt in 1824, at a cost of £800. It contains two stained windows and several monuments of the Hovell, Browne, and Ffolkes families. The organ was built by Snetzler in 1756. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £13. 6s. 8d., and now at £450, is in the patronage of Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Edward Browne Ffolkes, M.A., who has a good residence built about 50 years ago at a cost of £800, and 60A. of glebe. On an elevated spot, a mile from the village, are the ruins of Bellemont House, which was built by Sir James Johnstone. Petty Sessions are held at the Ffolkes' Arms Inn, on the first Monday of every month. The School, a neat building of car-stone, with red-brick dressings, was erected in 1855, and is attended by about 60 children. In 1509, Francis Callibutt gave a decayed tenement and 33A. of land in Grimston, and directed the yearly profits thereof to be applied in paying the fifteenths and other King's taxes charged on the inhabitants of Hillington and East Walton; and the surplus to be divided among the poor of those parishes. This charity estate now consists of 31A. 2R. 32P., let for £40 a year, which is divided equally between the two parishes for distribution among the poor, pursuant to a degree of Chancery, obtained in 1823. The poor of Hillington have also £1. 16s. yearly, left by an unknown donor. The late rector, the Rev. Robert Hales, in 1853, bequeathed £200, the interest of which is distributed amongst poor aged widows. The chief residents are—Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., Dowager Lady Ffolkes, and Miss Fanny Ffolkes, Hall; Rev. H. E. B. Folkes, M.A., Rectory; — Mason, Esq., Up Hall; Benjamin Bridges, blacksmith and victualler, Buck; Mary Ann Doe, farmer and victualler, Ffolkes' Arms; Charles Hayward, grocer; John Hebgin, farmer, Church farm; John Palmer, farmer; and Senior Thompson, butcher and farmer, Warren farm. POST OFFICE at Robert Bone's. Letters despatched to Lynn at 6.15 p.m.

LEZIATE is a small parish, on the north side of the turnpike, 4 miles E. of Lynn, containing a few scattered houses, 197 inhabitants, and 1469A. of sandy land, including a warren and a common of 104A. The soil has been much improved during the last 30 years. A great part of it is in Mrs. Sharrack's manor of Well Hall; but A. Hamond, Esq., has about 200 acres, and the trustees of the late Mr. E. Howes own Holt House, with 500 acres, distant nearly two miles south of Leziate, in the vale, opposite Middleton Tower. Of the Church at Leziate, nothing remains but the foundation, the benefice having been long consolidated with Ashwicken. (See page 774.) The tithes of Leziate were commuted in 1839, for £280. 10s. 5d. per annum. Mr. Howes, who died in 1859, left £200 in trust with the rector of Ashwicken, the interest to be applied towards the education of poor children at Leziate. The chief residents are—George Gamble, land steward; Thomas Greaves, parish clerk; George Smith, beerhouse; Claxton Billing Mason, brickmaker, and farmer, Holt House; and George Daynes, and George and Philip Pelgrave, farmers. Post from Lynn, via Hillington.

MASSINGHAM (GREAT) is a considerable village, 10 miles N. of Swaffham, 12 miles E. by N. of Lynn, and 3 miles N.W. of Rougham. It was formerly called Marsincham, from its situation, partly on a low marshy common, with several pools of water, which after heavy rains overflow into a bog, called the Swallow Pit, where the surplus water soon disappears through the porous surface. But the chief part of the village, with the Church, is on a pleasant acclivity, rising gradually from the common towards Little Massingham. Here are two draw-wells, one 30 and the other 129 feet deep. The parish has increased its population, since the year 1801, from 569 to 934 souls. It contains 4112 acres of land, including more than 1000 acres of heath and common, forming an excellent sheep-walk. About two-thirds of the parish are in the Marquis Cholmondeley's manor of Massingham Priory, and the remainder in the manors of Monks and Felthams, of which the Earl of Leicester is lord and owner. It was held by Harold in the time of Edward the Confessor, and afterwards reverted to the Crown, till granted out by Henry I. John Lord Fitzjohn, in the reign of Edward I., gave it to the Bishop of Norwich. It subsequently passed to Sir John de Norwich, who had a grant of a weekly market on Friday, and a fair for three days yearly, on the vigil, day, and morrow of St. Simon and St. Jude; but these have long been obsolete, though two pleasure fairs are now held here on Maundy-Thursday and Nov. 8th. Before the year 1260, Nicholas le Syre founded here a small Priory as a cell to that at Castle-Acre, dedicated to the Virgin and St. Nicholas, but it was sometimes called the Hospital of Saint Mary. At the dissolution, this religious house was granted to Sir Thomas Gresham, and some remains of it may still be seen in the house and outbuildings of the Abbey-farm. The Church (St. Mary) is a large and handsome edifice, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, south porch, and lofty tower with battlements and pinnacles. It is of perpendicular architecture, except the south doorway and porch, which are fine specimens of early English work. The tower contains one bell and a clock, and exhibits some good flint panelling. The beautifully proportioned tower arch is open to the nave, and shews a large four-light window with embattled transom. The rood-stair turret still remains on the north side of the chancel. The building has been recently restored, re-roofed with oak, and fitted with open benches, new pulpit, reading-desk, &c., of cedar wood, given by the Marquis Cholmondeley. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £33. 6s. 8d., and now at £900, has about 50 acres of glebe, and was formerly in two medieties, viz., St. Mary and All Saints. The Marquis Cholmondeley is the patron, and the Rev. Christopher Grenside, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Wesleyan Reformers have each a chapel here. Mr. Wm. Bewley, the "Philosopher of Massingham," was a native of the north of England, but settled here in 1749 as a surgeon and apothecary. He was for many years one of the writers of the Monthly Review. After a short visit to his friends, Dr. Priestley, of Birmingham, and Dr. Burney, of London, he died at the house of the latter on his wedding and birth day, Sept. 5, 1783. In 1676, Charles Calthorpe left out of his estate here (now belonging to the Earl of Leicester), three yearly rent-charges, viz., 3s. 4d. for repairing the town-well, 26s. for a distribution of bread among the poor, and £20 for the endowment of a FREE SCHOOL for 25 poor boys, to be taught English, Latin, and writing. He directed that if Great Massingham could not make up the number of 25 free scholars, the remainder might be sent from Little Massingham, Harpley, and Rougham. It was held in a small room formerly over the church porch, till 1837, when it was consolidated with the National School, built in that year at a cost of £150. A house for the master has been provided by the Marquis Cholmondeley. In 1505, Sir Robert Lygon, priest, left about 30A. of land for various public uses in this parish, but it has all been lost, except 7A., in Great Massingham field, for which only £3 a year are paid by one of the tenants of the Marquis Cholmondeley, and applied to the use of the church-clock. The poor have yearly 10s. from half an acre of land, left by Dr. Berridge, in 1770; and 30s. from Gonville and Caius College, left by Stephen Peirse. A lodge of Oddfellows is held at the Fox and Pheasant.

MASSINGHAM (LITTLE) parish, 1 mile N. of Great Massingham, and 12 miles E. by N. of Lynn, has a pleasant rectory-house near the church, three farm houses, twenty cottages, 132 inhabitants, and 2278 acres of land, all enclosed, and belonging to Henry Wilson, Esq., the lord of the manor and patron of the living, which is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 13s. 4d., and now in the incumbency of the Rev. Chas. David Brereton, M.A., author of "An Enquiry into the Workhouse System and the Laws of Maintenance in Agricultural Districts," and of "A Practical Enquiry into the number, means of employment, and wages of Agricultural Labourers." The tithes have been commuted for £577 a year, and here are 33 acres of glebe. The parish clerk has the rent of an acre of land. The Church (St. Andrew) comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and western tower. It is of the decorated period, but most of the windows of the aisles are perpendicular insertions. The whole building has recently undergone a thorough restoration. The nave is filled with open benches, having well-carved poppies, and the chancel contains some good stalls. The pulpit is an octagon of Caen stone, and its shaft is surrounded by four pillars of Purbeck marble with richly ornamented caps. The sides are covered with acutely pointed arches with shafts of serpentine, above which is a wreath of flowers exquisitely carved. There is a squint or hagioSCOPE from the south aisle, and near it a piscina. The chancel contains a double piscina, a sedile, and a pix-box. Here are tablets of the Mordant, Stanford, and Godfery families. The chief residents are—Rev. C. D. Brereton, M.A., rector and rural dean, Rectory; Barnabas Clark, Wm. Hy. Stebbing, and Edw. Fisher, farmers; Edward Fisher, jun., miller; Henry Stanford, parish clerk; and Eliz. Bunnett, schoolmistress. POST OFFICE at John Bunnett's. Letters despatched to Brandon via Rougham at 5.30 p.m.

MIDDLETON is a pleasant village on an elevated part of the Swaffham road, 4 miles S.S.E. of Lynn. Its parish comprises the scattered hamlets of Fair-green, Tower-end, and Blackborough-end, and contains 894 inhabitants and 3029 acres of land, rising boldly from the picturesque vales of the Esk rivulet on the north and the river Nar on the south. It is well enclosed and drained (partly under acts passed in 1814 and '15), and has in one part a quarry of fine large car-stone. Lewis Whincop Jarvis, Esq., owns the greater part of the soil, and is lord of the Manor of Middleton, in which are many copyholds, subject to arbitrary fines. He resides at Middleton Tower, which stands in the valley more than a mile N.E. of the village, and is a lofty and massive brick pile, with stone quoins, forming the only remains of the Castle, which was long the chief seat of the Lords Scales, who obtained the manor in marriage with the heiress of Jeffery de Lisewis, in the reign of Henry II. They were seated here till the reign of Edward IV.

when their heiress married Earl Rivers, from whom the estate passed through various families to its present owner, who has restored and added to it. The tower is of excellent workmanship, 17 yards long, 9 broad, and 18 high; flanked with four octagonal turrets, which are embattled and rise several feet above the central tower. Daniel Gurney, Esq., F.S.A., and the Bishop of Norwich have also estates in the parish, and the latter is lord of the Manor of Blackborough, in which the land is leasehold for 21 years, renewable every seven. In the vale of the Nar, more than a mile south of the village, is the site of Blackborough Priory, which was founded in the reign of Henry II. for Benedictine Nuns, and endowed with considerable revenues by the Lords Scales and other families. After its dissolution, it was granted to the Bishop of Norwich. Some remains of the priory and its church may still be seen in the outbuildings of the adjacent farm-house. In digging among the foundations in 1834 three stone and two wooden coffins were discovered in a vault, containing perfect skeletons, all blackened by time, except the teeth, which retained their white enamel. One was supposed to be the skeleton of a man seven feet high. At the same time a number of tessellated pavements, a gold seal, and other antiquities were found. A stone coffin containing a skeleton was dug up about a dozen years ago, and is now in the Lynn Museum. Near the Tower is a station on the railway from Lynn to Norwich. The Church (Virgin Mary) comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and lofty embattled tower with one bell. It is all of the perpendicular period, except the chancel, which is early English; but there is a decorated window at the east end of the north aisle, and the east window of the chancel is a perpendicular insertion. The piscina and portions of the sedilia and rood loft still remain. There is a small organ in the north aisle. Some of the windows contain fragments of ancient stained glass with coats of arms, &c. Here are several slabs and tablets of the Everard, Wythe, Peirson, and other families. The edifice is about to be thoroughly restored. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7, is in the incumbency of the Rev. Thos. Hy. Kersley, LL.D., canon of Middleham, who has a good residence and 12 acres of glebe. The Rev. P. A. L. Wood, M.A., of Copford, Essex, is patron of the living and also impropiator of the rectorial tithes, which were commuted for £432. 2s. 5d. per annum in 1840. At the same time the vicarial tithes were commuted for £313. 9s., and the Notley tithes for £99. 18s. per annum. The latter belong to the rector of North Runcton, and arise out of the Notley estate, which contains 470 acres and adjoins the Pierpoint drain. Near the church is a tumulus overgrown with bushes. The Schools, with master's house attached, were built in 1861 at a cost of £700 on land given by the Bishop of Norwich. They are in the Elizabethan style, and will accommodate 100 children. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, built in 1840. The fuel allotment was awarded at the enclosure. The poor have 6s. a year out of Notley tithes, left by Rev. T. Hopes.

MINTLYN is a small decayed parish, $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles E. by S. of Lynn, on the northern acclivity of the valley opposite Middleton. It contains only 46 inhabitants, two farm-houses, and 720 acres of enclosed land, with a high sandy heath, of which 400 acres were planted by the late Wm. Bagge, Esq., who bequeathed this estate to its present owner, Richd. Bagge, Esq. Bishop Beaufoy had a grant of this and 60 other lordships from the Conqueror. In Domesday book it is called Meltinga. Its small Church (St. Michael) has long been in ruins, but the gables and one of the side walls are still standing. The south doorway is of fine proportions, and rich in the characteristic features of the best period of the Norman style. Mintlyn is now a sort of extra-parochial liberty, having neither church nor pastor. The farmers are Edward Mawby and Wm. Cole; and Robert Rungay is the gamekeeper.

• NEWTON (WEST) is a village on an eminence, 7 miles N.N.E. of Lynn, and comprises in its parish 268 inhabitants, and 1230 acres of land, lying in the two manors of Rivetts and Buckenham, and belonging to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, who supports a school here for 50 children. The common (280A.) was enclosed in 1806, when 12 acres were allotted to the poor for fuel, &c. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) is of the perpendicular period, and comprises nave with south aisle and porch, chancel, and battle-mented tower, on the west side of which is a fine niche. In 1805, the north aisle was taken down, the arches built up, and modern windows inserted. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Richard Brown Scholefield, M.A., who has a good residence, 7A. 2P. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £166. 6s. The chief residents are—the Rector; Fras. Smith, vict. Three Tuns; Saml. Twaits, miller, baker, and farmer; Alfred Boothby and Edw. Thos. Sherringham, farmers; Wm. Clarke, shoemaker; Jas. Cooke, shopkeeper; Robt. Wakefield, blacksmith; Emily Dunger, schoolmistress; and John Milton, parish clerk. Post from Lynn, via Dersingham.

PENTNEY is a large straggling village, on the north side of the river Nar, 9 miles S.E. by E. of Lynn, and $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. by W. of Swaffham. Its parish contains 642 inhabitants and 2330 acres of enclosed land, extending about five miles in length and one in breadth, on the north side of the vale of the Nar. Miss Thackeray, of Windsor, is lady of the manor and owner of one-fourth of the soil; the rest belongs to a number of small copyholders and leaseholders, subject to small certain fines. Robt. Vallibus held this manor of Roger Bigod in the time of William the Conqueror, and founded here a PRIORY of Austin canons, on a watery spot called the Isle of Eya, a mile west of the church. This priory was endowed with the manor, which, at the dissolution, was granted to Thos. Mildmay, Esq., from whom it passed to various families. Portions of its walls, and the fine embattled Gatehouse of the decorated period, still remain. The Church (St. Mary Magdalen) stands at the west end of the village, and comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and embattled tower. It exhibits various styles of architecture, and has been recently restored and re-roofed. There is a holy-water stoup near the north door, and in the chancel are sedilia and an aumbry. The perpetual curacy, certified at £20, is now valued at £70 a year, having been augmented, from 1716 to 1816, with £800 of Q.A.B., laid out in 28 acres of land. The patronage is in the Hankinson family, and the Rev. St. John Mitchell, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence, built in 1850, and subsequently enlarged. At a short distance from the church, are the base and part of the shaft of a fine early English roadside cross. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel here. The parish was drained under an act passed in 1815. The Poor's Land, &c., given by unknown donors, consist of a farm-house, out-buildings, and 8A. 1R. 9P., let for about £20 a year; and three yearly rent-charges, amounting to 25s. The poor have also an allotment of 62A. of land, awarded at the enclosure in 1807, for supplying them with turf, &c. The herbage on this fuel allotment is let for about £10 a year, which, with £11 paid by the Railway Company, and £6. 13s. 2d. from the funds, is distributed in coals. Narborough station, on the Norwich & Lynn Railway, is in this parish.

ROYDON is a village and parish within the purlieu of the borough and peculiar jurisdiction of Castle-Rising, 6 miles E.N.E. of Lynn, comprising 174 inhabitants and 1351 acres of land, including an extensive heath, stretching hence to Castle-Rising and Grimston. The Hon. Mrs. Howard owns the manor and is patroness of the living, which is a rectory valued in K.B. at £5, and consolidated with Castle-Rising. The Rectory House, occupied by the curate, was built in 1840. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, and south porch, in the Norman style, rebuilt in 1862 by the patroness, and a western tower of the perpendicular period. The north and south doorways belonged to the original church, and are good specimens of Norman work. The font is square, and supported by four marble pillars, surrounding a central shaft. The chancel contains sedilia for two priests, and a piscina, and on its north side is an organ. The chancel arch is elaborately ornamented, and the nave is filled with open benches. The School is attended by about 60 children. In 1454, a large and beautiful manor-house, called the Rey, built by the Wodehouse family, was pulled down, in consequence of a disputed claim between John Wodehouse and Thomas Danyel, Esqrs. This parish participates in the benefits of the Hospital at Castle-Rising. The chief residents are — Rev. Dd. Hy. Ellis, curate, Rectory; John Jarvis, vict. Plough; Benj. Powley, vict. Three Horse Shoes; Joseph King, relieving officer; Geo. Birch, wheelwright; Robert Barrett, grocer, draper, and tailor; Fras. Thompson, tailor; Annie Scott, schoolmistress; Robert Linder, potato dr.; and Thos. Carter, Chpr. Fisher, Edm. Cooper, Mary Ann Fisher, Hy. Gates, Lydia Gay (Hall), and Wm. Moore, farmers. Post from Lynn, via Hillington.

RUNCTON (NORTH) is a pleasant village, 3 miles S.S.E. of Lynn, including in its parish 304 inhabitants, and 2239 acres of land, of which about 800 are in the hamlet of HARDWICK, where there are three farmhouses and 28 inhabitants, within one mile of Lynn, belonging to Lionel Heathcote Esq., of Tedworth Court, Surrey. The trustees of the late Jph. Gee, Esq., are lords of the manor of North Runcton with Hardwick and Setch, in which the copyholders pay arbitrary fines, and about 200 acres are unenclosed. RUNCTON HALL, a large white brick mansion, with a tower and small Doric portico, was rebuilt in 1834, at a cost of nearly £5000, and is the handsome seat of Daniel Gurney, Esq., F.S.A. The Church (All Saints) is a neat cemented fabric, rebuilt, after the old one had been destroyed by the fall of the tower, in 1701. It has several inscriptions to the families of Rolle, Atwell, Hopes, and Cremer, who were formerly lords of the manor. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 10s., and now worth about £750 a year, with those of Hardwick and Setch annexed, is in the patronage of Daniel Gurney, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Hay Gurney, M.A., who has 15A. of glebe, and a good residence, recently rebuilt on a new site. The benefice was endowed in 1616 by the Rev. Thomas Hopes, with the Notley tithes (400 acres in Middleton), subject to yearly payments of 20s. fee-farm rent, £3. 8s. 8d. to Trinity College, for a poor scholar from the Lynn Grammar School, and several small sums for charitable uses. These tithes have been commuted for a yearly rent-charge of £99. 18s. The Rev. T. Hopes also bequeathed the Rectory House, with an acre of land attached to it; and out of the Notley tithes he left £3. 8s. 8d. for the poor of this parish, who have also land, called the Round Pightle, let for 36s.; an acre divided into 12 gardens, let for 3s. 6d. each; and four old tenements, occupied by poor families, but the donors are unknown. The Church Land, 17A. 2R. 8P., is let for £22. 12s. 6d. per annum. Here is a National School. Post from Lynn.

SANDRINGHAM, a small village and parish, containing only 56 inhabitants and 1172 acres of land, $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.E. of Lynn, has its name from its deep sandy soil, of which more than 200A. are on the extensive heath, stretching hence to Wolferton, where there is a station on the Lynn and Hunstanton Railway. In 1862, the Sandringham Estate, which embraces the parishes of Sandringham, Wolferton, Babingley, West Newton, and part of Appleton, was purchased of the Hon. Chas. Spencer Cowper for the sum of £220,000, by His Royal Highness Albert Edward PRINCE OF WALES, K.G., who occasionally resides at SANDRINGHAM HOUSE, a large cemented brick mansion, in a park of 300 acres sheltered by extensive plantations. At the entrance to the avenue leading to the house are the beautiful "Norwich Gates," described at page 166. No additions have as yet been made to the house, as it will probably be removed ere long, and a new and splendid residence erected in its stead; but the stables and many of the labourers' cottages have been rebuilt, and other improvements effected on the estate. The Church (St. Mary Magdalen) stands on an eminence adjoining the north side of the park, and is an admirably proportioned little building, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. It was beautifully and judiciously restored in 1855, by Lady Harriette Cowper, daughter and co-heir of the Earl of Blessington, and wife of the Hon. C. Spencer Cowper, in memory of their child, Marie Harriette Cowper. The chancel is in the decorated style, and the rest of the edifice perpendicular.

Over the arch of the porch is a well sculptured figure of a guardian angel. The east window is filled with stained glass, representing the Agnus Dei, the Good Shepherd, the Raising of Jairus's Daughter, and Christ blessing Little Children. There are several other stained windows, and some of Munich glass, in which the subjects are simply traced in outline on a golden ground. The font is new, but its tall crocketed cover is of the time of Henry VII. The chancel contains stalls of handsome carved oak for the Prince and the Rector, and the remainder of the church is furnished with neat open benches. Illuminated texts abound on the walls and over the chancel arch. The pulpit is of stone, with a marble shaft and ecclesiastical devices in glass mosaic. Under the tower are two stones robbed of their brasses, and one of them bears an inscription to Wm. Cobbis, who died in 1546. The churchyard is entered from the park by a lychgate. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., and now at £200 a year, with that of Babingley annexed, is in the patronage of the Prince, and incumbency of the Rev. Geo. Browne Moxon, B.A., who has a good residence and 32 acres of glebe. The parish register dates from 1557. The School was established about eight years ago, and is attended by 25 children. George Brereton, gentleman, resides at Sandringham Heights; Martha Stafford, is schoolmistress; and Samuel Smith, parish clerk. The chief persons in the service of the Prince of Wales, resident here are—Mr. John Carmichael, land steward; Sarah Smith, housekeeper; Goss Overton, gamekeeper; James Sydney Cook, police constable; and Thomas Smith, lodgekeeper. Post from Lynn.

SETCH, or SETCHEY MAGNA, a village and small parish on the river Nar, 4 miles S. of Lynn, has now only 91 inhabitants and 780 acres of land, though it was once a market town, Lord Bardolph having, in the reign of Henry III., obtained a charter for a weekly market and two annual fairs. These have long been obsolete; but a fortnightly market for fat cattle was held here on every alternate Tuesday till about 35 years ago, when it was removed to Lynn. Setch had a Church standing in 1528, though no traces of it now remain; but here is a small chapel-of-ease, erected in 1844 by Daniel Gurney, Esq., F.S.A., and others, and seating 150 persons. The parish maintains its poor separately, though it is ecclesiastically united with North Runceton and comprised in that manor. Here is a large inn called the Lynn Arms, with a large farm attached, belonging to the corporation of Lynn, and occupied by Thomas Allday; and the other chief residents are—Edmund Brooks, farmer, coal merchant, and vict. Bull; Thomas Cole, Wm. Crisp, Thos. Greenacre, Wm. Greenacre, and Edw. Seals, farmers; Norman Nichols, tobacconist; and Richd. Robinson, blacksmith. Post Office at the Lynn Arms. Letters despatched to Lynn at 5.5 p.m.

WALTON (EAST), a small but scattered village, 9 miles E.S.E. of Lynn, has within its parish 175 inhabitants and 2659A. of light sandy soil, much blown about by the wind in dry weather, and resting on a substratum of chalk. Anthony Hamond, Esq., owns the whole, and is lord of the manor and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 3s. 4d., and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Geo. Coldham, M.A., of Glemsford, Suffolk, for whom the Rev. James Coldham, M.A., officiates. In 1841, the vicarial tithes were commuted for £178 and the rectorial for £230 per annum. The latter belong to the Bishop of Norwich. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel, and south porch, in the perpendicular style, and an embattled round tower of the early-decorated period. The nave is filled with unsightly pews, and the fine chancel arch has been narrowed by a timber arch of the last century; indeed the whole building is much in need of a judicious restoration. The piscina and part of the sedilia remain, and inside the communion rails are several slabs commemorative of the Rychardsons, Barons Cramond. The communion plate was given to the church by Sir William Barkham, Bart., in 1681, and the parish register dates from 1560. The school is attended by about 30 children. In the garden of a farm-house is the ivy-mantled tower of St. Andrew's Chapel, which was appropriated, with the church, to Westacre priory. The Poor's Land, 6A., is intermixed with the lands of A. Hamond, Esq., who provides, in lieu of rent, three shillings worth of bread every alternate Sunday. On St. Thomas's day, £20 are distributed among the poor, as one moiety of Callibutt's Charity. (See page 791). About 450 acres were enclosed in 1841 and the same quantity in 1846. The chief residents are—The Rev. Jas. Coldham, M.A., curate; Ann Maria Youngman, vict., Greyhound; Robert Ashley, smith and wheelwright; Wm. Burrows, gamekeeper; Sarah Jude, schoolmistress; Mattw. Ketteringham, parish clerk; and Wm. Adcock, Leonard Jude, Thomas Pridgeon (Summer End), and John P. Wellingham (Abbey farm), farmers. Post from Lynn.

WESTACRE is an ancient village, lying in a secluded dell on the north side of the river Nar, 5 miles N.W. by N. of Swaffham, comprehending in its parish 415 inhabitants and 3400 acres of land, mostly of a sandy soil, and all belonging to Anthony Hamond, Esq., the lord of the manor, impropiator of the soil, and patron of the living, which is a donative, in the incumbency of the Rev. Edward Manners Dillman Pyne, B.A., of East Winch, and valued at only £31 per annum. The Church (All Saints) is of the perpendicular period, and comprises nave, north porch, chancel with north chapel, and western tower with one bell. The interior contains a number of ancient oak benches and several monuments of the Hamond family. Near the church are the ruins of the celebrated Priory, founded for Augustinian friars, about the year 1200, by Ralph de Toni, who endowed it with his manor of Westacre. Edward IV. granted the friars an annual fair. William Wingfield, the last prior, with eight friars, surrendered the priory, at the general dissolution, to Henry VIII., and in return they received pensions for life,—the prior having £40 a year. The convent boasted that they had a piece of St. Andrew's finger set in silver, which they had pawned for £40, but the King's visitors did not think it worth redemption at such a price. The priory revenues were estimated by Dugdale at £260. 13s. 7d., and by Speed at £308. 9s. 11d. per annum. Part of the tower of the conventual church, the gatehouse, and porter's lodge of the priory, and several walls of the domestic buildings, are still standing. Westacre High House, the seat of Anthony Hamond, Esq., stands in a pleasant situation nearly two miles north of the village, and is a handsome building in the Italian style. The park and pleasure grounds are adorned with plantations and shrubberies. The School, established in 1849, and chiefly supported by the lord of the manor, is attended by about 70 children. Near Westacre Mill are some remains of a church or chapel, and the enclosure which surrounded it may still be traced. The chief residents are—A. Hamond, Esq., High House; Mr. Stephen Joyce; Henry Floyd, shopkeeper; John Softly, blacksmith; John Spooner, parish clerk; Ann Eliz. Smith, schoolmistress; Wm. Poole, farm steward; and the following farmers:—Robert Boughen Aylmer, Priory farm; Richard Curtis, and miller; James Thomas, and lime burner; Henry Winearls, Soigné farm; and Jas. Wm. Youngman, Warren farm. Post from Brandon, via Castleacre.

WINCH (EAST) is a considerable village with several neat houses on the Swaffham turnpike, 6 miles S.E. by E. of Lynn. The parish contains 434 inhabitants and 2530 acres of land, belonging to the Kent, Curl, Beckinton, and Morse families. Edmund Kent, Esq., is lord of the manors of East Winch and Carrow, and the Bishop of Norwich is lord of Grancourt, containing about 80 acres. In 1815, an act was obtained for enclosing and draining the waste lands; but about 80 acres still form a common on which the poor claim pasturage, &c. The manor of Grancourt was purchased by Thomas de Grancourt; and in the 26th year of Edward I., by Sir Wm. Howard, the famous judge, and founder of the illustrious family of the Howards, Dukes of Norfolk. Sir William and several of his descendants were seated here in the now small and dilapidated house called the Nunnery. The Church (All Saints) is of the perpendicular period, and comprises nave with aisles and clerestory chancel, south porch, and tower with battlements and pinnacles. It was refitted with open benches at a cost of £60 in 1861, but some of the ancient seats remain in the aisles, and here is an old parish chest. There was formerly a chapel belonging to the Howards at the east end of the south aisle, but it has long since disappeared, though the arches which led to it are still visible. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8, and now at £183, is in the patronage of George Edwards, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. George Munford, M.B.S.L., who has 12½ acres of glebe and a good residence. The National School was built in 1842 at a cost of £300, and is attended by about 40 children. The Town Lands consist of 9A. 3R. in this parish, and 19A. in Middleton, obtained at the enclosure, in lieu of land left by Robt. Astey in 1607. The rents amount to £57 a year, which is applied, as far as necessary, with the church rates, and the residue is carried to the poor rates. The poor have 10s. a year out of the Notley tithes, left by the Rev. Thomas Hopes in 1615. Here is a station on the Lynn and Norwich Railway.

WINCH (WEST) is a village of detached houses on and near the Setch turnpike, 3 miles S. of Lynn, comprising in its parish 415 inhabitants and 1170 acres of land, partly in the low meadows and common on the east side of the river Nar. Lord William Henry Hugh Cholmondeley is lord of the manor; but a great part of the soil belongs to Lionel Heathcote, L. W. Jarvis, and Danl. Gurney, Esqrs., a few smaller freeholders, and a number of copyholders. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave with south aisle and clerestory, south porch, chancel with vestry on north side, and lofty square tower with battlements and pinnacles. It is all of the perpendicular period, except the chancel and south aisle, which are early English. The tower arch is open to the nave, and the font stands near the west door, which has externally an elegant niche on each side and a large window above it. The rood screen remains, and the vestry, which has a groined roof, contains two aumbries and a piscina. The pulpit is modern, and its panels have paintings of the four Evangelists and St. Peter. The chancel is filled with poppy-headed stalls, and the rest of the church with neat open benches. Here are tablets of the Hindson, Leete, and Codling families. The rails of the communion table are of the Jacobean period. The church was thoroughly restored in 1849, when all the windows were filled with cathedral glass with stained glass borders. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 13s. 4d., and now worth about £350 a year, has 28 acres of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge awarded in lieu of tithes, in 1840. The Lord Chancellor is patron, and the Rev. George Eller, M.A., is incumbent, and has a handsome red brick residence, erected in 1847 at a cost of £1400. The National Schools were built in 1837, and are attended by about 40 children. The Wesleyans have a small chapel in the parish. The Church Land, &c., comprises a house, six commonrights, and four acres of land, let for about £28 a year. The poor parishioners have three cottages, 2 acres of land called the Town Yards, and nine commonrights, let for £37. 7s. a year. The rents are distributed in coals. The parish clerk has about £13 a year from the rents of the Clerk's Close and several commonrights. A Labourer's Friend Society was established in 1844, for the purpose of hiring land and letting it out to the poor of the parish on the allotment system. Here are also several other useful parochial institutions. Post via Lynn. Here is a wall letter box, which is cleared at 5 p.m.

WOLFERTON, or Wolverton, is a small village, lying chiefly among the sandy hills above the marshes, bordering on Lynn Deepes, 7 miles N. by E. of Lynn. Its parish has 179 inhabitants, and 2714A. 3R. 29P. of land, including an extensive open sandy heath stretching to Dersingham and West Newton. On the west side of the parish are about 200A. of salt-marsh, bordering on the Wash, where a sea-wall was built many years ago, at a cost of £1800. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is lord of the manor and owner of the soil, which forms part of the Sandringham estate. Here is a station on the Lynn and Hunstanton Railway. The Church (St. Peter) is of the decorated period, and comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, fine south porch, chancel, and embattled western tower. On the corbels supporting the roof are figures of eleven Apostles, and the hammer beams have figures in clerical costume bearing shields. There were formerly chapels at the east ends of the aisles, where the piscinæ and traces of niches for statues still remain ; but the beautiful screens which once enclosed them are now across the whole of the west end of the nave, though it is hoped that they will soon be restored to their original position. A screen separates the nave and chancel, and in the latter are sedilia for three priests. Some of the windows retain fragments of ancient stained glass. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich and incumbency of the Rev. Willoughby Willey Dickinson, M.A., who has a good residence, built in 1862 at a cost of about £750, and since considerably enlarged. The tithes were commuted in 1838 for £263. 10s. per annum. The School was established about six years ago by Lady Harriette Cowper, and is attended by 40 children. The chief residents are—The Rector ; John Hill, station master ; Wm. Hudson, parish clerk ; Abm. Claxton, shoemaker ; James Alegood, farm steward ; and Wm. Gayford, James Loose, Edwd. Mitchell, James Mitchell, and Wm. Mitchell, farmers. Post Office at Jane Scott's. Letters despatched to Lynn at 5.30 p.m.

WOOTTON (NORTH) is a small village, overlooking the Wash, 3½ miles N. of Lynn. Its parish has 247 inhabitants and 1843 acres of land, of which 150A. are rich salt-marsh, 280A. heath, and 40A. woodland. The Hon. Mrs. Howard owns the manor, and is patroness of the living, this and the other Wootton being in the peculiar jurisdiction of the borough of Castle-Rising. The Church (All Saints) was rebuilt in the early English style in 1853, at the sole expense of the lady of the manor, and comprises nave, south porch, chancel, vestry, and tower. It is furnished with neat open benches, and the chancel is paved with encaustic tiles. The tower arch is open to the nave, and there is a good western doorway. The vicarage, valued in K B. at £10, and now at £200, is in the incumbency of the Rev. William Willcox Clarke, M.A. The National School is endowed with £20 a year out of the rectorial tithes, from which the poor have also a distribution of £10 yearly. Several cottages have small allotments of land and the privilege of grazing cattle on the marsh. Here is a station on the Lynn and Hunstanton Railway. The chief residents are—The Vicar; John Goddard, station master; Wm. Cross, gamekeeper; Alice and Margaret Dickerson, schoolmistresses; Susan Ebbs, beerhouse; Anthony Morby, parish clerk; Robert Rolfe, shoemaker; Sarah Rolfe, shopkeeper; William Webster, blacksmith; and Robert Buxton, Richard Gay, Robt. Pung, and Richard Royston, farmers. Post from Lynn.

WOOTTON (SOUTH), one mile from the above, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. by E. of Lynn, is a small village near the Wash, comprising within its parish only 150 inhabitants and 1369 acres. Lord Calthorpe and Messrs. Ray are lords of the manor and owners of the soil. In 1852, the commons, comprising 323A. 3R. 24P., were enclosed, when 7 acres were set apart for the poor and a quarter of an acre for the parish School, a good brick and stone building, erected in 1862 at a cost of £170, and attended by about 45 children. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel, transepts or side chapels, south porch, and tower with three bells. It appears to have been rebuilt in the 14th and 15th centuries on the site of the ancient Norman edifice, of which nothing remains but the fine square stone font, which is elaborately carved, and stands on a central shaft and eight smaller columns. The east window of four lights is a beautiful example of the decorated period. On the north side of the chancel is an ugly brick excrescence, said to be a mausoleum. The south transept was formerly the Lady chapel, and still contains a piscina and an aumbry. There are also sedilia for three priests and a piscina in the chancel. The north transept was St. Anne's chapel. In the south west corner of the church is an altar tomb, in memory of Thomas Winde, Esq., who died in 1603, and had a grant of the Hundred of Freebridge in the 39th of Elizabeth. Its top is a fine slab of Purbeck marble, and its sides are emblazoned with arms. The nave is nearly filled with old benches dated 1594. The rectory, valued in K B. at £8. 6s. 8d., is in the gift of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Haughton, M.A., who has 8A. of glebe, a good residence built in 1845, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £270. 18s. 3d. This parish has a claim on the hospital of Castle Rising whenever the parishes of North Wootton and Castle Rising fail to furnish a sufficient number of inmates. The chief residents are—The Rector; Thomas Grundy, parish clerk; John Hardy, shepherd; John Pinching, jobber; and Edw. and Alfred Blomfield, Thos. Foster, Jas. Stapleton, sen. and jun., Charles Taylor, and Israel Walker, farmers. Post Office at Thos Grundy's. Letters despatched, via Lynn, at 6.15 p.m.

FREEBRIDGE MARSHLAND.

THIS HUNDRED forms a remarkably level district of rich alluvial marshes and fens, at the western extremity of the county, of an irregular triangular figure, about 14 miles in its greatest length from north to south, and 12 in breadth from east to west, comprising upwards of 54,500 acres, completely insulated,—being bounded on the north by the Wash; on the east by the Great Ouse river; on the west by the river Nene, which divides it from Cambridgeshire and Lincolnshire; and on the south by Podike, which separates it from the fens of Clackclose Hundred. The soil consists of alternate layers of moor and silt, in some places reaching to a great depth, with a subsoil of blue clay. This champaign territory was formerly annexed to Freebridge-Lynn, under the title of "Freebridge Hundred and Half," and it still constitutes, with that district, the Deanery of Lynn, in the Archdeaconry of Norwich. The whole of Marshland has at some period been under water, and is now secured from the incursions of the ocean by ranges of artificial BANKS. These, standing at considerable distances from each other, show the progressive steps taken by the hand of skill and industry to secure the boon which nature had bestowed. The first, or inner rampart, is attributed to the Romans. Some writers are of opinion that this tract, and the adjacent fens of Lincolnshire and the Isle of Ely, were originally firm and dry land, afterwards ingulphed in the ocean by some early convulsion of nature, which they consider to be evident from great numbers of timber trees having been found below the surface, which it is certain will not grow in watery, moorish places; besides, it is observable, that where they have been discovered, in digging channels and drains, their roots have been always observed to stand in the firm earth, below the alluvial soil. Dugdale says, he saw "great numbers of oak and fir trees taken up in the fens, near Thorney." Many others were also dug up at the cutting of that large channel, called the Downham Eau; and near Magdalen Bridge there were found, at the setting down of a large sluice, seventeen feet below the surface, several furze bushes, also nut trees pressed flat down, with nuts sound and firm lying near them. The great work of recovering from the tides this extensive level was evidently continued with much success by the Saxons, after the departure of the Romans; for, according to the Domesday survey, all the parishes now existing in Marshland were extant in the days of Edward the Confessor; but some of them have since been considerably increased by subsequent embankments in the estuaries of the Ouse and the Nene, which open out into the large bay called the Wash. (See pages 718 to 726.) The estuary of the Nene is called the CROSS KEYS WASH, and divides Norfolk from Lincolnshire. The only passage between the two counties was by a precarious road or track, two miles in length, across the sands which were left nearly dry at low water, from the Cross Keys House in Marshland, to the Wash House near Long Sutton, in Lincolnshire. This passage was extremely dangerous without a guide, and lives were sometimes lost in attempting to ford it; but in 1825 an Act of Parliament was obtained for throwing a BRIDGE across the narrow channel of the Nene, on the Lincolnshire side, and extending from it a high EMBANKED ROAD across the broad Wash to the Cross Keys House, in Norfolk; and this great work was completed in July, 1831, at an immense expense, which is remunerated by the tolls taken on the bridge, and the recovery of about 15,000 acres of land from the influx of the tides. It was commenced by cutting a new out-fall for the river Nene, which is of sufficient depth to allow a man-of-war to float in it close to the bridge, which is commonly called Sutton Bridge, and is a massive structure of British oak, with a movable cast-iron centre 52 feet in span. The Embankment leading from it to the Cross Keys, in Marshland, is nearly two miles long; and its construction occupied 900 men and 260 horses about three years and a half.

An earlier improvement, on the opposite side of Marshland, is the EAU-BRINK CUT, (see page 719,) by which a broad and circuitous part of the Great Ouse river, betwixt Lynn and St. German's Bridge, was diverted into a straight and deep channel, crossed by one of the largest and handsomest wooden bridges in England, which, with the embanked road and bridge over Cross Keys Wash, and great improvements in all the turnpikes, entirely freed the long obstructed line of communication from Lincolnshire through Lynn, to the eastern part of Norfolk. The Eau-Brink Cut, (finished in 1821,) besides improving the navigation of the Ouse, serves as a better out-fall than the old channel for the waters of the numerous DRAINS which intersect Marshland in every direction and are crossed by upwards of 150 bridges. Great improvements were made here during the latter part of last century, especially on the sea coast, in the parishes of Terrington, Clenchwarton, and North Lynn; where Count BENTINCK, in the years 1773-'4, embanked in, at vast expense, upwards of a thousand acres of salt marshes. His descendants possess the large estates here which were granted by William III. to the Earl of Portland, who came over in the suite of that monarch from the Netherlands, at the glorious Revolution. Count Bentinck was captain of the Niger man-of-war in the English service. In prosecuting his improvement of the salt marshes he caught the fen fever, of which he died about the close of 1774. In 1844, an Act was obtained for draining the Middle Level of the Fens by means of a New Cut, 12 miles in length, which was finished in 1847. The giving way of the Out-fall sluice of this Cut was the cause of the great Marshland Floods in 1862. (See page 720.) An account of the extensive reclamation works now being carried out by the Norfolk Estuary Company will be found at pages 721 to 726.

THE SMEETH AND FEN, comprising 7263A. 1R. 34P., in the southern part of Marshland, have been drained and divided among the owners of 525 common-rights, under the powers of an Act of Parliament passed in 1796, and at an expense of upwards of £50,000; of which £10,000 were expended in 1833, in cutting a wide and deep drain, 4½ miles long, from Tilney Fen-End to the Eau-Brink Cut, near St. German's, for the purpose of superseding the four wind-mills, which formerly pumped the water from the lower into the higher levels. A drainage-rate is charged by the commissioners on the land-owners, amounting to about 2s. 7d per acre per annum. This extensive and now fertile tract was, from time immemorial, the common of the parishes called the Seven Towns of Marshland, among which the 525 common-rights were divided as follows:—Emneth, 73; Walsoken, 88; West Walton, 62; Walpole St. Peter, 81; Walpole St. Andrew, 25; Terrington St. Clement, 67; Terrington St. John, 41; Tilney All Saints, 33; Tilney St. Lawrence, 22; Tilney-cum-Islington, 19; and Clenchwarton, 14. The land awarded to each common-right varied from 9 to 15 acres, according to the quality of the soil; and the parochial allotments extend in narrow slips to the southern termination of the fen, distant more than seven miles from some of the parish churches. After the allotment, it was discovered that a piece of land, comprising 11 acres, in the parish of Walpole St. Peter, had been overlooked. It therefore pays rates and taxes to the seven towns, and is now occupied by Mr. Henry Hubbard. The SMEETH, comprising only 1572A. 22P., is on the north side of the fen, and was celebrated as a summer pasture in the time of James I., when a courtier told that monarch, on his coming to the crown of England, "That if overnight a wand or rod was laid on the ground, by the morning it would be covered with grass of that night's growth;" to which the King jocosely replied, "That he knew some grounds in Scotland, where, if a horse was put in overnight, they could not see or discern him in the morning." The FEN (including the Broad, Short, and Wellmoor Fens,) comprises 5691A. 1R. 12P., now forming rich arable and meadow land, which before the enclosure was a wild morass abounding in reeds and large pools of water and frequented by numerous flocks of wild fowl, of which great quantities were shot or decoyed by the poor inhabitants of the "Seven Towns," who evinced much dissatisfaction at the enclosure, which destroyed their aquatic sports and profits, and all their other interest in the Smeeth and Fen. Tradition says that, in ancient times, the people had a dispute with the lords of the manors respecting their common-rights; when one HICKIFRIC, of gigantic stature, taking a cart-wheel for a shield, and the axletree for a sword, repelled the invaders. A large grave-stone in Tilney churchyard, having upon it a cross so decorated with ornaments as to appear something like a wheel, is still shown by the credulous as the grave of this fabulous giant.

The CHURCHES of Marshland are all noble structures, chiefly built of large freestone, and much finer than those of any other part of Norfolk. This is chiefly attributed to the easy transit for building materials, afforded by the ocean and the navigable rivers which encompass the Hundred. Red or Brown MUSTARD is extensively cultivated here, and principally sold at Wisbech, which is the centre of the finest mustard-growing district in the kingdom. Marshland possesses great RAILWAY facilities, being crossed from east to west by the lines from Lynn to Sutton, and from Watlington junction to Wisbech, on each of which it has stations. Petty Sessions for the Hundred are held at Terrington St. Clement's on the first and third Mondays of every month. The Hundred of Freebridge Marshland contains 17 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, showing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent:—

* The eleven parishes marked * form the "Seven Towns" participating in the Smeeth and Fen, and are in Wisbech Union. The four Wiggenhall parishes are in Downham Union, and West and North Lynn are in King's Lynn Union. (See page 711.) The fens of Wiggenhall, at the south end of Marshland, are under a separate Drainage Act. In 1793, there was a destructive rot among the Marshland sheep; but the marshes and fens being well drained, and the roads greatly improved, this disease, and that human affliction the ague, are now of rare occurrence in this monotonous but fertile region.

COUNTY COURTS.—Emneth, Walsoken, West Walton, and the two Walpoles are in Wisbech County Court District; the four Wiggenhalls are in Downham District; and the remaining parishes in Lynn District.

WISBECH UNION comprises, besides the 11 parishes marked * in the above table, 7 parishes in Cambridgeshire:—viz., Wisbech St. Mary and St. Peter, Newton, Leverington, Tydd St. Giles, Elm, and Parson Drove. It also comprises Outwell and Upwell, which are divided into four townships, each of these parishes being partly in the Isle of Ely, Cambridgeshire, and partly in Clackclose Hundred, Norfolk. The 22 parishes and townships of this Union had 31,484 inhabitants in 1841, and 33,247 in 1861. They comprise an area of 184 square miles, and their average annual expenditure during the three years preceding the formation of the Union was £17,386, but is now about £20,000. The WORKHOUSE is at Wisbech, and was built in 1838, at a cost of about £7000, and has room for more than 400 inmates. It is a commodious structure of white brick, and its grounds extend over more than three acres. Mr. Geo. Duppa Collins, of Wisbech, is union clerk and superintendent registrar; and Mr. E. O. Dyson, of Wisbech, is registrar of marriages. The registrars of births and deaths are Messrs. William G. Jackson, for Wisbech District; John Bull, for Leverington District; John Egarr, for Terrington District; Wm. Dennis, for Walpole District; — Hartley, for Upwell and Outwell District; and Wm. Hill, for Walsoken District. The relieving officers are Messrs. Abraham Butcher, for Wisbech District; and Alfred Allen Sutterby, for Marshland District. Mr. and Mrs. Skinner are master and matron, and Rev. G. Thompson, chaplain of the Workhouse.

CLENCHWARTON is a scattered village, 2 miles W. of Lynn by the ferry, and 3 miles by the bridge, including within its parish 599 inhabitants, and 3070 acres of land, exclusive of about 160 acres of the old bed of the river Ouse, now converted into pasture ground. The soil belongs to a number of freeholders, the largest of whom are E. Akroyd, J. B. Monk, and is lord of the manor. The Church (St. Margaret) is an ancient cemented building, partly mantled with ivy, and sheltered on the north by the plantations of the rectory house. It comprises nave, chancel, and tower with five bells, and was re-seated and repaired about ten years ago. The chancel was restored in 1863. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £14. 16s. 6d., is in the patronage of Sir Edward Grogan, Bart., M.P., and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas T. Upwood, M.A., of Terrington St. Clements, who has here a good residence (occupied by the curate), about 32 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £435. There are also $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land and 9 cottages, the rents of which are applied towards the repairs of the church. About 1100 acres of land in this parish are titheable only to West and North Lynn. The National School was built about twenty years ago, and is attended by 65 children. The Wesleyans and the Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. The poor have an orchard of three roods, left by Thomas Wardle in 1730, and three roods left by Ann Rodgers, in 1776. The salt marshes of this parish extend to the Wash, between Terrington and North Lynn.

EMNETH is a large village near the Smeeth, on the east side of the river Nene, 14 miles S.W. of Lynn, and 2 miles S.S.E. of Wisbech; but its parish extends close to the latter town, and comprises 1023 inhabitants and about 3449 acres of fertile land, belonging to a number of freeholders and copyholders, many of whom are residents; but Charles Metcalfe, Esq., of Inglethorpe Hall, is lord of the manor of Hakebeach and Inglethorpe, which anciently belonged to the Peyton, Oxburgh, and Heward families, who resided at Hakebeach Hall, a handsome mansion, which was taken down in 1806. The Church (St. Edmund) is an ancient edifice, comprising nave, aisles, chancel, and square tower with five bells. It contains several mural monuments; the indent of a splendid brass of a cross-legged knight, probably Sir Adam de Hakebeach; and a fine altar tomb with effigies of Sir Thos. Heward, his lady, and their infant son, executed by Nicholas Stone, master mason to James the First, who had £95 for it. The vicarage was consolidated with that of Elm, in the Isle of Ely, till 1858, when it was formed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners into a separate living. It is in the patronage of the Bishop of Ely in whose diocese it is still situated. The Rev. James Wise Berryman, B.A., is the vicar, and has a good residence in the Elizabethan style, erected in 1859 at a cost of £1500. The tithes of Emneth have been commuted for the following yearly rents, viz.:—£8. 11s. 4d. to the rector of Walsoken, £405 to the incumbent, and £355 to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for the augmentation of poor livings. The Free School for the two parishes is at Elm, and was founded by Thomas Squier, who in 1692 left a house and 26 acres of land for the purpose. The rents now amount to £86 a year, and the school is free for all children of Elm and Emneth. The rent of the town land, 1A. 1R., is applied with the church rates. Here is a National School, built in 1859. The Wesleyans, Wesleyan Reformers, and Primitive Methodists have each a small chapel in the parish, all built in 1854. Here is a station on the Wisbech railway.

ISLINGTON, or TILNEY-CUM-ISLINGTON, 3 miles W.S.W. of Lynn, is a parish of scattered houses on the west bank of that broad part of the old river Ouse, which has been converted into pasture ground since the diversion of the waters into the Eau-Brink Cut. The river was here nearly half a mile in width, confined within artificial banks, and is now crossed by a good turnpike from the old ferry-boat house. Islington contains 295 inhabitants, and 1,510A. of land, extending southward to the Smeeth and Fen. Richd. Bagge, Esq., owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manor, which extends into the adjacent parish of Tilney All Saints. Richard Johnson, Esq., and Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., also have estates here. The Hall was erected in 1619, but the greater part of it was rebuilt about 80 years ago. It is now the seat of Mrs. Hulton, and its grounds are well wooded and contain some fine elms and cedars. The Church (St. Mary) stands in the park, and is a neat stone edifice, comprising nave, chancel, transepts, and square tower with two bells. In the chancel is a handsome stained glass window. The parish register dates from 1559. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d. and now at £110, is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor and incumbency of the Rev. John Huxtable Paramore, B.A., who has a small residence, built about 18 years ago at a cost of £500. The glebe is 5A. and the church land 2A. The School was built in 1852 by Mrs. Hulton, who still supports it. The poor have six cottages, which were rebuilt in 1834. The chief residents are—The Vicar; Mrs. Hulton, Hall; John Groom, beerhouse; Ambrose Johnson, blacksmith; Charles Jarvis, carpenter; Mary Nicholas, schoolmistress; John Patterson, parish clerk; James Ingle and Charles Winearls, farmers; and Clement Coe (Wind's Bridge), Robert Coe (Lord's Bridge), Luke Fox (and victualler, Fox and Goose), and William Gennery, farmers and owners. Post from Lynn.

LYNN (NORTH), a decayed parish, originally on the west side of the Estuary of the Great Ouse river, but now intersected by the new outfall channel of Lynn Harbour (see pp. 718 to 726), comprises only 62 inhabitants and 770 acres of land. It is the property of the Bentinck family, and is occupied by Mr. William Marshall, who resides at the Hall, which, with a considerable portion of the parish, is now on the east side of the river, and connected with the mainland by an embankment. The Church (St. Edmund) was washed down by an incursion of the ocean several centuries ago, and never rebuilt. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £13. 1s. 8d., has 12 acres of glebe and part of the tithes of Clenchwarton attached to it, and since 1850 has been consolidated with the perpetual curacies of St. Margaret's and St. Nicholas's, in King's Lynn; but the incumbent of All Saints has £150 a year out of the tithes, which were commuted in 1837 for £554 per annum. Post via King's Lynn.

LYNN (WEST) is a considerable village, on the west side of the Great Ouse river, opposite the town and port of King's Lynn, with which it communicates by a ferry for foot passengers; but carriages have to go round by the bridges, a distance of nearly 3 miles. It is sometimes called Old Lynn, from a conjecture that it is more ancient than King's Lynn. Its parish contains 469 inhabitants, and about 1300 acres of land, exclusive of 300 acres of the old bed of the river, which has been warped and cultivated. The soil belongs to Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., and a number of other proprietors, each having the manorial rights of his own estate. In 1300, Alan de Lindesey, Burgess of Lena (Lynn), gave to William de Gousele, farrier, the liberty of a passage or ferry-boat across the river. This ferry is now let by the Corporation of King's Lynn for £240 per annum. The opening of the Eau-Brink Cut, which joins the Ouse about half a mile above Lynn, gave the current such a strong bias to the west side of the river, as to endanger the existence of West Lynn. Mr. Broadbent's house, which stood on the river bank, was washed down soon after the completion of the cut in 1822; but precautions were afterwards taken against any further encroachments of the refluent tides, by the erection of several jetties of strong frame-work, filled with large stones. The Church (St. Peter) comprises nave, north and south transepts, and square tower with one bell. The chancel fell into decay about 70 years ago and has not been rebuilt. The roof is of the hammer-beam kind, and is ornamented with carved angels. The east window is of stained glass, representing the Three Marys, and was given by the late Giles Walker, Esq., in 1844, in memory of his sister. The font has carvings of the seven sacraments of the Romish church upon it. Here is a small brass, on which is portrayed the figure of Sir Adam Outlawe, who died in 1503, and left an acre of land for the parish church. On the east gable of the nave the sanctus bell-cot still remains. The tower is of the decorated period, but the rest of the building is mainly perpendicular. A former church, which stood on the same site, was washed down by an inundation in 1271. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9, is in the patronage of the Rev. C. H. Townshend, and incumbency of the Rev. Fredk. Jackson, M.A., who has 28A. 2R. of glebe, and a good residence built in 1852 at a cost of £1000. The tithes have been commuted for above £400 per annum, exclusive of about £70 a year received in lieu of tithes payable to the rector, in the parishes of Tilney All Saints, Islington, and Clenchwarton. The poor have £12 yearly, as the rent of a piece of land at Clenchwarton, received in exchange for 4A. left by John Swaine, in 1678. The parish has six cottages and a house, obtained about 38 years ago, from a person who died a pauper. The National School, built nearly a dozen years ago, is attended by 50 children. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel here.

TERRINGTON ST. CLEMENT is a populous village, with a noble church, and several neat houses and handsome villas, on and near the Cross Keys, or Sutton-Wash road, 4 miles W. of Lynn, by the ferry, and 6 miles by the bridges. Its parish has increased its population since the year 1801 from 824 to 2303 souls, and contains 8538A. 3R. 33P. of rich alluvial land, a great part of which lies to the north and west, in the extensive salt marshes, bordering upon the Wash, where about 1000 acres were embanked-in from the incursions of the tides, in 1773 and '4, by Count Bentinck, as has been seen at page 804. About half the parish is old enclosure, with flourishing hedge-rows and several vigorous plantations. A large portion of the New Salt Marsh, embanked-in from the Wash, by the bridge-road from the Cross Keys House to Long Sutton, in Lincolnshire, is claimed by this parish, though it is yet considered extra-parochial. During the last three years, about 800 acres of land between the Ouse and Nene have been recovered from the tide, by Mr. James Walker. George Pierrepont Bentinck, Esq., M.P., is lord of Terrington manor, and owner of 3343 acres; and the rest of the parish belongs to a number of proprietors, among whom are Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., Rev. E. Edwards, Rev. J. C. Morphew, Jas. Walker, Esq., and the Rev. T. T. Upwood. The latter is lord of Lovell's manor; James Walker, Esq., is lord of Braunche's manor; and Sir W. H. Folkes, Bart., is lord of Howard's manor. Terrington existed as a manor in the Saxon era, when Godric, in A.D. 970, gave part of it to the Abbey of Ramsey, on condition that his brother, the abbot, should free it from the service of heriot. In the 5th of Henry III., it was found to be in the liberty of the Bishop of Ely, whose bailiff might hold pleas here "with or without writ, assize of bread and beer, and amercements of his tenants." The bishop had also wreck at sea; the patronage of the church of St. Clement and chapel of St. John, with all the tithes, except two parts of the tithe of land of "Wm., son of William, and the fee of Sir Wm. Bardolph." It remained in the See of Ely till the death of Bishop Cox, in 1581, when it passed to the Crown, by an act of the 4th of Elizabeth. James I. granted it to his eldest son, Henry, and afterwards to Charles, Prince of Wales. It was subsequently assigned to Catharine, Queen of Charles II., as part of her dowry; and in 1696, it was given by William III. to Wm. Bentinck, Earl of Portland, with whose descendants the manor has since remained.

The Church (St. Clement) is a fine cruciform building in the perpendicular style, and comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, north and south transepts, chancel, and tower. The latter contains six bells, and stands at the north-west corner of the nave, but slightly detached. The west front is very handsome, the ends of the nave and aisles being each supported by turrets, and the large five-light transomed window over the western doorway being a good example of the local intermixture of decorated and perpendicular tracery. The tower is of four stages, ornamented with quatrefoils in panels. The nave is of seven bays, and especially on the south side which is most enriched, is grand and well-proportioned. The transepts are the same height as the nave, but have been shortened and have lost the western aisles with which they were originally furnished. The chancel has no aisles and is every way inferior to the nave, having only reached the height of the main building, by the addition of a later clerestory of brick. The internal effect of the church is very noble, but simpler and plainer than might have been expected from the splendour of the exterior. The piers and arches are plain but of fine proportions. The chancel arch is panelled, and over it is a window of five lights. The font is octagonal, supported on pillars, and having a very lofty Elizabethan cover, on the inside of which are painted scenes from the life of Christ. The organ cost 300 guineas, and was presented by the present rector about 20 years ago. Two of the windows are filled with beautiful stained glass in memory of members of the rector's family; and here are several monuments of the Bentinck, Edwards, Ascham, Parke, Hamond, Goode, and other families. James I. gave the appropriation of the rectorial tithes to the Lady Margaret Professorship of Divinity at Cambridge, which is now held by the Rev. Canon Selwyn, D.D., who consequently enjoys the appropriate rectory, valued in K.B. at £34. 6s. 8d.; but the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £23. 6s. 3d. is in the gift of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. T. T. Upwood, M.A. The tithes have been commuted for £1883. 4s. 8d. to the rector, and £453. 15s. 1d. to the vicar. In the church is a library given by the Rev. Dr. Newcome, a late vicar. Here was anciently a chapel dedicated to St. James, but its site is unknown. The Wesleyans and Primitive and New Connexion Methodists have each a chapel here. The National School was rebuilt in 1861 on the site of the old school room, and now affords instruction to upwards of 150 children. The school endowment consists of 1A. 1R. 35P. of land, given by an unknown donor, and let for £2; the interest of £60, left by Anderson Allen, in 1783; and the dividends of £110 three per cent. Consols, purchased with £100, left by the Rev. Dr. Newcome, in 1763. A sum far exceeding the income from these sources is raised by subscription. The above-named Anderson Allen also left £60 to the poor, secured on the Wisbech and Lynn Turnpike; and they have a yearly rent-charge of 20s., left by Miss Ann Edwards. Here are also about 22 acres of land, let in 62 small allotments to poor people at the rate of 12s. 3d. a rood, free from rates and taxes. A Lying-in Charity and two Clothing Clubs are supported by subscription. Near the school is a well with a picturesque octagonal covering, called Jane's Well, in memory of the late Mrs. Upwood. In the parish are four Friendly Societies. A Police Station has been erected here, with cells for the temporary confinement of prisoners, and a court room, in which the magistrates hold Petty Sessions on the first and third Mondays of every month. Fras. Jackson, Esq., of Wisbech, is clerk to the magistrates.

HAMOND LODGE, formerly the seat of Sir Andrew Snape Hamond, Bart., a distinguished naval commander, who died in 1828, is sheltered by extensive plantations, and now the property and residence of David Ward, Esq. LOVELL'S HALL, a neat stone mansion built in 1543, and standing in a spacious and finely wooded lawn, is the seat of the Rev. Thomas Thorogood Upwood, M.A., and contains several valuable pictures, and one of the most beautiful pieces of tapestry in England, representing in all the richness of a first-rate painting, a numerous group of figures from Orlando Furioso, those in the fore-ground as large as life. This admirable piece of needlework was wrought in one of the continental nunneries, and is in excellent preservation.

ORANGE FARM, near the west-end of the village, is now the residence and property of Mr. Richard Walker. It belonged to the late Lord William Bentinck, who purchased this estate in 1816, of Baron Feagle, a German refugee, who entertained the Prince of Orange here when the French had invaded Holland, from which circumstance the house obtained its present name. LITTLE LONDON is a hamlet on the Roman Bank; besides which there are in the parish many scattered farm-houses on the Marsh, north of the village. In 1844, a perfect Roman coin of Constantine was found in the Roman Bank, and is now preserved in the Lynn Museum. Among the departed worthies of Terrington are the learned Walter Terrington, LL.D., and John Colton, Archbishop of Armagh, both of whom were born here, and died early in the 15th century. The Rev. Edward Gonville was rector of Terrington in the reign of Edward III., and with Dr. Caius, founded Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge. Here is a station on the Lynn and Sutton Railway.

POST OFFICE at F. Fysh's. Letters despatched via Lynn at 4 p.m. This is also a Money Order Office and Savings' Bank.

TERRINGTON ST. JOHN is a large straggling village and parish, chiefly on the Wisbech road, $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. by W. of Lynn, comprising 793 inhabitants, and 2508 acres of land, 3 miles long and 1 broad, lying in the same manors as Terrington St. Clement, to which this was considered a parochial chapelry, being in the same rectorial appropriation and vicarial patronage and incumbency, till 1843, when it was constituted by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners a separate vicarage, worth about £220 a year. The Rev. John Bramhall, B.A., is the incumbent, and has 5A. 1R. of glebe, and a good residence, built in 1844, at a cost of £1200. The soil belongs to Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., Geo. P. Bentinck, Esq., M.P., Mr. Robt. T. Wright, and a number of other proprietors, many of whom are residents. The Church (St. John) stands on the north side of the parish, 3 miles S. of Terrington St. Clement, and was built at "Peykes Cross," in 1423, under a license granted by the Bishop of Ely, and made parochial by the Archbishop of Canterbury, in 1530. It is a handsome structure of brick and stone, mostly in the perpendicular style, and comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, and tower. The latter, which is lofty and elegant, contains six sweet-toned bells, and stands about 15 feet from the south-west angle of the church, with which it is connected by a small building called the priest's house. The National School was built in 1852. The chief part of the village is a mile S. of the church, and about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile further south is the hamlet of FEN-END, so called from its being in the limits of the Smeeth and Fen, already described at page 804. The Church Land, 27A. 3R. 26P., is now let for £80 a year, which is employed in repairing the church and the paths leading thereto. The Methodists have a small chapel here, built nearly 50 years ago. The Almshouse, which is of unknown origin, consists of four small cottages for the residence of four poor widows, who have divided among them £10. 5s. a year in coals, &c., as the rent of 4A. 2R. 8P. of land, given by an unknown donor. Four cottages, built by the parish, are occupied by poor families. The Poor's Land, given by John Pethow and others, consists of 11A. 3R. 28P., let for £35. 5s. a year, which is distributed among the industrious poor not receiving parochial aid. Mr. Egarr, schoolmaster and parish clerk, receives £3. 6s. a year, left by Dr. Newcome, for schooling a few poor children.

TILNEY ALL SAINTS is a scattered village and parish, 4 miles W.S.W. of Lynn, containing 510 inhabitants, and about 2600 acres of land, exclusive of 150 acres of the old bed of the river Ouse. Richard Bagge, Esq., owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manor of Tilney-cum-Islington. (See p. 807.) Thomas Cary, Esq., has also a large estate in the parish. Mrs. Huskisson is lady of Berry manor; and Robert Pitcher, Esq., has also an estate here, and is lord of Kenwick manor; besides which, some other manors extend into this parish. The Church (All Saints) is a large freestone building of mixed architecture, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, and lofty square tower, surmounted by a spire. The roof has double hammer-beams, and is ornamented with carved figures of angels. The piscina, sedilia, and screen still remain. In the churchyard is part of a stone coffin, said to have contained the remains of Hickifric, or Hickathrift, the giant, who expelled with his wheel and axle-tree, the lordly invaders of the Smeeth and Fen, as noticed at page 804. In the tower are six musical bells, and the parish is celebrated for excellent ringers. The vicarage is consolidated with that of Tilney All Saints, and the two benefices were valued in K.B. at £30, and are now in the incumbency of the Rev. Chas. Currie, M.A., who has 57 acres of glebe and a good residence, mostly rebuilt in 1835. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £310. 16s. a year to the vicar, and £900 to the appropriators. The advowson and the appropriation of the rectorial tithes are in Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, by a grant from Edward III., in the 32nd year of his reign. The Church Land is 20A. 36P. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, built in 1843. The Parish Land, 17A. 2R. 27P., is let for £55. 15s. a year, which is carried to the poor-rates. The poor have a yearly rent-charge of £2, left by Thomas Say, and 2A. of land left by an unknown donor, and let for £8. 10s. per annum. The National School was built in 1845, and is attended by about 60 children.

TILNEY ST. LAWRENCE, 6 miles S.W. of Lynn, and 7 miles E.N.E. of Wisbech, is a large but scattered village and parish, which has increased its population since the year 1801, from 362 to 855 souls, and comprises above 3500 acres of land, belonging to Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., R. Bagge, Esq., A. Hamond, Esq., and a number of smaller freeholders, and partly lying in the same manors as Tilney All Saints, to which this is considered a parochial chapelry, the benefice and tithes being in the same incumbency, patronage, and appropriation; but the parishioners refused, about 30 years ago, to pay church-rates to All Saints, having their own large Church (St. Lawrence) to keep in repair. The latter appears to have been built at different periods, and is a cruciform edifice of brick and stone, comprising nave, chancel, north and south transepts, tower, and spire. There is one bell. In the chancel is a fine piscina. The building was thoroughly restored, partly rebuilt, and furnished with neat open benches, in 1846, by the late Mrs. Mary Mann, of Lynn, at a cost of £2500. The same charitable lady left £800 as a repair fund for the church, £50 to the poor of this parish, and several legacies to the Lynn charities. The glebe here is 5 acres, and the church land $7\frac{1}{2}$ acres. The vicar has also $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land, left by John Crane. A yearly rent-charge of £2 was left to the poor by Ellen Stallet, out of land now belonging to Mr. F. Green. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here, and another at FEN-END, a hamlet partly in this parish. (See page 804.) John Aylmer, bishop of London, who died in 1579, was born here, in the ancient house called Aylmer Hall, which has been enlarged and modernised, and is now a handsome residence occupied by Mr. W. C. Medcalf. A number of coins and other relics of antiquity were found during the alterations. Post via Lynn.

WALPOLE ST. ANDREW is a straggling village, 7 miles W. by S. of Lynn. Its parish, which includes the hamlet of Cross-Keys on the Wash, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. of the church, has increased its population since the year 1801 from 227 to 709 souls, and comprises 2364 acres of enclosed land, exclusive of a portion of the New Salt Marsh, recovered from the Cross-Keys Wash. (See page 803.) Walpole is a corruption of wall-pool, derived from the Roman bank or sea wall, raised to defend these and the adjacent parishes from the incursions of the great pool or Wash, which is now crossed by a fine embanked road. The Rev. Chauncey Hare Townshend owns most of the parish, as part of his manor of West Walton-Coleraine; but here are several smaller manors. Part of the soil is of a sterile nature, and many of the houses are meanly built, but here are a few neat mansions. The Church (St. Andrew) is a large freestone edifice of the perpendicular period, and comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and tower with five bells. It was restored in 1862. The piscina and sedilia remain in the chancel, and at the east end of the south aisle is another piscina, over which is an old painting of the Dead Christ and the two Marys. The steps which led to the rood-loft still exist. At the east end of the nave are two pinnacles and turrets. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £26. 13s. 4d. was endowed with the great tithes by Lord Coleraine, and is in the patronage of the Rev. C. H. Townshend and incumbency of the Rev. Demetrius P. Calliphronas, M.A., who has a good residence. The tithes were commuted in 1840 for a yearly rent-charge of £1303. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel at Cross-Keys, built in 1833. Walpole St. Andrew has an equal share in the Free School at Walpole St. Peter, and here is a small National School attended by about 50 girls and infants. At Cross-Keys is a small Parochial School, built about 14 years ago, and used on Sundays as a chapel of ease. The Dole Lands and Houses, which have been vested in trust for the poor of this parish from an early period, consist of ten cottages, occupied rent-free by poor families; and 85A. 27P. of free and copyhold land, worth more than £200 per annum, but mostly let in acre plots to the cottagers at low rents. Three additional houses were built in 1862 out of savings of income, and they are occupied by poor widows, who have each 4s. a week and 2 tons of coal yearly.

WALPOLE ST. PETER is a long scattered village, lying west of the above, from $7\frac{1}{2}$ to 8 miles W.S.W. of Lynn. Its extensive parish contains 1252 inhabitants and about 6,985 acres of land, exclusive of about 200A. of the New Salt Marsh, embanked in from the Cross Keys Wash, as noticed at page 803. The Rev. C. H. Townshend is the principal owner and lord of the manor; but here is a number of small freeholders and copyholders. The Church (St. Peter) stands within half a mile of that of Walpole St. Andrew, and is now one of the handsomest parish churches in England. It was erected in the reign of Henry VI., and consists of nave with aisles and clerestory, north and south porches, and chancel, of perpendicular architecture, and a finely proportioned tower in the decorated style, containing six bells. All the parapets are embattled and richly panelled. The south porch is of two bays, and has a chamber over it. The north porch is much smaller. At the east end of the nave are two turrets with spires and a beautiful spirelet, in which the sanctus bell still hangs. Under the altar is a passage leading from the north to the south side of the churchyard, and having a richly groined roof with elaborately carved bosses, but its original purpose is unknown. The nave is of seven bays with clustered columns, and the clerestory has 13 windows on each side. The windows of the aisles have embattled transoms. The spacious and lofty chancel is rendered more imposing by the great height of the altar platform, which is approached by two flights of five steps each. The chancel windows have no transoms, but between them are richly carved niches with small bowtells rising out of them to carry the trusses of the roof. Below the windows the walls are panelled with cinquefoiled arches, those westward of the priest's doorway forming the stalls, ten on each side. The east window is of seven lights, but needs restoring. The font is octagonal, enriched with trefoiled niches having crockets and finials, and bears the date 1532, and the legend "Thynk and Thank" round its foot. It is surmounted by a handsomely carved Elizabethan cover, which opens with folding doors. At the east end of the north aisle is a marble slab inscribed to the memory of William, son of Sir John Rochford, and formerly having a long cross of brass, standing on a pedestal of four steps. On the south side of the chancel is a handsome monument to Robt. Butler, who died in 1630. The lectern is a brass eagle, and from the centre of the church hangs a large brass candelabrum. The stairs which led to the rood-loft still remain. In the chancel are some ancient stalls carved and painted, and there are some old oak benches in the aisles. Here were formerly chantries, dedicated to St. James, St. Catherine, St. Edmund, and St. Thomas. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £21, but the tithes were commuted in 1839 for a yearly rent-charge of £1187. The patronage is in the Crown, and the Rev. Philip Salisbury Bagge, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence. The parish extends to the Fen, more than five miles south of the church, and for the accommodation of the inhabitants of its central and southern parts, St. Edmund's Chapel was erected in 1844 at a cost of £1000, in a field on the south side of the Lynn and Wisbech turnpike. This chapel of ease is dedicated to St. Edmund the King and Martyr, who is supposed to have had a way-side chapel in the vicinity. It is a handsome structure, in the Norman style, consisting of a nave 43 feet by 25; a chancel with an apse 16 feet deep, a vestry, and a bell-cot containing two small bells. The four chancel windows are of stained glass, representing our Saviour, St. Edmund, St. Peter, and St. Catharine. The carving and decorative painting in the interior are admirably executed, and were chiefly done by the hand of the late rector. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a small chapel here. The Roman bank, extending hence to West Walton, forms a carriage road. Some years ago a farmer, whose house adjoined the bank, found by digging in it many Roman bricks, and an aqueduct made of earthen pipes. Godric, the hermit, who died in 1170 after wearing out three suits of iron clothes, is said to have been a native of Walpole, which gave name to the Walpoles of Houghton Hall, several of whom were distinguished statesmen.

The FREE SCHOOL, for all the children of the parishes of Walpole St. Andrew and St. Peter, was founded in 1705 by Anthony Curton, who endowed it with a house and 31A. 2R. of land, in Terrington St. John, to which an allotment of 28A. 3R. was awarded at the enclosure of the Marsh, Smeeth, and Fen. The schoolmaster lets the whole for about £130 per annum, out of which he has to pay nearly £18 for drainage rates, and the interest of £280 borrowed for the enclosure expenses. Until 1812, when a new school-room was built by subscription, the school was kept in the small room over the south porch of St. Peter's church. All the children of the two parishes, of either sex, sent to the master are instructed by him in reading, writing, and accounts, without any charge, except for stationery and firing. The number is generally about eighty. A National School, built in 1857, and licensed for divine service, stands in the middle of the Fen, about 7 miles from the church, and there is a Parochial School supported by the rector and attended by 30 children. In 1630, Robert Butler founded Almshouses, in the Church-field, for four poor widows of Walpole St. Peter, and endowed them with 36A. 1R. of land, now let for £100 per annum, out of which there has to be deducted about £5 for repairs, drainage, &c. These almshouses were burnt down in 1736, but were shortly afterwards rebuilt, and in 1850 two more were built out of savings of income. The six widows have each 5s. a week and two tons of coal yearly. The Causeway Lands, consisting of 26A., let for £60 a year, have been held from an early period, and the rents applied in the repairs of the causeways, &c., leading to the church, except £5. 5s. per annum paid to the master of the free-school. The Dole Lands and Houses, given by Wm. Wake, in 1697, consist of three cottages occupied rent free, and 39A. 11P. of copyhold land, in the manors of West Walton-Coleraine and Eldred, let for £58. 15s. per annum, which, after deducting about £12 for drainage rates, &c., is divided amongst the poor parishioners.

WALSOKEN is a large and pleasant village, 12 miles S.W. of Lynn, and 1 mile E. of Wisbech, adjoining to which town is the populous modern suburb of NEW WALSOKEN, in this parish, which has increased its population since the year 1801, from 705 to 2683 souls, and comprises 4656 acres of land, including a large portion of the Smeeth and Fen (vide p. 804), and belonging to a number of freeholders and copyholders. The Prior of Lewes, in the 3rd of Edward I., had here, among other privileges, a weekly market on Thursday, and a fair on the feast of St. Peter and St. Paul. The manor of Walsoken, formerly Colville's, is now held by Chas. Metcalfe, Esq., of Wisbech, and was given to the abbey of Ramsey, in Huntingdonshire, by Aldwin, Duke of the East Angles, in 1009. It afterwards passed to the Wrothesleys, Southwells, and Colvilles. The manors of Popenhoe, Hakebeach, and West Walton, extend into the parish. The Church (All Saints) is a large and handsome edifice, chiefly built about the year 1140, and thoroughly restored and reseated with open benches in 1860. It comprises nave with aisles, chancel with north and south chapels, south porch, and tower. The latter contains six bells, and is surmounted by a spire. It has octagonal turrets at the angles, and its three lower stages are in the early English style and covered with arcades, but the belfry is of the decorated period. The interior of the church is mainly of Norman architecture of a very high class. The nave is of seven bays, enriched with the chevron and other ornaments, the pillars being alternately circular and octagonal. The chancel arch, though richly decorated with Norman characteristics, is pointed, and rises from shafts banded over and over again. The chancel is of two bays, the arcades similar to those of the nave. The original narrow aisles have given way to much broader ones of a later period. This has had the effect of smothering the clerestory of the choir, which can still be traced inside, whilst that of the nave has given way to a large perpendicular substitute. The roof is of the hammer-beam kind, ornamented with saints and angels. Some of the old stalls and benches with carved poppies still remain. There are two piscinæ in the south aisle. The great east window is a perpendicular insertion of five lights with embattled transom. The font is octagonal, and on its sides are representations of the seven Romish sacraments and the crucifixion. The sanctus-bell cot and the staircase which led to the rood loft still remain, and in the churchyard are the base and a portion of the shaft of an old cross. The west window in the tower has been filled with fine stained glass by Richd. Young, Esq., of Wisbech. Here is some good screen work, and also various monuments and inscriptions of the Wensleys, Southwells, Gardiners, Edwards, Wignalls, Kelks, and Herrings. One of the latter was Dr. Thomas Herring, archbishop of Canterbury, who died in 1757. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £30. 13s. 4d., is in the patronage of G. Gilpin, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. John Davies, M.A., who has 30 acres of glebe, a good residence built in 1850 at a cost of £2000, and a yearly rent-charge of £1230 awarded in 1842 in lieu of tithes. There was formerly a chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, at a place called Staith Ditch, in which was a famous fraternity or guild of brothers and sisters, to whom Popes Urban, Boniface, &c., granted many indulgences. A Hermitage existed here in the reign of Henry V., but its site is unknown. A small chapel of ease was built in 1862, in the early-English style, at a cost of £800, to accommodate the inhabitants of the more distant parts of the parish. The National School, with master's residence attached, was built in 1859, and is attended by above 60 children. The Primitive Methodists have chapels both at Old and New Walsoken. The Poor have two chaldrons of coals yearly, charged by Gregory Brown, in 1666, on 4 acres of land in Chapelfield, now belonging to Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart. Those who have not received parochial relief during the preceding twelve months, have divided among them yearly, £20 from 8a. at Sutton St. James, left by Robt. Palmer in 1579; £27 from 18a. at Parson Drove, left by one Harvey; and £8. 2s. 6d. from 1a. 2r., allotted on the enclosure of Crab-Marsh, in this parish. They have also two yearly rent-charges, of 13s. 4d. and 5s., left by unknown donors; and another of 20s., left by John Smith, in 1705, out of land at Towcester, now belonging to the Earl of Pomfret. Here is a Lecture Hall, built about four years ago.

WEST WALTON is a considerable village near the Roman Bank, 3 miles N.N.E. of Wisbech, and 12 miles S.W. by W. of Lynn. Its extensive parish has augmented its population since the year 1801, from 513 to 950 souls, and comprises many scattered houses, and 5516A. 3R. 30P. of land, including a large portion of the Smeeth and Fen, from 4 to 5 miles S.E. of the village (see page 804), and 600 acres on the west side of the Nene, in the Isle of Ely. The Queen is lady of the manor of West-Walton-cum-Membris, held by leaseholders and copyholders on fines certain. But part of the parish is in Newton Colville manor, of which Capt. Trafford is lord; and in Coleraine manor, of which the Rev. C. H. Townshend is lord. The Church (St Mary) is a beautiful freestone structure, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, and chancel. It has a massive but elegant tower with five bells, standing detached at a distance of 22 yards to the south, and forming an entrance gateway to the churchyard. This tower is of four stages, with turrets at the angles, and is mostly of the early English period, but its immense belfry windows are in the early geometrical style. Four arches form the basement, and the upper stages are richly ornamented with elaborately-wrought arcades. The fine west front of the church has been ruined by late and incongruous props and insertions, and a poor western porch conceals and mutilates a superb double doorway. The interior of the nave is perhaps as harmonious and beautiful a piece of early English work as can be found in any parish church in England. It consists of six bays, and the pillars have detached and banded shafts of Purbeck marble, the capitals being floriated and united under one round abacus. A string course runs along on the top of the arches, and the clerestory consists within and without of a continuous arcade, the central arch in each bay being pierced for a window. The chancel aisles have been destroyed, but the pillars and arches are still visible in the walls. Most of the windows of the church are perpendicular insertions, and in the south aisle is an elaborate two-light window of early decorated work. In the north aisle is the broken effigy of a priest. A tablet in the church is inscribed—"To the immortal praise of God, that saveth His people: Be it kept in perpetual memory, that on the 1st of November, 1613, the sea broke and overflowed all Marshland, to the great danger of men's lives and loss of goods. On March 23rd, 1614, this country was again overflowed with the fresh; and on the 12th and 13th of September, 1617, all Marshland was again overflowed by the violence of the sea." The rectory is in two medieties—viz., Walton Eliensis, valued in K.B. at £16, and now at £572; and Walton Lewes, valued in K.B. at £16. 13s. 4d., and now at £802. The former is in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. E. E. Blencowe, B.A.; and the latter is in the patronage of the Rev. C. H. Townshend, and incumbency of the Rev. Jeremiah Bowen, B.A. A neat Rectory House was erected about twenty years ago, for the mediety of Walton Eliensis. The tithes of the whole parish were commuted in 1830 for £1374. 6s. per annum. In the parish is a Primitive Methodist Chapel, built in 1833. The National School, near the church, was built about 20 years ago, at a cost of £430, on land given by the Rev. E. E. Blencowe, who, in 1850, built another School, in which he performs divine service twice every Sunday, at Fen-end, about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile from the church. This is called "St. Paul's," and is a neat slated building, with a small spire. There are 12 free scholars at each of these schools, in consideration of the dividends of £753. 16s. 8d. three per cent. Consols, left by Mrs. Mary Dales, in 1793, for the education of poor children. The Poor's Estate, given at an early period by unknown donors, consists of the Ferry house, and 19A. 2R. 24P. of land in this parish, and 10A. 2R. in Walpole St. Peter, let at rents amounting to £107 per annum, which is distributed amongst those poor parishioners who have not received parochial aid during the preceding twelve months.

WIGGENHALL ST. GERMAN is a village and parish, on both sides of the Great Ouse river, where there is an ancient wooden bridge, 4 miles S.W. by S. of Lynn. It contains 633 inhabitants and 1219 acres of land, of which 1031A. are on the west, and 188A. on the east side of the river, which, a little below the village, is diverted into a new channel, called the Eau-Brink Cut. The tides press up the Ouse with great force, and are confined by lofty banks, most of the land being below the high water mark, and some of it as low as the bed of the river. Above and below the bridges, the river-banks were curved in many abrupt angles, but these were straightened by the commissioners of the navigation, at considerable expense, in 1835, when several houses were taken down for the purpose of lengthening the west end of the bridge. G. Helsham, Esq., is lord of the manor of Fitton, which comprises the four Wiggenhalls; and he is proprietor of about two-thirds of this parish. The other principal landowners are, Jarman Patrick, Esq.; the Rev. J. Royle; the Corporation of Lynn (137A.); and the heirs of Christopher Carter, Esq. The Hundred Court was anciently held at Fitton Oak, about half a mile west of the village. The Church (St. German) stands on the east side of the river, and its floor is about eight feet below high water mark. It is an ancient edifice, comprising nave, aisles, porch, chancel, and square tower with four bells. Some of the ancient benches remain, and are ornamented with richly carved figures of saints, angels, and animals. The font is handsome, and is supported by 8 small marble shafts surrounding a central one. It was the gift of Mrs. Stockdale, in memory of her son. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6, is in the incumbency of the Rev. Henry Edwards, M.A., who has 3 acres of glebe and a good residence, which was rebuilt in 1859. The tithes were commuted in 1837, the vicarial for £135, and the rectorial for £283 per annum. The latter are held on lease by Mrs. Kidd, and with the patronage of the living, and 22A. 2R. 20P. of glebe, belong to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich. The poor have 25s. yearly, as the interest of £25 left by Thos. Fenn, in 1691. They have also an annuity of 6s. 8d., left by an unknown donor. The Bridge Reeves repair four cottages, occupied by poor widows; and they formerly allowed £12 a year towards the support of a school. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Wesleyan Reformers, have each a chapel here. This parish was for many ages the residence of the Wigenhales, who afterwards assumed the name of Howard, and removed to East Winch. One branch of this illustrious family became Dukes of Norfolk, and many of the others were raised to distinguished honours in church and state.

WIGGENHALL ST. MARY THE VIRGIN, a small scattered village on the west side of the Great Ouse, 5 miles S.W. by S. of Lynn, and 2 miles N.W. of Watlington station, has in its parish the hamlet of Saddle-Bow, on the opposite side of that river and the Eau-Brink Cut, within 3 miles of Lynn. The parish contains 307 inhabitants and 2807 acres of land belonging to a number of freeholders, but formerly possessed by the Kerviles, who built a large brick hall here, with an embattled tower gate-house. This family became extinct on the death of Sir Henry Kervile, in 1624; and the hall having been long in ruins was mostly taken down in the early part of the present century, and the gate-house and some of the walls were converted into farm buildings, now occupied by Mr. Fredk. Medcalf, of Pentney, who farms the whole of the ancient park, which is well timbered and of great extent. G. Helsham, Esq., is lord of the manor, and Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., and several smaller owners have estates here. The Church comprises nave, aisles, chancel, south porch, and western tower with five bells; and with the exception of the north and south doorways, which are early English, is all of that transitional period when the decorated was fast merging into the perpendicular style. It contains an alabaster altar-tomb, with effigies of Sir Henry Kervile in armour, his lady, and two children. The seats in the nave and aisles are of oak, profusely carved with figures of saints under crocketed canopies, &c. There is a beautiful brass eagle in the nave. Many of the windows contain fragments of ancient stained glass. The church was reroofed in 1862 at a cost of £220. The Book of Martyrs in 3 vols., and a large Bible, with chains attached, given to the church in 1633, are still preserved, and here is also a curious heart-shaped brass, with an inscription on four brass scrolls which surround it. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £12, and in 1831 at £94, was augmented about 20 years ago by the late Bishop of Moray and Ross, and is now worth £175 a year. It is in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and incumbency of the Rev. John Fleming, M.A., of King's Lynn, who has here a handsome residence, built in 1846 and enlarged in 1854. Richard Bagge, Esq., is impropiator of the rectorial tithes. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel in the parish. Three houses and two roods of land, belonging to the poor, are occupied by paupers. Post via Lynn. Marked 1, reside at Saddle-Bow.

WIGGENHALL ST. MARY MAGDALEN is a large village on the Great Ouse river, which is here crossed by a long wooden bridge, 6 miles S.S.W. of Lynn. The parish contains 825 inhabitants and 4248 acres of land, of which nearly three-fourths are enclosed fens, extending three miles to the south, and now well drained by three wind-mills and a steam engine of 40 horse-power. The drainage rates amount on the fen lands to about 10s. 6d. per acre per annum. The soil belongs to E. Peel and J. H. Fysh, Esqs., Mrs. Martin, and a number of smaller freeholders, many of whom are residents. The Church was originally a beautiful structure of the decorated period, but most of the windows are perpendicular insertions, and some of them contain rich and valuable specimens of ancient stained glass. The building comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch with parvise, and square tower with six musical bells. The chancel contains sedilia for three priests, some old stalls, a piscina, and an aumbry. The lower panels of the rood screen have paintings of the evangelistic symbols, and there is some good screen work enclosing the chapels at the east ends of the aisles. The church has recently been restored. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 15s. 10d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Ballard Dalby, B.A., who has a good residence, built in 1851 at a cost of £900. The rectorial tithes, which belong to Mrs. Tompson, were commuted in 1840 for £532. 15s. 7d., and the vicarial tithes for £253. 1s. per annum. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. The National School, built in 1841 at a cost of £450, is attended by 70 children. Crabhouse Nunnery stood on the banks of the Ouse, north of this village, and was founded by Roger the Prior, and the convent of Reynham, in 1181, for nuns of the order of St. Augustine, and dedicated to St. John the Evangelist. It was built in "a desert and solitary place that was inhabited by a hermit, but not overflowed." At the dissolution it was granted to Sir John Gage, knight, "with the gardens, orchard, &c." Before the year 1181, the site and grounds of this priory formed the only habitable place in this parish between Bustard's Dole and the south side of the village, all the rest being then a watery and desolate fen. The estate now called Crabb Abbey (about 700A.) belongs to Mrs. Martin. Near the site of the nunnery many human bones have been found. The Bridge is supported at the cost of this parish and Watlington, on the opposite side of the river. Magdalen Gate Station, on the Lynn and Wisbech railway, is about three quarters of a mile S. of the church, and Watlington Station is 1½ mile W. The Marshland flood of 1862 commenced in this parish, where the bank first gave way. (See p. 720.)

WIGGENHALL ST. PETER lies north of the above, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.S.W. of Lynn, and 1 mile N.W. of Watlington station. It is a parish with five scattered farm-houses, a few cottages, 153 inhabitants, and 944 acres of land, of which 599A. are on the west, and 345A., with the church and houses, on the east side of the Great Ouse river. The soil belongs to J. Patrick, J. Cary, and Robert Cole, Esqrs.; and Messrs. Wm. W. Hall and John Baxter; but G. Helsham, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Church comprises nave, chancel, and square tower with one bell. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6 and now at £120, is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor and incumbency of the Rev. Josiah Coombes, who has a good residence, built in 1862 at a cost of £500. Edwin Durrant, Esq., of Lynn, is impropiator of the rectorial tithes. The chief residents are—The Vicar; John Baxter, Wm. Whistler Hall, James Jackson, John Lock, and James Mowton, farmers; William and John Banyard, fishmongers; and Robert Watson Hastings, market gardener and watchmaker. Post via Lynn.

CLACKCLOSE HUNDRED,

The largest division of Norfolk, lies at the south western extremity of the county, and was formerly called a Hundred and a Half. It is about 17 miles in length from north to south, and varies from 10 to 15 miles in breadth, being bounded on the north by Freebridge-Lynn, on the east by South Greenhoe and Grimshoe, on the south by Cambridgeshire, and on the west by the latter and Freebridge-Marshland. It is watered by several navigable streams: the great Ouse bounding and intersecting it from south to north; the Wissey crossing it from east to west; the Nar bounding it on the north; and the Welney or Croft river separating it from the Isle of Ely. It is crossed from north to south by the Lynn and Ely branch of the Great Eastern Railway. It abounds in woods, seats, and large villages, and the upland parts are bold, fertile, and picturesque; but a large portion of it is in low and monotonous fens and marshes, now well drained and cultivated, and forming part of the great Bedford Level, which extends into the counties of Northampton, Cambridge, Huntingdon, and Bedford, nearly to the source of the great Ouse, and was so called in honour of the fourth Earl of Bedford, who was the principal undertaker in the stupendous work of draining this immense tract of inundated fens, for the performance of which 95,000 acres were allotted to him and the few others who were induced, by his spirited example, to join in the costly and hazardous enterprise. The work was commenced in 1630, and in 1637 the Earl had expended on it no less than £100,000. He died in 1641, before the work was completed; but it was resumed by his son in 1649, and finished in 1653. The great outfall of the drain-water is by two deep and navigable drains, called the Old and New Bedford Rivers, both terminating in the Ouse, near Denver sluice. The new river is 100 feet broad, and the tide flows up as far as St. Ives. This great drainage, and that of the adjacent Marshland, have since undergone many considerable improvements. (See pages 719 and 803). In the reign of Edward I., the abbot of Ely had a baronial jurisdiction in Clackclose, with the taking out and return of all writs, &c., view of frankpledge, forfeitures of felons' goods, and a prison and gallows at Wimbotsham. The Hundred court was held on Clackclose hill, near Stradsett, in the time of Henry III. Two coroners are appointed, one for the Hundred of Clackclose and the Liberties of Sir Thos. Hare, Bart., and the other for the "Half Hundred," which comprises only the Norfolk parts of the parishes of Upwell, Outwell, and Welney, which are partly in Cambridgeshire, and being separated from the Hundred were granted by Edward VI. to John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, who conveyed them to Edmund Beaupré, Esq., of Outwell, from whom they passed by female issue, to the families of Bell and Townley.

(Vide Beaupré Hall, in Outwell.) They are held of the Crown in socage, as part of the manor of East Greenwich. The other manors belong to various lords; and the whole of Clackclose is now one Hundred, as determined by Judge Atkins, in the 9th of William and Mary, and forms the Deanery of Fincham, in the Archdeaconry of Norwich. Petty Sessions are held every Monday at Downham; and J. J. Nunn, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The following is an enumeration of the 33 parishes in this Hundred, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent:—

* Upwell, Outwell, and Welney parishes are partly in the Isle of Ely, Cambridgeshire; but the Norfolk parts of each support their poor as separate townships. The churches of the two former are in Norfolk, and the latter in Cambridge.

† The return of Downham Market included 215 persons in the Union Workhouse.

‡ Shingham is partly in South Greenhoe Hundred.

DOWNHAM UNION.—Beechamwell and Shingham are in Swaffham Union; Outwell and Upwell are in Wisbech Union; and all the other 29 parishes of Clackclose Hundred are in Downham Union, which comprises also the four parishes of Wiggenhall, in Freebridge-Marshland, and that part of Welney lying in Cambridgeshire. The 34 parishes of this union comprise an area of 83,687 acres, or 133 square miles, and had 20,264 inhabitants in 1861, but 16,016 in 1831. Their average annual expenditure, during the three years preceding the formation of the Union, was £10,083, and is still about the same sum. The Union Workhouse is at Downham, and was built in 1836 at a cost of about £5000. It is a neat and commodious building, and has room for 250 inmates. Thomas L. Reed, Esq., is union clerk and superintendent registrar; and the registrars of births and deaths are Messrs. J. H. Chamberlain, for Wiggenhall District; Henry C. B. Steele, for Fincham District; and Wm. South, for Downham District. The latter is also registrar of marriages for the whole union; and he and Mr. J. H. Chamberlain are the relieving officers. Thomas and Miss Smith are master and matron, and the Rev. E. C. K. Bearcroft, B.C.L., chaplain of the Workhouse. Messrs. T. G. Wales, A. J. Mackintosh, W. J. Newman, Wm. Cater, H. C. B. Steele, and John Hemming are the union surgeons. The Board meets at the Workhouse every Friday.

BARTON-BENDISH is a village of detached houses, 4 miles N. of Stoke Ferry, and 8 from Downham and Swaffham, comprising in its parish the hamlet and enclosed fens of EASTMORE, distant only 3 miles N.N.E. of Stoke

Ferry, near the great fosse and rampart, now called the Devil's ditch, and extending northward to Narborough. The parish contains 4390 acres of land and 484 inhabitants, of whom about 114 are in Eastmore hamlet. Sir Hanson Berney, Bart., owns most of the soil, and is lord of the manor. The Hall, formerly a seat of the Berney family, is a substantial dwelling in the Elizabethan style, now occupied by Mr. Geo. Read. Barton had formerly three CHURCHES; but that dedicated to All Saints was dilapidated many years ago, and the ruins have long been cleared away. The rectory of All Saints is consolidated with that of St. Mary's, and the united rectories were valued in K.B. at £11, and are now worth £390, in the patronage of the lord of the manor, and incumbency of the Rev. George Day, M.A., of Norwich, who has here a good residence, now occupied by the rector of St. Andrews. St. Mary's Church is a small edifice, comprising nave, chancel, and turret with one bell. Its tower fell down in the reign of Queen Anne. The font is handsome, and was given by Lady Berney a few years ago. The west doorway is a good specimen of Norman work and above it is a small window, filled with stained glass in memory of Miss Read. St. Andrew's Church is a larger building covered with thatch, and consisting of nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with three bells. The chancel is paved with encaustic tiles, and contains a harmonium, and some neat stalls with carved poppies. The nave was newly floored and thoroughly repaired in 1851. Several of the windows are enriched with stained glass, and one of them contains representations of the four Evangelists. The rectory of St. Andrew's, valued in K.B. at £14, and now at £385, is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. John Holley, M.A., who officiates at both churches, and has a good residence, which is let to Mr. Harper, who farms the glebe. At the enclosure of the common and fen lands, in 1777, the tithes were commuted for two allotments, viz:—335A. to St. Andrew's, and 330A. to the consolidated rectories of St. Mary and All Saints. Eastmore hamlet had anciently a chapel, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, but it was converted into a farm-house at the Reformation. The Poor's Allotment, 44A., was awarded at the enclosure. The poor cut turf upon it, but the herbage is let for £45 a year. They have also 8A., left by an unknown donor, and let for £6. In 1779, the Rev. Richd. Jones left £250 three per cent. stock, for schooling poor children. The dividends were not received from 1799 to 1831, but the arrears were paid in 1832, when new trustees were appointed. The money received as arrears, was laid out in the erection of a School, in which the mistress teaches six free scholars. Here is a small Wesleyan Chapel. The chief residents are—The Rev. John Holley, M.A., rector of St. Andrew's, St. Mary's Rectory; John Gee, wheelwright and victualler, Spread Eagle; John Bailey, tailor; Wm. Barker, dealer; Wm. Bond, estate carpenter; Saml. Wilkin, blacksmith; and the following farmers:—Geo. Alexander; Jas. Crome (and shopkeeper); Walter Flatt, Eastmore; Lawrence Harper, St. Andrew's Rectory; Charles Muskett; George Read, Hall; George Rumble (and carrier to Lynn); and Edward Vince, Abbey. Post from Brandon.

BEECHAMWELL is a village with several neat cottages, five miles W.S.W. of Swaffham, having in its parish 356 inhabitants and 3730 acres of land, adjoining the Saxon fosse and rampart extending from Eastmore to Narborough. Thos. and John Fielden, Esqrs., are owners of the soil, and lords of the manor. Here are two Churches, but that dedicated to All Saints is in ruins, and its rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., is consolidated with Shingham. Here was likewise a church dedicated to St. John, but it was taken down many years ago, and its benefice consolidated with St. Mary's, a small but neat structure, at the east end of the village, covered with thatch, and comprising nave, chancel, and north porch, with a tower, round at the base and octagonal above. The rectories of St. Mary and

St. John, valued in K.B. at £9. 13s. 4d., and now at £191, are in the patronage of T. and J. Fielden, Esqrs., and incumbency of the Rev. Corbett Metcalfe Moore, B.A., who has a good residence. Here is a School, built in 1835 by the late John Motteux, Esq., who left £100 three per cent. Consols, for a yearly distribution of bread among the poor, who have also 10s. per annum from a piece of land left by an unknown donor. The chief residents are—The Rector; the Rev. Henry Dugmore, Hall; Ann Codling, schoolmistress; Jeremiah Barkham, baker; Alfred Pearce, shoemaker; Hy. Rix, shopkeeper; Wm. Smith, blacksmith and beerhouse; Wm. Whiskerd, bricklayer and builder; James Chambers, farmer, Malthouse farm; and James Fuller, farmer and miller. Post from Swaffham.

BEXWELL parish, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile E. of Downham, has only 94 inhabitants, and 1177 acres of land, belonging to Sir Thos. Hare, Bart., Mrs. Doyle, and the Rev. Jermyn Pratt, the latter of whom is lord of the manor. The Church (St. Mary) is a small edifice, chiefly of carstone, with a tower, round at the base and octagonal above, containing one bell. In 1854 it was restored, refloored with coloured tiles, and fitted with neat portable benches. The pulpit is of Caen stone, and has in front an alabaster carving of Christ carrying the Cross. In the churchyard is a stone recording the death of the wife of a former parish clerk, at the age of 106 years. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 11s. 8d., is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. Edw. John Howman, M.A., who has 48 acres of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £345, and a pleasantly situated residence, which he enlarged in 1842. The poor have 6A. of land. Mr. John Kendle Cooke is the only farmer, and occupies the Hall. Post from Downham.

BOUGHTON, a small scattered village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. of Stoke Ferry, and 6 miles E. by S. of Downham, has in its parish 238 inhabitants and 1323A. of land, belonging to Sir H. G. P. Bedingfeld, Bart., the lord of the manor, except 30A. of glebe, and about 200A. belonging to Mrs. Roper. The Church (All Saints) has nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with three bells. The chancel was rebuilt 60 years ago. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, and now having a yearly rent-charge of £418 in lieu of tithes, is in the patronage of Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Smith Churchill, M.A., who has a neat residence, erected in 1858. At the enclosure, land was allotted to the poor for fuel. The chief residents are—The Rector; Hy. Trundle, victualler, Bull; David Cooper, shoemaker; Chas. Smith, beerhouse and shopkeeper; and Robert Carter, sen. and jun., Charles Cheetham, Joseph Clarke, Cornelius Green, Henry Lemmon, and Fredk. Wm. Winfield, farmers. Post from Brandon, via Stoke Ferry. Here is a pillar letter box, which is cleared at 5.15 p.m.

CRIMPLESHAM, a scattered village $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. of Downham, has in its parish 328 inhabitants, and 1620 acres of land, mostly the property of Wm. Bagge, Esq., lord of the manor, and Mrs. Doyle. The Church (Virgin Mary) consists of nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with five bells. Here are tablets of the Royle and Creasy families, and a double piscina. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8, and now at £69, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. John Cross Morphew, who has a small residence. The tithes have been commuted for £525. 1s. 8d. per annum, of which about £500 belong to the Revs. J. H. and E. B. Sparke, the impropiators. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1806, is 12A. 2R. 24P., let for £23 a year. The chief residents are—Mrs. Eliz. Doyle, and James Doyle, Esq., Hall; Mrs. Eliz. Harpley; Rev. J. C. Morphew, M.A., Vicarage; Hy. Alflat, bricklayer; John Duffield, victualler, Nag's Head; Joseph Harpley, dealer and victualler, Red Hart;

Geo. Reader, blacksmith ; Robt. Roberts, shopkeeper ; and John Coe, Hy. Crane, John Harpley, Joseph Harpley, Wm. Harrison, Wm. Hesson, Robt. Oakes, and Benj. Wm. Rix (Manor House), farmers. Post from Downham.

DENVER is a small village 1 mile S. of Downham, including in its parish 932 inhabitants, 3149 acres of land, and the hamlets of DENVER SLUICE and SALTER'S LODGE, distant about 2 miles W. of Denver on the river Ouse ; the former at the mouth of the New Bedford river, or 100 feet drain, and the latter at the confluence of the Old Bedford river. Both the rivers are navigable for small craft, and have sluice gates and locks. Denver Sluice is crossed by a bridge of four arches, and was built at immense expense when the Bedford level was drained, but was destroyed by the violence of the tides, in 1713, and soon afterwards rebuilt. In 1834 and '5, it was again rebuilt and widened at a cost of £30,000. At Salter's Lode are two sluices or locks, one opening into the Well Creek, and the other into the old Bedford river, the former rebuilt in 1827, and the latter in 1828. The parish is in two manors, called East and West Hall, of which the Rev. Jermyan Pratt is lord ; but Capt. Bulwer, Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, Edwin Porter, Esq., Colonel Rowley and others have estates here. The Church (St. Mary) is a neat edifice of car-stone, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, vestry, and tower with small spire and five bells. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 13s. 4d., and now at £911, is in two medieties, called St. Peter's, East Hall, and St. Michael's, Westhall. It is in the patronage of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Houghton Stokes, M.A., who has a good residence and 94A. 1R. 13P. of glebe. In the chancel a black marble slab covers the remains and records the worth of Dr. Robert Brady, a native of this parish, who was physician in ordinary to Charles II. and James II., and for 40 years master of Gonville and Caius College, to which he bequeathed all his estate in Denver. He wrote several excellent works, one of which was "A complete History of England, from the first entrance of the Romans to the end of Richard II." He died in 1700. The Church Land, 28A. 2R., is let for £45. 12s. The Poor's Land, 28A., was partly allotted at the enclosure, and is let for £42. 10s. The poor have also £2 a year from 1A. 1R. 8P., given by Alex. Dillingham ; £4 a year as the rent of "Patch-brigs," purchased with £100 left by Mrs. Stafford ; and £4 a year left by the Rev. S. C. Smith. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel in the parish, and here is a station on the Lynn and Ely branch of the Great Eastern Railway. The late Capt. G. W. Manby, author of the ingenious apparatus for saving the lives of shipwrecked mariners, was born in this parish, in 1765, at East Hall, an ancient Manor House, which has been much modernised, but still exhibits a fine gable end with some good chimneys and ornaments of Tudor domestic architecture.

DEREHAM (WEST) parish has a scattered village, 4 miles S.E. by E. of Downham, and contains 679 inhabitants and 3440 acres of land, mostly the property of G. S. Kett, William Bagge, and Hugh Aylmer, Esqrs. The former is lord of the manor, which was once celebrated for its splendid ABBEY, standing about a mile south of the village, environed with wood and water, and founded in 1188 by a native of this parish, Hubert Walter, Dean of York, and successively Bishop of Salisbury, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Lord Chancellor, in the reign of Richard I. This abbey was dedicated to God and the Virgin Mary, for monks of the Præmonstratensian order. Its annual revenues were valued at the dissolution at £252. 12s. 11½d., and the site granted to the ancient family of Dereham. The Church (St Andrew) is an ancient fabric, comprising nave, chancel, and south porch, with a tower round at the base and octagonal above, containing five bells. It has two handsome monuments of the Dereham family, and a beautifully-designed one of marble and alabaster with a fine statue of Colonel Edmund Soames, of Dereham Grange, who died in 1706. It was re-seated in 1843, and in 1863 a new window was placed at the west end. The perpetual curacy, certified at £17. 13s. 4d., has been augmented at various times from Q.A.B. and other sources, and is now worth £74 per annum. It is in the patronage of the Rev. Leonard Jenyns, M.A., and incumbency of the Rev. E. J. Howman, M.A., of Bexwell. The tithes have been commuted for £220 a year, and will fall into the hands of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners on the expiration of the present lease, which is held by the patron. The Rev. Thomas Catton, B.D., F.R.S., &c., late senior fellow, and one of the head tutors of St. John's College, Cambridge, was born here in 1759, and died in 1838. He was a distinguished astronomer, and succeeded Mr. Ludlow in the management of the Observatory at St. John's College. In the church is a neat tablet in memory of his parents, who resided at Barsale house, in this parish. In 1701, Gregory Lovell left £500 to be laid out in land, the rents and profits thereof to be distributed among the poor, except 40s. a year, for three sermons on St. Thomas's, Lady, and Midsummer days, when the doles are distributed. The estate purchased with this legacy consists of an estate in Upwell, let for £130 a year. The Town Close, held of the manor of Curpels, contains 2A. 3R., and is let for £7. 10s. a year, which is distributed among the poor. The National School, built in 1840 by G. S. Kett, Esq., is attended by about 50 children. It is partly supported by subscription, and receives £20 a year from Lovell's charity. Mr. Hugh Aylmer, of this parish, is one of the largest sheep breeders in the kingdom, and is also noted for his breed of shorthorns.

DOWNHAM MARKET is a neat and clean market town, consisting principally of two long and well-built streets, pleasantly seated on the eastern acclivity of the vale of the Great Ouse, overlooking the marshes and fens, and distant more than half a mile from the river; $11\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of Lynn, $13\frac{1}{2}$ W. by S. of Swaffham, 13 miles E.S.E. of Wisbech, and 84 miles N. by E. of London. It gives name to the large Union, noticed at page 825, and is the polling place for Clackclose Hundred. It has a station on the Lynn and Ely Railway, and has increased its population since the year 1801 from 1512 to 3133 souls, and comprises in its parish 2490 acres of land, lying in several manors, and belonging to Mrs. E. Doyle, the Rev. J. Pratt, Sir Thomas Hare, Bart., and a number of small owners. Sir Thomas is lord of the largest manor, which, with several others in this neighbourhood, was given by King Edgar to Ramsey Abbey in Huntingdonshire. Henry III. invested the abbot with authority to try and execute malefactors at "his gallows of Downham." The manors in which the abbot exercised this authority are called the Liberty of Sir Thomas Hare. The Market, held every Friday, is of great antiquity, being confirmed by Edward the Confessor, but has greatly declined during the present century, owing to the increase of those at Lynn and Wisbech. A row of old buildings which stood in the centre of the Market-place was removed, under the powers of an Act of Parliament, passed in July, 1835, for paving, lighting, watching, and improving the town. A large butter market was formerly held every Monday, near the bridge, where in the height of summer and spring, about 90,000 firkins have been bought annually by factors, and sent to London to be sold under the name of Cambridge butter; but this trade was removed many years ago to Swaffham, where it is now obsolete; the growing of corn and wool and the feeding of cattle being now more attended to in this part of Norfolk than the dairy. Three large fairs for horses, cattle, &c., are held here yearly on March 3rd, May 8th, and November 13th. The first is called Winwall fair, being held on St. Winwalee's day, and removed some years ago from the manor of Winwall, in Wereham parish. The Gas Works were constructed in 1849 at a cost of £1500, raised in £10 shares. The Bridge, which crosses the Great Ouse, about half a mile west of the town, is a large wooden structure, which was leased by the lord of the manor of Stow Bardolph in the 32nd of Henry VI., at a yearly rent of 13s. 4d., to certain bridge reeves, who were obliged to keep it in repair and take the accustomed tolls, from which all the tenants of the said manor were to be exempt. At one end of the bridge is the toll-house, and at the other a public-house, both belonging to the reeves, who have also several acres of land, allotted to them under the enclosure and drainage acts, the last of which were passed in 1798 and 1802. The spring tides often rise here above 25 feet, and are confined between high embankments, part of which gave way on the Downham side of the river, on August 31st, 1833, and laid many hundred acres of the marshes under water until the breach was repaired. Near Well Creek, about 4 miles S. W. of Downham, is the fen hamlet of NORTH DELPH, extending into this and the parishes of Denver, Upwell, Outwell, and Stow-Bardolph, and having near it a handsome stone bridge over Tongs Drain, built in 1835 by the drainage commissioners of the Bedford level. The COUNTY COURT HALL stands near the Workhouse, and was built some years ago at the joint expense of the parish and the court treasury. Downham district includes the parishes of Barton Bendish, Bexwell, Boughton, Crimplesham, Denver, West Dereham, Downham Market, Fincham, Fordham, Hilgay, Holme-next-Runceton, Roxham, South Runceton, Ryston, Shouldham, Shouldham Thorpe, Southery, Stoke Ferry, Stow Bardolph, Stradsett, Tottenhill, Wallington, Watlington, Welney, Wereham, Wimbots-ham, Wormegay, Wretton, and the four Wiggenhalls. The court is held only once in two months. T. J. Birch, Esq., of Wretham Hall, is judge; Thomas L. Reed, Esq., registrar; J. B. Bullivant, Esq., deputy registrar; Mr. Benjamin Parrott, high bailiff and Robert Hodson, sub-bailiff. PETTY SESSIONS are held at the County Court Hall every Monday, and J. J. Nunn, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The POLICE STATION is a neat building with accommodation for the superintendent and two constables, and cells for temporary confinement. It was purchased by the county in 1859. Wm. Watson is the superintendent. The SAVINGS' BANK was opened in 1841, and is open every Saturday from 12 till 1 p.m. The MECHANICS' INSTITUTE in Bridge street was established in 1849, and has a good reading and news-room well supplied with London and provincial papers, a library of 500 volumes, and a small collection of geological specimens. T. L. Reed, Esq., is the president. The STANLEY LIBRARY, also in Bridge street, contains above 500 volumes, and is supported by subscription. Lord Stanley, M.P., gave £50 towards its formation, and the Rev. E. C. K. Bearcroft, B.C.L., is hon sec. and librarian. The AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION holds its annual meeting at the Crown Inn early in October. The soil in the neighbourhood of the town, except the marshes and fens, is in some places a light sand, and in others a loamy clay. In the sand pits are beautiful veins of different colours. In 1568, seventeen "monstrous fishes," measuring from 20 to 27 feet, were caught in the Ouse near the bridge. Martin King, a dwarf less than 4 feet in height, and for some time boots at the Castle Inn, died here, in 1807, from excessive drinking. Zachary Clarke, a member of the Society of Friends, who published an account of the "Norfolk Charities," died here in 1815, much lamented especially by the poor of the town and neighbourhood, whom he had for some years periodically relieved with distributions of money, fuel, and provisions. At the time of taking the census in 1861, there were living here one man and two women above 100 years of age, and one woman above 90 and two women above 95. In 1846, a beautiful gold armilla was found in a brick ground in this parish; and in 1857 a bronze dagger guard of elegant workmanship was picked up in a field on the Bexwell road, and appears to be of the 17th century. The CHURCH (St. Edmund) stands on rising ground, and is approached on one side by a flight of steps, and on the other by a gradual ascent ornamented with lime trees. It is a neat edifice chiefly built of ragstone, but has buttresses, quoins, &c., of free-stone. The nave with its aisles is 62 feet long by 45 broad, and is covered with lead. It is of ten bays, and has a gallery at the west end. The chancel is vaulted, and measures 34 feet by 16. The ancient octagonal font has upon its sides shields bearing the emblems of the evangelists, &c. The tower contains eight bells, and is surmounted by a small spire covered with lead. At the bridge there was anciently a hermitage, and near the church were several monastic buildings, the largest of which was a Priory, or cell of Benedictine monks, the site of which is occupied by the rectory-house. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and now having a yearly rent-charge of £503, awarded in lieu of tithes in 1841, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Edw. Robert Franks, M.A. In the town are CHAPELS belonging to the Particular Baptists, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Methodist Free Church. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1841, and is attended by 80 boys and 60 girls. The BRITISH SCHOOLS in Bridge street were established in 1860 by James Doyle, Esq., of Crimplesham, and have about 120 pupils. A new CEMETERY was formed in 1863 at a cost of £1600. It covers two acres, contains two chapels, and is partly consecrated for the use of members of the established church.

The CHURCH ESTATE, mostly acquired or received in exchange at the enclosure in 1802, consists of a house and garden, and about 33a. of land, let for £103. 16s. per annum, which is applied towards the service of the church.

At a vestry meeting, in 1813, it was determined to lay out about £1300 in repairing the church. A committee, of whom the rector was one borrowed £1000, and the repairs were proceeded with, but no faculty was obtained till after the work was completed. After a long litigation with part of the parishioners, the committee were deterred, by the fear of expense, from attempting to recover more than £1500, which they had laid out, either from the parish or the church estate. In 1660, the REV. THOMAS BATCHCROFT, D.D., left £100 to be laid out in land, and the rents to be distributed among the poor in fuel and clothing. The land purchased comprises nearly 7A., let for £34 a year, subject to a deduction for drainage tax, &c. The poor parishioners have also £2 a year, left by JOHN SAFFERY, in 1687, out of land at Wimbotsham. At the enclosure of the fen lands, &c., about 100A., called the HUNDRED ACRE COMMON, were vested with the churchwardens of Downham Market, Wimbotsham, and Stow Bardolph, in trust, that, after paying the drainage rates and other expenses, the clear yearly rent should be divided into three parts, for distribution among the poor of these parishes. The Eau-Brink and Downham drainage taxes on this land amount to £25 per annum, and it is now let for £110 a year. An Act for more effectually draining the fen lands, &c., in these and nine other parishes, was obtained in the 4th of William IV.

POST OFFICE at W. Casebow's, High street. Letters arrive from London at 3 a.m. and 2.30. p.m., and from Lynn at 9.15 p.m.; and are despatched at 3 and 11 a.m. and 9.15 p.m. Money Orders are granted and paid from 9 a.m. till 6 p.m., and the Savings' Bank is open during the same hours. The town deliveries commence at 7 a.m. and 2.30 p.m. Foot Messengers are despatched to the surrounding villages at 6 A.M.

FINCHAM is a neat village, forming a long street with several good houses, on the Swaffham road, 5 miles E.N.E. of Downham, comprising in its parish 886 inhabitants, and 2968 acres of land, belonging to several proprietors; but about one-third is owned by Sir Thomas Hare, Bart., the lord of the manors of Fincham-Hall, Curple, Grancourt, Combes, Baynard's Hall, and Littlewell. Part of the parish is in the manor of Fareswell, of which J. Calthrop, Esq., is lord. T. A. Carter, John Aylmer, and John B. Barsham, Esqs., have estates in the parish. Fincham-Hall, built about the reign of Edward IV., was formerly the seat of the Finchams, but is now a farm-house, and though frequently repaired and modernised, some portions of it retain their ancient character, exhibiting an early specimen of the revived Grecian style, with pillars of the Ionic order. Fincham gives name to the Deanery, which comprises the whole of Clackclose Hundred. There were anciently two Churches here. That dedicated to St. Michael was a fine old building of the Norman and early English styles, and was appropriated to Shouldham priory in 1350, but was destroyed in 1744, and its vicarage was consolidated with the rectory of St. Martin's. The latter is a fine building of the 15th century, and comprises nave, aisles, chancel, south porch, and square tower with six bells. It was restored in 1847, and refitted with open benches, new reading desk, &c. Several of the windows are filled with painted glass, that at the west end being in memory of the late George Aylmer, Esq. The church contains tablets of the Medcalf, Barsham, Hebgin, and other families, and some slabs of the Finchams, stripped of their brasses. The rood-screen and hagioscope still remain. The font is of the Norman period, and originally was in St. Michael's church. It is of large size, and ornamented with Scriptural historical subjects. The churchyard was enlarged in 1864 by the addition of half an acre of land, given by the late Mr. Wm. Hebgin. St. Michael's rectory and St. Martin's vicarage, the former valued in K.B. at £10, and the latter at £7. 6s. 8d., are consolidated, and in the alternate patronage of the Lord Chancellor and the Rev. Wm. Blyth, M.A. The latter is the present incumbent, and also rural dean. The tithes have been commuted for £690 per annum to the rector, and £325 to the Executors of the late Mr. Wm. Hebgin, the impropiators of St. Martin's rectory. The glebe is 30A., and is worth about £60 a year. The church land, 9A. 4P., with a cottage, lets for £18. 18s. The rectory-house was built in 1624, and has been often repaired and enlarged; but its original style of architecture is still preserved. At the enclosure in 1772, an allotment of 54A. was awarded to the poor, and is now let for £70, which is distributed yearly in coals. The poor have also a yearly rent-charge of 9s. 4d., left by the Rev. Thomas Bodham; and the interest of £23, given by unknown donors. Wm. Corston, one of the earliest patrons of Joseph Lancaster, was born here, in 1757 and died in 1843. In the churchyard is an inscription to his memory, from the pen of James Montgomery, the poet. The National School with master's house attached, was built in 1848, at a cost of £600. It has a small endowment of £4. 17s. 7d., and is attended by about 90 children. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a small chapel here. A Roman silver vase and several ancient coins were found in a field in this parish, in 1801.

FORDHAM, a parish and small village near the river Wissey, 3 miles S. of Downham, contains 211 inhabitants, and 2204 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Rev. Jermyn Pratt, the lord of the manor; and partly to Hy. Martin, Esq. An ancient farm-house, in this parish, called Snore Hall, was long the seat of the Skipwiths, one of whom is said to have received King Charles here, a short time before he surrendered to the Scotch at Newark. The Church (St. Mary) is a small edifice, built in 1730, after the old one had fallen down. It has a nave and chancel, with a small gallery at the west end. The Dean and Chapter are patrons of the perpetual curacy and appropriators of the tithes, now leased to the Rev. J. Pratt. The benefice was augmented, from 1757 to 1824, with £800 of Q.A.B. laid out in land. It is now worth £51 a year, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Hy. Pyman Collett, of Denver. The chief residents are—Geo. Seal, farmer and vict., Hare's Arms; Jos. Brown, Wm. Hopkin, Thomas Rose, and David Strangward, farmers; Wm. Pell, shoemaker, and Wiles Day, tailor. Post from Downham.

HILGAY is a considerable village on the southern acclivity of the vale of the river Wissey, opposite Fordham, and 4 miles S. of Downham. Its parish contains 1624 inhabitants, and 7860A. of land, half of which is fen, but now well drained and cultivated, forming part of the great Bedford level. For improving the drainage, a Steam Engine was erected on the Ten Mile Bank, in 1842. Mrs. Lucy Jones and Edmund E. Peel, Esq., are the chief owners of the soil; but here are several smaller proprietors. Mrs. Jones is lady of the two principal manors, called Woodhall and Modeney Priory. Hilgay Fen Station, on the Lynn and Ely railway, is 3 miles W.S.W. of the village. The Church (All Saints) is a large and handsome edifice, approached by a long walk margined with trees, and was restored, enlarged, and partly rebuilt, in 1862-3, at a cost of about £2200, of which about half was given by the rector, £100 by the lady of the manor, £60 by the Church Building Society, and the remainder by subscription and mortgage on the church estates. It now comprises a nave and chancel in the decorated style, a south aisle of the perpendicular period, and a square tower (rebuilt of brick in 1794) containing eight bells. The floor is paved with red and black tiles, and the church furnished throughout with low open seats of oak, every alternate one having a finely carved finial, copied from ancient examples still preserved in the building. The chancel is enclosed by a dwarf stone wall, with a central opening. Its floor rises by five steps to the communion table, which is of good design; and it contains sedilia for three priests, open stalls for the choir, and a recess for an organ. At the east end of the aisle is a chantry or chapel, belonging to the lady of the manor, and enclosed by some old open screen work. It contains a piscina and several monuments, one of which is to Henry Hawe, to whom the manor of Woodhall was given by Henry VIII. at the dissolution of the monasteries. Within the entrance to the tower is another portion of screen-work, furnished with handsome drapery presented by Miss Fowlis, who also gave the elegant altar cloth. The font is circular, and of bold but chaste design. It is of stone, supported by shafts of Kilkenny marble. The beautiful pulpit is also circular, the upper part being of red veined alabaster, supported on an exquisitely sculptured arcade of Caen stone, beneath which the material is again alabaster, inlaid with green cement, and discs of jasper in a fine diaper pattern. The lower portion consists of a thick central column, surrounded by smaller ones of red Mansfield stone. The roofs are of Memel fir, well carved, and of high pitch. A curious incised slab and many relics of the ancient sedilia, gable crosses, &c., were found in the walls during the restorations, and have been carefully preserved or copied. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, and now at £1600, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Jph. Parkes, M.A., who has a good residence and about 70A. of glebe. St. Mark's Chapel of Ease, on the ten-mile bank, about two miles from the village, was built in 1846 at a cost of £1000, and is a neat brick building with a small bell turret at the west end, and is fitted with open poppy-headed benches and a handsome pulpit and reading desk of carved oak. The Rev. J. Denny Gedge, M.A., is the curate. At South Hilgay, near Brandon Creek, is a small Iron Church, of which the Rev. John Sutcliffe is the curate. The old workhouse was converted into a National School in 1838, and has about 100 pupils. There is another school near St. Mark's chapel, built by the rector in 1861, and attended by 50 children. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each two chapels in the parish. The CHURCH ESTATE, comprising two houses and 53A. 2R. of land, is let at rents amounting to £111 per annum. One of the houses and 11A. 2R. of the land, were left by the Rev. Nicholas Spencer, in 1701, subject to the yearly distribution of 30s. among 15 of the poorest parishioners; and 20s. to the ringers. For the general benefit of the poor parishioners, there are two allotments, viz:—the TOWN HUNDRED, comprising 102A., supposed to have been awarded at the enclosure of the Sedge Fen, on the west side of the river Ouse, in the reign of Charles II.; and the POOR'S PARTS, 67A., supposed to have been partly given to the poor in exchange for other land in Flag Fen. These lands are let by the overseers, at rents amounting to about £260 per annum; out of which they pay yearly about £33 for drainage rates, and £13. 2s. to the schoolmaster, for teaching ten poor children reading, writing, and arithmetic. The residue they apply in the payment of the rents of cottages occupied by poor families and in aid of the poor rates. A yearly rent-charge of 20s., left by Thomas Power, in 1795, for a distribution of bread, is paid out of the Bell Inn lands.

HOLME-NEXT-RUNCTON is a small scattered village, in the marshy grounds between the river Ouse and South Runcton, 4 miles N. of Downham, and $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S. of Watlington station. Its parish has 273 inhabitants, and 1096 acres of land, mostly the property of Thos. Somers Cocks, Esq., the lord of the manor; Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart., Edmund E. Peel, Esq., and some smaller owners. The Church (St. James) is a small fabric, comprising nave, chancel, vestry, south porch, and a square tower with three bells. Two of its windows are filled with stained glass. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 19s. 2d., is consolidated with South Runcton and Wallington. The united rectories are now worth £675, and are in the patronage of E. E. Peel, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Cecil Danl. Wray, M.A., canon of Manchester, who has 14A. of glebe, and a good residence. The National School, with teacher's house attached, was built in 1839 and enlarged in 1862. It is attended by about 50 children. The Church Land, 1A. 12P., is let for £3. A close of $2\frac{1}{2}$ A., let in allotments for £5, was left for poor widows, by Eliz. Hewitt, in 1705. The poor have the interest of £10, left by Thomas Towers, in 1728; and an annuity of £4, left by Thomas Taylor, out of land at South Runcton. The chief residents are—The Rector; Thos. Blyth and John Stibbon, market gardeners; John Capps, carpenter; John Towler, shoemaker; Royal Watson, schoolmaster; Elizabeth West, beerhouse; and Jas. Baldry, John Gedney, John Heading, Joseph Howell (Manor House), and Osborn Stebbing, farmers. Post from Downham.

MARHAM, or Cherry Marham, is a long village with several good houses, 7 miles W. of Swaffham, and 8 miles N.E. by E. of Downham. Its parish contains 870 inhabitants and 3966 acres of land. Marham was formerly noted for its great abundance of cherries and walnuts; but most of the walnut trees were cut down during the French war, and sold to the gun-makers, some of the largest for as much as £100 each. The principal owners of the soil are Sir Thomas Hare, Bart., and Robt. G. Winearls and Henry Villebois, Esqrs.; the first is lord of the manors of New Hall and Shouldham; and the last is lord of Old Hall and Westacre, and resides at Marham House. There was formerly a Nunnery here, belonging to Ely abbey, founded for Cistercians, in 1251, and granted at the dissolution to Sir Nicholas and Robert Hare. Some remains of it may be seen in a farm-house and out-buildings, a little west of the Church (Holy Trinity), which is a large edifice, comprising nave, south aisle, chancel, and lofty square tower with six bells. It contains several painted windows, given by H. Villebois, Esq., and an ancient monument to Humphrey de Shouldam. Here was another church, (St. Andrew,) and some traces of its foundations are still extant. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., was augmented in 1738 with £200 of Q.A.B., and £200 given by the Rev. Edward Brooke. The Rev. Arthur Browne, M.A., is incumbent, and has a good residence and about 20 acres of glebe. The advowson and appropriation of the rectorial tithes belong to St. John's College, Cambridge. In 1840, the rectorial tithes were commuted for £640, and the vicarial for £371 per annum. Two Poor's Allotments, containing 200A. of fen land, were awarded under the inclosure act of the 33rd of George III. Every poor parishioner is allowed to cut fuel on this land; and the herbage is let for about £23 a year, which, after the payment of drainage rates, is distributed in fuel to poor widows. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel in the village. The National School, now attended by about 75 children, was built in 1841, with a house for the master, at a cost of about £400, on land given by Sir Thomas Hare. The family of Winearls has resided at East Gate for nearly three centuries. Post from Downham.

OUTWELL is a long village, adjoining Upwell, 5 miles S.E. of Wisbech, and $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. by N. of Downham, lying on both sides of the river Nene, near its junction with the Well Creek and Welney, being partly in the Isle of Ely, Cambridgeshire. The parish contains 3018 acres of land and 1265 inhabitants, of which 381 souls and 506 acres are in Wisbech Hundred, Cambridgeshire, and form a separate township. The soil belongs to a number of proprietors, the largest of whom is C. W. Townley, Esq.; and the whole lies in his manor of Beaupré Hall, an ancient mansion, occupied by the Rev. Wm. Gale Townley, M.A., rector of Upwell, and having its name from the Beaupré family (see page 824), of whom there are some handsome monuments in the Church (St. Clement), which stands in Norfolk, on a tongue of land between the river and the Well Creek, and is a large edifice of the perpendicular period, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch with parvise, chancel, and square tower with six bells. It was partially restored and considerably improved in 1863, at a cost of £2200. The roofs are of the hammer-beam kind, and are ornamented with figures of saints and angels. The seats are neat open benches of varnished pine, and the pulpit is of oak, elegantly carved. The lectern is an old brass eagle. At the east end of the south aisle is the Beaupré chapel, and in a similar position in the north aisle is the Fincham chapel. The latter contains a piscina, and the windows of both are enriched with fragments of fine ancient stained glass. On the north side of the north aisle is the Lynn chapel, which has a quaintly carved roof, and is now used as the vestry. Here were formerly two other chapels, but they have long been thrown open to the church. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £16, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich and incumbency of the Rev. Hy. Wright, M.A., who has 13A. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £635, and a good residence. The School, with master's house attached, was built in 1854, and is attended by 90 children. Here are chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Methodist Free Church. The Church Lands consist of 11A. and a cottage, let for £29. 5s. a year, which is applied in the service of the church. The Town Lands, comprising a house and 33A., let for £95. 5s., have been vested in trust since 1628 for the benefit of the parish. The rents are applied as follows:—£50 towards the support of the National School, and the remainder, after payment of the salaries of the clerk, sexton, and organist, and about £10 for church rates, &c., is given to the poor in bread and money. The Town Ten Land, held by the same trustees, comprises 12A. 35P., now let for £36, which is applied with the poor rate. The poor parishioners have a yearly rent-charge of 20s., left by Mr. Lambert out of land in Elm Old Field. Those of the Norfolk side of the parish, have 9A. of land in Elm, left by Wm. Lynne in 1616, and now let for £17. 7s., which is distributed on Christmas eve. In the following directory, those marked 1 are in Cambridgeshire.

ROXHAM parish, 4 miles S. by E. of Downham, has only 58 inhabitants, and 566 acres of land, belonging to the Rev. Jermyn Pratt, and in two farms occupied by Thos. Wm. Atkins, and Matthew Green. The Church went to decay several centuries ago, when its perpetual curacy was consolidated with Ryston. Here are still some traces of a moat, which anciently encompassed a house, called Walpole House. Post from Downham.

RUNCTON (SOUTH) parish, 4 miles N. by E. of Downham, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of Watlington station, has only 139 inhabitants, and 831 acres of land, mostly belonging, with the manor, to Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, by gift of Dr. Caius; but T. S. Cocks and Edmund E. Peel, Esqs., have estates here. The Church (St. Andrew) is a small fabric of Norman architecture, comprising nave, chancel, vestry, and small bell turret at west end. After being long a roofless ruin, it was rebuilt in 1839, at a cost of £600. The rectory valued in K.B. at £12, is consolidated with those of Holme and Wallington. (See page 838). The poor have the site of a tenement, let for 15s., and a yearly rent-charge of £2, left by Thos. Taylor. The chief residents are—The Rev. Edw. Locke, curate; Martin Leverington, shopkeeper; and Fredk. and Wm. Cambridge, Jph. Howell, Hy. Proudfoot, and Thomas Sampson, farmers. Post from Downham.

RYSTON parish, 3 miles S. by E. of Downham, has only 29 inhabitants, and 1199 acres of land, belonging to the Rev. Jermyn Pratt, of Ryston Hall, a neat mansion, in a beautiful park. The Church (St. Michael) is a small edifice, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. The tower was restored in 1858, and the rest of the building in 1863. The nave is furnished with neat open sittings of oak, and the chancel with handsome stalls having poppies. The pulpit is also of carved oak, and the floor is laid with tiles. Here are several mural tablets and stained windows in memory of members of the Pratt family. A marble slab covers the remains of Sir Roger Pratt, who died in 1684, and on an altar-tomb lies the effigy of his lady. The perpetual curacy of Ryston with Roxham, was augmented from 1810 to 1824, with £800 of Q.A.B., and is now valued at £61. The Dean and Chapter of Norwich are patrons, and the Rev. J. C. Morphew, of Crimplasham, incumbent. Post from Downham.

SHINGHAM, 4 miles S.W. of Swaffham, has in its parish only 62 inhabitants, and 935 acres of land, partly in South Greenhoe Hundred, and all in one farm, occupied by Mr. John Newman, and belonging to Messrs. T. and J. Fielden. The Church (St. Bardolph) is a small edifice, and the rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 6s. 8d., is consolidated with Beechamwell All Saints. (See page 826). It was augmented with £200, of Q.A.B., in 1794, and the tithes were commuted in 1839 for £98 per annum. Post from Swaffham.

SHOULDHAM is a pleasant village, with several neat modern houses, on a small green, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. of Downham, and 10 miles W. of Swaffham. Its parish contains 727 inhabitants and 3888 acres, of which, 2674 acres belong to Sir Thos. Hare, Bart., the lord of the manor; and the rest is the property of the Rev. Stephen Allen, D.D., Robt. T. Catton, Esq., and a few small freeholders. In some old writings it is called Market Shouldham, and it has still two fairs for horses, cattle, and sheep, on Sept. 19th and Oct. 11th. Here was anciently a Priory, founded in the reign of Richard I., for monks of the order of St. Gilbert, by Jeffery Fitzpiers, Earl of Essex, and Chief Justice of England, who died in 1212, and endowed it with this manor and twelve houses in London. Robert Swyft, the last prior, subscribed to the King's supremacy in 1526. At the dissolution, the priory and its possessions was granted to Thomas Mildmay. On removing the priory ruins, in 1831, a decayed painted window, two stone coffins, and a vessel containing a human skull, were found; and on clearing the foundations in 1840, a walled passage, 30 yards long, and 2 feet broad, was discovered. To this priory was attached a large Grammar School, of which John Elvedon was master in 1462. It had also a church, dedicated to St. Margaret, which was standing in 1519. The parish Church (All Saints) is at the east end of the village, and is a small thatched edifice, comprising nave, chancel, and tower with four bells. It contains a handsome marble monument, in memory of the late Thos. Allen, Esq., bearing a finely executed figure of Faith. Mr. Allen built Shouldham Hall about 32 years ago. On the wall of the churchyard are several large gravestones, one of which has the insignia of a Knight Templar. The living is a perpetual curacy (not in charge), annexed to Shouldham-Thorpe, in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Maxey Allen, M.A., jun., of Broomhill, and patronage of Sir Thos. Hare, Bart., who is also impropriator of the tithes, out of which he pays the curate's stipend, £120 per annum. Here are chapels belonging to the Wesleyans and Methodist Free Church. There is a school in connection with the former, attended by 40 children. The Church School has about 60 scholars. On Mr. Catton's estate is a fine chalybeate spring called Silver Well, which gives rise to a small rivulet that runs through the village, and is so called from the silvery scum which flows on its surface, or, as tradition says, from a chest of silver coin lost in its unfathomable depth. The fabulous legend relates that some workmen, employed in cleansing the well, discovered this treasure; but just as they had raised it to the surface, their ropes broke, and it sunk to some secret recess, where it has since remained. Near this, a new spring was discovered about ten years ago, and both of them possess similar properties to those of Tunbridge and Toplitz. Over the latter a freestone obelisk was erected in 1839, and the water flows from it through a lion's mouth into a stone basin, about which shrubs are planted, and the whole is enclosed with paling. Near it have been found fragments of Roman urns and a few coins. The Fuel Allotment, 95A., was awarded at the enclosure in 1794, and is let for £57 a year, which is distributed to the poor at Christmas. One rood of old poor's land is let for 12s.

SHOULDHAM-THORPE, anciently called Garbois-Thorpe, is a scattered village, on rising ground, nearly 5 miles N.E. of Downham, having in its parish 298 inhabitants and 1430 acres of land, of which Sir Thos. Hare, Bart., is chief owner and lord of the manor; and the rest belongs to Wm. Bagge, Esq., the Rev. S. Allen, D.D., and a few smaller owners. About a mile N. of the village, is the small manor of Fodderston, or Foston Gap, anciently a separate parish belonging to the abbot of Ely, but now belonging to Sir Thos. Hare, who is also impropriator of the tithes and patron of the living, which is a curacy, consolidated with Shouldham. The Church (Virgin Mary) was mostly rebuilt a few years ago, chiefly at the expense of the patron. The seats are neat open benches of oak and the floor is paved with tiles. The tower fell down in 1724. The Fuel Allotment, 60a., was awarded in 1794, and is let for £16.10s. The rent of 6a. of land is applied towards the repair of the highways. Post from Downham.

SOUTHERY is a considerable village, on the London road, 7 miles S. of Downham, on a gentle eminence surrounded by fens and marshes. Its parish increased its inhabitants from 739 in 1831, to 1164 in 1861, and contains 3695 acres of land, watered by the Great Ouse river, over which there is a Ferry, about a mile S.W. of the church. Near the ferry, a steam engine of 60 horse power was erected in 1842, for improving the drainage of the fens. In November, 1852, the embankment of the river Ouse gave way, and about 7000 acres of land in the district were inundated to a depth of 6 or 7 feet, nearly 300 sheep were drowned, and the claims for losses amounted to £2100. Robert Cunningham Taylor, Esq., is lord of the manor; but the soil belongs to several proprietors. The Church (St. Mary) is a neat structure in the early English style, and was built in 1858 at a cost of £1710, in lieu of the old church, which is still standing at a short distance. The building is of Car stone, with Caen stone dressings and buttresses, and consists of nave, south aisle, chancel, vestry and tower. The latter contains one bell, and is surmounted by a spire covered with slate. The interior is furnished with open sittings of varnished deal, and a pulpit and reading desk of carved oak. The altar cloth is of crimson velvet, beautifully worked by a lady in the neighbourhood, and the floor is of Staffordshire tiles. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7.10s., and now at £800, is in the patronage of the Rev. Edmund Hall, and incumbency of the Rev. Archibald Eneas Julius, M.A., who has a good residence and 110 acres of glebe. The National School, built in 1844, is attended by above 90 children. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have small chapels in the village.

STOKE-FERRY is a large village, near the navigable river Wissey, 7 miles E.S.E. of Downham, $14\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.S.E. of Lynn, 10 miles S.W. by W. of Swaffham, and 88 miles N. by E. of London; at the junction of roads from Thetford, Brandon, &c. It has a large fair for horses, cattle, &c., on Dec. 6th; and much business is done at the wharf, in corn, coal, malt, &c. Its corn market, formerly held on Friday, is obsolete. Its parish, which abounds in lime-stone, contains 791 inhabitants, and 2059 acres of land, mostly belonging to Jas. Bradfield Sanders Bradfield, Esq., the lord of the manor, who has a neat mansion here. The bridge which crosses the river, where there was anciently a ferry, was repaired and widened in 1803. In the 32nd of Henry III., the abbot of Ely had a grant for a market and fair here. The profits of the ferry belonged to the abbot, who broke down the bridge soon after its erection; but the Hundred Court compelled him to rebuild it. The Church (All Saints) is a small edifice in the early English style, and consists of nave, chancel, vestry, west porch, belfry, and one bell. It was thoroughly restored and partly rebuilt in 1847, at a cost of £1200. The tower fell down in 1578. The pulpit, reading desk, lectern, and open benches, are of carved oak, and in a gallery at the west end is a good organ. The west window is filled with stained glass. Here are tablets of the Etheridge and Robinson families. The perpetual curacy, certified at £18, and now worth about £100, was augmented in 1779 and 1801, with £400 of Q.A.B. The Lord Chancellor is patron, and the Rev. John McGill, incumbent. The great tithes have been commuted for £247 per annum, and belong to the Representatives of the late G. R. Eyres, Esq. The small tithes, £227. 10s. a year, are the property of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests. Here are two chapels belonging to the Wesleyans and Methodist Free Church. The old Poor's Land was exchanged at the enclosure in 1818, for 2R. 26P. held by the overseers, and 22P. used as a chalk pit. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, consists of 25A. 3R. 6P. in the East Fen, on which all the poor cut turf, &c. The Free School was founded, pursuant to the will of James Bradfield, Esq., who, in 1807, left £250 for the erection of the school-house, and charged his estate here with the yearly payment of £25 to the master, for the education of 25 poor children of Stoke-Ferry and Wretton.

STOW-BARDOLPH, a small village on the Lynn road, nearly 2 miles N. by E. of Downham, has in its parish 1090 inhabitants and 6127 acres, more than half of which is fen, but well cultivated, being drained and enclosed under acts passed in 1798 and 1802. About 2 miles W.N.W. of the village, is the hamlet of STOW-BRIDGE, on the river Ouse, where there is a Fair for the sale of horses, cows, &c., on the Saturday after Whitsuntide. Sir Thomas Hare, Bart., owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manors, which were purchased in 1553 by his ancestor, Sir Nicholas Hare, who was lord keeper of the great seal and one of the privy-council of Queen Mary. STOW HALL, a stately mansion, built in 1589 at a cost of £40,000, by Nicholas Hare, Esq., and partly rebuilt and modernised in 1796, is the seat of Sir Thomas, and has a park and pleasure grounds attached. The Church (Holy Trinity) consists of nave, north porch, chancel with north chapel, and low square tower. The latter is Norman, and contains five bells, but the rest of the building is early-English, and was thoroughly restored and partly rebuilt in 1859, at a cost of about £2100. The patron contributed more than £1500, and the remainder was raised by subscription and rate. The seats are neat open benches of oak with poppy heads, and the new oak screen is a beautiful example of the decorated style. The pulpit, altar, and font are of handsomely carved Caen stone. All the windows of the church are filled with stained glass, and the floor is paved with Staffordshire tiles. On the south side of the chancel are three sedilia, a double piscina, a lychnoscope, and a priest's door, all of which have been judiciously restored. The mortuary chapel on the north side of the chancel was built in 1589 by Nicholas Hare, Esq., and reroofed and leaded in 1624 by Sir John Hare. It contains several beautiful monuments of the Hare family, amongst which is an altar tomb of white marble, on which lies the effigy of Sir Thomas Hare. During the restoration, a number of mural paintings were discovered in the nave, some of them possessing considerable merit. They represented St. Christopher, the martyrdom of King Edmund, &c. The ancient Norman stoup, and portions of several stone coffins, were found built in the walls. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 6s. 8d., and now worth £538 per annum, is in the patronage of Sir Thos. Hare, who also owns the great tithes. The Rev. Geo. Hy. Dashwood, M.A., F.S.A., is the vicar, and has a good residence, built in 1778 and enlarged in 1847. The tithes of Stow Bardolph were commuted in 1845 for £352. 4s. 8d. to the impropriator, and £159 to the vicar. Here are six Alms-houses, built by Sir Ralph Hare, Kt., who endowed them in 1622 with 86A. 3R. of land, the rent of which, after payment of incidental expenses, ought to be divided in money, coals, and clothing, among the six almspeople, who are generally poor widows, and are appointed by Sir Thos. Hare, the sole trustee. The rent of the Town Lands, 18a., is carried to the overseers' accounts, but part of it ought to be dispensed in doles to the poor. At Stow Bridge are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Methodist Free Church. Here is a station on the Lynn and Ely Railway.

STRADSETT parish has a few scattered houses, near the Swaffham road, 4 miles E. by N. of Downham, and 10 miles S. by E. of Lynn, and contains 180 inhabitants and 1318 acres of land, belonging to Wm. Bagge, Esq., of Stradsett Hall, a large ancient mansion, in an extensive park, with a lake of 26a. abounding in pike and other fish. He is impropiator of the great tithes, and patron of the discharged vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £3. 6s. 8d., and augmented at some unknown date with £200 of Q.A.B. The Rev. Wm. Fredk. Welch, M.A., is the vicar, and has a good residence and 2a. of glebe. The tithes have been commuted for £220 to the impropiator and £110 to the vicar. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower. The latter contains three bells, and is surmounted by a small spire. The east window is filled with beautiful stained glass, representing the Adoration of the Magi. Here are several tablets of the Bagge family, and a good brass to Thos. Lathe. The School was built in 1857 by the lord of the manor, and is attended by 40 children. The poor have £7 as a fuel rate, levied under the inclosure act of 41st George III. The chief residents are—Wm. Bagge, Esq., Hall; Rev. W. F. Welch, M.A., Vicarage; Thos. Rowe, blacksmith; Hy. Stibbon, victualler, Folgate; and Wm. T. Griffin, Wm. and Edw. Hodgkinson, Robt. Hornigold, Robt. Denn Long, Chas. Pond, John Reynolds, Duncan Stewart, and Hy. Stibbon, farmers. Post from Downham.

TOTTENHILL, a village near the London road, 5 miles S. by E. of Lynn and N. by E. of Downham, has in its parish 342 inhabitants and 1590 acres of land, mostly the property of Mrs. Plestow, the lady of the manor. The Church (St. Botolph) is a small fabric comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. The perpetual curacy, which was augmented with £1000 of Q.A.B., from 1767 to 1842, and is now valued at £62 a year, is in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Hy. Henslowe, M.A., of Wormegay. The Bishop of Norwich is patron and appropriator, and has here 53A. of glebe. The Poor's Land, 16A. 8P., let for £40 was awarded at the enclosure in 1780, in lieu of commonright and other land, which had belonged to the poor. The rent is distributed in coals. The poor have the right of cutting fuel and pasturing geese on about 30A. of common. The chief residents are—George Lockwood, wheelwright and vict., Dray and Horse; Mr. John Gant; Mrs. Charlotte Thompson; James Crow, miller; John Duffield, beerhouse; Thomas Bennett, shopkeeper; Robert Childs and Wm. J. Wicks, shoemakers; Robert Stevens, blacksmith; and William Allflatt, John and Wm. Boon, Thos. Butter, John Curties (Oakwood House), Wm. Grant, Geo. Lockwood, Geo. Mayes, Thos. Panton, Ambrose Thompson, Jno. and Stephen Towler, and Fras. Wicks, farmers. Post from Lynn.

UPWELL, sometimes called Well, is a long and populous village adjoining Outwell, 6 miles S.E. of Wisbech, and 9 miles W. by S. of Downham, in the fens, where the old rivers Nene, Welney, and Well Creek fall into the Wisbech canal. It is the largest parish in the county, having increased its population since 1801 from 3076 to 4783 souls, and comprising no less than 16,454 acres of land; but 1433 of the inhabitants and 7000A. are in the Isle of Ely, Cambridgeshire, where the poor are maintained separately from the Norfolk part of the parish, which lies in C. W. Townley, Esq.'s manor of Beaupré Hall (see p. 824); but James Gay, Esq., and some others have estates here. Both townships are in Wisbech Union. (See page 805.) The houses are many of them neat modern buildings, and extend on both sides of the navigation to Outwell. Welney, which lies to the south, is considered as a parochial chapelry to Upwell. King John granted Upwell a weekly market on Wednesday, to which Henry VI. added a fair to be held on St. Peter and St. Paul's day. The market is obsolete, and the fair held on June 29th and 30th, is merely a pleasure mart. The greater part of the parish is fen, but now well drained and cultivated under an act passed in 1801, and including the hamlets of Lakesend, Tipsend, and Brimstone Hill, from 4 to 5 miles south of the village. The Church (St. Peter) is a large edifice comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, north porch with parvise, and square tower with octagonal belfry and six bells. The interior is neatly pewed, and contains a few ancient brasses, and a modern one recording the names of 67 persons, who died in this parish of cholera in 1832 from June 21st to August 13th. From 1836 to 1838, the church was thoroughly repaired and beautified at a cost of more than £6000. The doors, pulpit, reading-desk, and seats are of oak, exquisitely carved by Ollett, of Norwich. The roofs are fine specimens of open timber work, and are ornamented with large figures of angels. The magnificent east window is filled with beautiful stained glass, representing the Descent from the Cross, Christ bearing the Cross, Our Saviour appearing to Mary Magdalen in the Garden, and many other subjects, executed in the finest style of art by Messrs. Hoadley and Oldfield, of London, at a cost of more than £1500. It was the gift of the late rector, and was inserted after the old one had been blown out by a hurricane in 1842, when the exterior of the church was stuccoed and stone battlements were added. In the same year the churchyard was enlarged and neatly enclosed. The gates, brought from Peterborough Cathedral, and the vases from Wanstead House, were the gift of the late patron. In the chancel are three sedilia and a piscina, and in various parts of the church are monuments of the Townley, Hutcheson, Wooll, Berry, Hopkin, Bell, Lee, and other families. The pulpit is finely carved, and the old brass eagle-lectern still remains. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £16, is in the patronage of C. W. Townley, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Gale Townley, M.A., of Beaupré Hall, who has a yearly rent-charge of £3088. The Rectory House is occupied by the curate. Until the death of the late rector in 1862, the whole parish, with the chapelry of Welney, was consolidated in one living; but it is now divided with three separate ecclesiastical parishes, in accordance with an Act of Parliament passed in 1846; and a new church was built at Brimstone Hill in 1864 for the southern part of the parish. It is called Christ Church, and is a rectory in the patronage of C. W. Townley, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Geo. Metcalfe, M.A., who has a good residence and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £1594. A Chapel of Ease is about to be erected at North Delph, a hamlet about 4 miles south-east, where there is also a district school. The Parish School comprises two school-rooms with house for the master attached, and is attended by 130 boys and 120 girls. Here are nine dissenting chapels, of which five belong to the Primitive Methodists, two to the Wesleyans, and one each to the Baptists and Methodist Free Church. The rents of two tenements and 10A. of land, left by John Fox in 1626, are applied in repairing the church. They are now let for £40 a year. Certain "Bishop's Lands," in the fen, called Welney Runns, were devised in 1765 for three lives, renewable perpetually to the poor of the Cambridge parts of Upwell and Welney, and are now let for £60 a year. The Charities, &c., belonging to the Norfolk part of Upwell, are as follows:—Two houses divided into several tenements and about 30A. of land, let for £100 per annum, were bequeathed to the poor by Thomas Lamb, in 1562, and John Fox, in 1626. The clear rents, together with the interest of £30, left by John Boss and Thomas Dixon, are distributed among the poor at Christmas. An Oddfellows' Lodge meets at the White Lion Inn, and here is also a company of rifle volunteers, comprising about 100 men.

WALLINGTON-CUM-THORPLAND, 3 miles N. by E. of Downham, form one parish, containing only 69 inhabitants, and 1460A. of land, of which 350A. belong to Sir Thomas Hare, Bart., and the remainder to Edmund E. Peel, Esq., the lord of the manor, and owner of Wallington Hall, a large and handsome house in the Elizabethan style, delightfully situated in a well-wooded park, and now occupied by Major Marcon. It is the only house in Wallington, and was anciently the seat of the Coningsbys and the Gawdys. One of the latter was Judge Gawdy, who, in the reign of Elizabeth, converted the Church (St. Margaret) into a hay-house and dog-kennel. The only part of it now remaining is the tower, surmounted by a small spire. The rectory is not in charge, and has long been consolidated with South Runcion and Holme. THORPLAND has three farms and five cottages, and had also a church, which was standing in 1434, but no traces of it now remain. The farmers are—Henry Boyce, Jas. Fulcher, and Geo. Heading. Post from Downham.

WATLINGTON is a neat village, 6 miles S. by W. of Lynn, in the fertile marshes on the east side of the Great Ouse river, about 1 mile east of the bridge at Wiggenhall St. Mary Magdalen, and near the Lynn and Ely Railway, on which it has a station. Its parish contains 588 inhabitants, and 1709 acres of land, mostly the property of Mrs. Plestow, who owns the Hall, a handsome mansion, with a fine park and plantations, now unoccupied. She is lady of the manor of Gawsels, in Watlington, for which courts leet and baron are held yearly. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) is a large structure, comprising nave, aisles, chancel, vestry, south porch, and square tower with three bells. The sedilia and piscina still remain, and here are mural tablets of the Plestow, Pratt, Patrick, and other families, and a small organ. In the south aisle are effigies of Thomas Gawsel and his wife. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £41. 15s. 8d., is in the patronage of Gilbert Barker, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Geo. Llewellyn Barker, M.A., who has 23A. of glebe, a good residence, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £425. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. A yearly rent-charge of £5. 4s., left by John Davis, out of land called Holybreads, is distributed in doles of 4s. worth of bread every alternate Sunday, among six poor people of each of the parishes of Watlington and Tottenhill. At Christmas, £12. 8s. 3d. is distributed among the poor of Watlington, in coals. This sum arises as follows:—£9 from a close of 2A., left by Edward Shouldham, in 1646; 20s. charged on a cottage, by Henry Punting; 10s. charged on land, left by Thomas Watson; and £1. 18s. 3d., from the interest of £42. 10s., given by W. Snelling, H. Punting, and W. Cawood.

WELNEY, 10 miles S.W. of Downham, is a village and extensive parish in the cultivated fens of the Great Bedford level, and like Upwell and Outwell lying on both sides of the Welney or Croft river, partly in Norfolk and partly in Cambridgeshire, and in C. W. Townley, Esq.'s manor of Beaupré Hall, and the Bishop of Ely's manor of the Isle of Ely. It contains 1101 inhabitants, and 5292 acres of land, of which 1900 acres and 477 souls are in Cambridgeshire, and form a separate township. Both townships are in Downham Union. The Norfolk part of the parish belongs to a number of small proprietors. The river which here divides the counties is navigable to the Wisbech canal, and a little above the village is crossed by those broad drains called the Old and New Bedford rivers, which open a direct navigation to the Ouse at Denver sluice. The New Bedford river, about 1 mile E. of Welney, is crossed by a handsome Suspension Bridge, of great height, and 63 yards 2 feet long, built by the late Rev. W. G. Townley, in 1826, from a design by Captain Brown. The Church is a small ancient brick edifice, comprising nave and chancel, with a turret at the east end, containing two bells. The east window is of stained glass. The rectory, formerly consolidated with Upwell, has been a separate living since 1862, and is now in the patronage of C. W. Townley, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Hilton Hutchinson, who has a yearly tithe rent-charge of £1259, and a good residence in the Elizabethan style, built in 1864. Mr. John Goat, now living in this parish, is said to be 108 years old, and still retains all his faculties. In 1661, WM. MARSHALL bequeathed nine pieces of fen land, in a place called the Wield, in trust, to apply the proceeds thereof as follows:—One-third for repairing the church and the bridge leading to it; one-third for relieving poor widows, and apprenticing poor children; and the other third for repairing the highways of Welney. This estate comprises 466A. 36P. of land, let annually in 18 lots to the highest bidder, and usually producing about £770 per annum. The income being more than necessary for the objects named by the donor, a new scheme was approved by the Court of Chancery in 1819, for the future application of the net rents and profits, by which one-third part is applied annually for relieving poor widows, and apprenticing (and clothing, if necessary,) poor children; and two-thirds are applied in repairing the church, bridge, and highways, and in supporting a Free School for the instruction of poor children of both sexes in reading, writing, and arithmetic. The scheme directed that, as soon as possible, a school should be built, and a yearly salary of £60 be paid to the master; but owing to the great expense of repairing the bridges and highways, only about £30 a year are paid for the education of poor children. In 1848 the School was erected, and it is now attended by 100 boys and 80 girls. The drainage tax paid by the estate amounts to about £106 per annum. In 1832 the trustees built a new bridge over Delph-drain, at a cost of £518. The Bishop of Ely, the lord of the manor, and others were appointed trustees, in 1819.

WEREHAM, a village on a gentle acclivity, 2 miles N.W. of Stoke Ferry, and 12 miles S. by E. of Lynn, includes in its parish 597 inhabitants, and 2321a. of land, more than half of which is in grass. Hy. Baxter Branwhite Mason, Esq., is lord of the manor of Wereham, and Sir Henry Bedingfeld, Bart., Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, Rev. H. B. Sparke, and Jas. Thornton, Robert Carter, R. Carter, jun., J. Houchen, C. Boucher, and Hugh Aylmer, Esqrs., have estates here. J. B. S. Bradfield, Esq., is lord of the manor of Cavenham, but Cavenham House, the ancient seat of the Eyres, has been lately purchased by J. Thornton, Esq., and is now occupied by his son. Wiron Hall, the old manor house, stood in a field, now called Stoneoaks close. The present Wereham Hall was built by the late John Houchen, Esq., about 32 years ago, and is a neat mansion with large gardens and pleasure grounds. Winwall Priory, so called from its being dedicated to St. Winwaloe, was founded by the Earls of Clare, in the time of Richard I., or King John, for Benedictine monks, and granted at the dissolution to Thomas Guybon and Wm. Mynn. Some remains of it may still be seen in the walls of a farm-house. WINWALL HOUSE, about a mile north of the village, is an ancient and probably unique building, which has been preserved unaltered for more than seven centuries. The whole edifice is only

35 feet long, 27 broad, and 16 high, yet its outline seems to be entire and original, and everywhere strictly Norman. It is now occupied by a farmer, and is traditionally said to have been the prison of the Honour of Clare, this being the head lordship of that barony; but it was more likely for the use of the seneschal, when he came on the business of courts, &c. Winwall fair, formerly held here on May 3rd, was removed to Downham many years ago. The Church (St. Margaret) comprises nave, south aisle, chancel, and square tower with one bell. It contains a number of mural tablets of the Adamson, Mason, Heaton, Royle, and other families, and a brass to the late J. Houchen, Esq. The perpetual curacy, valued in K.B. at £10. 2s. 6d., and now at £120, with Wretton curacy annexed, was augmented in 1751 and '2 with £400 of Q.A.B., and with a yearly rent-charge of £32, given by Roger Pratt, Esq., to be paid out of the tithes now held by the Rev. Jermyn Pratt, the patron of the living, which is now held by the Rev. Henry Towry White, M.A. The glebe of the two parishes is 50 acres. The tithes of Wereham were commuted about 25 years ago for £550 per annum, except the tithes of about 200 acres, which belong to the owners of the land. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, built in 1844. In the village is a large pool of clear water, supplied by a copious spring. The Fuel Allotment, about 28A., was awarded at the enclosure in 1818, and is now let for £12 a year. The poor parishioners have the dividends of £441 three and a half per cent. Stock, purchased with £500, left by Sarah Adamson, in 1791; the dividends of £464. 4s. 4d. three per cent. Consols, purchased with £300 left by Richd. Adamson, in 1800; the dividends of £100 of the latter Stock, purchased with £90, left by John Whaite, in 1826; and a rent-charge of £5 a year, left by the late H. B. Mason, Esq., for aged widows. The National School is attended by about 50 children.

WIMBOTSHAM, a parish and village, 1 mile N.N.E. of Downham, comprises 508 inhabitants and 2015 acres of land, mostly the property of Sir Thomas Hare, Bart., the lord of the manors of Wimbotsham, Ingoldes, thorpe, Tonwell, and Ramsey. The Church (Virgin Mary) comprises nave, north porch, chancel with apse, vestry, and massive square tower with three bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1855 at a cost of £1620, chiefly contributed by Sir Thomas Hare and the rector. The entire edifice is constructed of rubble, dressed with ashlar; and the walls, which are very massive, are apparently those of the original Norman building. The north and south doorways are fine specimens of Norman architecture, being enriched with chevron, cable, billet, annular, and other mouldings, and having cylindrical shafts with caps and bases. Portions of the Norman corbel-table still remain, and that on the south side of the chancel consists of a series of small arches, encircled with zig-zag, embattled and cable-twist mouldings, springing from corbel-blocks, some of which are rudely carved heads, and others plain shields. At the south east corner of the nave is a beautiful early English piscina, and there is another piscina in the chancel. The seats are open benches of oak with poppies. Some of them are ancient and have figures of men and animals for elbow pieces, and elegantly designed poppy heads. The chancel is furnished with handsomely carved stalls, and has a good wooden roof. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., is consolidated with Stow Bardolph. (See page 845.) The parish was enclosed and drained, under acts passed in 1798 and 1801. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. The poor have a share in the Hundred Acre Common, noticed at page 832. Two cottages, built on the waste many years ago, are occupied by paupers.

WORMEGAY, or Wermigey, is a small scattered village, 6 miles S.S.E. of Lynn, lying on the south side of the navigable river Nar. Its parish extends to Setch bridge, and contains 423 inhabitants and 2788 acres of land, of which Henry James Lee-Warner, Esq., is the principal owner and lord of the manor; but Captain Bulwer is impropiator of the tithes. This lordship was anciently held by the Warenes, Ferrars, and Bardolphs, the latter of whom had a castle here, of which the moat still remains; and the former founded a priory near the village, in the reign of King John, for Austin canons; but a farm-house now occupies the site, which was granted at the dissolution to the Bishop of Norwich, together with the advowson of the perpetual curacy, which was certified at £20, and augmented with £400 of Q.A.B in 1779 and 1800. It is now worth £40 a year, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Hy. Henslowe, M.A. The Church (St. Michael) is a small edifice, comprising nave, chancel, and square tower with one bell. It was repaired and reseatd in 1848. The National School, built in 1839, is attended by 80 children. Here is a Primitive Methodist chapel. The Fuel Allotments, awarded at the enclosure in 1811, comprise 21A. 3R. 23P., let for £40 a year, which is distributed in coals at Christmas. The poor have £2 a year as interest of money left by R. Maltby, G. Brown, and other donors. The chief residents are—The Rev. W. H. Henslowe, M.A.; Hogg and Seppings, brewers and maltsters, Setch Bridge; Fredk. Church, brewer, and Peter Clamp, cashier, at Brewery; James Seppings, Esq., The Grange; Isaac and Mary Brown, National School; Edw. Craven and Wm. Nurse, shoemakers; Thos. Mann, George Penton, and James Smith, shopkeepers; Chas. King, tea dealer; Chas. Fish, vict. Red Lion; Wm. Holland Youngs, carpenter and vict. Crown; and Thomas Curties, Wm. Gore, Wm. Gibson Hoff, William Matthews, Mary Nurse, John Rodwell, and John Youngs, farmers. Post from Lynn.

WRETTON, a parish and scattered village, 1 mile W. of Stoke Ferry, and 6 miles E. by S. of Downham, has 490 inhabitants and 1154 acres of land, mostly the property of J. B. S. Bradfield, H. R. Micklefield, and Thos. Howard, Esqs., the former of whom is lord of the manor of Wretton; but part of the parish is in Ravenham and Stoke-Wereham manors. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, south aisle and porch, chancel, and square tower with two bells. It was restored and reroofed in 1863, and contains a good oak screen. The perpetual curacy, certified at £10. 2s. 6d., and augmented with £400 of Q.A.B. in 1751 and '2, is consolidated with Wereham. (See p. 852.) Here is a small Primitive Methodist Chapel. The Poor's Land, 5A. 1R. 23P. of land, left by Jane Forby in 1711, is let for £13. 10s. The poor have also 9s. 6d. a year in two rent charges, left by unknown donors. The Fuel Allotment, 25A., awarded at the enclosure of the Common Fen, is used by the poor for cutting turf, &c. An acre of "Parish Land" was exchanged at the enclosure for a house and out buildings, now occupied by paupers. Post from Brandon.

GRIMSHOE HUNDRED

Is about 14 miles in length, and varies from 6 to 8 in breadth, bounded on the south by the Little Ouse river, which divides it from Suffolk, on the east by Shropham and Wayland, on the north by South Greenhoe, and on the west by Clackclose Hundred. It is intersected and partly bounded on the north by the river Wissey, which, like the Ouse, is navigable for small craft. Its soil is chiefly sand, upon a substratum of chalk and flint, and much of it is still in open sheep walks and heaths, abounding in rabbits; except the western end, which forms part of the marshes and fens of the great Bedford Level. (See page 824.) The rabbits from the various warrens here are among epicures distinguished for their delicious flavour, and still known by the name of Methwold or "Muel rabbits," though the large heath in that extensive parish was enclosed and cultivated in the early part of the present century. Gun Flints and whiting are manufactured at Brandon, a market town on the Suffolk side of the Little Ouse, and at the south-eastern extremity of Grimshoe is the Borough of Thetford. A branch of the Great Eastern Railway skirts the southern part of the Hundred, and has stations at Thetford and Brandon. The whole Hundred is comprised (together with South Greenhoe), in the Deanery of Cranwich, and archdeaconry of Norfolk; and its Petty Sessions are held on the first Wednesday of every month, at the Crown Inn, Mundford. Robert Sewell, Esq., of Swaffham, is clerk to the Magistrates. From its number of tumuli, it is supposed to have been a great seat of war between the Saxons and Danes. On the west side of Weeting is a bank and ditch extending several miles, called the Fendyke, or Foss; and about two miles east of that village, on a rising ground, is a large Encampment of a semicircular form, comprising about 12 acres, and having numerous deep pits dug in the quincunx form, and capable of concealing a large army from the view of persons passing along the neighbouring roads (see p. 39.) It has near it a long tumulus, and is commonly called Grime's Graves, from some Danish or Saxon general, who possessed and gave name to this Hundred, which contains 16 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent:—

* Northwold includes Whittington hamlet, which has about 180 inhabitants.

UNIONS.—Buckenham-Tofts, Colveston, Ickburgh, and Stanford are in Swaffham Union, and the other 12 parishes in this Hundred are in Thetford Union.

BUCKENHAM-TOFTS, or Buckenham Parva, is a parish on the river Wissey, 8 miles N. by W. of Thetford, containing only 60 inhabitants, 931 acres, a few cottages, and the HALL, a large handsome mansion in an extensive and well-wooded park, belonging with the manor to the Right Hon. Fras. Baring, 3rd LORD ASHBURTON, who resides here occasionally, with his son, the Hon. Alex. Baring, M.P. for Thetford. Buckenham-Tofts Hall was founded in the reign of Charles II., by a Mr. Vincent. The Church (St. Andrew) was desecrated many years ago, and the rectory, valued in K.B. at £3, is a small sinecure. The ruins were cleared away above 40 years since, and the churchyard now forms part of the pleasure grounds near the hall. Post from Brandon via Mundford.

COLVESTON, a small parish, 2 miles N. of Mundford, and 8½ miles S. by W. of Swaffham, has only 59 inhabitants, and 861 acres of land, all the property and manor of W. A. T. Amhurst, Esq., of Didlington, but formerly belonging to Lord Berners, one of whose family built Colveston Hall, which is now occupied by labourers. The Church (Virgin Mary) was dilapidated at an early period, and not a vestige of it now remains. The rectory is consolidated with Didlington. Post from Brandon.

CRANWICH, on the south side of the river Wissey, 1½ mile W.N.W. of Mundford, and 6 miles N. of Brandon, is a parish with 88 inhabitants, and 1824 acres of land, mostly belonging to Mrs. Lyne Stephens, the lady of the manor, and partly to W. A. T. Amhurst, Esq. It gives name to a deanery. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a small edifice, with a nave and chancel, and a round tower of great antiquity, supposed to have been built by the Danish King, Harold. It was thoroughly restored, re-roofed, and re-pewed in 1861, and still retains its piscina. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 9s. 7d., is in the gift of W. A. T. Amhurst, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Fredk. Askew Bickmore, M.A., who has 18a. of glebe, a good residence, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £180. The poor have the interest of £20, left by the Rev. N. Poyntz, and another donor. The chief residents are—The Rector; Mrs. Sarah Quibell, vict., Leather Bottle; Jas.

CROXTON, 2 miles N. of Thetford, is a village on the acclivity of a steep hill, crowned with trees, which may be seen at the distance of many miles in this open champaign country. Its parish contains 428 inhabitants, and 4609 acres of light sandy land. Lord Ashburton owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manor of Sibton; but a portion of the parish is in Broomhill manor, belonging to Christ's College, Cambridge, together with the advowson of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and augmented in 1809 and '19, with £400 of Q.A.B., and is now worth about £100 per annum. The Rev. Hy. Williams, M.A., is the present vicar, and has a good residence built in 1843, at a cost of £700, and enlarged in 1862. The tithes have been commuted—the rectorial for £400, and the vicarial for £73 a year. The Church (All Saints) was built about the year 1280, and enlarged and altered in the middle of the 14th and 15th centuries. It was thoroughly restored in 1856, at a cost of £800. The tower, built of flint, is round at the base, and octagonal above, and is surmounted by a conical roof. The National School is attended by about 50 children. Here is a small Wesleyan Chapel. The Fuel Allotment, 20a., was awarded at the enclosure in 1815, and is let for £5. About 1200 acres in this parish belong to Thetford Grammar School, and W. Davey, Esq., has also a small estate here. The chief residents are—The Vicar; Geo. Lambert, vict., Bell; Wm. Taylor, smith and wheelwright; Ambrose Esling, parish clerk; Hy. Howlett, beerhouse; John Brighton, shoemaker; Eliz. Ann Harper, schoolmistress; Edw. Noah Cole, supt. regr., clerk to Thetford Union, regr. of marriages, and farmer, Hall; and Samuel Roper (Corporation farm), Edw. Brasnett (Blakney), Hy. Giles (Park), and Benj. White, farmers. POST OFFICE at J. Brighton's. Letters desp., via Thetford, at 8.40 p.m.

FELTWELL is a large village, with several neat houses, 6 miles W. N.W. of Brandon, and 6 miles S. of Stoke-Ferry, comprising in its extensive parish 1623 inhabitants, and 14,060 acres of land, including about 1200a. of open common, on which all the tenants have a right of pasturage and fuel. About half the parish is low fen land, for improving the drainage of which a twenty-horse power steam engine was erected in 1835. The parish includes the extra parochial places called Feltwell Anchor, where there are 62 inhabitants, and Wood's and Jacob's Farms in Feltwell Fen. A small fair is held at Feltwell, on Nov. 20th and 21st. The parish is in several MANORS, and belongs to a large number of small freeholders, and some copyholders. Edw. Clough Newcome, Esq., who has a neat mansion here, is lord of the capital or chief manor, anciently held by the Bishop of Ely. The Rev. Wm. Cyril Newcome, is lord of South Hall manor; Wm. Jecks, Esq., is lord of Wendlings, Spennilles, and Duntons manors; and the Master and Fellows of Christ's College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor of East Hall or Broomhill. Here are two parish Churches, both of which were thoroughly repaired about 30 years ago. St. Mary's, the larger, is a handsome edifice, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, and a massive square tower with three bells and a clock. The north aisle was rebuilt in 1862, and furnished with new open benches. It has a fine roof, and the corbels and capitals of the pillars are beautifully carved. Many of the windows are filled with rich stained glass, representing a number of scriptural scenes, chiefly from the New Testament. The piscina, the sedilia, and the stairs which led to the rood-loft still remain. The nave contains old open benches with carved poppies, and its roof is ornamented with figures of angels. The screen is modern, and has upon it seven figures playing musical instruments. Here are kneeling effigies of Francis and Osbert Mundeford, and a fine brass representing Margaret Mundeford, all of the 16th century. There is also a brass to the Rev. Wm. Newcome, who died about 15 years ago. St Nicholas' Church is a small pile, on an eminence at the west end of the village, with a tower, round at the base and octagonal above, and containing five bells. It was nearly destroyed by fire in 1494, when "an indulgence" was granted for its reparation. Its chancel was taken down in 1862, when the rest of the building was repaired; but it is now only used as a mortuary chapel. The two rectories are consolidated and are in the alternate patronage of the Lord Chancellor and the Bishop of Norwich. St. Mary's is valued in K.B. at £14. 17s. 3½d., and St. Nicholas's at £19. The Rev. Edw. Bowyer Sparke, M.A., is the rector, and has a good residence, 177A. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £1296 per annum. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. Sir Edmund Mundeford, in 1643, bequeathed about 840A. of low fen land in Feltwell parish, to certain trustees to improve by drainage, &c., and to apply the clear profits, one-third for a distribution of clothing among the poor, and two-thirds for the support of a Free School; but as soon as the clear rents had been augmented to more than £60 a year, he directed all the surplusage above that amount to be applied in founding an Almshouse for the aged poor of the parish. Part of the bequeathed land was taken by the Commissioners for the drainage of the Bedford Level. The charity estate now consists of two houses, outbuildings, a draining-mill, and 623A. 1R. 18P. of poor fen land, now let at rents amounting to £300 per annum, out of which about £90 have to be paid yearly for drainage taxes, which, for many years, exceeded the rents, but have been reduced. Though the trustees were obliged to discontinue the distributions of clothing, and afterwards the schoolmaster's salary, they improperly expended, in 1829, nearly £500 in the erection of an Almshouse, divided into eight tenements. According to the donor's will, the clear yearly sums of £40 for the school and £20 for distributions of clothing, ought to have been realised before the erection of the almshouse, to which eight poor parishioners are admitted by the trustees, who in 1839 erected a large School, which is conducted on the national system, and attended by about 75 boys, who are all free. A girls' school was also built about 10 years ago, and has about 75 pupils, who pay small sums ranging from 1d. a week to 7s. 6d. a quarter. Good houses for the master and mistress are attached, and an Infant School is about to be added. The Fuel Allotment consists of 360A. of the West Fen, awarded at the enclosure in 1815, for the use of the poor, and now let for £114 a year, out of which about £85 are paid for drainage taxes. Six poor labourers occupy, rent free, 4A. 2R. 19P. of land, received at the enclosure, in exchange for 6A. given by Robt. Clough, in 1737, to be so occupied, for the purpose of enabling six poor parishioners to send their children to school. The occupants are to be appointed by the owners of the donor's capital messuage, now belonging to E. Clough Newcome, Esq. As noticed with Foulden, the poor of Feltwell have about £20 every fifth year from Atmere's Charity, for distribution in kersey and flannel. In 1729, the Rev. Thos. Rawlins left for the poor of Feltwell £50, which were laid out in the purchase of 9A. of land at Hockwold, now let for £9 a year, out of which £5 are paid for taxes. About 17 years ago, Miss Pleasance Clough, left about £664. 13s. 4d. to the poor of this parish, and the interest amounting to about £20 a year, is distributed on New Year's Day.

HOCKWOLD-WITH-WILTON are adjoining villages, on the north side of the vale of the Little Ouse river, from 4 to 5 miles W. of Brandon, and 8 miles S. by W. of Stoke-Ferry. They form one parish, containing 803 inhabitants, and 7478 acres of land, over which a new road was made, with a suspension bridge across the river to Suffolk, in 1829. Wilton fair, for toys, pedlery, &c., is held on July 25th. The principal owners and lords of the manors are Mrs. Newcome, owner of Hockwold manor; Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, of Charles manor; and Messrs. Gover and Co., of Wayland manor. Hockwold Church (St. Peter) is a small edifice, comprising nave, south aisle, chancel, and square tower with three bells. There are sedilia and a piscina in the chancel, and in the south aisle is another piscina. The building was restored in 1857, and is furnished with open benches. Wilton Church (St. James) comprises lofty nave and chancel, with a square tower containing six bells, surmounted by an octagonal spire of freestone. The screen is of carved oak, and two piscinæ and the entrance to the rood loft still remain. The benches have good poppies. This church was restored about 10 years ago. Hockwold rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 13s. 11d., and Wilton vicarage at £6. 7s. 6d., are consolidated, and are in the gift of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Wayman Hutt, M.A., who has a good residence, rebuilt in 1862. Here are about 90A. of glebe, and the tithes were commuted in 1839 for £760 a year. The two churches are nearly a mile apart, and service is performed in each of them, once every Sunday. The National School, built in 1840, is attended by about 56 children. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. Within the bounds of the parish is an extra-parochial farm, called Redmere, on which are two houses. On 30A.

of fen land, the poor cut turf without any restraint. They have also about £10 from 5A. of land left by Robert Clough, in 1733; £10 from 9A. of fen purchased with the poor's money, in 1769; and £10 as interest of £200, left by the Rev. Wm. Adamson, in 1776. These doles are distributed about Christmas. A rent-charge of 24s., left by Thos. Blackerley, in 1839, appears to be lost. About a dozen years ago, a beautiful gold cross of Byzantine workmanship, containing in its centre a coin of Heraclius I., and his son Heraclius Constantinus, was found in a gravel pit at Wilton. Three limbs of the cross, and the parts surrounding the central coin are filled up with pieces of brilliant red glass, elegantly disposed in a mosaic pattern, and the upper limb forms a ring or loop by which the jewel was suspended.

ICKBURGH or IGBURGH is a small village, 6 miles N.N.E. of Brandon, and 9 miles S. of Swaffham, including in its parish 192 inhabitants, and 1599 acres of land, in two farms, belonging to Lord Ashburton and W. A. T. Amhurst, Esq., the former of whom is lord of the manor. The Church (St. Peter) comprises nave, chancel, and square tower with one bell, and will shortly be restored or rebuilt. Some of the windows contain fragments of ancient stained glass, with figures of the Virgin Mary and St. Catherine. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 10½d., is united with Langford. The tithes were commuted in 1839, for £248 per annum. The curate occupies the Rectory House, which was built in 1862 by Lord Ashburton, who has rebuilt most of the cottages in the village, and in 1850, erected a neat School, with teacher's residence attached. There are now about 40 pupils. Ickburgh is by some antiquaries supposed to be the Iciani of Antoninus; but others have placed that Roman station at Oxburgh, and some at Colchester. Several Roman antiquities were dug up in this vicinity many years ago, and among them were two urns, a mile stone, and a pavement of flint stones. A House of Lepers, founded by Wm. Barentun, in the reign of Edward I., stood at the south end of the village, where its chapel was converted into cottages many years ago. The poor have 27½A. of land, left by Sarah and Mary Dingles. The chief residents are—The Rev. James Henchman Clubb, M.A., curate, Rectory; Esther Dennant, schoolmistress; John Parker, blacksmith; and John Rollinson and James Plume Rollinson, farmers. Post from Brandon.

LYNFORD parish has only 95 inhabitants, and 1500 acres of land, from 7 to 8 miles N.N.W. of Thetford. The Hall, a handsome and spacious brick mansion, in the Elizabethan style, built by the late S. L. Stephens, Esq., in 1858-9, is the seat and property of his widow, who is lady of the manor, and sole owner of the parish, which is farmed by F. C. Roper, Esq., of Boyton Hall, Suffolk. The Church was demolished several centuries ago, and its site is now enclosed and planted with Scotch firs, in the south-west part of the courtyard leading to the hall. The benefice was annihilated with the church. Post from Lynford, via Mundford.

METHWOLD, vulgarly called Muel, is a large village, 6 miles N.N.W. of Brandon, and 4 miles S.S.E. of Stoke-Ferry. It has in its parish 1509 inhabitants, and 13,192 acres of land, a great part of which is fen and sandy heath, all enclosed, the latter under an act passed in 1807, previous to which here was an extensive warren, famous from an early period for the abundance and excellence of its rabbits, called by the poulterers, Muel rabbits, under which name those from the surrounding warrens are still sold. The Queen, as Duchess of Lancaster, is lady of the manor of Methwold, and owner of 5432 acres of the soil, but the manorial rights are leased to W. B. Greenfield, Esq. The other principal landowners are Sidney-Sussex, and Christ's Colleges, Cambridge; E. C. Newcome, Esq., and Messrs. M. Wilson, J. and W. Constable, W. and R. Cock, and John Griffin. Being ancient demense, the inhabitants of Methwold are exempt from serving on juries out of the manor, and from tolls at markets and fairs. A small fair for horses, cattle &c., is held here on April 23rd; and there is a small stock market at the Bell Inn, every Monday. The Church (St. George) is a large and handsome edifice, comprising nave, with aisles and clerestory, chancel, and lofty square tower. The latter contains six bells and a clock, and is surmounted by an octagonal belfry, and crocketed spire. The roof is of open timber, with full length figures of angels on the hammer beams, and is supported on carved stone corbels. The steps leading to the rood loft remain, and the chancel contains a piscina, and five mural tablets of the Partridge family. In the north aisle is a projecting piscina. Over the chancel arch is a turret, which formerly contained the sanctus bell. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £9. 1s. 3d., is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Jas. Allan Park, B.A., who has a spacious residence, built in 1853. The tithes were commuted in 1840 for £1474. 15s. 2d. per annum, of which the vicar has £340, and a great part of the remainder was sold to the landowners about 7 years ago. There are two chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, and one to the Primitive Methodists. The Free School is entirely supported by the Duchy of Lancaster, and was rebuilt in 1858. It is attended by 100 children. A reading room was established here in 1859, and is well supplied with newspapers. The poor parishioners have 2A. of pasture land, in Foulden, let for £8. 15s., and purchased with 100 marks, left by Dr. Thomas Batchcroft in 1660. They have also the following yearly doles, viz:—£54. 13s., as the rent of 26A. 22P. of arable land, received at the enclosure in exchange for the old poor's land; 30s., left by Jeffery Towler, out of land now belonging to Sidney College; 17s. 6d., as the interest of £22, left by the Revs. J. Partridge and N. Poyntz; and £10 as the interest of £333. 6s. 8d., left by Miss Rebecca Clough, in 1846. An acre of land belonging to the Church, is let for £5. 5s.

MUNDFORD is a large village on the London road, near the river Wissey, 5 miles N. by E. of Brandon, 8 miles N.W. of Thetford, and 10 miles S. by W. of Swaffham. It has in its parish 376 inhabitants, and 2050A. of land, mostly belonging to Mrs. S. L. Stephens, who is lady of the manor of East and West Hall, the latter of which is said to be held by the service of a rose and "spar-hawk." The Church (St. Leonard) comprises nave and chancel with a square tower, containing five bells, and surmounted by a small spire. It was restored and the tower rebuilt in 1850. The holy-water stoup still remains. In 1862 the east window was filled with beautiful stained glass, representing the Crucifixion, the Last Supper, the Martyrdom of St. Stephen, &c., in memory of the late S. L. Stephens, Esq. The church contains an organ, and is fitted with open seats having carved poppies. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 17s. 6d., is in the patronage of Tidd Pratt, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. John Raven, B.A., who has a good residence and a yearly rent-charge of £138, awarded in 1844 in lieu of tithes. Petty Sessions are held at the Crown Inn on the first Wednesday of every month. The School was built in 1864 by Mrs. Stephens, and has a teacher's residence attached.

NORTHWOLD is a long village, with a few neat houses and the shaft of an ancient cross, on the Thetford turnpike, near the river Wissey, 3 miles S.E. by E. of Stoke Ferry, and 7 miles N. by W. of Brandon. Its parish has 1370 inhabitants, and 5234 acres of land, lying in the manors of Northwold, Hovells, and Dagneys, of which Hy. Thomas Partridge, Esq., is lord, and belonging to Miss Thackeray, Chas. Carter, Esq., Messrs. John Cock, Thos. Pooley, A. Prior, J. Bradford, and some smaller owners. A fair for toys, pedlery, &c., is held Nov. 30th and Dec. 1st at Northwold; and about 2 miles to the N.W., near Stoke Ferry, is the hamlet of WHITTINGTON, in this parish, where Messrs. Whitbread and Co., the great London brewers, have an extensive malthouse, with 5 cisterns capable of steeping 1700 bushels of barley at one time. The Church (St. Andrew) is a large and handsome fabric, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, and lofty tower. The latter was built in 1473, and contains six bells and a clock. The roof of the nave is of carved oak, richly painted and gilt. The church exhibits every style of architecture from early English to late perpendicular, but its most remarkable feature is the curious and once splendid Easter sepulchre, which stands against the north wall of the chancel, and is the largest relic of the kind extant in the kingdom. This structure is composed of clunch or chalk-stone, and is 9 feet long and 12 feet high, but was formerly much loftier. It was probably erected about the latter end of the 15th century, and is partly hollowed in the wall, and partly projects from it. The lower part bears mutilated figures of four Roman soldiers, apparently just startled from sleep, and doubtless intended to represent the guards who were placed to watch our Saviour's tomb. Above are a number of ornamental niches, and three richly-groined canopies. The church contains tablets of the Court, Holden, Waddington, and Carter families; and was repaved and furnished with new open seats in 1852. The reredos was given by the late J. Carter, Esq., and is handsomely carved. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £29. 14s. 9½d., is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. Chas. Manners Richard Norman, M.A., who has a handsome residence, a yearly rent-charge of £896 awarded in lieu of tithes in 1837, and 66a. of glebe. At Whittington is a small Chapel of Ease, built in 1843 by Wesleyans, but purchased in 1858 by the rector, and converted to its present purpose. It is also used as a school. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have chapels here. The Free School, built in 1825, is attended by 80 children, and supported partly by Mrs. Norman, and partly from Holder's charity. Here is also an Infant School, supported by the rector. The Church Lands, consisting of 108a. 39f., let for £160 a year, were bequeathed in 1479 and 1501 by the Rev. Richard Powley and John Peyrs, for the reparation of the church and highways, the payment of tenths, fifteenths, and other burthens, and for "other good deeds of charity that should be thought most necessary." The rents are applied in defraying all the expenses of the church, and if there is any surplus, it is generally applied in putting out apprentices. The Causeway Land, about 5a., left by Richard Constable, towards repairing the causeway extending to Stoke Ferry and Whittington, is now held by the trustees of the turnpike, made under an Act passed in 1770. An Allotment of 118a., awarded at the enclosure in 1796, is appropriated to the occupiers of the ancient cottages as garden ground. Three Almshouses, with a small garden, were built by the parish in 1742, and are occupied by four poor families rent free. The poor of Northwold have about £20 every fifth year from Atmere's Charity. (See Foulden.) They have also the following yearly doles, viz.:—40s., paid by the rector, as charged on part of the glebe called Hill-pits; £5. 10s., as the rent of 3A., called Novels, given by Henry Partridge, in 1706; and 50s., as the interest of £50, left by the Rev. Richd. Oram, in 1774. Bridget Holder, in 1736, left 5A. of land at Wretton, and directed the rent to be applied in teaching poor children to read, and in supplying them with Bibles and prayer-books. It is let for £12 a year, which is paid to a schoolmaster for twelve free scholars, and he has also the use of a cottage, left by the Rev. H. Waddington, D.D., in 1814. For teaching ten or twelve poor girls, a schoolmistress has the dividends of £200 three per cent. consols, left by John Carter, in 1772. In the following Directory, those marked 1 are at WHITTINGTON.

SANTON parish, on the north side of the Little Ouse river, 4 miles N.W. of Thetford and E. of Brandon, has only 55 inhabitants, and 1500 acres of light sandy land, all the property of the Duke of Cleveland. The Church (St. Helen) is a very small edifice, rebuilt out of the ruins of the old one by Thomas Bancroft, in 1628, and comprising nave, chancel, and octagonal tower. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £1. 15s. 10d., and now at £80, is in the patronage of the Duke of Cleveland, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Weller-Poley, of Brandon. Mr. Wm. Mitchell is the only resident farmer, Mr. Frederick Phillipo is land agent to the Duke of Cleveland, and Isaac Dew is parish clerk. Post from Brandon.

STANFORD, a small village on the south side of the Wissey, 6 miles S.W. of Watton, has in its parish 200 inhabitants and 2608 acres of light sandy land. Lord Walsingham is lord of the manor and chief land owner, and has greatly improved the estate by rebuilding most of the old cottages. Lord Ashburton owns a portion of the parish. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, aisles, porch, chancel, and tower. The latter is round at the base and octagonal above. The churchyard was enclosed in 1849, and the church has since been restored and partly rebuilt at a cost of nearly £900, raised by subscription. The fine oak roof was given by Lord Walsingham. The Bishop of Norwich is appropriator of the great tithes and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £5. 13s. 1d., and is now worth £75, being endowed with £20 out of the tithes, and having been augmented in 1775 and 1804 with £400 of Q.A.B., invested in 16A. of land. The Rev. George Frederick Winstanley Wallis, B.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence built by Lord Walsingham in 1844 at a cost of £600. Near the church is a fine artificial lake covering 40A., where there is a fish-house for propagating trout. The chief residents are—Charles Coates, shopkeeper; James Quantrill, vict. Cock; and Samuel Lindsey (Home farm), William Houchen (Mouse hall), John Matthews, and John Warman, farmers. Post from Brandon.

STURSTON parish, on the river Wissey, 5½ miles S.W. by S. of Watton, has only 75 inhabitants and 2000 acres of sandy land, in two farms, belonging to Lord Walsingham. About 800A. form a prolific rabbit warren and sheep walk. The Church (Holy Cross) has long been in ruins. The sinecure curacy, valued at £28, is in the gift of Lord Walsingham and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Pearse, M.A., of Hanwell. The farmers are—John Bunting, Waterloo farm; and John Pitts, Manor farm. Post from Thetford.

TOFTS (WEST) is a parish 6 miles N.N.W. of Thetford, comprising a small hamlet of cottages, a farm-house, the old hall, 193 inhabitants, and 3051 acres of land, including 500 acres of wood ornamenting the extensive park of West Tofts Hall, which is now added to that of Lynford Hall, the seat of Mrs. Stephens, who is lady of this manor; but Sir John Sutton, Bart., and Lord Ashburton have estates in this parish. The Church (St. Mary) is a fine ancient edifice comprising nave, north aisle, chancel, south porch, and square tower. The latter contains eight bells, a clock, and chimes, and is surmounted by a small spire. There are also two bells in a small turret over the chancel arch. The building was thoroughly repaired and partly rebuilt, and the windows were all filled with beautiful stained glass about 35 years ago by the late Sir Richard Sutton, Bart. The interior is fitted with handsome open benches of oak, and contains two piscinæ, a good chancel screen, several monuments of the Sutton and Partridge families. The roof of the chancel is richly painted and gilt and bears pictures of the 12 apostles. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8, is held by the Rev. Augustus Sutton, M.A., who resides at the old Hall. The glebe is 4 acres, and the tithes have been commuted for £200 per annum. Here is a school, built in 1851, and supported by the rector. Mr. Jas. Hy. Roper farms most of the parish. The other residents are—The Rector, David Dunn, gardener; William Goat, schoolmaster; James Scott, organ builder; and William Turner, parish clerk. Post from Brandon.

WEETING-WITH-BROOMHILL form one parish near the little Ouse river, from 1 to 2 miles N. of Brandon station, and 9 miles S.E. by S. of Stoke Ferry. They contain 357 inhabitants and 6187 acres of land, including 1500A. of woods and plantations, and are the property of Lieut.-Gen. John Julius William Angerstein, of Weeting Hall, a large and handsome mansion, in a well-wooded park, founded by the late Earl of Monrath, from whom it passed to Lord Bradford, who sold it and the estate to the late John Julius Angerstein, Esq., who was born at St. Petersburg in 1735, came to England in 1749, under the patronage of A. Thompson, Esq., an eminent Russian merchant, and became a celebrated and wealthy stock broker and underwriter at Lloyd's. He planted here upwards of 1000 acres, was a distinguished patron and connoisseur of ancient and modern art, and the first proposer of State Lotteries in England. He resided chiefly in Pall Mall, and at the Woodlands, on Black Heath. At his death in 1823, his valuable collection of paintings was purchased for the National Gallery at a cost of nearly £60,000. That eminent poet, Thomas Shadwell, who died in 1691, is said to have been born at WEETING, which is a small village of scattered houses, and formerly had two Churches standing at a little distance from each other, but St. Mary's became a ruin by the fall of the tower more than a century ago. Its burial ground is, however, still used. All Saints is a small church comprising nave, north aisle, chancel, and wooden turret with two bells. It is in the perpendicular style, but one of the chancel windows is decorated. The rectories of Weeting All Saints and St. Mary (the former valued in K.B. at £10. 8s. 1½d., and the latter at £8. 1s. 8d.) are consolidated in the patronage of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Stephen Hanson, M.A., who has 127A. of glebe and a good residence. The tithes were commuted in 1845 for £503. The School is supported by Lieut.-Gen. Angerstein, and attended by about 30 children. BROOMHILL, or Bromehill, is a manor and farm 1 mile S. of Weeting, on the north bank of the navigable Little Ouse, near Brandon Bridge. It has a cattle fair on July 7th, and had a Priory of Augustine monks, founded by Sir Hugh de Plaiz, about the reign of King John, but suppressed in 1528 by Pope Clement VII., and afterwards granted to Cardinal Wolsey. Fen-dike, Grimes-Graves, and other earthworks in or near this parish, are noticed at page 854. Weeting sends four poor boys to the Free School at Brandon. The interest of £45, left to the poor of Weeting by several donors, is now entirely lost, but they have about £27 every fifth year from Atmere's Charity, as noticed with Foulden. BOROUGH OF THETFORD.

THETFORD, an ancient Borough and Market Town, was once a large and important City, being the capital of the kingdom of East Anglia, in the Saxon era; and the See of the Bishopric of Norfolk, from the year 1070 to 1094. (See page 42.) It also shared with Norwich as the capital of Norfolk, till 1833, when the Lent Assizes, which had previously been held here, were removed to Norwich. It is a widely spread town, mostly on the north and partly on the south side of the Little Ouse river, which divides the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk and receives here the small river Thet, from which the town has its name. It forms a Deanery in the Archdeaconry of Norwich. It is encompassed on the south and west by extensive sandy heaths, abounding in rabbits, and is distant 12 miles N. of Bury St. Edmund's, 6 miles E.S.E. of Brandon, 28 miles S.S.E. of Lynn, 28 miles S.W. by W. of Norwich, 19 miles N.E. of Newmarket, and 80 miles N.N.E. of London. It has a station on that branch of the Great Eastern Railway which extends from Norwich to London, and was opened in 1845. The town has been much improved during the last 30 years, especially the Market place, where the Shambles, which stood on the site of the Red Lion Inn, were taken down in 1837 and rebuilt with a handsome front, on their present site, adjoining the Guildhall. The market, held every Saturday, is well supplied with provisions, &c., and here are four annual fairs, on May 14th and Aug. 2nd and 3rd for pleasure, 1st Friday in July for wool, and Aug. 16th for sheep. The town has several good inns, many well-stocked shops, an old established brewery, several malt-kilns and corn mills, a tannery, a foundry, and an extensive paper mill, the latter employing about 50 hands in the manufacture of the finer sorts of paper. Mr. Chas. Burrell employs about 170 hands in the manufacture of agricultural machines, and is especially noted for his traction engines. The principal commercial transactions of Thetford are in the importation of coal, timber, &c., and the exportation of corn, wool, and other agricultural produce, for which the Little Ouse opens a water communication by barges to Lynn, Wisbech, &c., and the Railway, a land conveyance to London and other places. The Gas Works were established in 1845, by a company with a capital of £2300, raised in £10 shares. Mr. Thos. Richardson is the secretary. Thetford retains many relics of its former architectural greatness, and when viewed from the top of the lofty castle hill, the town has a highly picturesque appearance, many of the houses having large and tastefully laid out gardens and shady enclosures, descending to the winding banks of the river, which are margined by a rich display of elm, ash, poplar, walnut, sycamore, mulberry, and other trees. In the vicinity have been found many fossil shells. The fisheries in the rivers within the limits of the borough, are noticed as early as the reign of Henry I., as abounding in pike, pickerel, eels, salmon, chub, perch, carp, tench, dace, &c. In 1715, a sturgeon, weighing 31st. 10lbs., was taken out of the mill pool. On the south side of the town, near the Little Ouse, is a chalybeate spring, which is said to possess similar virtues to those of Toplitz and Tunbridge.

THE BOROUGH OF THETFORD increased its population from 2246 souls in 1801, to 3934 in 1841, and 4208 in 1861. It comprises 939 houses and 6460 acres of land, divided into three Parishes, of which the following are the names, areas, and population, viz. :—St. Peter's, 2240 acres and 1257 souls; St. Cuthbert's, 260 acres and 1695 souls; and St. Mary's, 3960 acres and 1256 souls. St. Peter's is wholly in Norfolk, but all the land in St. Cuthbert's and St. Mary's, except about 100A. is in Suffolk, as also are 88 inhabitants of the former, and 737 of the latter. About 3000A. in St. Mary's parish are open sandy heath, abounding in rabbits, but in some places affording good pasturage for sheep. Lord Ashburton owns the greater part of the enclosed lands, and is lord of the manor of Thetford-cum-Halwich, with Sibton in Croxton.

THETFORD UNION, formed in 1835, comprises the three parishes of Thetford, the parishes of Santon Downham, Brandon, Barnham, Fakenham Magna, Euston, Honnington, Sapiston, Coney Weston, Barningham, Westton Market, Hepworth, Theltham, Rymer, Hopton, and Knettishall, in Blackburn and Lackford Hundreds, Suffolk; and the parishes of Kilverstone, Croxton, East Wretham, West Wretham, Brettenham, Rushford, Methwold, Northwold, Santon, Snarehill, Hockwold-cum-Wilton, Feltwell, Mundford, Lynford, West Tofts, Sturston, Cranwich, and Weeting-cum-Broomhill, in Norfolk. These 36 parishes comprise an area of 180 square miles, and a population of 18,712 souls, of whom about 12,000 are in Norfolk, and 6712 in Suffolk. Their average annual expenditure for the support of the poor, during the three years preceding the formation of the Union, was £10,408; but it is now rarely more than £7000. The UNION WORKHOUSE, erected in 1836 at a cost of about £5000, stands in St. Mary's parish, Thetford, but within the bounds of Suffolk, about half a mile from the town on the Bury road. It is an extensive brick building, and its boundary walls enclose three acres of land. It has room for 270 inmates, but has seldom half that number. Mr. Edw. N. Cole, of Croxton, is union clerk, superintendent registrar, and registrar of marriages, and Messrs. Thos. Smith and John Sharpe are the relieving officers and registrars of births and deaths, the former for Thetford district and the latter for Methwold district. Messrs. R. Thompson, H. W. Bailey, H. Taylor, C. Morgan, sen. and jun., G. Archer, W. Joy, and H. W. Best, are the union surgeons. The Rev. A. F. Smith is chaplain, Mr. Geo. Groom, master, Mrs. Susan Spurgeon, matron, and Joseph Cooper porter of the Workhouse.

THETFORD COUNTY COURT DISTRICT includes the parishes of Barnham, Barningham, Brandon, Brettenham, Coney Weston, Cranwich, Croxton, Euston, Fakenham, Feltwell, Gasthorpe, Hepworth, Hockwold Wilton, Honnington, Hopton, Knettishall, Kilverstone, Lynford, Market Weston, Methwold, Mundford, Northwold, Riddlesworth, Rushford, Snare Hill, Santon, Santon Downham, Sapiston, Sturston, Thelnetham, Thetford, West Tofts, Weeting, and East and West Wretham. The Court is held at the Town Hall about 9 times a year, at irregular intervals. John Worlledge, Esq., of Ipswich, is judge; Jonathan Townley, Esq., of Norwich, treasurer; R. E. Clarke, Esq., registrar; Mr. E. Muskett, high bailiff; and Wm. Cole, assistant bailiff.

According to some authors, Thetford was first a British city, and afterwards a Roman station; but the arguments adduced in support of these conjectures are not very conclusive. Camden and Plot place the Sitomagus of the Itinerary here; but Gale and Horsley contend that that station was at Woolpit, in Suffolk. At the east end of the town is a large intrenched mount, about 100 feet in height, 984 in circumference at the base, and 338 in diameter at the base and 81 at the summit, which is dished or hollowed out to the depth of 12 feet below the outer surface. The slope of the mount is extremely steep, forming an angle with the plane of the horizon of more than forty degrees; and yet no traces remain of any path or steps for the purpose of carrying up machines, or any weighty ammunition. It has been surrounded by a double rampart, with an outer ditch, the sides of which were protected by the horns and bones of the animals slaughtered for the use of the garrison, but these have been much injured by time and the depredations of man. On the east side is a large area, 300 feet square, evidently intended for parading the troops. The remaining parts of the ramparts are about twenty feet high, and the ditch from 60 to 70 feet wide. These once formidable works, commonly called the Castle Hills, are composed of a mixture of mould and clunch; and were undoubtedly raised for the defence of the town during the predatory incursions of the Danes, who overthrew the Saxons in a dreadful battle fought at Snarehill, near Thetford, in 870, when Edmund, King of East Anglia, surrendered to the marauders, who cut off his head, and after plundering and butchering many of the inhabitants of Thetford, reduced the city to ashes. In 1004, Sweyne, King of Denmark, invaded East Anglia, and among other places, burnt this. In 1010, Ulfketel, the Saxon earl, suffered a complete defeat, and Thetford was again destroyed. After the truce, which was concluded between Edmund Ironside and Canute, this town arose like a phoenix from its ashes. In the time of Edward the Confessor, there were in the borough 944 burgesses, all of whom except 36, could put themselves under the protection of whom they pleased, without the royal license, providing they paid all the customs, heriots excepted. In the time of the Conqueror, the burgesses were reduced to 720, and Bishop Herfast removed the episcopal see from North Elmham to Thetford, whence, however, it was transferred to Norwich in the following reign. From numerous coins in the cabinets of the curious, it is evident there was a mint here, from the reign of Athelstan to that of King John. The manor-house, the ancient seat of the Earls Warenne, became a royal palace when the manor passed to the Crown as part of the Duchy of Lancaster. The mansion, now called the King's House, was rebuilt in the reign of Elizabeth, who occasionally resided here, as did also Henry I. and II., and James I.; but the latter being offended at the remonstrance of a farmer, over whose grounds he had been hunting, sold the manor-house to Sir P. Wodehouse, whose descendants were long seated here. Though an ancient borough by prescription, Thetford is comparatively a modern CORPORATION. In the Conqueror's time, the town was governed by a præpositus and other inferior officers generally nominated by the Crown; but in 1573, Queen Elizabeth granted the burgesses a charter, by which a mayor, ten aldermen, twenty common councilmen, a recorder, town clerk, sword-bearer, and two sergeants-at-mace, constituted the corporate body and their officers, till the passing of the Municipal Reform act of 1835. The mayor, during his mayoralty, was clerk of the markets, and in the following year officiated as coroner. The same charter also granted them permission to send two burgesses to Parliament, "provided they were discreet and honest men, and were elected at the expense of the borough." This charter was surrendered to Charles II., and an imperfect one obtained in its place; but this was rescinded in 1692, and the original charter restored. The town was governed by the latter till the passing of the Corporation Reform Bill, in 1835, under which the Town Council consists of a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors; and a Commission of the Peace has since been granted, on the petition of the burgesses. The income of the old corporation, in 1833, was £1054, of which £955 was derived from the navigation of the Little Ouse from Thetford to White-house ferry. This navigation had been mismanaged and neglected till 1827, when it was put into the hands of a superintendent, and a debt of £4200 incurred in improving it by the formation of sluices, &c. The income of the new corporation is now only about £700 per annum, and arises from borough rates, rents, tolls and dues, and profits of navigation. Quarter Sessions are held for the borough, before the Recorder, the Mayor, and the Magistrates. The number of voters is about 300, more than half of whom exercise their elective franchise as householders, and the rest as freemen. The present Members of Parliament for the borough are the Hon. A. H. Baring, and Lord Fredk. Fitzroy. There was a return of writs and gaol delivery here as early as the reign of Edward I. The Guild Hall, in which the Lent Assizes were held till their removal to Norwich, in 1833, is a fine old building, with commodious court rooms, &c. It was enlarged and repaired in 1800, and the gaol in 1816. The latter is now the County Police Station. The sword and mace borne before the mayor, were presented by Sir Joseph Williamson, Kt., in 1678.

CORPORATION OF THETFORD, (1863-'4.)

MAYOR: W. P. Salter, Esq. RECORDER: Thos. J. Birch, Esq.

ALDERMEN: S. C. Bidwell, L. S. Bidwell, H. A. Bartlett, and Jas. Cronshey, Esqrs.

COUNCILLORS: Messrs. Stephen Oldman, John W. Gill, Geo. Joslin, Wm. W. Frost, Edw. Frost, Fredk. W. Frost, Wm. Sharpe, John A. Smith, Wm. Whistler, Hy. Houchen, and Wm. P. Salter.

BOROUGH MAGISTRATES: The Mayor, The Ex-Mayor, and S. C. Bidwell, L. S. Bidwell, H. A. Bartlett, J. Cronshey, J. C. Fison, G. Gill, and H. W. Bailey, Esqrs.

TOWN CLERK, CORONER, AND CLERK TO MAGISTRATES: Robt. E. Clarke, Esq.

TREASURER: Robert J. H. Harvey, Esq.

On the 9th of August, 1843, this town, like many other places in the neighbourhood, suffered severely from a dreadful Storm of thunder, lightning, hail, rain, and wind. For about twenty-five minutes, between six and seven in the evening, rain and hail descended in torrents, and most of the windows that faced the hurricane were broken. Many of the cellars were filled with water, and some of the warehouses and shops were inundated to the depth of two feet. When the coach came in from Lynn, the horses, in passing through Bridge street, were up to their chests in water. In various parts of the town walls were thrown down by the immense weight of water pressing against them; and in the surrounding country the gardens and corn fields sustained great injury. Many of the hailstones, or rather pieces of ice, were upwards of $1\frac{1}{4}$ inch square, and after the storm more than 100 sparrows were picked up dead in the garden of W. Clarke, Esq. Similar storms happened in the preceding and in the same month in various parts of the kingdom.

CHURCHES AND MONASTERIES.—The lofty Castle-hill, and the ruins of ecclesiastical and other buildings in various parts of Thetford, remind us of its ancient splendour. It had at one time twenty churches and eight monasteries, besides other religious and charitable foundations, and was called by the learned of the monkish ages "Hierapolis et Monachopolis." Of these ecclesiastical edifices the names only of many of them remain, and the sites of others are marked only by a few dilapidated walls. Most of the monastic institutions were granted at the dissolution to Richard Fulmerston, Esq., and the Duke of Norfolk. The Nunnery was founded originally for monks, as a cell to Bury Abbey, in the reign of Canute; but in 1176, the monks being reduced to two, it was re-founded for a convent of nuns, who removed hither from Lynn. Some of its remains may be seen in the outbuildings of a farm-house. The Priory, or Abbey, first erected on the Suffolk side of the town, in the churchyard of the cathedral, was removed to a more convenient situation on the margin of the river. It was founded by Roger Bigod, for Cluniac monks, in 1104. The ancient gateway of freestone and black flint, and many of the walls and foundations of the conventual buildings still remain and cover an area of more than an acre. The church appears to have been entirely in the Norman style, but the lady chapel, refectory, and part of the prior's apartments were built in the early English period, and the gatehouse and some other additions were made in the 15th century. Extensive excavations were made in 1849, but beyond ascertaining the original plan of the priory, very little was obtained. A stone coffin covered by a slab of Purbeck marble, and containing the skeleton of a short middle-aged man, was however found. Near the ruins is a neat modern residence belonging to W. P. Salter, Esq. The revenues of the priory were valued at the dissolution at £312. 11s. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., the Nunnery at £50. 9s. 8d., and the Monastery of St. Sepulchre at £82. 6s. The latter was founded by Earl Warenne and Surrey, in 1109, for Augustine canons; and the porter's gate and part of the church still remain in Canon's close, the latter converted into a barn. The Austin Friary was founded by John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, in 1387, for mendicants, and its site is still called the Priory close. On removing the foundations of the friary church, the remains of Lady Todenham and Lady Hengrave were discovered, and re-interred near the same spot, under a handsome altar tomb, erected in 1807, by George Beauchamp, Esq. The latter lady died in 1402, and the former in 1412. The Maison de Dieu, which stood at the corner of Canon's close, was founded by Wm. Rufus and Earl Warenne for two chaplains and three poor men, who were to be fed, clothed, and lodged, and have water for washing the pilgrims' feet. Here were four Hospitals for lepers, &c., dedicated to St. John, St. Mary and St. Julian, St. Mary Magdalen, and St. Margaret, but no vestiges of them now remain. Of the 20 churches only three are now standing, and they give name to the three parishes. The first church built here and dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt by Bishop Herfast as the cathedral, and is supposed to have stood on the site of the free school. It had four churches appendant to it. The tower of St. Nicholas and some small fragments of a few of the other ancient churches are still extant. St. Peter's, the principal church in the borough, stands in the centre of the town, and is a large and handsome edifice, chiefly of flint, consisting of nave, north aisle, chancel, and tower with a fine peal of eight bells. It was mostly rebuilt in 1789, and displays some good flint panelling. The organ was purchased in 1853 at a cost of about £300. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15. 1s. 5½d., was augmented in 1726 with £200 of Q.A.B. and £200 given by H. Campion, Esq., and in 1814 with a Parliamentary grant of £1200. The tithes were commuted in 1835 for £64 per annum, and the glebe, 40A., is about to be exchanged for a rectory house. J. Shackleton, Esq., of Scarcroft, near Leeds, is patron, and the Rev. Matthew Shackleton, M.A., is the incumbent. St. Cuthbert's is a small edifice comprising nave, chancel, and tower. It was thoroughly restored at a cost of £1050 in 1852, when the tower, which had fallen down in the previous year, was rebuilt, and two of the five bells were sold. It has now a good organ, a handsome screen, and a stained glass window. The seats are neat open benches, and in the chancel is a good double piscina. The perpetual curacy is in the same patronage and incumbency as St. Peter's, and was augmented in 1813 with £1600 of Q.A.B., which was laid out in 40A. of land at Saxlingham. Chapel acre, given by Wm. Tyllis in 1501, is let for £5. 5s. which is applied in repairing St. Peter's Church. St. Mary's, formerly called St. Mary the Less, is the only church in the Suffolk part of the town. It is a large structure with nave, chancel, north aisle, lofty square tower, and six bells, and was thoroughly restored, enlarged, and refitted with open benches in 1850. It contains a good organ and several marble monuments. The perpetual curacy, valued in K.B. at £1. 13s. 6½d. was augmented in 1722-'3 with £200 given by Henry Campion, Esq., and £200 of Q.A.B., and is now worth £83. It is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Alfred Fowler Smith, M.A.

CHAPELS.—The Roman Catholic Chapel is a neat building in the Italian style, built in 1827. The Rev. John Taylor is the priest. It has a small school attached. The Baptist Chapel, built in 1863'4, will seat 400 persons, and cost £1000. It is under the ministry of the Rev. George W. Olding. The Independent Chapel is a commodious edifice erected in 1817, and having 600 sittings. The Rev. Morgan Lloyd is the pastor. The Wesleyan Chapel was built in 1830, and has room for 750 hearers. The Rev. John Bolan is its minister. The Primitive Methodists have two chapels, built in 1838 and 1863. One of them has a large school attached. The Friends' Meeting House has long been disused.

The BOROUGH CEMETERY was formed in 1854, and covers about 3¼ acres. It contains two chapels, one of which, along with about half the ground, is consecrated for the use of members of the established church, and the remainder is used by dissenters. The Burial Board comprises 18 members, and R. E. Clarke, Esq., is their clerk.

The FREE GRAMMAR SCHOOL and HOSPITAL, in St. Mary's parish, on the Suffolk side of the river, were founded in 1566 by Sir Richard Fulmerston, who endowed them with part of the possessions of the dissolved monasteries, some of which had previously been employed for similar uses. The property derived from the founder consists of the school and play-ground; three tenements and Black Friars' Close (3R.), let for £15 a year; the schoolmaster's house, with an acre of land attached to it; the usher's house, with a small garden; the Hospital, containing rooms for four almspeople, and having a small garden for each; and a farm of 1435A. 2R. at Croxton, now producing a net rental of £550 per annum. According to the founder's will part of this endowment is for the support of a preacher at St. Mary's church; but his intentions were not carried into full effect till the 7th of James I., when an Act of Parliament was obtained incorporating the preacher, schoolmaster, usher, and four almspeople (two men and two women), by the name of the "Master and Fellows of the School and Hospital of Thetford, founded by King James, according to the will of Sir Richard Fulmerston." This act provides that the preacher be called the master, and the schoolmaster, usher, and almspeople, the fellows; and that they shall be governed by such ordinances as shall be made by the mayor, burgesses, and commonalty of Thetford, with the sanction of the Bishop of Norwich and the justices of assize. Since the passing of the Reform Bill the school has been governed by trustees, appointed from time to time by the Lord Chancellor. In 1860, the trustees obtained a new scheme from the Court of Chancery for the future management of this trust. All boys, sons of inhabitants, can be admitted to the benefits of the school at 8 years of age, and may remain till they are 16, on payment of a capitation fee of 10s. per quarter. They are instructed in Latin, Greek, French, German, and the usual branches of a liberal English education. Prizes to the amount of £10 a year are given. The schoolmaster and usher are allowed to take other scholars, and in their residences they have each accommodation for 20 or 30 boarders. The former has a salary of £66. 13s. 4d., and the latter £50 a year. The capitation fees, after deducting the expenses of pens and ink, are divided in the proportion of four-sevenths to the master and three-sevenths to the usher. The preacher receives from the endowment £95 per annum, of which £20 are in lieu of a residence; the house in Black Friars' yard, appointed for him, being let in three tenements. The four almspeople have each a weekly stipend of 5s. After paying the above salaries, &c., and deducting for all necessary repairs of the building, the surplus income is divided every year among the "master and fellows," according to the ratio of allowance prescribed by the scheme. The trustees appoint the master, usher and almspeople; but as the preacher is always to be the incumbent of St. Mary's, his nomination is virtually with the patron of that living.

The NATIONAL SCHOOL, built by subscription in 1825, and enlarged in 1857, is now attended by about 120 boys and 80 girls. The BRITISH SCHOOL has about 120 scholars, and is held in the old Wesleyan Chapel. The INFANT SCHOOL in Earl's lane was built about 30 years ago, and is attended by 70 children.

Sir JOSEPH WILLIAMSON, Kt., in 1701, left £2000 to be laid out in the purchase of lands or tenements for such public uses of the town of Thetford, as his executors, with the advice of the Corporation of Thetford, should think fit. Sir Joseph was recorder of the borough. His legacy was not received from his executors till 1717, when it was laid out in the purchase of an estate at Fornham All Saints and the Ox Pastures at Great Barton, in Suffolk. This property was exchanged in 1826 with Sir H. E. Bunbury for a farm of 563A. 3R. 27P. at Tuddenham, and the sum of £1223. 19s., which was laid out in repairing and enlarging the farm-house and outbuildings, all of which were burnt to the ground in 1844 by one of the incendiary fires at that time so frequent in the county of Suffolk. They were insured for £1150, and were shortly afterwards rebuilt. The farm is let for £322 per annum, which, after paying incidental expenses, is applied in apprenticing poor children of the borough with premiums of £20 each in accordance with a scheme sanctioned by the Court of Chancery in 1718, when the charity estate was vested in trustees.

In Magdalen street are ALMSHOUSES for six poor men, built by William Harbord, Esq., in 1680, and kept in repair by the Corporation. They were endowed with a yearly rent-charge of £30, left in 1679, by Sir Charles Harbord, during the term of a 99 years' lease. In 1806, this lease was renewed without any reservation for the almspeople, so that they have now no endowment. The BENEFACCTIONS for yearly distribution among the poor of Thetford, are the dividends of £966. 12s. 7d. new 3½ per Cents., purchased with £1,000, left by Peter Sterne, in 1814, subject to the expense of repairing the tomb of the donor and his father; £4 a year out of the Red Lion Inn, paid by the Corporation in satisfaction of the gifts of Margaret Eden, (£40) in 1616, and Sir John Woodhouse, in 1751; £4. a year, paid by the Corporation of Norwich, as the gift of Wm. Barnham, in 1659; £8 10s. out of Abbey farm, paid by Lord Ashburton, under the name of the Duke of Norfolk's Charity; a yearly rent-charge of £20, left by Sir Edwin Rich, in 1675, out of Rose Hall Farm, in Beccles; subject to the deduction of £2 for land tax; and about £26, received yearly out of the Stoughton Estate, vested with the trustees of Henry Smith's Charities, left in 1627. The latter is distributed in blue-grey cloth coats. In 1608, Thomas Gent left a house and about a rood of land, to pay 6s. 8d. yearly for ringing the morning and evening bell, and to divide the rest of the rent among the poor. The house was burnt down about 80 years ago. The FUEL ALLOTMENTS awarded to the poor of the three parishes, under the Enclosure Act of the 44th of George III., and vested in trust with the lord of the manor of Thetford-cum-Halwich, and the ministers, churchwardens, and overseers, are as follow:—to St. Cuthbert's, 13A. 2R. 30P., now let for £40; to St. Peter's, 19A. 3R. 10P., let for £44; and to St. Mary's, 23A., let for about £40 a year. These rents are distributed in coals. The poor of St. Cuthbert's have also about £5 a year, as the rent of 2R. 11P., left by Samuel Snelling. The BOROUGH CHARITY TRUSTEES are Messrs. Jas. Cronshey, C. Fison, C. H. Fison, Edw. Frost, J. Colby, J. W. Gill, H. R. Tyrrell, H. W. Bailey, H. W. Best, G. Gill, G. W. Mackenzie, S. C. Bidwell, L. S. Bidwell, and W. W. Wickes. John Houchen, Esq., is their clerk.

The MECHANICS' INSTITUTION, established in 1841, is held in the Town Hall, and has about 100 members. In connection with it is a good News Room, commenced in 1854. The library has more than 1200 volumes. In the town are friendly and benefit societies and an odd-fellows' lodge. Thomas Martin, F.S.A., author of the History of Thetford, was born here in 1696, and died in 1771. Thetford also gave birth to Thomas Paine, author of "The Rights of Man," "Common Sense," "The Age of Reason," and other political works, which, being written in a peculiarly popular style, with much freedom of thought and expression, and published at a time when the French Revolution had excited an extraordinary ferment in the public mind, were eminently calculated to produce a revolution in this kingdom, and were consequently suppressed by Government. Paine died in America, in 1800, but his bones were afterwards brought to England by William Cobbett. The late E. H. Barker, Esq., of Thetford, was author of "Parriana," or notices of the Rev. Samuel Parr, LL.D., and a'so re-edited an edition of "Lempriere's Classical Dictionary." On the 12th of August, 1555, Thos. Cobbe, Roger Coe, and James Abbes, three martyrs to the Reformed religion, were burnt at Thetford, after undergoing a mock trial, before Michael Dunning, the bloody chancellor of Norwich.

GUILTCROSS HUNDRED

Is of an irregular triangular figure, adjoining Suffolk, extending about 14 miles from east to west, and varying from 2 to 6 miles in breadth, being bounded on the south and west by the Little Ouse river, on the north by the river Thet and Shropham Hundred, and on the east by Diss Hundred. The western part of it, near Thetford, has a light sandy soil, resting on a substratum of chalk; but the other parts rise in gentle swells, and have a strong soil of clay and loam. Many extensive enclosures have been made here since 1789; and in the springs of the low swampy grounds, at its south eastern angle, near Lopham, the rivers Waveney and Little Ouse have their sources. Petty Sessions are held at East Harling, on the first Tuesday in every month, and E. M. Clowes, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The crown was seized of this hundred in the time of the Conqueror, who gave it to Wm. de Albini; but it is now comprehended in the Duke of Norfolk's Liberty, his Grace being lord paramount of the whole, though much of the soil and many of the manors are held by various families. It forms, with Shropham Hundred, the Deanery of Rockland, in the Archdeaconry of Norfolk, and comprises 12 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population, in 1861; their annual value, as assessed to the County Rate, in 1843; and their territorial extent.

*Kenninghall return includes 194 persons in the Union Workhouse.

+Part of Rushford parish is in Suffolk.

GUILTCROSS UNION comprises all the 12 parishes of this Hundred, except Rushford and Snarehill, which are in Thetford Union, (see page 866). It also comprises Bridgham, Old and New Buckenham, Eccles and Wilby, in Shropham Hundred; and Bressingham, Fersfield, Roydon, Shelfanger, and Winfarthing, in Diss Hundred. Its 21 parishes comprise an area of 72 square miles, and had 11,541 inhabitants in 1841, of whom 5778 were males and 5867 females. The average annual expenditure of the 21 parishes, before the formation of the Union, was £10,833; but it is now only about £6500. The Union Workhouse is at Kenninghall, and was built in 1836 at a cost of £4727, including the purchase of the land, furniture, &c. It is a commodious building, and has room for 350 inmates, but has seldom more than half that number. Arthur Tallent Clowes, Esq., of New Buckenham, is union clerk and superintendent registrar. Mr. Geo. Kent, of Kenninghall, is registrar of marriages and relieving officer for the whole union. He is also registrar of births and deaths for Kenninghall District, and Mr. John Trickson, of Old Buckenham, fills the same office for Banham District. Messrs. Thos. J. Sayer, H. H. Fulcher, Hy. Ward, Chas. Morgan, jun., and W. E. Soffe, M.D., are the union surgeons. The Rev. Richard Lubbock, of Eccles, is chaplain, and Mr. Wm. F. and Mrs. Lock, master and matron of the Workhouse.

BANHAM parish has a small village on a gentle eminence, 2 miles from Kenninghall and New Buckenham, and 5 miles E. by N. of East Harling. It contains many scattered houses, 1163 inhabitants, and 3963 acres of rich loamy land, mostly belonging to the Earl of Albemarle, Sir John S. Packington, Bart., and Wm. Hy. Woodcock and John Gall, Esqrs. The whole is in the Duke of Norfolk's manors of Banham Heath, Mareschalls, Greys, Beckhall, and Hockham, in which the fines are arbitrary. Many of the inhabitants are employed in making bricks and tiles, and here is a fair for cattle, toys, &c., on the 22nd of June. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a large and handsome structure, which has recently been thoroughly restored, chiefly at the expense of the rector. It comprises nave, aisles, and chancel, with a square tower, surmounted by a leaded spire. On the north side of the chancel is a wooden effigy of Sir Hugh Bardolph, Kt., in armour; and on the south side are three sedilia and a piscina. The fine five-light east window is filled with beautiful stained glass. The pulpit, reading desk, reredos, and chancel stalls, are of richly-carved oak. The nave is furnished with neat open benches with carved ends, and the organ is a sweet toned instrument. At the east end of the south aisle is a stained window in memory of some members of the Gall family. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 3s. 6½d., is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor and incumbency of the Rev. John George Fardell, M.A., who has 34A. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £1250 per annum, and an ancient but comfortable residence, in which is some fine old carved oak furniture. The School is supported by the rector, and attended by 130 children. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. The yearly sum of £3. 18s. is paid out of 6A. of land, left by John Bidwell in 1713, for schooling six poor children. The TOWN LANDS, partly acquired in the 15th century, have been conveyed to trustees from time to time for the church and poor, and consist of about 43A., with a house, let for £55 a year. The Fuel Allotments, awarded at the enclosure in 1790, consisted of 123A. 2R. 2P. of fen, and 9A. 3R. 27P. on Holme Hills; but 113A. have been recently exchanged with the Earl of Albemarle for an estate of 90A. in Kenninghall Park Common, now let for £135 per annum, which, with the rent of the remaining land, and 10s. a year from Leeder's plantation, is distributed to the poor in calico, coals, blankets, &c. The Guildhall Feoffment consists of an old building divided into three tenements, occupied by paupers, and 3A. 33P. of land, let for £3. 10s. These premises being settled for superstitious uses, fell to the lord of the manor, who in 1549 granted them to feoffees for the use of all the copyhold tenants, on condition that the lord should have liberty to hold the manor court in the old building called the Guildhall. The poor have 30s. a year, left by Mrs. Gawdy and Mrs. Bidwell. In 1832, Mrs. Mary Bowles gave 5A. 3R. 20P. of land, let for £8, in trust for the poor of Banham and Kenninghall in equal shares.

BLO' NORTON was anciently called Norton Bell'eu, from its being situated near the fair stream of the Little Ouse. It is a small village, five miles S. of East Harling, and comprises in its parish 370 inhabitants, and 1132 acres of land, belonging to several proprietors. A gold ring and part of an ancient wooden dish inlaid with mother of pearl, were found here some years ago, on the site of the old manor house of Semeres, which was formerly the seat of the Bramptons, and was burnt down before 1585. The Church (St. Andrew) is a small thatched fabric with a tower and five bells. It contains a piscina and two sedilia, and near it stood another church (St. Margaret), which was taken down in 1394. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 3d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Robt. Lloyd, M.A., who resides at the Hall, an ancient mansion near the river. The tithes were commuted in 1838 for £330 per annum. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel in the parish. Here is a small National School. The poor cut turf on the Fuel Allotment, 20A., awarded at the enclosure in 1822, when the Parish Land was augmented to 18A., let for about £25, which is applied with the church and poor rates. GARBOLDISHAM, a large village in the narrow valley of a small rivulet, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of East Harling, has in its parish 701 inhabitants and 2705 acres of land. The Uphall estate belongs to Sir Wm. Abdy, Bart.; but the other manors and a great part of the soil belong to the Hon. Georgiana Louisa Montgomerie, daughter of the third Lord Foley, and widow of the late Thos. Molyneux Montgomerie, Esq. She is patroness of the living, and resides at the Hall, a handsome mansion, surrounded by tasteful pleasure grounds. Cecil Molyneux Montgomerie, Esq., also has an estate here. The Church (St. John the Baptist) comprises nave, chancel, porch, and square tower with five bells. It has recently been thoroughly restored by the lady of the manor, at a cost of nearly £2000. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £19. 16s., is in the incumbency of the Rev. Lewis Wilmot Horton, M.A., who has 51A. of glebe, a yearly rent-charge of £590, and a good residence, rebuilt in 1856. Here was formerly another church (All Saints), but it was taken down in 1734, except the tower, which is now an ivy-clad ruin. Its rectory is consolidated with St. John's. The National School is supported by the patroness and rector and attended by about 70 children. Here is a small Primitive Methodist Chapel. The TOWN LANDS, given by Thos. Bole in 1490, Richard Lovick in 1623, Henry Brampton in 1628, and other donors, comprise about 34A., let at rents amounting to £70 per annum, of which about £4 are distributed to the poor in bread, and the residue is applied in the service of the church. In 1696, Mary Williamson left £100 to be vested in the purchase of land, and the rents applied in binding poor children, or in clothing the poor. The land purchased consists of 6A. 1R. 25P., let for £10. 10s. There are two cottages upon it, occupied by paupers. The poor have also a yearly rent-charge of 20s. left by Dorothy Gawdy, and another of 10s. left by one Canham.

GASTHORPE, anciently called Gatesthorpe. is a parish in the vale of the Little Ouse, 3 miles S. by W. of East Harling, containing only a few scattered houses, 87 inhabitants, and about 864 acres of land, belonging to Thomas Thornhill, Esq., lord of the manor and patron of the Church (St. Nicholas), which has long been in ruins, and its rectory consolidated with that of Riddlesworth. The glebe is 21a., and the poor have 20s. a year from land left by Dorothy Gawdy in 1660. The chief residents are—Benj. Hennells, shopkeeper; Hannah Smith, blacksmith; and Wm. Wharton, farmer. Post via Thetford.

HARLING (EAST), is a small market town on the gentle acclivities above the vale of the Thet rivulet, about a mile S.S.E. of Harling station, on the rails between Norwich and Thetford, 21 miles S.W. of Norwich, 9 miles E. by N. of Thetford, and 89 miles N. by E. of London. It has increased its population from 674 in 1801, to 1109 in 1861; and has in its parish 2572 acres of land, mostly belonging to Sir R. J. Buxton, Bart., lord of the manor of East Harling and its members, in which the fines are certain. Thos. Thornhill, Esq., the Earl of Albemarle, and many others, have estates here. The market, held every Tuesday, is well supplied with corn, and here are three fairs for cattle, &c., held May 4th, first Tuesday after Sept. 12th, (sheep fair,) and Oct. 24th. The manor was held in the Confessor's reign, by Ketel, a free Dane, from whom it passed to that branch of the Bigod family who took the name of Felbrigg. In 1361, it was held by the Harlings. Sir Robt. Harling, Kt., was a distinguished warrior in the time of Henry V., and was killed while bravely defending Paris, in 1435; but his body was brought home and interred in East Harling church, under an altar-tomb, on which rest the effigies of himself and wife, beautifully carved in marble. His daughter married first Sir Wm. Chamberlain, and afterwards Sir Robt. Wingfield, Kt., who obtained for the town a charter for a market and two fairs. The manor subsequently passed to the Lovells, one of whom rebuilt the hall in the reign of Henry VIII.; but it was dilapidated many years ago. The town was once famous for the manufacture of linen yarn and cloth. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) is a large and handsome edifice of the perpendicular period, and comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, tower, and spire. At the east end of the south aisle is the Harling chapel, which has an elegant parclose screen of the time of Henry VII., finely painted and gilt. This chapel contains various memorials of the Harlings, and an alabaster altar-tomb on which lie effigies of Sir Thomas Lovell, Kt., and his wife, beneath a handsome canopy. The east window of the chancel is filled with ancient stained glass, representing 20 different scenes from the life of Christ. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12, is in the gift of Mrs. Wilkinson, and incumbency of her husband, the Rev. Thomas Boston Wilkinson, M.A. The glebe is 66a., and the tithes were commuted in 1844 for £576 per annum. The Friends, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. The National School is attended by about 100 children, and has a small library. The County Police Station was built about 10 years ago, and Petty Sessions are held here on the first Tuesday in every month. E. M. Clowes, Esq., is the magistrates' clerk. The Town Lands, which have been vested in trust from an early period, were increased by an allotment at the enclosure, and now consist of 96A. 3R. 37P., with a cottage and farm-buildings, let for £123 a year, for the application of which a new scheme is now under consideration. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1805, consists of 56A. 1R. 4P., part of which is let for £60 a year, and upon the remainder the poor cut turf, &c.

HARLING (WEST), a parish of scattered houses, from 1 to 2 miles W.S.W. of East Harling, contains 124 inhabitants, and 3034 acres of land, belonging to Sir George Edmund Nugent, Bart., who resides at the Hall, a large and handsome mansion, which was considerably enlarged and improved about five years ago, and stands in a well-wooded park on the southern acclivity of the small river Thet. The Church (All Saints) is a small ancient building, containing two stained glass windows, mural tablets of the late Lord and Lady Colborne and their son, and three fine brasses, one of a priest and two of the Birdwell family, who resided here in an embattled mansion, which was demolished in 1725. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 18s. 4d., and now at £212, is in the patronage of Lady Nugent, and incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. John Harbord, M.A. Here was anciently a hamlet called Middle Harling, with a church (St. Andrew), which was levelled in 1543. In 1616, Dorothy Gawdy left 11A. 2R. 38P. of land in Kenninghall, and 3A. 1R. 2P. in Banham, to provide coats and petticoats for the poor of West Harling. The land is now let for £19 per annum. The chief residents are—The Rector; Sir Geo. E. Nugent, Bart., Hall; and Thos. Pymer and John Ringer, farmers. Post from Thetford.

KENNINGHALL, a small improving market town, on the eastern bank of a rivulet, 3 miles E. by S. of East Harling, and 4 miles S.W. of New Buckenham, has in its parish 1405 inhabitants, and 3600 acres of land, belonging to the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Albemarle, and many smaller proprietors. The Duke is lord of the manor, which is ancient demesne, and held by the office of Queen's butler. The copyholds are on fine certain for the land, and arbitrary for the buildings, and descend to the youngest son. Kenninghall had anciently a large weekly market, held every Monday, and it was revived about 1833, for the sale of stock, &c., now exposed for sale (toll free) in the large yard at the Crown Inn. Here are also two annual fairs, for cattle, on July 18th, and sheep, on Sept. 30th. Near the town is Guiltecross Union Workhouse, already noticed at page 876. In this manor was a seat of the East Anglian kings, from which it derived the name of King's Hall, afterwards corrupted to Kenninghall. The site of the Royal Castle, in which the valiant British Queen Boadicea held her court, is an area of nearly four acres, encompassed by a large fosse, and having at each corner an artificial mount. The Conqueror conferred the manor on William de Albini, to be held by the service of chief butler to the kings of England at their coronation. From them, through the Montalts and Mowbrays, it descended to the Howards, Dukes of Norfolk, and possessed free warren, view of frank-pledge, waif, market, fair, assize of bread and ale, a pillory, ducking stool, and gallows. On the site of the castle, a mansion, called East Hall, continued to be the residence of the lords of the manor, till it was taken down by Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, who erected, about a furlong to the north-east, a larger and more stately mansion, which, after his attainder, was called Kenninghall Palace, being conferred by Henry VIII. on his daughter, the Princess Mary. This lady often resided here, and Queen Elizabeth also made it one of her summer seats. It was subsequently restored to the Howard family, and continued to be their chief residence in this county till about the middle of the 17th century, when it was pulled down, and the materials sold. Its site and park are now in two farms, called Kenninghall Place, and still belong to the Duke of Norfolk, and midway between here and the curious conduit-head at Boyland Hall, about 2 miles distant, many feet of leaden pipe were taken out of the ground some years ago. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel, north aisle, south porch, and large square western tower. The latter contains eight bells and a clock, and has the Norfolk crest upon the buttresses. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 17s. 1d., is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. Richard Procter, M.A., who has a residence, 10A. 3R. 26P. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent charge of £329. The rectorial tithes were commuted in 1842, for £784. 3s. 2d., and belong to David Hodgson, Esq. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists, have each a chapel here. The Church Land is 7A., let for £18 a year. The poor have £4 yearly from Mary Bowle's Charity, as noticed with Banham, and a yearly rent-charge of 20s., left by Dorothy Gawdy, in 1616, out of land in Garboldisham. The Fuel Allotments, awarded at the enclosure in 1799, consist of 24A. 35P. of fen, and 26A. 3R. 34P. of heath, on which a barn was built in 1802 at a cost of £120. The poor cut fuel on the fen, but the herbage is let with the heath land, at rents amounting to about £55 a year, which is distributed in coals. 1A. 2R. 5P. called Surveyors' Land, is let for £3. 15s. a year, which is expended in repairing the roads. Messrs. Murton & Turner employ here a large number of hands in making drills and dressing machines. POST OFFICE at Mark Mordey's. Letters despatched, via Thetford, at 5.30 p.m.

LOPHAM (NORTH), a village $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. by S. of East Harling, has in its parish 771 inhabitants, and 2000A. of land, of which 900A., called Lopham Park, belong to the Duke of Norfolk, the lord of the manor, in which are numerous small copyholds, subject to arbitrary fines. This manor comprehends also South Lopham; and the two villages have long been famous for the manufacture of linen or hempen cloth; and though but little yarn is now spun here by hand-wheels, here are about 60 looms employed in weaving sheeting, diaper, huckaback, damask, &c., which are sold unbleached by the manufacturers, who hawk them in their own carts over this and the adjacent counties. The Church (St. Nicholas) is a large and handsome structure, comprising nave, south aisle, chancel, porch, and square tower. The chancel was restored in 1862. The Rectory, valued in K.B. at £17. 0s. 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., is consolidated with South Lopham. The benefice has a small rectorial manor in the two adjoining parishes, and must be given to a fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. The tithes of this parish were commuted in 1845 for £303 per annum, and here are 5A. 2R. of glebe. The National School is attended by 40 children. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. Mary Williamson, in 1696, left 7A. 1R. 20P. of land, at Garboldisham, for apprenticing poor children, or clothing the poor of this parish. It now lets for £14. 16s. The Fuel Allotment, 103A. 2R. 11P., was awarded at the enclosure, in 1815. The Town Lands, partly purchased, and partly given by Robt. Bringloe, in 1687, and other donors, consist of about 43A., in the parishes of Lopham, Garboldisham, and Shelfanger. They are let, with two cottages, at rents amounting to £85 per annum, which is applied in the service of the church. Here are also a house and garden, occupied by several poor families.

LOPHAM (SOUTH), a village and parish, adjoining and participating in the linen trade of North Lopham, is 4 miles S.E. by S. of East Harling, and 5 miles W. by N. of Diss. It contains 630 inhabitants, and 1937 acres of land, in the same manor as North Lopham, and belonging mostly to the Duke of Norfolk; but here are many small proprietors. The Church (St. Andrew) is a large edifice, comprising nave, south aisle, and chancel; with a fine Norman tower, containing eight bells, and rising between the nave and chancel, which are of much later date, the former being rebuilt after 1479, and the latter about the year 1370. The rectory is consolidated with North Lopham, in the patronage of St. John's College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. John Fitz Herbert Bateman, M.A., who has here a good residence, and 45A. of glebe. The tithes of this parish were commuted in 1845 for £508 per annum. The School, with master's house adjoining, was built in 1863 at a cost of £800, and is attended by 50 children. Here is a small Baptist Chapel. On the east side of the two Lophams, in the swampy grounds, called Lopham Gate, are two copious springs, which give rise to the rivers Waveney and Little Ouse, the former running eastward to Yarmouth, and the latter westward to Thetford and Lynn; and both forming the boundary of Norfolk and Suffolk. The Town Lands, given by John Barker, in 1468, John Jessup, in 1672, and other donors, consist of a farm of 60A. 1R., in Wortham and Redgrave, let for £80 a year; 16A. 2R. 13P., in Langmere, let for £30; 40A. of heath land, let for £40; and a house and 15A., let for £28. 10s. One-fourth of these rents is applied in defraying the expenses of the church, and the remainder is divided between the school and poor. The Fuel Allotments, awarded at the enclosure, in 1815, comprise 126A. 27P., on which the poor cut turf, and the herbage is let for about £10, which is expended in repairing the fences. In 1815, Wm. Branch Elliott, left £400, to be invested in the funds, and the dividends applied yearly in a distribution of clothing among the poor of South Lopham. This charity now consists of £452. 8d., three per cent. consols.

QUIDDENHAM, a small village and parish, in the vale of a rivulet, 2 miles E. by N. of East Harling, has only 111 inhabitants, and 1126A. of land, belonging to the Right Hon. George Thomas Keppel, sixth EARL of ALBEMARLE, who resides at the HALL, a large and handsome mansion, chiefly of brick, seated in an extensive and well-wooded park. One front has a Doric portico, and the other a centre with four Ionic columns, supporting an entablature and pediment, with corresponding pilasters. It was long the seat of the Holland family, whose heiress sold it to Mr. Bristow, of whom it was purchased with the manor, in 1762, by George, the third Earl of Albemarle of the Keppel family, the title being revived in 1696, in the person of Arnold Joost Von Keppel, together with those of Baron Ashford, in Kent, and Viscount Bury, in Lancashire. He came from Holland with William III. The title of Albemarle, in Normandy, had previously been borne by the Plantagenet, Beauchamp, and other families. The present Earl was born in 1799, and succeeded his brother in 1851. He entered the army in 1815, served at Waterloo, became Major-General in 1858, and is author of several literary works. His son and heir, the Right Hon. Wm. Coutts Keppel, VISCOUNT BURY, was born in 1832, and served for some years in the army. He was M.P. for Norwich from 1857 to 1859, and in the latter year was created a privy councillor. Since 1860 he has been the representative of the Wick Burghs, and has held several public offices. The Earl is patron of the rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 4s. 6d., and now at £680, with that of Snetterton annexed, in the incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. Edward Southwell Keppel, M.A., who is also a rural dean and an honorary canon of Norwich, and occupies the rectory-house, a neat mansion of white brick. The Church (St. Andrew), comprises nave, aisles, chancel, and tower. The latter is round at the base and octagonal above. It contains a clock and chimes, and is surmounted by a shingle spire. On the south side of the nave is a beautiful Norman doorway, and in the chancel is a mural monument to Sir John Holland, who died in 1700. The church was repaired, furnished with neat open benches, and otherwise improved by the rector, about four years ago. The upper servants at the Hall are—Thos. Smith, butler; Mrs. Langley, housekeeper; Robert Goymour, farm steward; and Saml. Cady, gamekeeper. John Collings is the parish clerk, and John Willingham has a small farm here. Post from Attleborough.

RIDDLESWORTH parish, 4 miles S.W. of East Harling, and 6 miles E. by S. of Thetford, has a few scattered houses, 97 inhabitants, and 1157 acres of land, in the vale of the Little Ouse, all, except the glebe (14A.) belonging to, and occupied by, Thomas Thornhill, Esq., of Riddlesworth Hall, a neat white mansion, in a pleasant park, erected on the site of the old manor house, by Sylvanus Bevan, Esq., who purchased the estate of Sir William Wake, Bart., of Courteen Hall, Northants, about 1780, and sold it to the present owner's father about 1809. It had previously for a long period been the seat of the knightly family of Drury, which ended in female issue. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £11. 2s. 8½d., and now at £239, with that of Gasthorpe annexed, is in the patronage of T. Thornhill, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Darby, M.A., who has a small residence. The Church (St. Peter,) which has a tower and one bell, was restored in 1856, at the patron's expense, and contains a fine monument of Sir Drue Drury, with his effigy in armour, and two angels kneeling under a canopy. The tithes of this parish have been commuted for £116 per annum. William Hennel is the farm bailiff. Post from Thetford.

RUSHFORD parish has a small village, on the Little Ouse, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by S. of Thetford, and contains 134 inhabitants, and 4250 acres of land, including Shadwell, Snarehill, and Rushford Lodge, the latter of which is a tithe-free estate of about 1000 acres, and 36 souls, on the south side of the river in Suffolk. Sir Robert Jacob Buxton, Bart., owns all the parish, and resides with his mother at Shadwell Court, which is a handsome mansion in a well-wooded park, on the north side of the parish, overlooking the vale of the river Thet, and derives its name from a celebrated spring, formerly much frequented by pilgrims, and called St. Chad's well. The Church (St. John the Evangelist) was appropriated to a College, founded here by Sir Edmund Goneville, in 1342, for a master and six priests, and had a chancel and transepts, which were dilapidated several centuries ago. It now comprises only the nave, with a portion of the south transept, and a fine tower containing six bells. Sir R. J. Buxton is impropiator of the tithes, and patron of the living, which is a donative, in the incumbency of the Rev. F. D. Panter, and was augmented with £200 of Q.A.B. in 1793. Here is a small National School. The chief residents are—Sir R. J. Buxton, Bart., and Dowager Lady Buxton, Shadwell Court; Rev. F. Downes Panter, Rushford Lodge; and Wm. Elliott, farmer, College Farm. Post from Thetford.

SNAREHILL, one mile E. of Thetford, though united with Rushford parish, is an extra-parochial estate, subject to the provisions of the Act 20 Vic. c. 19., containing 46 inhabitants, and anciently in two hamlets, called Great and Little Snarehill, the former comprising about 1666 acres of heath, and the latter 380 acres, on which is Snarehill House, a neat mansion in a beautiful park, belonging to Sir R. J. Buxton, Bart., and occupied by Richard Rogers, Esq. In the vicinity are twelve large tumuli, supposed to mark the site of the sanguinary battle between the Saxons and the Danes, in which Edmund the king and martyr lost his life, as noticed at page 867.

SHROPHAM HUNDRED

Is of an irregular oblong figure, about 14 miles in length, from east to west, and from 6 to 8 in breadth, being bounded on the west by Grimshoe, on the north by Wayland and Forehoe, on the east by Depwade, and on the south by Guiltcross Hundred. The soil is various, but much of it is a light sand, watered by a number of small rivulets, which unite their streams on its southern boundary, near Quiddenham, in the Thet rivulet, which flows westward to the Little Ouse, at Thetford. The latter borough is at the south-west angle of Shropham Hundred, which is traversed throughout its whole length by the Norwich and Thetford turnpike, and the Great Eastern Railway. This Hundred forms, with that of Guiltcross, the Deanery of Rockland, in the archdeaconry of Norfolk. Shropham, written in Domesday book Serepham, was in the fee of the castle-manoir of Buckenham, from the Confessor's time till the reign of Henry VI. It contains 21 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent.

* UNIONS.—The 12 parishes marked thus* are in WAYLAND UNION, which has its Workhouse at Rockland All Saints. Old and New Buckenham, Bridgham, Eccles, and Wilby, are in Guilleros Union; and Brettenham, Kilverstone, and East and West Wretham, are in Thetford Union.

ATTLEBOROUGH is a small ancient market town, near the source of a small rivulet, 15 miles S.W. of Norwich, 14 miles N.E. by E. of Thetford, and 6 miles S.W. of Wymondham, pleasantly situated on the Norwich and Thetford turnpike, and on the north side of the Great Eastern Railway, which has a neat station here. During the Saxon era, it was a place of great consequence, being the seat of Offa and Edmund, successively kings of the East Angles, who fortified it against the predatory incursions of the Danes. These fortifications were conspicuous in the time of Henry II.; and part of them may still be traced in the ridge called Burn Bank. It was afterwards the seat of the Mortimers, whose ancient hall, now a farm-house, is encompassed by a deep moat. The parish contains 2221 inhabitants, and 5260 acres of land. Sir Wm. Bowyer Smijth, Bart., is lord of the manor of Attleburgh-Mortimer and its members (fines arbitrary); the Rev. Richard Coyte is lord of Chanticleere manor (fines arbitrary); and the Rectory has two small manors, subject to a fine of 2s. per acre on land, and to arbitrary fines on the buildings. Sir T. B. Beever, Bart., and the Cockell and other families have estates here. The town is lighted with Gas, from works erected in 1860, and consists chiefly of one long street, with several neat houses, good inns, &c. Its market, held every Thursday, is now well attended. The old market cross, which stood on the Market hill, was destroyed in 1787. The Corn Hall, is a commodious white brick building, erected in 1863 at a cost of £1000, raised in £5 shares. It has a reading room and library attached. Near the station is a handsome Hotel, opposite to which is a neat obelisk, commemorative of the peace of 1856. Three Fairs are held on the Thursdays before Easter and Whitsunday, and the second Thursday in September, for cattle, pedlery, &c. A pleasure fair, held on the day before the March assizes, originated from the throngs who flocked here to see the prisoners pass from Norwich to Thetford, and is still continued, though the assizes have ceased to be held at the latter place. The Attleborough Company of Rifle Volunteers numbers about 60 men. Sir R. J. Buxton, Bart., is captain; Rev. A. B. Smijth, lieutenant; and G. F. Francklin, Esq., ensign. Near the town, on the turnpike to Wymondham, is a square stone pillar, commemorating the gift of £200 by Sir Edward Rich, Knt., in 1675, for the reparation of the road, which is said to be the first turnpike made in England, being formed under an Act of the 7th and 8th of William and Mary. A College (Holy Cross) was founded here in the reign of Richard II., by Sir Robert de Mortimer, for a custos and four fellows. It was granted to the Earl of Sussex at the dissolution, when its yearly revenue amounted to £21. 16s. 3d.

The Church, dedicated to the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin, is in the collegiate form, with an ancient square tower and six bells at the intersection of the transepts. The east end was destroyed by the fall of the spire, and the rest of the edifice exhibits a large nave with aisles, north and south transepts, and a handsome porch on the north side. The south transept was built by Sir Wm. Mortimer, about 1296, and the north transept by Thomas Chanticleere, in 1338. To their families and the Ratcliffe's, here are many monumental memorials; and in the nave is a stone recording the death of Captain Gibbs, the celebrated horse racer and gamester, of the reign of Charles II. The church was thoroughly repaired, and the interior fitted with new seats, &c., in a very handsome manner, at a cost of about £1600, in 1844, when several mural paintings were discovered. The east window was filled with beautiful stained glass in 1853, in memory of the late Rev. Sir E. B. Smijth, Bart. The pulpit is of finely carved oak, and under the tower is an old screen, which has been removed from its original position. The rectory is in two consolidated moieties, called Great and Little; the former valued in K.B. at £19. 8s. 9d., and the latter at £8. 2s. 6d. Sir W. B. Smijth, Bart., is patron, and the Rev. Alfred John Edward Bowyer Smijth, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a spacious residence. The tithes were commuted about 20 years ago for £1504 per annum. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Friends have each a chapel here. Gilbert Berkeley, Bishop of Bath and Wells, was rector of Attleborough, in 1544. A great part of the town was burnt in 1559. The National School, built in 1841, on land given by Sir W. B. Smijth, Bart., is attended by 75 girls and 85 boys. In 1678, the Rev. Thomas Nerford left 8A. of land towards the support of a graduate of one of the Universities, who should be appointed to teach grammar, and should, in consideration of this land, teach six poor children to read, write, and cast accounts, without any charge. The school land now comprises about 10A., including an allotment awarded to it at the enclosure, in 1815, and it is now let for £21. 12s. 6d., which is received by the rector (the nominal master), who pays it towards the support of the National School, where the free scholars attend. The Church Land is 11A. 3R. 14P., and the clerk has 1A. 2R. 32P., for ringing the morning and evening bell. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure for the benefit of all the poor parishioners who do not occupy more £10 a year, comprises 57A. 2R., now let for £53. 14s. 9d. per annum. In 1760, Sir Francis Bickley left the College Close, 5A., (let for £22), and directed the rent to be distributed at Christmas, among the most needy poor of the parish; who have also about £8. 17s. a year, as the rent of 2A. 3R. 23P., left by Andrew Reeder, in 1655; and £2. 12s. from land left by the before named Rev. T. Nerford.

ATTLEBOROUGH COUNTY COURT DISTRICT comprises the parishes &c., of Attleborough, Banham, Besthorpe, Breckles, Bridgham, New and Old Buckenham, Carbrook, Caston, Eccles, Great and Little Ellingham, Griston, Hargham, East and West Harling, Hockham, Little Hockham, Illington, Kenninghall, Larling, Merton, Ovington, Quiddenham, Rockland All Saints, St. Andrew and St. Peter, Roudham, Scoulton, Shropham, Snetterton, Stow Bedon, Thompson, Tottington, Watton, and Wilby. The court is held in the Court Hall once in every two months. John Worlledge, Esq., of Hill House, Ipswich, is judge; Geo. Fairfax Francklin, Esq., registrar; Jonthn. Townley, Esq., of Norwich, treasurer; Mr. Thomas Kerslake, of East Dereham, high bailiff; and George B. Parson, assistant bailiff.

BESTHORPE is a parish of scattered houses, within 1 mile of Attleborough, containing 554 inhabitants, and 2164A. of land, mostly the property of the Earl of Winterton, who is lord of the manor, impropiator of the rectorial tithes, and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 10½d., and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Edward Banister, who has 35A. of glebe, a good residence, built in 1859, and a yearly rent charge of £258. The Church (All Saints) is a cruciform structure with a lofty square tower, and five bells. It was restored in 1861, and contains a marble monument representing Sir Wm. Drury, his wife, and five children. Mr. Leonard Joseph Palmer, and some smaller owners, have estates here. The Fuel Allotment, 15A. 3R. 16P., was awarded at the enclosure in 1806, and is let, with 4A. 1R. 3P. of Church Land, for £33 a year, distributed in coals. The ancient Hall, now a farm house occupied by Mr. Limmer, was formerly a seat of the Drury family. Post from Attleborough.

BRETENHAM parish, in the vale of the river Thet, 4 miles E. of Thetford, has only one farm house, a few cottages, 72 inhabitants, and 1981 acres of sandy land, all in one farm, occupied by Mr. John Palmer, and belonging to Sir Robert J. Buxton, Bart., the lord of the manor. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 12s. 6d., and now worth £202 per annum, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Ely, and incumbency of the Rev. Fredk. D. Panter, of Rushford. The Church (St. Andrew) was burnt down in 1693, along with the rectory house, but was shortly afterwards re-built; and in 1853 was thoroughly restored and beautified by the Buxton family. It is now a handsome edifice, comprising nave, chancel, north and south transepts, and tower with five bells. Several of the windows are enriched with stained glass, and the walls are ornamented with scriptural texts. The roof of the chancel is finely painted and gilt, and the floor is of polished tiles. The seats are neat open benches, and the font and pulpit are of carved stone. Several Roman coins of Vespasian and other Emperors, have been dug up here, together with a few urns, which led Blomefield to suppose that the station, Combretonium, was here, and not at Brettenham, in Suffolk. Post from Thetford.

BRIDGHAM, a small village in the pleasant vale of the Thet river, 2 miles W. of East Harling, and 6 miles E. by N. of Thetford, contains 328 inhabitants, and 2692 acres of land, mostly belonging to Sir Thomas Gage Saunders Sebright, Bart., the lord of the manor; but Wm. Cockell and C. Harrison, Esqrs., have estates here. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel, north porch, and wooden belfry with one bell. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £11. 1s., is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Currie, B.A., who has a yearly tithe rent charge of £388, a good residence, and 22 acres of glebe. The poor have £9. 18s. yearly from Christ's College, Cambridge, as the gift of Mr. Risly, who was rector here in 1523; and £6. 8s. yearly from the rent of 7A. 2R. 35P., left by Dorothy Gawdy, in 1791. The Fuel Allotments, awarded at the enclosure in 1806, comprise about 600 acres, on which the resident parishioners have the right of cutting turf and ling. The Parochial School is supported by the rector, and here is a small Wesleyan Chapel, erected in 1834.

BUCKENHAM (NEW) is a small town, with a large market place and several short streets, 5 miles S. by E. of Attleborough; $15\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. of Norwich; and 95 miles N. by E. of London. Its small parish contains 656 inhabitants, and 324A. of land, mostly belonging to John Gall, Esq., Exors. of the late E. F. Boud, Esq., and a few smaller owners, and lying in Priory and Old Buckenham manors. The Rev. R. R. Cousens is lord of the former, and Thos. L. Taylor, Esq., of the latter. The inhabitants are exempt from serving on juries out of the parish, and from tolls at markets and fairs, as are those of Old Buckenham, from which this parish was separated by Wm. de Albini, who for the purpose of strengthening the garrison of the castle which he built here, created this new burgh with the privilege of frankpledge, assize of bread and ale, a gallows, a weekly market every Saturday, &c. The market is obsolete, but Fairs for horses, cattle, &c., are held on the last Thursday in May, and on Nov. 22nd. The Church (St. Martin) is a handsome edifice, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, and square tower with six bells. It was built at various periods; the north aisle about 1479, by the contributions of several distinguished families, of whom here are various memorials, particularly of the Knyvets, one of whom was Lord Chancellor in the reign of Edward III. The south aisle was restored in 1863, by John Gall, Esq.; and in front of the gallery is some curious wood carving, which originally graced an ancient building in the town. The living is a perpetual curacy, worth £115 a year, in the gift of the parishioners, and incumbency of the Rev. Richard Rowland Cousens, B.A., who has a small residence. Here is a Wesleyan Chapel erected in 1803, at a cost of £400; and also a Parochial School. The George and Dragon public-house, let for £30 a year, was left by Wm. Juby in 1646, one-half for the schoolmaster, and the other for the incumbent. The latter has also £34 a year as the rent of a house and 13A. 2R. 16P. at Carlton Rode, left in 1692 by William Barber, who also founded an Almshouse here for four poor parishioners, and endowed it with a house and 18A. 3R. 8P. at Old Buckenham, let for £45 a year. This almshouse was re-built in 1861, chiefly at the cost of Messrs. H. and J. J. Turner, and the four inmates have each 2s. 6d. per week, and an allowance of coal yearly. The Overseers' Lands comprise $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres, let for £16 a year, which was allowed to accumulate for some years previous to 1862, when two houses for aged poor were built adjoining Barber's almshouse. The Church Land, 6A., is let for £18; and the High Bailiff's Land, $5\frac{1}{2}$ A., is let for £5, which is expended in repairing the market-cross, town pump, and church clock.

BUCKENHAM (OLD) is a large village of detached houses, skirting a pleasant green of 40 acres, shaded with trees, and distant about 1 mile N. by W. of New Buckenham, and 3 miles S. by E. of Attleborough. Its parish contains 1214 inhabitants, and 4986 acres of land, belonging to the Earl of Albemarle, Sir Wm. Bowyer-Smijth, Bart., Richard Reeve, John Gall, J. O. Taylor, and E. Palmer, Esqrs., Messrs. R. Bird and W. Colman, and some smaller owners, but T. L. Taylor, Esq., is lord of the manor. The fee of this place was given by William the Conqueror to William de Albini, whose son was commonly called "William with the strong hand," from his having (as the legends of chivalry relate) killed a lion by thrusting his arm down its throat, after having been thrown into its den by the Queen of France, who was enraged by his refusing the offer of her hand, he being previously affianced to the widow of Henry I., whom he subsequently married. He became Earl of Arundel, in 1139, when he assumed the lion for his crest. His father, disliking the old Saxon castle here, erected a new Castle, a little farther to the east, upon the ancient British earthworks, which still exist, and like those of Castle Acre, Rising, Hedingham, and Norwich, comprise a circular work, with a horse-shoe work on one side of it. This fortress consisted of a keep, two circular towers, a grand entrance tower, a barbican, and embattled walls, surrounded by a moat; but nothing now remains except the keep and a few ruined fragments of the gateway. The second William de Albini, founded a Priory here in 1085, for Augustine canons. At the dissolution it was valued at £131. 11s., and granted to Sir Thomas Knyvet. But few traces of it now remain, though the foundations of its conventual church were extant in Blomefield's time. The parish Church (All Saints) is an ancient thatched edifice, comprising nave, chancel, north aisle, and octagonal tower with six bells; and was restored in 1859. The perpetual curacy, now worth £100 per annum, is in the patronage of the inhabitants, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Fulcher, B.A. It was augmented by a parliamentary grant of £800, in 1769, and £200 given by Wm. Holbeck, Esq., in 1768. The Parochial School was built in 1841, and is attended by 80 children. It is chiefly supported by an endowment of £30. 10s., derived from the rent of 16A. 21P. of land, purchased with £100 left by Matthew Sturdivant, in 1604. The Baptists, Sandemanians, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. The poor have the following yearly doles, viz.:—£12. 15s., from 5A. 1R. 22P. of land, left by Robert Laughter, in 1622; and £5 from 4A. 1R. 11P., left by Andrew Reeder, in farmer; Eliza Larke, schoolmistress; Geo. Keppel Clifton, station master; and Thos. Oxen, parish clerk. Post OFFICE at Mrs. Barnard's. Letters despatched, via Attleborough, at 7 p.m.

ELLINGHAM (GREAT) is a scattered village, 2 miles N.W. of Attleborough, and has in its parish 717 inhabitants, and 2670 acres of land, mostly the property of Lord Walsingham and Messrs. Benj. Barnard and Hy. Norton; the former of whom is lord of the largest manor (Bury Hall), in which the fines are arbitrary, and the rest of the parish is in Ellingham Hall and the Rectory manors, of which Thos. Lombe Taylor Esq., is lord. The Hall, an ancient moated farm house, formerly the seat of Sir Roger Potts, Kt., is now the residence and property of Benj. Barnard, Esq., on whose estate a remarkably fine stone celt and a brass battle-axe, were discovered some years ago. The Church (St. James the Apostle) is a large structure, comprising nave, aisles, chancel, and square tower with spire and five bells. The piscina and sedilia still remain. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 5s. 10d., was augmented in 1722-3, with £200 of Q.A.B., and £200 given by the Rev. J. Cator. It is consolidated with the rectory of Little Ellingham (which see). The tithes of this parish were commuted in 1843, for about £750 to the impropiator (T. L. Taylor, Esq.) £242 to the vicar, and about £60 a year to the vicar of Carbrook. Here are two chapels belonging to the Baptists and Wesleyans. The former has an endowment of £30 a year, and was built in 1824, and enlarged in 1848. The Fuel Allotment, 54A. 1R. 32P., was awarded at the enclosure in 1799, and is let for £90.

HARGHAM parish, 3 miles S.S.W. of Attleborough, has only 88 inhabitants, and 1080 acres of land, all the property of Sir Thomas Branthwayt Bevor, Bart., who succeeded his father, the 2nd baronet, in 1820. He usually resides at Yarmouth, and lets the Hall, an ancient mansion with pleasant grounds, to Zachariah Simpson, Esq., of Diss, who occupies it as a shooting box. The Church (All Saints) has long been dilapidated, and only a small part of it is now used for divine service. Its detached and ivy-clad tower has a picturesque appearance. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 4s. 2d. is consolidated with Wilby. The chief residents are—Ann Gayford and Sanders Spencer, farmers; and John Stacey, toll collector. Post from Attleborough.

HOCKHAM, a pleasant village, 5 miles N.W. by N. of East Harling, has in its parish 629 inhabitants, and 3406 acres of land mostly belonging to Hy. T. Partridge, Wyrley Birch, and Hy. Hemsworth, Esqrs., the former of whom is lord of the manor, impropiator of the great tithes, and owner of the Hall, a square red brick mansion surrounded by an extensive park, and now occupied by Lady Catherine Ricardo, widow of the late J. L. Ricardo, Esq., M.P., and sister to the 5th Earl of Fife. Here were formerly two distinct parishes, called Great and Little Hockham; but the Church (St. Mary) of the latter was demolished after the reign of Richard II., and no traces of it are now extant. Henry III. granted to Great Hockham a charter for a market every Friday, and a fair on Easter Monday; but the former has long been obsolete, though the village green is still called Market Hill, and the latter is merely a pleasure mart. The Church (Holy Trinity) is beautifully situated in the park, and is an interesting specimen of the early-decorated style, having a nave, aisles, and chancel, but no tower. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8. 17s. 11d. is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. John Spurgin, B.D., who has a good residence and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £276. The School was built in 1832 by the late H. S. Partridge, Esq., who also endowed it with £100 three per cent. consols. The common, and Cranberry fen, which had a lake or mere of 280A., were enclosed and drained in 1795, when a Fuel Allotment of 40A. was awarded for the use of all the parishioners not occupying more than £5 a year. The poor cut turf upon it. The Town Land consists of 16A. 22P. received in exchange at the enclosure, and now let for £25 a year, which is applied partly to the repairs of the church, and partly to the repairs of highways. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel in the parish. Here are also several benefit societies, one of which has 144 members, and an invested capital of £1000.

ILLINGTON parish, on the banks of a rivulet, 5 miles W.N.W. of East Harling, comprises only 88 inhabitants, and 1298 acres of land, all the property of R. K. Long, Esq., the lord of the manor, and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 19s. 2d., and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Godfrey John Bird, who has a good residence, built in 1848, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £145, awarded in 1831. The Church (St. Andrew) is a small edifice, with a square tower, and an inscription to the memory of Sir John Churchman, Knight. It has three bells, and was thoroughly restored about 15 years ago. The ancient British road, called Peddar's way, passes through this parish. Francis Hamond Gates farms the parish. Post from Thetford.

KILVERSTONE, in the vale of the Thet river, $1\frac{1}{4}$ mile E. of Thetford, is a parish, with 39 inhabitants, and 2026 acres of sandy land, the property of Capt. John Davy, R.N., of Ingoldisthorpe, whose son, John Wm. Davy, Esq., resides at the Hall, a neat mansion of flint, in a pleasant park, extending down to the river. The Church is a small edifice comprising nave, chancel, and low round tower. It has a fine Norman doorway, and contains several mural tablets of the Wright family, formerly resident here. The east window is filled with richly painted glass. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 14s. 9d., is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. John Moore, M.A., of Thetford, who has 26A. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £140 in lieu of tithes. The chief residents are—John Wm. Davy, Esq., Hall; D. W. Limmer, farmer, Hall Farm; Geo. Howes, parish clerk; and John Whale, toll collector. Post from Thetford.

LARLING, or Lerling, a parish of scattered houses, near the confluence of two rivulets, 2 miles N.N.W. of East Harling, contains 181 inhabitants, and 1548A. of fertile land, nearly all the property of Sir George E. Nugent, Bart., the patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £10, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Constantine Griffith Wodehouse, who has about 41A. of glebe, a good residence, built about 17 years ago, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £217. The Church (St. Ethelbert) is a thatched edifice comprising nave, south aisle, porch, chancel, and square tower with three bells. It still contains the sedilia and piscina, and part of the old painted screen. The south doorway is a fine specimen of Norman architecture, and the steps which formerly led to the rood loft still remain. About a mile south of the church, is Larling-ford, on the river Thet and the Norwich and Thetford turnpike. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, is 31A. 24P., on which the poor cut turf. The old Poor's Land is 3A. 2R. 20P., on which is a cottage. Here is a small Wesleyan chapel. The chief residents are—The Rector; John Barrett, shopkeeper; and Robt. Barker, Wm. Gates, John Smith, Lucy Lock, Geo. Wells, and Daniel Watson, farmers. The latter is also a maltster, and keeps the Angel Inn at Larlingford, where there is a Post Office, whence letters are despatched at 7.30 p.m. to Thetford.

ROCKLAND (ALL SAINTS and ST. ANDREW,) are two adjoining parishes, with a scattered village (chiefly cottages,) distant 4 miles W. of Attleborough, and extending into Rockland St. Peter's. They contain 1671 acres of land, and All Saints has 305 and St. Andrew's 111 inhabitants. Wayland Union Workhouse is in the former parish, as noticed at a subsequent page. Sir Wm. Bowyer Smijth, Bart., owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manors of Kirkhall, Moynes, and Gurneys, in Rockland Tofts, and Carbonels, in Rockland. Brampton Gurdon, Esq., M.P., Rev. A. B. Hemsworth, Miss Hornbuckle, Misses Towler, and others, have estates here. All Saints' Church has a Saxon nave with fine examples of long-and-short and herring-bone work, an early-English chancel, and a square tower with two bells. It was thoroughly restored, reroofed, and fitted with new open seats, &c., in 1860, at a cost of more than £600. St. Andrew's church was dilapidated when Blomefield wrote. The discharged and consolidated rectories of All Saints and St. Andrew are valued in K.B. at £10. 19s. 4d., and now at £546 per annum, are in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Addison Browne Hemsworth, M.A., Diocesan Inspector of Schools, who has a handsome white brick residence in the Italian style, built in 1852, at a cost of £2000. The National School was built by the rector in 1851, at a cost of £200, and is still supported by him. It is attended by 35 children. Rockland gives name to a Deanery, as noticed at page 885. The Fuel Allotment, 26A. 2R. 35P., was awarded to the poor of the two parishes in 1814, and is let for £26. Two cottages and 3 roods of land were given to the poor by an unknown donor. Here is a small pleasure fair on May 16th. POST OFFICE at Saml. Warren's. Letters despatched via Attleborough, at 7 p.m.

ROUDHAM parish, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. of East Harling, has only 132 inhabitants, and 2085 acres of sandy land, mostly belonging to Sir T. G. S. Sebright, Bart., the lord of the manor and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £4. 16s. $5\frac{1}{2}$ d., and is now worth £86 a year. The Rev. Thomas Currie, B.A., is the incumbent, and the inhabitants attend his church at Bridgham, their own Church (St. Andrew) being destroyed by fire nearly a century and a half ago, though some of its ruined walls are still standing. Mr. Timothy Colman, of East Harling, owns and occupies a farm here, and the rest of the parish is farmed by Mr. James Hovell Limmer, who resides at the Hall. Harling Road Station on the Great Eastern Railway is in this parish. Post from Thetford.

SHROPHAM, which gives name to this Hundred, is a scattered village and parish, 5 miles N. by W. of East Harling, comprising 510 inhabitants, and 2678 acres of land, lying in the three manors of Breccles-Parva, Pakenhams, and Bradcar Hall. The trustees of H. D. Hemsworth are lords of the first, and the trustees of the Great Hospital, Norwich, are lords of the other manors (see page 233,) and also patrons of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8. 13s. 9d. The Rev. William Robbins, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence, built in 1851, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £277. 10s. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. The Fuel Allotment, 58A. 2R. 22P., was awarded at the enclosure, in 1801, to all the parishioners not occupying above £10 a year, who cut turf upon it. The Town Lands comprise 35A. 1R. 39P., let for £55, which is carried to the poor rates. The parish has also a cottage, occupied by paupers. Post from Thetford, via Larlingford.

SNETTERTON, a parish of scattered houses, 3 miles N. of East Harling, has 237 inhabitants, and 2189 acres, belonging to the Earl of Albemarle and Sir Thos. B. Beevor, Bart., the former of whom is lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which is valued in K.B. at £12. 17s. 1d., and consolidated with Quiddenham, in the incumbency of the Hon. and Rev.

E. S. Keppel, M.A., who has here about 60A. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent charge of £450. The Church (All Saints) is a large edifice, comprising nave, aisle, chancel, two porches, and a square tower with four bells. It was thoroughly restored, and refitted with open carved benches, in 1854, at the expense of the rector. Several of the windows are filled with beautiful stained glass; and here is an elaborately carved screen. Here was anciently another church, dedicated to St. Andrew. The Church Land, 19A. 3R., is let for £12. 17s. 6d. The poor have £3 a year out of the Hall farm, left by an unknown donor. The School was built in 1836, by the rector, who still supports it. The chief residents are—The Rev. J. T. Woodcock, M.A., curate, Rectory; Eliz. Davy, schoolmistress; Jas. Reeve (Hall), Edmund and Jph. Trew, and Leonard Jph. Palmer, farmers; Robt. Crook, wheelwright; James James, blacksmith; and Wm. Webster, shoemaker and beerhouse. Post from Thetford, via Larlingford.

WILBY, a small village and parish, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles E.N.E. of East Harling, has 98 inhabitants, and 1400 acres of land, belonging to the Earl of Albemarle and Sir Thos. B. Beevor, Bart., the latter of whom is lord of the manor. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, and square tower with five bells. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 4s. 7d., is consolidated with Hargham, in the incumbency of the Rev. Francis Burges Goodacre, M.A., who has here 40A. of glebe, and a good residence. The tithes of Wilby were commuted, in 1839, for £205. 2s. 5d. per annum, and the joint rectories are now valued at £396 per annum, and are in the patronage of John Goodacre (a minor). An Almshouse, in three tenements, with small gardens, was given by one of the Wilton family, for the residence of poor parishioners. The Town Land, 2A. 2R. 31P., is let for £2. 5s., which is carried to the poor rates. Here is a small Primitive Methodist Chapel. The farmers are—Richard Peck, Saml. Colman, and Jas. Foster Palmer. Post from Attleborough.

WRETHAM (EAST AND WEST), about 6 miles N.N.E. of Thetford, are two adjoining parishes, containing 6442 acres of land. East Wretham has 257 inhabitants, a small village of its own name, and another called Stone Bridge, on a rivulet, nearly a mile E. of the church. West Wretham has 207 inhabitants, a few scattered houses, and Wretham Hall, a neat mansion in a pleasant park, about a mile N.W. of the church. This mansion is the seat of Wyrley Birch, Esq., owner of both parishes, lord of the manor, and patron of the consolidated rectories, which are valued in K.B., one at £11. 12s. 3½d., and the other at £12. 11s. 3d. The Rev. Jas. Park Whalley, B.A., is the incumbent, and has 11A. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £539, and a good residence, built about thirty years ago. East Wretham Church (St. Ethelbert) is a small edifice, with a tower and a good Norman doorway; but that at West Wretham (St. Lawrence) has long been in ruins. The School was erected by the lord of the manor about eight years ago, and is attended by 50 children. The chief residents in West Wretham are—Wyrley Birch, Esq., and Thos. J. Birch, Esq., Hall; John and David Palmer, farmers, Foulmere; and Fredk. Robt. Fisher, farmer, Thorpe Hall. Those in East Wretham are—The Rev. J. P. Whalley, B.A., Rectory; Robt. Castleton, farmer and victualler, Dog and Partridge; Wm. Overton, miller and farmer; Saml. Kitton Gayford, land agent and farmer, Manor Farm; and Mary Abbott, shopkeeper, Stone Bridge. Post from Thetford.

Has in its centre the small market town of Watton, and was anciently called Wanelunt or Waneland, from the oozy nature of its soil, which is now well drained and cultivated, most of the waste and commons being enclosed about the beginning of the present century. It is about eight miles in length and breadth, except on its eastern side, near Hingham, where it is only four miles in width. It is bounded on the south by Shropham, on the west by Grimshoe and South Greenhoe, on the north by the latter, and on the east by Mitford and Forehoe Hundreds. It forms the Deanery of Breckles, in the Archdeaconry of Norwich; and in the reign of Edward I., had a bailiff and two coroners. Petty Sessions are held every alternate Wednesday at Wayland Hall, Watton, and Richard Robinson, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. There are in this Hundred sixteen parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent.

UNIONS.—Ashill, Saham-Toney, and Thrextton, are in Swaffham Union, and the other thirteen parishes are in WAYLAND UNION, which comprises also twelve parishes in Shropham Hundred. The 25 parishes of Wayland Union comprise an area of about 60,000 acres, and had 11,562 inhabitants in 1861, of whom 5695 were males, and 5867 females. Their average annual expenditure, from 1832 to 1835, was £9450, and for the three years ending March, 1839, £4426. It is now about £7000. The Union Workhouse is at Rockland All Saints, and was built in 1836 at a cost of about £4000. It has room for nearly 300 inmates, but in summer has seldom half that number. Mr. Elmer Cubitt, of Attleborough, is union clerk, and superintendent registrar. The registrars of births, marriages, and deaths are—Mr. Daniel Chaston, for Watton District; and Mr. Saml. Wells for Attleborough District. Messrs. Daniel Chaston and David Reeve are the relieving officers. The Rev. Hy. Bird, B.A., is chaplain, and Wm. and Ada Owen are master and matron of the Workhouse. Messrs. Carteret Geo. Ellis, M.D., of Attleborough, and Squire Sprigge, of Watton, are the surgeons.

ASHILL, a scattered village, on a commanding eminence, 3 miles N.N.W. of Watton, and 6 miles S.E. of Swaffham, has in its parish 696 inhabitants, and 2990 acres of land, in the manors of Uphall, Collards, and Gaines, of which Lord Ashburton is lord; and Panworth Hall, of which the Earl of Leicester is lord; but part of the soil belongs to several smaller owners. The Church (St. Nicholas) is a handsome edifice comprising nave, south aisle, south porch, chancel, and square tower with six bells. The east window contains some good stained glass, and here are monuments of the Boyce and Cotton families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £19. 13s. 6½d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Bartholomew Edwards, M.A., who has 50 acres of glebe, a good residence, and a yearly rent-charge of £987. The National School, a neat brick and flint building, attended by about 112 children, was erected in 1848 by the rector, who still supports it. Here are chapels belonging to the Primitive Methodists and Methodist Free Church. In 1856 a fine gold torques, weighing 4oz. 12dwts., and measuring 33 inches long, was found in this parish. The Church Land was exchanged at the enclosure for 3A. 10P., let for £4. 10s. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, in 1786, comprises 30A. 2R. 18P., let for £57 a year, distributed in coal. At the same time, two allotments were awarded to the owners or occupiers of messuages in the parish, not occupying more than £5 a year, viz., 5A., to turn their geese upon, and 38A. as a common pasture.

BRECKLES, or Breccles, a small village and parish, 5 miles S. by E. of Watton, has 130 inhabitants, and 1860 acres of land, belonging to Sir Edw. C. Kerrison, Bart., the lord of the manor and patron of the discharged vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £7. 7s. 11d., and is now worth £45 a year, having been augmented from 1767 to 1824 with £1000 of Q.A.B. The Rev. William Smyth Thorpe, of Shropham, is the vicar. The Church (St. Margaret) is a neat fabric in the early-English style, comprising nave, south porch, chancel, and round tower with octagonal belfry and two bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1862 at the expense of the patron, and is furnished with handsome open benches with poppy heads, and carved pulpit and reading desk, all of oak. The ancient rood screen still remains. The School was built in 1854 by the lord of the manor, and is attended by 20 children. The Hall, now a farm house, is an ancient brick building with a good archway in front. It contains several large and lofty rooms, some of which are lined with tapestry and carved oak panelling. In 1806, John Stubbings died in this parish, in his 108th year. The farmers are—John Garrard; Eliz. Howes, Lodge; John Mayhew, Grange; and Robert Oldfield, Hall. Post from Thetford.

CARBROOKE, a long village with several neat houses, 2½ miles E. of Watton, has in its parish 751 inhabitants, and 3033 acres of land, mostly belonging to Sir Wm. Robt. Clayton, Bart., and Richard Dewing, Esq., and lying in the manors of Carbrooke, Woodhall, and Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, of which Mrs. Grigson is lady. The Hall was enlarged about 38 years ago, and is the seat and property of Richard Dewing, Esq. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) was rebuilt in the reign of Henry VI., and is a handsome lofty edifice in the perpendicular style, comprising nave with aisles, north and south porches, chancel, and square tower 33 yards high, containing five bells. The roof of the nave is richly carved; and the fine ancient rood screen still remains. The church has been judiciously restored at various periods, and the nave is now furnished with handsome open benches of oak, and the chancel with stalls. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7. 12s. 6d., and now worth £170 a year, is in the patronage of Richard Dewing, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. William Wells, M.A., who has a good residence. It was augmented in 1729, with £200 of royal bounty, and £200, given by the Rev.

J. Carter; and in 1810 and 1815, with £400, in parliamentary grants. The tithes of the impropriate rectory were commuted in 1844, for £482. 4s.; and the vicarial tithes for £74. 4s. per annum. Besides the latter, the vicar has the tithes of 200A. of land, in Great Ellingham. The Church Land, 15A. 3R. 37P., is let for £40. 5s. a year, out of which the poor have 21s. The Fuel Allotment, awarded to the poor in 1801, is 56A. 2R. 23P., let for £73. 12s. 4d. Another church anciently stood in an exempt jurisdiction, called Carbrooke Parva, belonging to the commandery or preceptory of Knights Templar, founded here by Roger, Earl of Clare, (who died in 1173,) and more amply endowed in 1182, by his widow, who gave it to the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem. This house was sometimes called the priory of St. John of Jerusalem, but commonly, "the Commandery of Kerbrook," and was the only institution of the kind in Norfolk. It was endowed with numerous farms and vassals. All persons who enjoyed the privileges of this order were allowed to fix a cross upon their houses and lands, which exempted them from the payment of tithes, taxes, and many customary dues. These privileges the Knights, by granting their name and the use of the cross, conferred upon others; and they received in return, numbers of small annual payments out of lands and tenements in this and the adjoining counties. But this abuse growing enormous, by many presuming to put a cross upon their property, a statute was enacted in the reign of Edward I., for the confiscation of all property on which crosses were falsely affixed. On the dissolution of the Carbrooke preceptory, its revenues were valued at £65. 2s. 9d. per annum, and were granted, with the house and its church, to Sir Richard Gresham and Sir Richard Southwell, Knights. No vestiges of the buildings are now extant, but the burial ground is still known; and in digging in it, in 1737, a curious cross was found, having an oaken stem, ornamented with brass bosses. The National School is attended by 118 children, and is a neat Elizabethan building of flint and brick. It was built in 1846 by the patron, on land given by Sir W. R. Clayton, Bart., the impropiator of the great tithes. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have chapels here.

CASTON, a pleasant village, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. of Watton, has in its parish 510 inhabitants, and 1557 acres of land, mostly belonging to Lord Walsingham, Sir Wm. Bowyer Smijth, Bart., and George Barker and Machin Lake, Esqrs. Sir Wm. B. Smijth is lord of the manor of Caston Hall, but part of the parish is in the manors of Newlands, Griston, and Scoulton. The Church (Holy Cross) comprises nave, chancel, and tower, with a clock and six bells; and is mostly in the early-decorated and perpendicular styles. It underwent repairs in 1839 and 1852, and is furnished with open benches, pulpit, and lectern of carved oak. In the chancel is a brass to Hy. Dover, Esq., and in the nave a tablet to the Francklin family. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £11. 19s. 2d., is now in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Walter John Partridge, M.A., who has a plain residence, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £517, and 52A. of glebe. The School is attended by 50 children, and was built in 1839. It is chiefly supported by the interest of £1054. 0s. 5d., three per cent. annuities, purchased with £1000 left by the late Henry Dover, Esq., in 1855. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here, built in 1818. On the green is the base of a curiously carved cross, near which is an old farm house, said to have been an inn for the reception of pilgrims proceeding to Walsingham Abbey. An allotment of 25A., awarded to the occupiers of 34 houses, in 1813, is let for £11. The Town Land, 2A. 35P., is let for £7, which is applied with the poor rates, and 1A., set apart for the repair of the highways, is let for £3 a year.

ELLINGHAM (LITTLE) is a village and parish, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.S.W. of Hingham, and 5 miles E.S.E. of Watton, containing 382 inhabitants, and 1540 acres of land, belonging to William Colgrave and John and Thomas Tingey, Esqrs.; the former of whom is lord of the manor, in which the fines are arbitrary. The Hall, a handsome mansion of red and white brick, in the Italian style, is the seat of John Tingey, Esq., and was built in 1855. In its pleasure grounds is an ornamental clock tower. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 1s. 10d., and augmented in 1724-'6 with £200 of Q.A.B. and £200 given by the Rev. J. Carter, is now worth nearly £700 per annum, with the vicarage of Little Ellingham annexed, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Rowland Ingram, M.A., who has here 36A. of glebe, a good residence, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £430. The Church (St. Peter) is a small structure, comprising nave, chancel, and south-western tower with one bell. Several of its windows are enriched with stained glass; and the chancel was restored by the rector in 1863. The School is attended by 40 children. The Town Lands, 22A., are let for £26, which is applied with the poor rates. A house belonging to the parish is occupied by paupers. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1769, is 40A., on which the poor cut furze, but the herbage is let for £26 a year. The parish clerk has $1\frac{1}{2}$ A. of land, given by an unknown donor. In 1860, the late rector, the Rev. Samuel Colby, left the interest of £500 for the repairs of the church. GRISTON, 2 miles S.E. of Watton, has in its parish 257 inhabitants and 1360 acres of land, mostly belonging to Lord Walsingham, lord of the manor of Griston Hall; but M. R. Rackham and G. R. Copeman, Esqrs., and some smaller owners, have estates here. The Bishop of Ely is lord of the Rectorial manor, which is leased to George Francklin, Esq. He is also patron of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7. 8s. 9d., and now in the incumbency of the Rev. Josiah Edward Golding, M.A., who has a neat residence, a tithe rent charge of £170 a year from this parish, and £12 from the tithes of Watton and Thompson parishes. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) is a large edifice, comprising nave, chancel, north porch, and square tower with three bells. It was rebuilt in 1477, and contains a handsome screen. The north window has a curious painting representing a priest preaching to a large congregation. The pulpit and a few of the pews are richly carved, and in the chancel is an antique stall. The School was built in 1862, and is attended by about 30 children. In 1860, Miss Barker left £1000 to the vicar and churchwardens, in trust, to distribute the interest amongst the poor. The Fuel Allotment, 60A. 1R. 11P., awarded at the enclosure in 1806, is let for about £120 a year, which is distributed in coals, clothing, &c. The poor have 18s. 4d. yearly, left by Edward Goafe and another donor. Griston Hall, now a farm house, was formerly decorated with carvings representing the various incidents in the popular story of "The Children in the Wood," who are said to have lived here, and to have been murdered by order of their uncle, in Wayling, or Wayland Wood, in Watton parish, where the Hundred Court was anciently held. MERTON is a small detached village, 1½ mile S. by W. of Watton, comprising in its parish 194 inhabitants and 1362 acres of land, all belonging to Lord Walsingham, the lord of the manor, which was given by William the Conqueror to Ralph Baynard, and was carried in marriage by the heiress of Fulke Baynard, Esq., to Sir Thomas de Grey, who settled here in 1337. His descendant, Sir William de Grey, Knt., was born here in 1719, and after having been successively solicitor-general, attorney-general, and lord chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas, was created Baron Walsingham, of Walsingham, Oct. 17th, 1780. The present Right Hon. Thomas de Grey, 5th LORD WALSINGHAM, was born in 1804, and succeeded his father in 1839. He was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he graduated M.A. in 1824 and LL.D. in 1842. In 1827 he was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn; and his son and heir the Hon. Thos. de Grey was born in 1843. His seat, Merton Hall, is a fine Elizabethan brick mansion, which was rebuilt in 1610, thoroughly repaired about 30 years ago, and enlarged in 1847. It stands in a richly wooded park, in which are some magnificent oaks, one of which is supposed to be 1000 years old, and measures 24 ft. 4 in. in circumference at five feet from the ground. The Church (St. Peter), comprising nave, chancel, and round tower with three bells, stands in the Park, and contains several monuments with fine brasses of the noble family of de Grey. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 0s. 5d., is in the patronage of Lord Walsingham and incumbency of the Rev. George Crabbe, B.A., who has a yearly rent-charge of £200, awarded in 1843. The Rectory House stands in the parish of Thompson, about a mile from Merton church, and is a handsome residence, erected by the patron in 1851. The Town Estate consists of five cottages and 5A., let for £20, applied with the church and poor rates. The poor have 20s. a year, left by Sir Wm. de Grey. The chief residents are—The Right Hon. Lord Walsingham, Hall; Rev. George Crabbe, B.A., Rectory; Mr. Peter Hornsey; James Brown, farm bailiff; James Williams, shoemaker and shopkeeper; Henry Woods, agent and land steward; and Nathan Jackson Cooper and Thomas Matthews, farmers. Post from Thetford.

OVINGTON, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N.E. of Watton, has in its parish 291 inhabitants and 1497 acres of land, formerly belonging to the Knights Templar of Carbrooke. The University of Cambridge owns part of the parish, and the manors of Ovington and Bozomes; and Robert J. H. Harvey, Esq., is lord of the manor of Woodhouse. The other chief owners are George Hargreaves and Wyrley Birch, Esqrs. The Church (St. John the Evangelist) is a neat structure, mostly in the perpendicular style, having a square tower and a fine Norman doorway. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 3s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., has a yearly rent-charge of £415, awarded in 1843 in lieu of tithes. It is in the gift of the University of Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Simons, M.A., who has held the benefice since 1810, and has here a residence erected in 1816, at a cost of about £700. The School, attended by 30 children, was built in 1855, at a cost of £170. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here, erected in 1859. The Fuel Allotment, 22A. 1R. 33P., is let with 4 cottages and a barn for £49 per annum. Post from Watton.

ROCKLAND ST. PETER is a parish of scattered houses, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. of Watton, and 4 miles W.N.W. of Attleborough, containing 386 inhabitants and 1010 acres of land, of which about 200 acres, with the church, are in Shropham Hundred. Sir Wm. B. Smijth, Bart., is lord of the manors of Kirkehall, Maynes, and Garneys, and owns about 431 acres of the soil, the rest of which belongs to the Barnard, Muskett, and other families. The Church (St. Peter) is a thatched edifice in the early-English style, and comprises nave, chancel, north porch, and round tower with octagonal belfry and one bell. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 16s. 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., and now worth £266 a year, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Bird, who has held the benefice since 1839, and has 22A. 3R. 22P. of glebe and a neat Elizabethan residence erected in 1840. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here, erected in 1859. The Fuel Allotment, 15A. 34P., awarded in 1814, is let for £35. Here are also 2A. 26P. of old poor's land.

SAHAM-TONEY is a large but scattered village, 1 mile N.W. of Watton. Its parish has increased its population since 1801 from 650 to 1286 souls, and contains 4048 acres of land, chiefly belonging to the Gurney, Harvey, Mann, Castendieck, Mills, Grigson, Clark, and Taylor families. Thomas D. Calthorp, Esq., is lord of the manor of Saham-Toney, which was held by the famous Earl of Warwick, in the reigns of Henry VI. and Edward IV. The Rev. W. Grigson, M.A., is lord of the manors of Howards, Harveys, and Pages, and here is also a small rectorial manor. A number of bronze rings and ornaments, and many pieces of Roman pottery, have been found here at various times. Near the centre of the village is a lake, or mere, of 12A., abounding in fish, especially eels of two species, one noted for their delicious, and the other for their nauseous flavour. The Church (St. George) is a large and handsome structure, in the perpendicular style, comprising nave, aisles, south porch, chancel, vestry, and lofty tower with six bells. It was erected in 1480, but the chancel was rebuilt by the late rector about 40 years ago, and the rest of the building has been thoroughly restored by the present rector, at a cost of about £3000. Many of its windows are filled with beautiful stained glass, and the rood screen is handsomely carved, as are also many of the seats. It contains a good organ, several brasses and other monuments, and two piscinæ. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £21. 14s. 9d., and now at £1122, is in the patronage of New College, Oxford, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Hooper Parker, M.A. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Wesleyan Reformers have each a chapel here. In 1626, the Rev. Wm. Terry, a late rector, left the Rectory House, well furnished, and 5A. of land, for the use of succeeding rectors. He also left a house and land for the parish clerk to ring the evening eight o'clock bell; and a farm of 23A. 2R., called Kirtling, for the use of the school-master. The latter is now let for about £40. In 1611, Edward Goaffe left a school-house for the masters' residence, and almshouses, for four poor widows; and endowed the latter with a yearly rent-charge of £5, and the former with a yearly rent-charge of £5, and 4 acres of land, now let for £4. The Free School was rebuilt in 1837, and enlarged in 1844. It is a plain square building, attended by 80 children. For the endowment arising from the above-named sources, the master teaches, as free scholars, all the sons of parishioners who are sent to him, and the school is also free to six boys of Watton and two of Threxton. The four almshouses were taken down in 1859, and rebuilt on a new site by the rector, who also built the Girls' and Infants' Schools, the latter in 1838, and the former in 1848. They are each attended by about 60 children. The Agricultural and Commercial College School is a large and handsome Elizabethan structure, erected by the Rev. W. H. Hooper, M.A., in 1852, and having accommodation for more than forty boarders. It contains a lofty and well ventilated schoolroom, library, dining-room, &c., and attached to it are about three acres of playground, and a good residence for the head master. The Fuel Allotments, awarded under the enclosure act of the 37th of George III., now comprise 86A. 1R. 39P., let for £185. 5s., which is distributed in coals. The dividends of £760, new 3 per Cents., left by Charles Hunt in 1811, are distributed in clothing among the poor parishioners. The rent of two allotments, comprising 3A. 1R. 12P., is applied in repairing the highways, but part of it is said to belong to the poor, by gift of Mary Duffield, in 1702. The Rev. Humphrey Prideaux, author of the "Life of Mahomet," was rector here from 1686 to 1694. The singular Mr. Shuckforth, who died here in 1784, aged 91, was buried in a small enclosure on his own estate, but his remains were removed to the churchyard in 1854. Traces of a Roman Camp are still visible in this parish. Post from Watton.

SCOULTON parish, from 3 to 5 miles W. of Watton, has 329 inhabitants, and 2193 acres of land, belonging to several owners, the largest of whom are the Earl of Abergavenny, lord of Oldlands manor; Richard Weyland, Esq., lord of Newlands manor; Henry Hemsworth, Esq., lord of Scoulton Hall manor; and Richard Dewing, Esq. The Church (Holy Trinity) comprises nave, aisles, chancel, south porch, and massive square tower, with octagonal belfry and three bells. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 4s. 2d., is in the patronage of Richard Weyland Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. John Munnings Johnson, B.A., who has 54 acres of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £450, awarded in 1840, and a good residence, built in 1833, at a cost of £1000. The School, a neat thatched building, erected by John Weyland, Esq., in 1841, is attended by 60 children. Scoulton Mere, a fine sheet of water, two miles in circumference, has in its centre a small swampy island, and is frequented, from March to July, by many thousand black-headed or laughing gulls (Larus ridibundus,) which are useful in clearing the land of insects. Their eggs are gathered and sold by the proprietor, Richard Weyland, Esq., and are considered a great delicacy. This parish was formerly entitled to send a free scholar to the Grammar School at Hingham (see p. 581.) The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1807, is 39A. 1R. 6P., let for £52. STOW-BEDON, on a small rivulet, 6 miles S.E. by S. of Watton, is a parish of scattered houses, with 343 inhabitants, and 1692 acres of land, mostly belonging to Brampton Gurdon, Esq., M.P., lord of the manor, Rev. J. Burroughs, Lord Walsingham, Sir E. C. Kerrison, Bart., and Wyrley Birch, Esq. The Church (St. Bardolph) is a small edifice in the early English style, comprising nave, chancel, vestry, and bell turret; and containing an elegantly carved rood screen, a reredos of Caen stone, a font of Portland stone, altar rails of brass, a harmonium, given by the rector carved stalls in the chancel, and good open benches in the nave. In the churchyard are three ancient tombstones ornamented with floriated crosses. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £4. 19s. 4d., was augmented in 1714 with £200, given by Mr. James Smith, and in 1718 with £200 of Q.A.B. It is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Daniel Race Godfrey, M.A., who has 14 acres of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £335, and a good residence, built in 1849 and 1852, at a cost of £1200. The School is a neat brick building supported by the rector, and attended by 30 children. Stow Mere, a large sheet of water, covering about 25 acres, is the property of the lord of the manor. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here, built in 1844. The Fuel Allotment, 30 acres of sterile land, was awarded at the enclosure in 1814, and is let for £14. 10s. The poor have also the dividends of £51. 5s. 8d. three and a half per cent. consols, left by Rebecca Ray, and given in bread. Post from Attleborough.

THOMPSON, anciently called Thomestone, 3 miles S. by E. of Watton, is a scattered village and parish, containing 475 inhabitants, and 2890 acres of land, chiefly belonging to Lord Walsingham, lord of the manor, and Henry Hemsworth, Esq., impropiator of the tithes. The Church (Saint Martin) comprises, nave, chancel, south porch, south transept, and square embattled tower with three bells; and contains a piscina, an old rood screen, and the stalls which were erected for the use of a College or Chantry, founded here in the 23rd of Edward III., by Sir Thomas de Shardelow and his brother John, for six chaplains, to pray for the souls of their ancestors. This college was granted to Sir Edmund Knyvett, at the dissolution. The perpetual curacy was augmented from 1767 to 1824, with £800 of Q.A.B., and is now worth £49 a year, in the patronage of the trustees of the late H. D. Hemsworth, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Smyth Thorpe, of Shropham. The common was enclosed in 1815. The Town Land, 18a. 2r. 24p., is let for £28. 10s. a year, which is applied in the service of the church and poor. Thompson Cottage was pulled down in 1851, and its materials used in the erection of Merton Rectory, which is situated within the bounds of this parish. In the church is a large painting, representing Joseph's coat brought to Jacob, presented by the late Wm. Hales Tooke, Esq. Post despatched, via Watton, at 6 p.m.

THREXTON, a small parish, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. of Watton, has 80 inhabitants, and 1097 acres of land, about 400 of which belong to Jno. Remington Mills, Esq., M.P., and the rest to Thomas Barton, Esq., the lord of the manor, who resides at Threxton House. Several Roman coins, and a bronze fibula of the Anglo-Saxon period, have been found here. The Church comprises nave, chancel, north aisle, and round tower with one bell. The roof was restored in 1846, and the church rebuilt in the succeeding year. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 4s. 9d., is annexed to Swaffham.

TOTTINGTON, a small village, on the Thetford road, 4 miles S. by W. of Watton, has in its parish 308 inhabitants, and 3213 acres of light sandy soil, nearly all the property of Lord Walsingham, the lord of the manor. At the enclosure, in 1774, about 60 acres were left open as a Fuel Allotment, but part of it is now in plantations, belonging to Lord Walsingham. The Church (St. Andrew) is a large edifice of the perpendicular period, comprising nave, aisles, south porch, chancel, and square tower with six bells. It contains an elegantly carved rood screen, several monuments of the Hare and Duffield families, and some ancient slabs stripped of their brasses. The spire was taken down in 1802. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 14s. 9d., is in the patronage of the trustees of Chigwell School, Essex, to whom the rectorial tithes (£400) belong. The Rev. Samuel Cutler Hooley is the incumbent, and has an acre of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £61. 14s. 3d., and a good residence, erected in 1861. The School for the parishes of Merton, Thompson, Sturston, and Tottington, is attended by 60 children, and was built in 1849 by Lord Walsingham. It has a small library of 100 vols., and attached to it is a house for the master. Post from Thetford.

WATTON is a small market town, pleasantly situated at the junction of roads from Norwich and Dereham to Brandon and Thetford, on the south side of the vale of a rivulet, 21 miles W. by S. of Norwich, 10 miles S.S.W. of East Dereham, 9 miles S.E. by E. of Swaffham, and 96 miles N.N.E. of London. It has been much improved of late years, and consists chiefly of one broad street of considerable length, lined with neat houses and well stocked shops. Its parish contains 1807 acres of land, belonging to a number of proprietors, the largest of whom are Lord Walsingham, Hon. George de Grey, Hon. Brownlow de Grey, Rev. Wm. H. Hicks, and R. J. H. Harvey, Esq. It has increased its population from 693 in 1801 to 1365 in 1861, and is in two manors, viz:—Watton Hall, of which the Rev. W. H. Hicks is lord; and Rokeles, of which Mr. John Land is lord. In 1204 there was a writ brought to enquire whether the market here, granted to John de Vaux, was not prejudicial to Saham, and being found so, the market was recalled; but before the expiration of the year, Oliver de Vaux, having the manor of Watton Hall conveyed to him by his brother, and having great influence with the King, obtained a new charter for a market to be held every Wednesday, as it still continues, chiefly for corn; but it was formerly celebrated as a great butter mart, immense quantities of that article being purchased here weekly, and sent by factors to London. Here are five annual fairs, on July 10, October 11, and November 8, for cattle; on the first Wednesday in July, for stock; and on the second Wednesday in October, for sheep. In 1673, on Saturday, April 25th, this town suffered greatly by an accidental fire, which destroyed above sixty houses, with the Butcher's Shambles, and other property, to the amount of £7450 in buildings and £2660 in goods and chattels. To alleviate the distress to which the inhabitants were reduced by this dreadful conflagration, "a brief was granted to gather all England over, till the 20th of September, 1675." In 1820, a neat obelisk was erected on the site of the old Market Cross, on which the town's name was oddly expressed by a rebus carved in oak, viz., a W., a hare, and a tun. On the demolition of the cross, these devices were placed in front of the Bell-house and lock-up—a small square building, erected soon after the fire, but now called the Clock-house, from a clock placed in it about 40 years ago. Wayland Hall is a neat building of red and white brick, with stone dressings, situated in the Market-place, and erected in 1853 at a cost of £1350. It contains a reading room and library, a magistrates' room, and a large, lofty, and well-lighted Corn Hall, which is occasionally used for balls, concerts, &c., and has an open timber roof of the hammer-beam kind, the spandrels filled with tracery. Petty Sessions are held here on the second Wednesday in each month, and Richard Robinson, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The Police Station is a brick edifice built in 1855 at a cost of £950, and having cells for the temporary confinement of prisoners and a residence for the inspector. Gas Works were erected here in 1859, at a cost of £1300, raised in £10 shares. The Church (St. Mary) is a neat edifice, comprising nave, aisles, chancel, vestry, and round tower. The latter has an octagonal belfry containing three bells, and is surmounted by a spire. Most of the building was erected in the time of Henry II., but the aisles were rebuilt on a larger scale in 1840. On the east gable of the nave is a curious crucifix of stone, which formerly stood over the north porch, long since destroyed. Here were three guilds, dedicated to St. Giles, St. Mary, and St. John the Baptist. The pulpit, lectern, and rood-screen, are of handsomely carved oak, and the seats are neat open benches. One of the windows is filled with stained glass, and here are many mural tablets of the Wodehouse, Fleming, Hicks, Harvey, Tillott, and other families. The ancient Poor's Box of this church is of solid oak, and represents a priest holding in his left hand a bag, in the upper part of which is an orifice to receive the money, which is passed into the box beneath. On the breast is carved "Remember the Poore, 1639." The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7. 0s. 4d., is in the patronage of the Rev. W. H. Hicks, the impropiator of the great tithes, which have been commuted for £290 per annum. The Rev. Walter Cotton Hodgson, M.A., is the incumbent, and has 13A. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £190, and a good brick residence, built in 1840. The National School was erected by Wm. Robinson, Esq., in 1819, and rebuilt on a larger scale in 1842. It is attended by 36 children, and its play ground, about 2A., was given by Mrs. C. Harvey in 1834. Six boys of Watton are entitled to free instruction at Saham-Toney school. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, have each a chapel here. The Savings' Bank, established in 1819, is open from 11 to 12 o'clock on the first Monday in every month, and has deposits amounting to £17,215, belonging to 494 depositors. A fine celt of yellow flint was found here. Wayland Agricultural Association holds its annual meetings at Watton. The Church Land, 14A. 1R. 20P., is let for £38 per annum. In the town are Almshouses, with small gardens, for four poor widows, founded in 1611, by Edward Goaffe, who endowed them with a yearly rent-charge of £5. An allotment of 1A. 22P., awarded to them at the enclosure in 1801, is let for £4. 5s. per annum. Mr. Edward Stevens built four cottages about 30 years ago, for the residence of four of the oldest poor couples in the parish. The Fuel Allotments, awarded at the enclosure, comprise 54A. 2R. 25P., let for about £75 per annum, which is distributed in coals among the poor parishioners, who have also £23. 10s. yearly from 9A. 35P. of land left by Richard Turner and Thomas Scott, in 1643 and 1727, except some small allotments awarded at the enclosure. The poor have likewise the yearly sum of 10s., left by Edward Goaffe in 1611. Here are several friendly and benefit societies.

SOUTH GREENHOE HUNDRED

Is of an irregular figure, averaging about twelve miles in length, and nine in breadth; bounded on the north by Freebridge-Lynn and Launditch; on the east by Mitford and Wayland; on the south by Grimshoe; and on the west by Clackclose. Its northern part is crossed by the railway from Lynn to Dereham, on which is the neat market town of Swaffham, on a fertile eminence, encompassed by an extensive belt of heath; indeed, the whole Hundred abounds in sheep-walks, and has generally a light sandy soil, except on its eastern side, where it has a rich loam, and its highly cultivated fields are watered by a fine rivulet flowing southward to the Wissey, or Stoke river, which skirts it on the south, as the navigable Nar does on the north-west. It has its name from the green hills, or tumuli, on the heath between Cockley-Cley and North Pickenham, where the Hundred Court was held until the early part of the last century. Its Petty Sessions are held every Saturday, at the Shirehall, in Swaffham; and Robert Sewell, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. It forms, with Grimshoe Hundred, the Deanery of Cranwich, and contains 24 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate, in 1843, and their territorial extent.

BODNEY parish has only one house and a few cottages, on the east side of a rivulet, 7 miles S. of Swaffham. It contains 117 inhabitants, and 2605 acres of land, all belonging to Lord Ashburton, who has rebuilt many of the cottages and farm premises, and otherwise considerably improved the estate. The large farm-house is occupied by Mr. Wm. Sutton, who farms the whole parish. It stands near the site of the old Hall, which was taken down many years ago, and was at one time the tranquil retreat of the nuns of Montargis, among whom Eloise Adelaide de Bourbon, daughter of the Prince of Condé, took the veil here on July 9th, 1805. The Church is a small ancient fabric, of flint and pebbles, and is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 7s. 8d., and consolidated with Great Cressingham. Post from Swaffham, via Hilborough.

BRADENHAM (EAST), a parish and scattered village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile W. of Shipdham, and 7 miles E. by S. of Swaffham, has 329 inhabitants, and 2340 acres of land, lying chiefly in the manors of Huntingfield Hall and East Bradenham, of which T. T. Clarke, Esq., is lord. Here is also a small rectorial manor. The other principal landowners are—Miss Catherine Bullock, G. B. Heyhoe, Wm. Meachen, and Chas. Goring, Esqrs. The Church (St. Mary) is a large edifice comprising nave, chancel, aisles, north porch, and square tower. It was restored in 1853, and fitted with new seats, pulpit, &c. A stained glass window representing the Nativity, was inserted by Capt. Hy. Smith Adlington, the patron of the rectory, which is valued in K.B. at £12. 2s. 8d., and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. George Robert Winter, M.A., who has a good residence, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £353. The School, a neat structure, with teacher's residence attached, was rebuilt by subscription in 1861, and is attended by about 60 scholars. The poor have a house and 2R. of land, bequeathed by a Mr. Green, and now let for £13. 16s. a year, which is distributed in coals. The Church Land, 2A. 3R., is let to the poor in 12 allotments. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. Post from Thetford, via Shipdham.

BRADENHAM (WEST) is a parish of scattered houses, separated from the above by a small rivulet, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles W.N.W. of Shipdham, and $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. of Swaffham. It has 387 inhabitants, and 2396 acres of land, mostly the property of W. M. R. Haggard and Barry Girling, Esqrs., the former of whom is lord of West Bradenham, and the latter of Bokenham Hall manor; but Lieut.-Col. Mason, Capt. Adlington, Col. Blomfield, Henry Day, Esq., and some smaller owners have estates here. The Church, (St. Andrew), which stands on an eminence, is a handsome structure in the early English style, comprising nave, chancel, aisles, south porch, and massive square tower. The latter contains two bells, and is detached from the south-west angle of the nave. The building was restored in 1856-7, at a cost of nearly £700, of which about half was given by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The three west windows are filled with stained glass, in memory of members of the Haggard family. The organ was given by Colonel Mason. The seats, pulpit, and reading desk are of oak, handsomely carved. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7. 1s. 10d., is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. Lewis Morgan, M.A., who has a yearly tithe rent-charge of £169. 9s., and a neat residence. The rectorial tithes are commuted for £218, and belong to the Rev. E. B. Sparke. The School, a neat brick building, with teacher's residence attached, was erected in 1854, and is attended by 50 children. West Bradenham Hall, about half a mile N. of the church, belongs to W. M. R. Haggard, Esq., and is occupied by General Carthew. It was built in 1772, by T. Smyth, Esq., about two furlongs from the site of the old hall, which was a castellated mansion, surrounded by a moat, which now encompasses a thriving plantation. It was purchased of the Smyths, by the grandfather of the present Mr. Haggard, one of whose ancestors, Sir Andrew Ogard, held the manor in the reign of Henry VI., after which it was held by the Clifton, Knyvet, and Devereaux families. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1802, consists of 14A. 1R. 12P., let for £15. 9s. a year, which is distributed in coals. Of this land, 2A. 2R. 36P. is let in nine plots, to industrious labourers. Land, &c., left to the poor, by Richard Brotherwick and four other donors, in the 17th century, was exchanged at the enclosure for 7A. 0R. 25P., and two cottages, let for about £14 a year, which is distributed in coals. Post from Thetford, via Shipdham.

CALDECOT, commonly called COCKET, is a small parish, 6 miles S.W. of Swaffham, containing only 39 inhabitants, and 930 acres of land, belonging to Sir Henry Paston Bedingfeld, Bart., who is patron of the sinecure rectory, valued in K.B. at £3. 1s. 10d., and now at £6, in the incumbency of the Rev. Alexander Thurtell, M.A., of Oxburgh. Of the Church, which was dedicated to the Virgin Mary, no remains now exist. The whole parish is in one farm, occupied by Mr. Henry Oldfield. Post via Stoke Ferry.

COCKLEY-CLEY, on the banks of a rivulet, 4 miles S.S.W. of Swaffham, is a scattered village and parish, containing 263 inhabitants, and 4312 acres of land, of which about 850 acres form a high sandy heath. The Hall, a neat mansion, situated in a well wooded park, is the seat of Theophilus Russell Buckworth, Esq., owner of most of the soil and lord of the manor, which was purchased of the Wodehouse family. Sir H. G. P. Bedingfeld, Bart., has also an estate in the parish. The Church (All Saints) is a venerable fabric, comprising nave, chancel, south aisle, porch, and short round tower. It is fitted with neat open benches, and contains several monuments of the Dashwood and Buckworth families. Near it was a small chapel dedicated to St. Mary, and for many years occupied as the rectory house, but what remains of it is now a cottage. There was also another church (St. Peter) at the east end of the village, said to have been burnt down in the reign of Elizabeth. The rectory of All Saints, and the vicarage of St. Peter, valued in K.B. at £8. 17s. 1d., are consolidated, in the gift of T. R. Buckworth, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Straton Charles Campbell, M.A., who has a yearly rent-charge of £187, and a neat residence, erected in 1853. The School, with teacher's residence attached, was built by the patron, who still supports it. Sir Cloudesley Shovel, the celebrated admiral, and commander-in-chief of Queen Anne's fleet, is said to have been the son of a poor man of this parish, and the runaway apprentice of a shoemaker. He was lost on the coast of Scilly, in 1705, together with several distinguished officers, and 900 men. The honour of giving birth to this famous admiral is, however, also claimed by Cockthorpe, near Wells. In 1621, the Rev. Thomas Yorker left 10A. of land, in Oxburgh, and directed the rents to be applied for five years to the poor of Cockley-Cley, and every sixth year to the poor of Oxburgh. This parish has 10A. of land in Swaffham, given by an unknown donor, and let for £10 a year, of which one-sixth belongs to the church and five-sixths to the poor, who have also £3 a year out of New close, left by John Bagge. A piece of garden ground, belonging to the parish, is now occupied by three poor persons. The chief residents are—The Rector; T. R. Buckworth, Esq., Hall; Jas. Batterham, land steward; Rose Buck, shopkeeper; Isaac Denny, victualler, Cock; Jno. Fuller, parish clerk; William Horningham, butler at Hall; Eliza Nickles, schoolmistress; John Reeve, gamekeeper; Wm. Stevens, blacksmith; and Robert Philip Dodd and Tertius Mack, farmers. Post from Swaffham.

CRESSINGHAM (GREAT) is a scattered village, near the river Wissey, 5 miles S. by E. of Swaffham, and 12 miles N. of Thetford, comprising in its parish 530 inhabitants, and 2424 acres of land, mostly belonging to E. A. Applewhaite, Esq., and John R. Mills, Esq., M.P., the former of whom is lord of Glosebriggs manor and lessee of an estate here called Collins' manor, which belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, who have a peculiar jurisdiction in this parish. Here is likewise a small rectorial manor, in which there was a chapel and hermitage, dedicated to St. George; the site of which is the "Stone Close," where a cattle and horse fair is held on the first Wednesday in August, paying tolls to the rector. The whole parish was held by the Bishop of Thetford at the Domesday survey, and remained with the See till the reign of Stephen, when Bishop Eborard was obliged to resign it to two powerful knights, in order to preserve the rest of his diocese. The Church (St. Michael) is a large edifice in the perpendicular style, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and lofty square tower with three bells. It contains several fine brasses, and inscriptions to the Eyre, Fludd, and other families; and is fitted with neat open benches. The chancel was restored, newly roofed, and floored with encaustic tiles in 1863, when a handsome screen, reading desk, lectern, altar rails, and communion table of carved oak, were provided. Here are mural tablets to the Chamberlain, Lobb, and Philpot families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £17. 8s. 1d., and now at £714, with that of Bodney annexed, is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Chas. Taylor, B.D., who is also prebendary of Hereford, and has here 55 acres of glebe and a good residence. The National School is a neat brick building, erected in 1840, and attended by 90 children. Here is a Primitive Methodist Chapel, built in 1856. In 1621, the Rev. Leonard Burton left £60 to be laid out in land; one moiety for repairing the church, and the other for the parish clerk. This land (8a.) is let for £15 a year. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1803, is 35a., let for £60 per annum, which is distributed in coals among the poor, who have also £1. 2s. 8d. yearly from three rent-charges left by Richard Newman, Robert Heyhoe, and William Robinson.

CRESSINGHAM (LITTLE), on the steep acclivity of a fertile valley, 2 miles S. of the above, and 3 miles W. by S. of Watton, is a village and parish, containing 243 inhabitants, and 1826 acres of land, belonging to John Remington Mills, Esq., M.P., who lets Clermont Lodge (a neat mansion in a small park) to Charles Paris, Esq., of London, as a shooting box. The Church (St. Andrew) comprises nave, aisles, chancel, and tower; but the latter and part of the nave are in ruins. It contains a piscina, and a mural tablet in memory of Viscount Clermont; and is fitted with handsome open seats, pulpit, and reading desk. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £13. 12s. 6d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Edw. James Bolling, M.A., who has 27a. of glebe, a handsome residence, built in 1846, and a yearly rent-charge of £365, awarded in lieu of tithes. The Fuel Allotment, 23a. 1r. 30p., is let for £15 a year, which is distributed in coal among the poor, who have also 14 pecks of rye yearly, left by John James, in 1717, out of a farm here. The Free School, for six boys and six girls, was founded by Wm. Farrer, who, in 1809, left £50 for its erection, and £300 for its endowment. The school was built in 1816, at a cost of £144, arising from the £50 and savings of income. The endowment now consists of £288. 2s. 5d., invested in consols. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here. In 1849, a male skeleton was dug up in a field now called the "Triangle," but formerly "Hill field," from a tumulus long since levelled. A breastplate, part of an armilla, and a small box, all of fine gold; a necklace of amber beads; and a dagger and spear-head of bronze, were found beside it. The chief residents are—The Rector; Mr. George Buckenham; Robt. Chapman, miller; Wm. Cornewell and John Leveredge, carpenters; John Currey, gamekeeper; Hy. Playle, wheelwright; Jas. Tolman, blacksmith and victualler, White House; and Robt. Daines, Jno. George, Brighton Hardy, Wm. Howling, and John Tedder, farmers. Post from Thetford.

DIDLINGTON parish, 8 miles S. by W. of Swaffham, has only 80 inhabitants, and 1854 acres of land, all belonging to Wm. Amhurst Tyssen Amhurst, Esq., lord of the manor, who resides at the Hall, a neat brick mansion, pleasantly situated in a well wooded park, containing some good lime trees, an extensive heronry, and a beautiful sheet of water. It was built on the site of the old hall by Colonel Wilson, father of the 4th Lord Berners, whose successor sold it, in 1846, to Lord Wm. Powlett, from whom it passed by sale, in 1853, to its present owner, who has considerably improved and enlarged it. The Church (St. Michael) stands in the park, and is a neat edifice, comprising nave with aisles, south porch, chancel, and square tower with one bell. It was thoroughly restored in 1857, at the expense of the patron. The nave and aisles are furnished with open benches of carved oak with poppies, and the chancel with handsome stalls. The pulpit and reading desk are also of richly carved oak, and several of the windows are of beautiful stained glass. The altar rails are of white marble, and in the chancel are several tablets of the Amhurst and Wilson families, and a good piscina. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £12. 14s. 7d., and now at £200, with Colveston rectory annexed, is in the patronage of W. A. T. Amhurst, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Fredk. Askew Bickmore. The School is a good brick building with stone dressings, in the Elizabethan style, erected in 1859 by the lord of the manor. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, is 1A. 3R. 8P. The poor have 6s. 8d. a year, left by the Rev. Thos. Hopes, and £5. 8s. 4d. a year, left by an unknown donor. The chief residents are—W. A. T. Amhurst, Esq., Hall; Edwin Bunting, farmer; Wm. Ford, house steward; Mrs. Mary Ford, housekeeper; Wm. Coxon, farm bailiff; Wm. Stockings, gardener; and Ridley Surtees, gamekeeper. Post from Brandon, via Northwold.

FOULDEN, or Fouldon parish, has a large straggling village, 8 miles S.S.W. of Swaffham, and contains 517 inhabitants and 3395 acres of land, mostly the property of W. A. T. Amhurst, Esq., who is lord of the manors of Latimer and Warren; but Mrs. Horrex and Edmund Oldfield, Esq., have estates here, and the latter resides at the Hall, a neat modern mansion which has recently been much improved. The Church (All Saints) is in the decorated style, and comprises nave with aisles, north and south porches, chancel and vestry. The tower has long been an ivy-mantled ruin, but the rest of the building was restored about 20 years ago. The lower part of the ancient rood screen still remains, and the chancel contains a piscina and an organ. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £10. 2s., is consolidated with the rectory of Oxburgh. The great tithes of Foulden are in the appropriation of Gonville and Caius College, and were commuted in 1839 for £267. 19s., and the vicarial tithes for £178. 3s. 6d. per annum. Here are 110A. 2R. of glebe, and a vicarage house, occupied by the curate. The National School, now attended by 50 children, was built in 1840, and has a yearly rent-charge of £5, left by Burnham Raymond, in 1728, for schooling 12 poor children. At the enclosure, 322A. 37P. were left open for supplying occupiers of the ancient cottages with pasture and fuel. For distribution among the poor, in kersey, duffel, and flannel, Foulden has every 5th year about £20, as the rent of 14A. 3R. 22P. of land at Old Buckenham, purchased with £60, left by Edmund Atmere in 1579, for the poor of this parish, and the poor of Feltwell, Northwold, Weeting, and Brandon, in rotation. About Easter, £18.15s. are distributed among the most industrious parishioners of Foulden. It arises as follows:—£11. 7s. from 6A. left by Eliz. Long in 1662, 1A. derived from the bequests of Robert Fuller and another donor, and £7. 8s. from 7A. at Stoke Ferry, given by an unknown donor. Post from Brandon, via Northwold.

GOODERSTONE, commonly called Goodson, is a long village of detached houses, 4 miles N.E. of Stoke Ferry, and 6 miles S.S.W. of Swaffham, in the vale of a rivulet which flows southward to the Wissey. Its parish has 571 inhabitants, two wind mills, one water mill, and 2781A. of land, belonging to J. R. Mills, Esq., M.P., Lord Walsingham, Sir H. P. Bedingfeld, Bart., W. A. T. Amhurst, Esq., A. H. R. Micklefield, Esq., Mr. Charles Brooke, and others; but Samuel Cartwright, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Church (St. George) is a fine early-English edifice, comprising nave, south aisle, south porch, chancel, and massive square embattled tower with three bells. Several of the windows contain fragments of ancient stained glass, one representing the Last Judgment. Here is a handsome painted screen with doors, in good preservation. It has full-length figures of the twelve Apostles with their appropriate emblems, on its lower panels, and above each is a sentence from the Apostles' Creed in Latin. In the chancel are some very old carved oak stalls, and the greater portion of the seats in the nave and aisle, as well as the pulpit and reading desk, are of fine old carved oak. The sedilia and piscinæ still remain; and here are also a handsome stone font and a very ancient and curious alms-box. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 12s., is in the patronage of A. H. R. Micklefield, Esq., who has here a small rectorial manor, and is also impropiator of the great tithes, which have been commuted for £250 a year. The Rev. Chas. Wm. Henry Humphrey Sidney, B.A., is the incumbent, and has an annual tithe rent-charge of £133. The School was erected in 1846, at a cost of £150, and is attended by 50 children. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here. At the enclosure (42nd George III.), an Allotment of 50A. was awarded to the poor. The occupiers of the ancient cottages cut turf upon it, and the herbage is let for £33 a year, which is distributed among the poor who have no right of cutting fuel. The latter have an annuity of 5s. left by Wm. Briston in 1710. The rent of the Town Piece, 4A., is applied in repairing three cottages occupied by poor widows. Some years ago, a human skeleton, several celts, half a quern, and a number of coins were found in this parish, near the water mill. Post from Brandon.

HILBOROUGH, or Hilburgh, is a scattered village, with a handsome hall, a good posting inn, and a large water mill, on the London road, 6 miles S. of Swaffham. Its parish has 365 inhabitants, and 3101 acres of land, all belonging to John Remington Mills, Esq., M.P. The Hall, a square brick mansion in a well-wooded park, on the western bank of a rivulet, was erected in 1779, but is now unoccupied. The Church (All Saints) is a neat edifice, comprising nave, aisles, south porch, chancel, vestry, and fine square tower with five bells. Over the western doorway is a curious carving, representing two figures, one in armour and the other holding a ragged staff in one hand and a man's head in the other. The building has been recently restored and fitted with new pulpit, reading desk, lectern, reredos, &c., of carved oak. The chancel contains a double piscina, the ancient sedilia, and several tablets of the Caldwell family. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £13. 6s. 8d., is in the patronage of the Rev. J. Burroughes, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Hardy, M.A., who has 60A. of glebe, a good residence, built in 1840, and a yearly rent-charge of £460, awarded in 1845 in lieu of tithes. In 1804, the living was augmented with £200 of Q.A.B., and £200 given by the Rev. John Nelson, a late incumbent, and brother to the hero of the Nile. On the north-west side of the village, in a grass close, are the remains of St. Margaret's Chapel, where pilgrims used to halt, on their way to Walsingham Abbey. It was a free chapel, endowed with 100 acres of land at an early period, and was dissolved by Edward VI. The Church has £2, and the poor £1. 17s. 6d. yearly, from land given by unknown donors. At the enclosure in 1769, two allotments were awarded to the poor, viz., 30A. to cut furze upon, and 6A. for pasturage. The National School is supported by J. R. Mills, Esq., and attended by 60 children.

HOLME-HALE, perhaps a corruption of Holme-on-the-Hill, is a scattered village, chiefly on a bold acclivity, above the small river Wissey, 5 miles E. by S. of Swaffham. The parish contains 464 inhabitants, and 2601 acres, belonging to Captain Adlington, Colonel Mason, J. Farrow, Esq., and others; but Edw. Sparks, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Church (St. Andrew) was commenced in the reign of Richard III., but not finished till 1435. It has a large nave, small chancel, north aisle and porch, vestry, and square tower with six bells, and contains an organ, and two fine brasses to Sir Edmund Illey and Wm. Curteys. The tower was built about 1431. The chancel has a handsome open timber roof, and is separated from the nave by a good screen. The building has been restored at various periods, and was partially reseatd in 1856. In 1826, the sexton found in the churchyard six base groats of Henry VIII., enclosed in a woollen cloth, which crumbled to pieces on being touched. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12. 16s. 5d., is in the incumbency of the Rev. Henry Milne, M.A., who has 58A. of glebe, a good residence, built in 1846, and a yearly rent-charge of £572, awarded in 1839 in lieu of tithes. The National School is attended by 60 children. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. The Town Lands were exchanged at the enclosure in 1804, for a house and 38A. 3R. 16P., let for £90 a year, of which £45 are expended in repairing the church, £30 are paid towards the support of the school, £3 are appropriated to the repairs of Earnford Bridge, and the remainder is given to the poor. The Widows' Pightle is let for £2 a year. The Fuel Allotment, 21A. 3R. 33P., was awarded at the enclosure, and is let to poor parishioners at the rate of 20s. an acre.

HOUGHTON-ON-THE-HILL is a small parish, 4 miles S.E. of Swaffham, containing only 49 inhabitants, and 601 acres of land, mostly belonging to E. A. Applewhaite, Esq. Mr. Edward Phillips Dodd is the only resident farmer. The Church (St. Mary) is a small edifice, comprising nave, chancel, and square tower with one bell. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 18s. 9d., and consolidated with that of North Pickenham. Post from Swaffham.

LANGFORD parish, 8 miles S. of Swaffham, has only 62 inhabitants, and 1405A. of land, belonging to Lord Ashburton and W. A. T. Amhurst, Esq., the former of whom is patron of the rectory, which is valued in K.B. at £4. 15s. 9d., and consolidated with that of Ickborough. The tithes of the two parishes were commuted in 1840 for £248 per annum, and the Rev. John Raven, B.A., of Mundford, is the incumbent. Langford Church (Saint Andrew) has a nave, south porch, and chancel. It contains a piscina, a tablet to General Sir James Pulteney, Bart., and a marble monument in memory of Sir Jacob Garrard, who was lord of the manor, and was created a baronet in 1662. Captain Fredk. Caldwell, steward to Lord Ashburton, occupies the Manor House, and Messrs. J. and J. P. Rollison, of Ickborough, farm part of the parish. Post from Swaffham.

NARBOROUGH, or Narburgh, 10 miles E.S.E. of Lynn, and 5 miles N.W. by W. of Swaffham, is an ancient village, on the south side of the river Nar, which is navigable for small craft from Lynn, and has here a water-mill and a wharf, where much business is transacted in coal, timber, corn, malt, &c., by Messrs. Marriott. Here is also a station on the Lynn and Dereham branch of the Great Eastern Railway. The parish contains 387 inhabitants, and about 3545 acres of land, half of which is cultivated heath extending southward to that of Swaffham. H. Villebois, R. G. Winearls, Henry Boyce and Robert Marriott, Esqrs., have estates in the parish, and the latter is lord of the manor, and resides at the Hall, an ancient mansion of brick and stone, formerly encompassed by a moat, and built in the reign of Henry VIII., by Judge Spelman. Near the hall is a lofty entrenchment, from which a large fosse and rampart extended southward along the boundary of Clackclose Hundred, to Eastmore fen, a distance of 8 miles, as may still be traced. John Brame, in a manuscript history quoted by Spelman in his "Icenia," says, Narborough was a British city in the time of Uter Pendragon, about the year 500; that it was governed by Earl Okenard, and stood a seven months' siege against King Waldy. At the head of the fosse near the hall, Sir Clement Spelman dug up several human bones and pieces of armour, whilst making a garden, in 1600. The manor was anciently held by a family of its own name, from which it passed to the Spelmans, and from them to the Dashwoods. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, aisles, and square embattled tower. It formerly had a spire, which was taken down in 1679, and it still contains several monuments and fine brasses to the Spelman family, and tablets to the Marriotts, Tyssens, and Chamberlins. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £9. 10s., is endowed with the rectorial tithes, and from 1799 to June, 1864, was held with Narford, by the late Rev. William Allen, M.A. The value of the joint benefices is £518 a year; and the Vicarage House is a good brick building, erected in 1765. The sum of £91, given by Wm. Harvey and other donors, was laid out in 1761, in the purchase of ten small tenements, occupied by poor families. In 1793, the Rev. Henry Spelman gave £500 three per cent. stock, and directed the dividends to be applied as follows:—£5. 5s. to the parish clerk, for teaching the catechism every Sunday to poor children; and the remainder for distribution in books and clothing among the children. By his will, dated 1803, he left £722, which was invested in the purchase of £968. 5s. 7d. three per cent. consols; the dividends of which are applied, as far as required, in paying a surgeon for attending poor lying-in women, and the residue is distributed in coals or money among the poor communicants. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, erected in 1863, by H. Boyce, Esq. The School was built by R. Marriott, Esq.

NARFORD is a parish and village, on the south side of the river Nar, 2 miles E. of Narborough station, and 5 miles N.W. of Swaffham. It has 123 inhabitants, and 2396 acres of land, belonging to Andrew Fountaine, Esq., the lord of the manor, who resides at the Hall, a handsome stone mansion in the Italian style, which has extensive pleasure grounds and a richly wooded park, containing a large artificial lake well stocked with trout and other fish, and frequented by wild fowl. This house was built by the father of Sir Andrew Fountaine, who was knighted by William III., and took the oaths at the installation of the order of the Bath for the Duke of Cumberland, then an infant. He received a patent for supporters to his arms in 1726, at which time he was vice-chamberlain to the Princess of Wales. He travelled for a considerable time in various parts of Europe, and made an extensive and valuable collection of antiquities and curiosities in art and learning, which are still deposited at Narford Hall; and amongst them are many fine paintings, coins, bronzes, and antique vases, and a great quantity of Majolica ware, painted from the designs of Raphael, D'Urbino, &c. In 1727, Sir Andrew was appointed Warden of the Mint, which office he held till his death, in 1753. He was an eminent virtuoso, and an intimate friend of Pope, Swift, and other literary luminaries. Brigg Fountaine, Esq., who died in 1825, in his 82nd year, was well learned in the ancient and modern languages, and passionately fond of music. In 1805, he published a translation of Don Quixote. For many years he amused himself with astronomy, having built an observatory in the park, near the hall, where numerous Roman Bricks and other antiquities have been found, and a large brass urn was dug up in the court yard, when Sir Andrew was altering the house. Narford village is said to have been a mile in length, in the Conqueror's time; and in the reign of Edward III., Sir Thomas de Narford obtained for it a market and two fairs; but they have been long obsolete. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a neat building of the decorated period, comprising nave, aisles, south porch, chancel, and square tower. The latter had a wooden spire, which was taken down in 1857 by the lord of the manor, who placed a new parapet and pinnacles upon the tower, with an inscription on each side to the memory of his deceased wife. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., is annexed to that of Narborough. The rectorial tithes belong to the Bishop of Ely, and the vicarial tithes have been commuted for £145 per annum. A chapel, dedicated to St. Thomas-a-Becket, formerly stood on the hill, opposite Westacre Priory, to which it was granted by Edward IV. Mr. Jacob Finch, of Swaffham, farms the parish. Post from Brandon.

NECTON, commonly called Neeton, is a parish and scattered village, on the Dereham road, 4 miles E. of Swaffham, containing 948 inhabitants, and 3748 acres of land, mostly belonging to Lieut.-Colonel Mason, lord of the manors called Sparham Hall, Cocket's, alias Corbet's, and Churchman's, formerly held by the De Toneys, Nevilles, Bedingfelds, Eyres, Colliers, &c. He resides at the Hall, a handsome Elizabethan mansion, which is situated in a park of 300 acres, containing some of the finest oaks in the county. In the house is a neat domestic chapel, tastefully furnished with carved oak stalls, and having a fine-toned organ and two beautiful stained glass windows. The Church (All Saints) is an elegant edifice, comprising nave, aisles, chancel, vestry, mortuary chapel, and square tower with six bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1841 by subscription, towards which £1200 were given by Col. Mason, who in 1847 erected the west gallery and gave the organ. The tower, which is now surmounted by a spire, was rebuilt in 1863 at a cost of £1300, of which £700 were contributed by the lord of the manor, and the remainder was obtained from the church and school estate fund. The roof of the nave is of oak, curiously wrought, and supported by angels with expanded wings, below which stand the twelve apostles. On the south side of the nave are other figures of apostles, &c., with the effigy of our Saviour in the centre. Several of the windows are filled with rich stained glass, and over the altar is a painting of the raising of Lazarus. The reredos, pulpit, and seats, are of carved oak. On the floor are several black marble slabs, with brasses and inscriptions to the Goodwyn, Wynston, Mason, and other families. The living is a rectory and vicarage united, valued in K.B. at £8. 6s. 8d., in the patronage of M. C. Walker, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Henry Walker, M.A., who has a spacious residence. The tithes were commuted in 1840 for £905 a year, of which £252 are lay property. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel here. The National School, erected by the late Wm. Mason, Esq., in 1839, is attended by 120 children. The Church and School Estate, which has been vested in trust from an early period for the payment of tenths, fifteenths, and other burthens of the parish, except a small part for the relief of the poor, consists of a farm of 127A. 3R. 29P. at Fransham, let for £136, and a barn and 15A. 34P. in Necton, let for £23 a year. These rents are all applied in the service of the church and school, except £2 distributed among poor widows.

The latter is in consideration of the bequest of Edward Rust, in 1610. The poor parishioners have an annuity of 10s. left by Elizabeth Tinkler; and the interest of £35 left by Henry Skipper and others.

NEWTON-BY-CASTLEACRE is a small village, near the summit of the southern acclivity of the vale of the Nar, overlooking Castleacre, on the opposite side of the river, and distant 4 miles N. by E. of Swaffham. Its parish has only 84 inhabitants, and 1058 acres of land, belonging to Andrew Fountaine, Esq., E. W. Martin, Esq., the Earl of Leicester, and Mrs. Lock, the first of whom is lord of the manor. The Church (All Saints) has a short square tower, rising between the nave and chancel, and containing one bell. It is a low and heavy pile, supposed to have been built about the time of Edward the Confessor. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £2. 15s., and now at £103, was augmented with £200 of Q.A.B. in 1810, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. J. H. Bloom, of Castleacre, and patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, the impropiator of the great tithes, now leased to Wenman Martin, Esq. The poor have 16s. a year left by Wm. Allee in 1655. The chief residents are—Thos. Matthews, farmer, Manor House; Sarah Palmer, victualler, George; and Wm. Last, farm bailiff. Post from Swaffham.

OXBOROUGH, or Oxburgh, is an ancient village, on the banks of a rivulet 3 miles N.E. of Stoke-Ferry, and 6½ miles S.W. of Swaffham, comprising in its parish 225 inhabitants, and 2518 acres, all the property of Sir Henry George Paston-Bedingfeld, Bart., who resides at Oxburgh Hall, which is encompassed by a moat, 52 feet broad and 10 feet deep, and is one of the most perfect ancient castellated mansions in the kingdom. It was erected in the latter part of the 15th century by Sir Edmund Bedingfeld, who was knighted at the coronation of Richard III., in 1483, and had in the previous year obtained a patent from Edward IV. to hold a market with court of piepoudre, every Friday, and to build a manor-house, with towers, battlements, machicolations, &c. It is built of brick, and was originally of a square form, environing a court 118 feet long and 92 broad, round which the apartments were ranged. It resembles Queen's College, Cambridge, and the entrance is over a bridge (formerly a draw-bridge), through an arched gateway, between two majestic octagonal towers which are 80 feet high. In the western tower is a winding staircase, beautifully turned, and lighted by quatrefoil oilet holes. The other tower is divided into four stories, each forming an octagonal room with arched ceilings, stone window frames, and stone fire-places. The archway between the towers is supported by numerous groins, and over it is a large and handsome room, 33 feet long by 20 feet broad, called the "King's Room," having one window to the north, and two bay-windows to the south; the floor is paved with small fine bricks, and the walls are covered with very curious tapestry, which exhibits several figures of princes, ladies, and gentlemen, of the age of Henry VII., who is supposed to have lodged in this apartment when he visited Oxburgh. The tapestry, and the bed which is in the same room, are heirlooms, and descend with the hall. The coverlet and curtains of the bed are well worthy of attention, being formed of green velvet and gold thread, and covered with a variety of devices, the joint production of Mary Queen of Scots and the Countess of Shrewsbury. They bear the names of the Countess and her husband, and the initials of the ill-fated Queen, who, however, was never at Oxburgh; but her cousin, Queen Elizabeth, once visited the hall, and lodged in the apartment over the King's Room. The Great Banqueting Room, which stood on the south side of the quadrangle, was taken down in 1778. It was 56 feet long and 29 feet wide, and had an arched roof of timber and two oriel windows. Some of the other apartments, which have been modernised, are now spacious and elegant, and contain a few good paintings, by Vandyck, Holbein, Salvator Rosa, and other old masters. The outer walls of the hall stand in the broad and deep moat, which is well supplied with water from the adjacent rivulet, which falls into the navigable Wissey, about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile below the hall. Oxburgh was a place of note in the time of the Romans, and from some coins found in Blomefield's time, he considered that it was the Iccani of Antonnius, by some supposed to be at Ickborough. To the north-west of the village, on Warren Hill, are a very deep fosse and vallum, and several tumuli; and near the rivulet are numerous hollows, still denominated Danes' Graves. Stone celts are frequently found here. At the Domesday survey the manor was held by Turketel, the Danish Earl of East Anglia, and was called Oxenburgh. It was given by the Conqueror to Radulphus de Limesio, his nephew, and afterwards passed to the Weylands. In 1285, Nicholas de Weyland received from Edward I. a patent for a weekly market here on Tuesday, and a fair yearly on the vigil, day and morrow of the Blessed Virgin; but the former has long been obsolete, and the latter is now held on Easter Tuesday, for the sale of horses, cattle, toys, &c. Sir Edmund Bedingfeld, Knight, obtained the manor by marrying the heiress of the Tudenham and De Weyland families, in the time of Henry V., and his descendants have retained it ever since, except during the time of the Commonwealth. Sir Edmund was a firm adherent to the House of York, and Edward IV. allowed him to bear his own cognisance, the fetterlock. Sir Henry Bedingfeld was made governor of the Tower of London during the reign of the Catholic Queen Mary, and had the charge of her sister, Elizabeth, who, on ascending the throne, dismissed him from court, saying, "whenever she had a state prisoner who required to be hardly handled and strictly kept, she would send for him." The Sir Henry Bedingfeld, who died in 1655, was confined nearly two years in the tower, and his estates sequestered, for his adherence to the cause of Charles I.; but they were restored to his successor, who was created a baronet in 1660, immediately after the restoration of Charles II. The present baronet was born in 1830, and succeeded his father, the 6th baronet, in 1862. He served in the Austrian cuirassiers, and his son and heir was born in 1860. The parish Church (St. John the Evangelist) is a large edifice, supposed to have been founded in the reign of Edward I., and comprising nave, aisles, north and south porches, chancel, vestry, and square tower. The latter contains five bells, and is surmounted by a lofty octagonal spire, rising to the height of 156 feet. The roof is of oak, panelled; and in the south aisle is a chapel, built in 1573, by the Bedingfelds, to whom here are several beautiful monuments. The terra-cotta screen, which separates this chapel from the aisle, is a fine specimen of renaissance work. The church contains a good organ, and a handsome brass eagle lectern. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 6s. 8d., and now at £661, with the vicarage of Foulden annexed, is in the patronage of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Alexander Thurtell, M.A., who has a pleasant residence about a mile from the church. The Rev. Charles Parkin, the continuator of Bloomfield's History of Norfolk, was presented to this rectory in 1717, and died about 1768. The tithes were commuted in 1845. Near the hall is a neat Catholic Chapel, in the early-English style, built in 1835, by the late Sir H. R. P. Bedingfeld, to whose memory here is a fine brass. This chapel is fitted with open poppy-headed benches, and contains a good organ and an elegant carved wooden reredos. In connection with it is a school, attended by 50 children. Thomas Hewar, in 1619, left his estate here in trust, to apply one-third of the rents towards repairing and beautifying the church, and two-thirds for the relief of poor parishioners. This estate now consists of a farm of nearly 98a., worth about £100 a year, which is applied to the support of a School, which, with the master's house adjoining, was built in 1849, out of the funds of this charity. Mary Hammond, otherwise Craske, in 1679, bequeathed for the poor a tenement and 3a. of land, to which 8a. were added at the enclosure, and the whole is now worth £18 a year. Sir H. Bedingfeld pays, for distribution among the poor, £2 per annum, called Walk Money, and they have about £3 every year from Yorker's Charity. (See page 912.) The parishioners have the right of cutting fuel on about 12a. of fen land, in the parish of Caldecott. The chief residents are—Sir H. G. P. Bedingfeld, Bart., Hall; Rev. Alexander Thurtell, M.A., Rectory; Very Rev. Stephen Longman, Catholic canon; Jacob Boyce, victualler, Spread Eagle; Louisa Cobbin, grocer and draper; A. Palmer, master, Endowed School; Jane Galloway, mistress, Catholic School; Jas. Williams, land agent and steward; William Trundle, blacksmith; Thomas Akers, carpenter; and Henry Wm. Bennett, Pryer Bennett, Thomas Howlett, and Ambrose Pryor, farmers. Post from Brandon.

PICKENHAM (NORTH), a parish and village, in the vale of a rivulet, 3 miles S.E. of Swaffham, has 287 inhabitants, and 1590 acres of land, mostly the property of E. A. Applewhaite, Esq., lord of the manor; Edmund Farrer, Esq., patron of the living; and the Rev. Wm. Ewing, M.A., rector. The Church (St. Andrew), which formerly had a chapel and hermitage dedicated to St. Paul, is now a handsome structure in the decorated style, comprising nave, south aisle and porch, north transept, chancel, and tower, having been entirely rebuilt—the tower in 1861, and the rest of the edifice in 1863, at a total cost of £2700, the greater part of which was contributed by the rector. The pulpit, reading desk, and benches, are of carved oak, and the east window is about to be filled with stained glass. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 4s. 2d., is consolidated with that of Houghton-on-the-Hill. The glebe is about 110a., and the tithes of the two parishes were commuted in 1839, for £499 a year. The Rectory House was rebuilt about five years ago by the rector, who also built a neat brick School, with residence attached, in 1856. The Fuel Allotment, 10a. 1r. 3p., was awarded in 1807, and is let for £25. The chief residents are—Rev. Wm. Ewing, M.A., Rectory; Rev. Wm. Henry Harris, curate; Emma Cooke, schoolmistress; Wm. Moore, victualler, Blue Lion; Robt. Herald, shoemaker; Crofts Leach, carpenter; Charles Neave, shopkeeper; Thomas Neave, beerhouse; Edward Wray, tailor; and Thomas Gill, William Moore, and John Sewell (Manor House), farmers. Post from Brandon, via Swaffham.

PICKENHAM (SOUTH), is a parish and neat village, 4 miles S.S.E. of Swaffham, containing 159 inhabitants, and 1830 acres of land, of which about 200 acres are a rabbit warren on the heath west of the village. Edward Archer Applewhaite, Esq., is owner of the soil and lord of the manor. He resides at the Hall, an ancient mansion, which was repaired and modernised about 30 years ago. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, north porch, chancel, vestry, and round tower with octagonal belfry and one bell. On the north side are the remains of a chapel, in which Sir Henry Hobart, Knight, was interred in 1638; and in the chancel are several monuments of the Chutes, who were formerly seated at the hall. The church windows were restored in 1857. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 1s. 5½d., is in the patronage of the lord of the manor, and incumbency of the Rev. Geo. Montagu, B.A., of Swaffham, who has a yearly tithe rent-charge of £315. The chief residents are—E. A. Applewhaite, Esq., Hall; John Johnson and Morris Cooper, farmers; Robert Dixon, land agent and steward; and James Richardson, blacksmith and shopkeeper. Post from Brandon, via Swaffham.

SOUTHACRE, a small village above the vale of the Nar, opposite Castleacre, 4 miles N. of Swaffham, has in its parish 92 inhabitants, and 2492 acres of land, belonging to Andrew Fountaine, Esq., the lord of the manor, and patron of the rectory, which is valued in K.B. at £10. 18s. 1½d., and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. John Fountaine, who has 44A. 2R. 32P. of glebe, a good residence, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £520. The Church (St. George) has a long nave with north aisle, a chancel, and a low tower with three bells. In a chapel adjoining the north wall is an altar tomb, bearing the effigy of a Knight Templar, probably Sir Eudo Harsicke, who died in 1292; and at the east end is another altar-tomb with effigies of Sir Edward Barkham and his lady. On the pavement is a fine brass, representing a male and female of the Harsicke family; and the fragments of several statues remain in various parts of the church. In the parish was a House of Lepers, with a chapel, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, and the site is still called Bartholomew hill. The chief residents are—The Rector; Wm. B. Clark and Walter Orbell Palmer, farmers; John Starling, farm bailiff; and Robert Yallop, parish clerk. Post from Brandon, via Swaffham.

SPORLE-WITH-PALGRAVE, the former a long village of detached houses, and the latter a small hamlet, are distant 1½ mile from each other, and 2½ miles N.E. by N. of Swaffham. They form one parish, containing 806 inhabitants, and 3817 acres of land, a great part of which, with the manor, belongs to St. Catherine's Hospital, London; but Edmund Farrer, Esq., and a few smaller owners have estates here. There was a Priory at Sporle, founded in the time of Edward I., as a cell to the monastery of St. Florence, in Anjou, but it was dissolved, with other alien priories, in 1420, and afterwards granted to Eton College, with which are vested the appropriation of the tithes and the advowson of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £10. 3s. 6d., and now at £300, with the rectory of Palgrave annexed. The Rev. Thos. Jones, M.A., F.S.A., is the incumbent, and has 18A. 36P. of glebe. The foundations of the priory may still be traced. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a lofty and spacious building, comprising nave, aisles, chancel, and square tower with three bells. It is fitted with neat open benches, and has a good Norman font. There was anciently a church at Palgrave, where Mr. Charles Palmer has a neat Elizabethan mansion, erected in 1844. Petygard's Hall, in this parish, is the handsome seat of Edmund Farrer, Esq. Here are two wind and one steam mill. The Primitive Methodist Chapel was built in 1862. The National School, erected in 1842, is attended by about 40 children. Sir Matthew Holworthy, at some date unknown, left £600 to purchase land, the rents to be paid to the vicar for preaching a sermon here every Sunday afternoon in Summer. This land is now let for £126. 10s. a year. The same donor also left 10A. 2R. 22P. for schooling poor children, and it is now let for £35. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1806, is 91A. 3R. 17P., let for £90 a year, with a house, built out of the rents, in 1818.

SWAFFHAM is a handsome market-town, and the principal place of election of knights of the shire for the western division of Norfolk, on the Lynn and Dereham branch of the Great Eastern Railway, which has a station here. It gives name to a large Union, and is situated 15 miles E.S.E. of Lynn, 27 miles W. of Norwich, and 93 miles N.N.E. of London; and holds a pleasant situation on the crown of an eminence, whose gradually swelling acclivities, for a circuit of nearly two miles, are occupied by fertile and well-wooded enclosures. It is considered by the faculty as peculiarly salubrious; and in proof of this opinion, some instances of great longevity have been adduced, among which, it is said, the united ages of four persons, who died here in 1798, amounted to 355 years; and those of eleven, who died in 1799, amounted to 890 years; to which we may add Mrs. Cross, who died here in 1816, aged 100 years; the Rev. Wm. Yonge, M.A., chancellor of the diocese, who was vicar here 65 years, and died in 1844, aged nearly 92; and Betty Ward, who died in 1864, aged 94. It has been styled the Montpelier of England; but for asthmatic and consumptive patients, the air has often been found too keen and penetrating. On Nov. 19th, 1775, the town was much injured by a dreadful fire which consumed 24 houses; but it has since been considerably improved, especially since the establishment of the local Board of Health; and it now has many large and handsome houses, and a noble church, shaded by a fine avenue of lime trees. It is well lighted with Gas from Works established in 1840, by a company of shareholders, at a cost of about £1800; but owing to the gravelly nature of the soil, the only supply of Water, except from rain, is obtained from a number of draw-wells, some of which have been sunk to a depth of nearly 200 feet, at great expense. The streets are open and well-built, and branch in various directions from a spacious Market place, which is lined with good shops, inns, &c., and has in its centre an elegant market cross, erected by the Earl of Orford, in 1783, and consisting of a peristyle of circular columns, supporting a dome covered with lead, and terminated by a statue of Ceres. The Market, held every Saturday, is toll free, but is now of little importance. Three large fairs for cattle, sheep, &c., are held yearly on the 2nd Wednesday in May, the 3rd Wed. in July, and the 1st Wed. in November. Swaffham had a market before the reign of King John, and Henry III. granted it two weekly fairs. The CORN HALL, in the market place, is a handsome building of red and white brick, with stone dressings, in the Italian style, and was erected in 1858 at a cost of £1800, raised in £5 shares. The ground floor is occupied by a subscription billiard room, and a young men's institute, reading room, and library. The large upper room is occasionally let for lectures, concerts, &c., and is used every Saturday as a Corn Exchange. On the west side of the market hill is the ASSEMBLY ROOM, a plain brick building, erected in 1817.

SWAFFHAM PARISH has increased its population, since 1801, from 2220 to 3559 souls, and comprises 7750 acres of land. All the population and buildings are in the town and its immediate suburbs, except a few scattered farmhouses, the most distant of which are, Great and Little Friars' Thornes, nearly two miles W., adjoining the heath, which is now mostly enclosed. The soil and buildings belong to a number of copyholders and freeholders, the largest of whom is Anthony Hamond, Esq., the lord of the Manor of Swaffham Market, which comprises more than nine-tenths of the parish, and was anciently held by the Earls of Richmond, who had a prison here. Being ancient demesne (like North Pickenham, Narford, Palgrave, Foulden, Great Cressingham, &c.,) the inhabitants are exempt from serving on juries, except in their own parishes; also, "free from the payment of toll, and from contribution to the expenses of knights of Parliament," unless they hold lands and tenements in other manors, for which they may be put on juries at the assizes. From a verdict of the manor court, in 1620, it appears "that the freeholders hold the manor by socage, fealty, and free-rent, and pay for free-rent 4d. an acre; for every acre of copyhold, 3d., and every messuage, 9d.; that the copyholders may make leases of their estates for 21 years, without license of the lord, paying on admittance 2d. per acre." Sir Edward Coke farmed this manor of Charles I.; and from him it passed to the Barkhams and the Yallops. One of the latter took the name of Spelman, of Westacre High House, now the seat of the present lord of the manor; for which Alan Henry Swatman, Esq., of Lynn, is steward. The fincs are all certain, as stated above, except on the Market-hill, where arbitrary fines are levied. The custom of the manor is to the eldest son; and all the tenants have unstinted commonright on the heath, where the poor are allowed to cut turf, furze, ling, &c. Some of the enclosed lands are also subject to the depasturage of the town herds, from Michaelmas to Lady-day; but this inconvenient claim is somewhat checked by the ample reprisals which are generally made on the estates of those who exercise it. The other manor, called Hasfalls and Whitsands, is of small extent, comprising only about 100 acres of enclosed land, called the Town Estate, with commonright over all the heath, as afterwards noticed.

The CHURCH (St. Peter and St. Paul) is a large and handsome pile of freestone, brick, and flint, commenced about the reign of Edward IV., but not finished till 1510. It is in the form of a cross, having a chancel, nave, aisles, transepts, and a lofty well-proportioned tower, terminated by enriched embrasures and purfled pinnacles, and containing eight musical bells and a good clock. The nave is very lofty, having 26 clerestory windows; and its inner roof is ornamented with a profusion of carved wooden figures of angels, &c., and supported by slender clustered pillars, from which spring 14 pointed arches, seven on each side. In the windows are some remains of ancient stained glass, supposed to represent the benefactors who contributed towards rebuilding the church. The north aisle and the tower are said by tradition to have been built by John Chapman, a tinker, of this town, who dreamt that if he went to London Bridge, he would hear news greatly to his advantage, and having gone thither, he was, after walking about for some hours, accosted by a man, who asked him what he wanted, to which he replied, that he had come there on the vain errand of a dream; and the man answered, "Alas, good friend! if I had heeded dreams, I might have proved myself as very a fool as thou hast; for 'tis not long since I dreamt that at a place called Swaffham, in Norfolk, dwells John Chapman, a pedler, who hath a tree at the back of his house, under which is buried a pot of money." On hearing this, the tinker hastened home, dug under the tree, found a large brass pot full of money, and inscribed, "Under me doth lie, another much richer than I;" but being in Latin, it was some time before the tinker discovered the meaning, after which he dug deeper, and found a much larger pot filled with old coin. The inhabitants, soon afterwards, determined to re-edify the church, and are said to have been agreeably surprised by the tinker's offer to defray the expense of rebuilding the north aisle and the tower. That a wealthy parishioner, called John Chapman, was churchwarden in 1462, and founded the north aisle, is evident from an ancient register, called the "Black Book;" but the traditional story of his dream, and of his having been a pedler or tinker, has undoubtedly been fabricated by the vulgar, from the rebuses on his name, carved on his seat in the north aisle, representing a pedler or chapman, with his pack, and his wife looking over the door of a shop; but this and many other carved seats were removed many years ago, when the nave and aisles were repewed. The carved fragments of these ancient stalls and seats now form a patched piece of work, in the chapel of the north transept, commonly called the tinker's seat, and still exhibiting small figures of a pedler, with his pack, his wife, and his dog; but the latter being muzzled, and having a chain running across his back, is more probably intended for a bear. Among the monuments is an altar-tomb, with the effigy of John Botewright, D.D., who was master of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, chaplain to Henry VI., and vicar of this church, when it was rebuilt. His office, faith, and name are shewn by rebuses on four shields—a hieroglyphical mode of expression which was practised among the Greeks and Romans, and is mentioned in the time of Homer. The vestry contains some ancient armour and a library of books, chiefly presented by the Spelmans, of Narborough. Seven Guilds, or fraternities for religious, convivial, and benevolent purposes, had formerly altars in this church, dedicated to the Ascension, Saint Nicholas, St. Peter, St. Helen, St. John-the-Baptist, St. Thomas-a-Becket, and the Holy Trinity; but very little is known of them except their names, though each had probably a hall or meeting house in the town. During the last fifteen years the church has been restored and considerably improved, at a cost of about £1600. It will now accommodate 1100 hearers, and is seated with open poppy-headed benches of oak. In 1853, the east window was filled with beautiful stained glass, representing the Resurrection, executed by Wailes, at a cost of £400, bequeathed by the late Miss Ella Morse. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £14. 8s. 10d., and now at £808, with the rectory of Threxton annexed, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. Salisbury Everard, M.A., who has 39a. of glebe, and a spacious brick residence, erected in 1846. The tithes of Swaffham parish were commuted in 1840, for yearly rent-charges of £543. 17s. 6d. to the vicar; and £1143. 12s. to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster, the appropriators of the rectory, which is held on lease by A. Hamond, Esq. Here are about 113a. of rectorial glebe. The fine avenue of lime trees in the churchyard (18 on each side), were planted about 160 years ago, by Wm. Fortin. About half a mile west of the town, near the Lynn road, is a place anciently called Guthlac's Stow, from a chapel which stood there, dedicated to St. Guthlac, but now commonly called Goodluck's closes. At Friars' Thornes, about a mile further to the west, upon a high hill, stood a small priory cell, belonging to the monks of Sawtry, being a resting place for pilgrims in their progress from Canterbury to Walsingham priory.

CHAPELS.—The Baptist Chapel, in Castleacre-street, is a neat brick building in the Italian style, erected in 1859 at a cost of £1300. It is under the ministry of the Rev. Wm. Woods. The Wesleyan Chapel, in London-street, was built in 1813, at a cost of £950; and the Primitive Methodist Chapel, in Lynn-street, was erected in 1853.

The TOWN ESTATE, comprising the manor of Hasfalls and Whitsands, belonged to the dissolved chantry of Simon Blake, and was granted by Edward VI., in 1549, in consideration of £126. 2s. 1d. (town's money), to twelve trustees, to be elected yearly by the churchwardens and other parishioners, upon trust that the rents and profits thereof should be applied yearly for the relief of the poor, the reparation of the highways and town wells, and the payment of all other common charges in the parish. The estate consists of a farm of 99A. 1R. 14P. of land, with a sheep-walk over 316A. of heath, and 220A. of half-year lands. It is let for £170 a year, and the tenant has the privilege of turning such neat cattle as he can summer, upon all the heath and half-year lands in the parish. The rents are received by the churchwardens, and expended in the service of the church, and the payment of the clerk's and sexton's salaries, except the distribution of 54s. per annum, in quarterly sums of 1s. 6d., among nine poor widows, under the name of the King's Alms, pursuant to the deed of 1549. The churchwardens and the twelve trustees, or Town Guardians, carry to the same account £10. 2s. per annum, arising as follows:—£3 from the Camping Ground, left by the Rev. John Botewright, D.D., in 1475, for the use of the church, and as a place for all the parishioners to exercise in archery, military discipline, and other proper games; £3 from 2A. 3R. 30P. of land at Pickenham, given by an unknown donor, and £4. 2s., arising from the gifts or bequests of Edward Bayfield, in 1729; C. & W. Rodwell, in 1775; Mary Machin, in 1675; one Wentland, at an unknown date; Rose Case, in 1711, and an unknown donor. From these charities, £2. 5s. are distributed among fifteen poor widows, and £3. 8s. are distributed in bread among the poor parishioners. Four houses and other buildings, and small plots of land, given by Wm. & Susan Bedingfeld, in 1671, and Helen Johnson, in 1675, are let for about £53 per annum. This rent, after the payment of heavy expenses for repairs, insurance, &c., is distributed in coals among poor widows and sick parishioners. A shop and stall in the Market place, left to the poor by Nicholas Hamond, in 1724, were burnt down in 1809. Two tenements in Lynn street, given by Thos. Theodricke, in 1723, and four tenements in the Greenway, given by Ann Brett, in 1807, in exchange for an old almshouse, are occupied rent free by poor families.

HAMOND'S SCHOOL, in the green croft called the Camping Ground, consists of a good house, capable of accommodating 40 boarders. It was built in 1736, at a cost of £500, left by Nicholas Hamond, in 1724, together with £500 for its endowment. The latter sum was laid out in the purchase of £800 New South Sea Annuities, the yearly dividends of which (£22) are paid to the master, but there are now no free boys. NATIONAL SCHOOLS, now attended by 70 boys and 40 girls, were built on the Camping ground in 1838, and are supported by subscription. An Infant School, in the old Workhouse, is supported by Miss Hamond.

THE SAVINGS' BANK, in Mangate street, is open every Saturday, and has deposits amounting to about £2700, belonging to £660 depositors and 11 charitable and 20 friendly societies. Swaffham Coursing Society was established in 1776, chiefly through the patronage of the late Lord Orford, since whose decease it has had the liberal support of the neighbouring gentry. The coursing continues four days over the fine open country, extending to Narford, Narborough, and Marham. SOUTH GREENHOE ASSOCIATION, for promoting good conduct and encouraging industrious habits in servants, cottagers, and labourers, was instituted in 1843, and holds its annual meeting here in October, for the distribution of rewards and premiums. Lieutenant-Colonel Mason is president; and T. R. Buckworth, Esq., vice-president and treasurer.

THE COUNTY PRISON at Swaffham was erected in 1787, and considerably enlarged in 1821, when a large plot was added to its enclosure. It occupies the site of the old Bridewell (erected in 1599,) and has a commodious house for the governor, fronting London street. The prison was again enlarged in 1844, at a cost of £1500. It has 67 cells and 3 hospital rooms, and has usually about 60 prisoners, who are treated on the separate system, and employed in mat making, sacking weaving, tailoring, shoemaking, oakum picking, pumping water from a well 150 feet deep, &c. Mr. Duncan Stuart is governor; and the Rev. Bircham Houchen, chaplain. The COUNTY POLICE STATION is in London st., adjoining the prison, and was built in 1848 and enlarged in 1859. It contains residences for the superintendent and one constable, and two cells for the temporary confinement of prisoners. The SHIRE HALL is a handsome building, which was erected in 1839, at a cost of £2200, in the Grecian and Italian styles. It adjoins the back part of the House of Correction, and fronts Whitecross lane. Adjourned Quarter Sessions are held here at the usual periods, and Petty Sessions every Saturday. Robert Sewell, Esq., is clerk of the Magistrates.

SWAFFHAM COUNTY COURT DISTRICT comprises the parishes of Ashill, Beachamwell, Bodney, East and West Bradenham, Buckenham Tofts, Caldecot, Castleacre, Cockley Cley, Colveston, Great and Little Cressingham, Didlington, Great and Little Dunham, Foulden, Gooderstone, Hilborough, Holme Hale, Houghton on the Hill, Igburgh, Langford, East and West Lexham, Marham, Narborough, Narford, Necton, Newton by Castleacre, Oxburgh, North and South Pickenham, Rougham, Saham Toney, Shingham, Southacre, Sporle with Palgrave, Stanford, Swaffham, Threxton, and Westacre. The court is held once in every two months at the Shire Hall, and T. J. Birch, Esq., of Wretham Hall, is judge; Geo. E. Foster, Esq., of Cambridge, treasurer; Thomas Palmer, Esq., of Great Dunham, registrar; Robert Sewell, Esq., of Swaffham, assistant registrar; Mr J. H. S. Durbin, of Lynn, high bailiff; and Sendall Cory, assistant bailiff.

SWAFFHAM UNION comprises all the 24 parishes of South Greenhoe Hundred, the parishes of Beachamwell and Shingham, in Clackclose Hundred; those of Ashill, Saham-Toney, and Threxton, in Wayland Hundred; and those of Buckenham-Tofts, Igburgh, Colveston, and Stanford, in Grimshoe Hundred. The 33 parishes of this Union comprise an area of 26 square miles, and in 1861 had a population of 13,747 souls, of whom 6834 were males, and 6913 females. Their average annual expenditure on the poor, during the three years ending March 1835, was £12,089; for the succeeding three years, £8724; and it is now about £8000. The Union Workhouse, at Swaffham, was built in 1836, at a cost of £5425, and has room for 400 paupers; but the average daily number of inmates, in summer, is less than 100. Robert Sewell, Esq., is union clerk and superintendent registrar; and Mr. James Philo, registrar of marriages. Messrs. Wm. Packer and George Walker, are the relieving officers and registrars of births and deaths. The Rev. B. Houchen is chaplain; Mr. Walter Mead, master, and Mrs. Mary Howard, matron of the Workhouse.

POST OFFICE at Wm. Parson's, Market place. Letters arrive from all parts at 4.45 a.m. and 4.47 p.m., and are despatched via Brandon at 8.5 p.m., and via Litcham at 6 a.m. Money Orders are granted and paid from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., and the Savings' Bank is open during the same hours.

MITFORD HUNDRED,

The most central division of Norfolk, comprehends an area of about ten miles in length and six in breadth; bounded on the north by Eynesford, on the east by Forehoe, on the south by Wayland, and on the west by South Greenhoe and Launditch Hundreds. It formerly abounded in extensive commons, nearly the whole of which were enclosed during the first half of the present century, so that it is now a highly cultivated and well wooded district. At the Domesday survey, it belonged to the monastery founded in the Isle of Ely, by Ethelfreda, a princess of East Anglia; from which it passed to the See of Ely, with which it remained till granted to the Crown by an Act of Parliament in the first of Elizabeth. It has since passed to various lords, and forms, with Forehoe Hundred, the Deanery of Hingham, in the Archdeaconry of Norfolk. Its Petty Sessions are held at East Dereham every alternate Friday. It is traversed by the railway from Wymondham to East Dereham, and contains eighteen parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the county rate in 1843, and their territorial extent:—

* Dillington is in Launditch Hundred, but in Dereham parish.

MITFORD AND LAUNDITCH UNION.—All the 50 parishes of the Hundreds of Mitford and Launditch were incorporated for the support of their poor in 1775; but in 1801 the parish of East Dereham obtained an act by which it was separated from the incorporation. In 1836, the whole of these parishes, with ten parishes in Eynesford Hundred, were formed into a Union under the Poor Law Amendment Act. These 60 parishes comprise an area of about 110,000 acres, and comprised 28,020 inhabitants in 1861. The House of Industry, which belonged to the old incorporation, is at Gressenhall, and was built in 1776 and '7, at a cost of £16,242, including the purchase of 61A. 2R. 35P. of land. In 1835, it was valued at nearly £10,000, and in the following year, about £5000 were expended in repairs and alterations, so as to adapt it for the Union Workhouse. The average annual expenditure of the 60 parishes of this extensive Union, from 1832 to 1835, was £26,684, and since then it has only been about £10,000. The number of persons in the Workhouse, when the census was taken in 1861, was 267. On March 18th, 1844, there were 320 paupers in the house; and at one period in 1800, it had as many as 670 inmates. Though this large Workhouse stands in a high and healthy situation, cholera and scarlet fever, in 1834, swept away one-sixth of its inmates. Part of the land is enclosed as a burial ground, and the rest is cultivated by spade husbandry. Charles Wright, Esq., of East Dereham, is union clerk and superintendent registrar; and Mr. Fredk. J. Smith, of East Dereham, is registrar of marriages. The registrars of births and deaths are—Messrs. F. J. Smith for East Dereham District, Francis Lee for Shipdham District, George Taylor for Mattishall District, Chas. Baker for Bawdeswell District, Chas. J. Jump for Litcham District, and John Elmer for North Elmham District. The relieving officers are—Messrs. John Case for Mitford District, Philip Reynolds for Litcham District, and George Bond for Elmham District. Mr. Robt. Wm. and Mrs. Scraggs are master and matron of the Workhouse, and the Rev. W. R. Eaton, chaplain. The union surgeons are—Messrs. Jas. Vincent, M.D., S. M. Hopson, Charles J. Jump, George Taylor, P. P. Ransome, Henry Raven, Horace Hastings, John R. Clouting, J. T. Tallent, and Alfred Drew. The board of guardians meets at the Workhouse every Monday, at 10 a.m.

CRANWORTH, on the Blackwater rivulet, is a scattered village, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. of Shipdham, and 16 miles W. by S. of Norwich. Its parish contains 264 inhabitants, and 1107 acres of fertile land, mostly belonging to Brampton Gurdon, Esq., M.P., the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £5. 18s. $6\frac{1}{2}$ d., and is now worth £307 a year, with that of Letton annexed. The Rev. Philip Gurdon, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence, which he considerably enlarged in 1840. The tithes of Cranworth have been commuted for £212. 14s. The Church (St. Mary) is a handsome structure in the early-English style, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and square tower. The latter contains three bells, and is surmounted by a small wooden spire. The south porch was erected, the chancel rebuilt, and the remainder of the church completely restored in 1852, at a cost of £1500, contributed by the Rector and his family. The reredos is of Caen stone, well executed; and the screen, chancel stalls, altar rails, pulpit, and reading desk are of carved oak. In the aisles are several monuments of the Gurdons, of Letton Hall. Here was anciently a village called Swathing, but it was depopulated several centuries ago. The School was built in 1844 by the late T. T. D. Gurdon, Esq., and is supported by the lord of the manor. Attached to it is a residence for the mistress. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1798, is 6A. 3R. 17P., and the poor have also 5s. a year from Mowting's Charity. The Right Hon. Robert Monsey Rolfe, LORD CRANWORTH, was born here in 1790, being the only son of a former rector, the Rev. Edmund Rolfe, who was first cousin to Admiral Lord Nelson. He was educated at Winchester and at Trinity College, Cambridge; was 17th wrangler in 1812; was called to the bar in 1816; became King's Counsel in 1832; Solicitor-General in 1834; a Baron of the Exchequer in 1839; a Lord Commissioner of the Great Seal, Vice Chancellor, and member of the Privy Council in 1850 ; and Lord Chancellor in 1852. He was M.P. for Penrhyn from 1832 till 1839, received his knighthood in 1835, and was raised to the peerage in 1850. Post from Thetford.

EAST DEREHAM, or MARKET DEREHAM, is the most central and one of the handsomest market towns in Norfolk, pleasantly situated on the east side of a rivulet, 16 miles W. by N. of Norwich, 12 miles E. by N. of Swaffham, and about 102 miles N.N.E. of London. It has a station on that branch of the Great Eastern Railway which extends from Wymondham to Lynn, and from it another line proceeds northward to Fakenham and Wells, thus constituting Dereham an important junction in the railway system, and affording easy access to all parts of the kingdom. The earliest account of East Dereham is in the time of the Saxons, when Withberga, a natural daughter of Anna, King of East Anglia, settled here, with some other virgins, in 650, and erected a nunnery, of which she became the first prioress. This convent was subject to the abbey founded by Ethelfreda, the legitimate daughter of King Anna, in the Isle of Ely. The nunnery being destroyed by the Danes, its church was made parochial in 791, though the convent was subsequently refounded as an abbey, and at the dissolution Roger Jarmy, the last abbot, had a pension allowed him of £66. 13s. 4d., so that its annual revenue must have been very valuable. St. Withberga, the first prioress, died in 655, and was first buried in the churchyard, at the west end of the church, where a chapel was erected over her tomb ; but her body being found "uncorrupted" in 798, was taken up and re-interred in the body of the church, where it remained till 974, when Brithnot, Abbot of Ely, and his monks, "out of extreme attachment to the sacred relic," concerted a scheme for stealing the body, and translating it to Ely, which they effected while the inhabitants were feasting in their Guild hall. Before the men of Dereham could take any measures for its recovery, the body was enshrined at the east end of Ely cathedral. This theft is described by Eliensis as "a holy sacrilege,—a pious fraud,—a soul-saving robbery." From the original grave of the princess, in the churchyard, a very fine spring of water issued after the removal of her body, and extraordinary miraculous powers were attributed to it ; so that the good people of Dereham had some consolation for the loss of the body of the royal saint. Out of gratitude to her memory, and to perpetuate the virtues of the spring, the ruins of the tomb were repaired, and converted into a bath for public use, in 1752, again in 1756, and finally in 1793. The bath has been long destroyed, but the ruins are still carefully enclosed with iron railing, and laid out with flower beds, and there is a long inscription in the wall above the spring. Tradition says that the nunnery here was so poor at its institution that the nuns were supported chiefly by two does, which came constantly to be milked at a certain time and place, until the bailiff of the town, "envying them this supply, most maliciously hunted them away with his hounds ; and, as a just punishment upon him, he soon after broke his neck, as he was pursuing his favourite diversion of hunting."

The Town was nearly destroyed by a dreadful fire in the reign of Elizabeth, as we learn from a book then published, and entitled "An Account of the Lamentable Burning of East Dereham, in the County of Norfolk, on July 1st, 1581," in verse, printed in black letter. It was again almost destroyed by fire in the 21st of Charles II., on the 3rd July, when five persons,

170 houses, with a great number of horses and other cattle, were consumed. The damage was estimated at £19,443. The town suffered much by the plague in 1646; and on April 10th, 1810, four horses, a barn, &c., were destroyed by another conflagration. When the Bishop of Ely was lord of the Hundred of Mitford, he had a session-house and a gaol here near the Market House, and held a court of gaol delivery yearly on the Tuesday after Palm Sunday. Before the year 1737, East Dereham was supposed to be the dirtiest town in the county; the streets were uneven and choked with filth; and on the spot where Sir Edward Astley erected a handsome obelisk, marked with the distances to most of the principal towns and seats in Norfolk, was a pit of dirty water, serving as the drain of the parish. Near a brewhouse was another standing drain; and a lane at the east end of the town, and another which led down to the church and the vicarage house, were so narrow as scarcely to admit the passing of a carriage. Since that period the streets have been levelled and well paved and drained by subscription, towards which Sir Robert Walpole, afterwards Earl of Orford, contributed largely; and previous to the completion of the work, he invited the inhabitants to dine with him at his princely seat, Houghton Park, where, in their hilarity, they so far forgot the politics of their host, as to sing, in chorus, a famous Jacobite song, called, "All Joys to Great Cæsar." Sir Robert, however, showed no displeasure at their proceedings, but sent them home highly pleased with their entertainment. Dereham now ranks as one of the most improving towns in the county, and consists chiefly of a spacious market place and several long streets, lined with neat modern houses and well stocked shops. It is lighted with Gas from works erected in 1833, and the numerous gardens and orchards in the vicinity are so prolific in fruit and vegetables as to have obtained for it the name of the "Garden of Norfolk."

The MARKET, held every Friday, is abundantly supplied with all kinds of provisions, corn, sheep, cattle, swine, &c., and is one of the best in Norfolk. Here are also two annual FAIRS, on the Thursdays before July 6th and September 24th, for cattle, sheep, toys, &c. In 1756, handsome ASSEMBLY ROOMS were built on the site of the Old Market Cross, forming a spacious brick building, in which the magistrates hold PETTY SESSIONS for the Hundred every alternate Friday. The CORN HALL was erected in 1856, by a company of shareholders, at a cost of £3000, and is a large edifice, presenting to the market place a handsome front, with six Corinthian columns, supporting a pediment, on which are the implements of husbandry, and a life-size statue of the late Earl of Leicester. The hall is 84 feet long by 54 feet wide, and has a flat panelled ceiling of glass. It will accommodate 1000 persons, and is sometimes let for concerts, balls, lectures, &c., for which it is admirably adapted. ST. NICHOLAS' HALL, in Theatre street, was built in 1815 as a Theatre, but is now let for various public purposes. The MECHANICS' INSTITUTE, established in 1854, is held in the Assembly Rooms, and has a library of 1000 volumes, and a well-supplied newsroom. Lord Sondes is president, and Mr. Robert Mayhew secretary. The East Dereham Company of RIFLE VOLUNTEERS has about 70 men, and was embodied in 1860. W. E. G. L. Bulwer, Esq., is captain; W. R. Freeman, Esq., lieutenant; and Edward Barwell, Esq., ensign. The worsted manufacture formerly carried on at Dereham, has long been obsolete, but here are three brewers and maltsters, a sack manufactory, and four iron foundries. Various implements used in agriculture are made here, as well as mill machinery, &c.

The PARISH of East Dereham (with the hamlet of Dillington, in Launditch Hundred,) has increased its population since the year 1801, from 2,546 to 4,368 souls, and contains 5,222 acres of fertile and highly cultivated land, extending more than a mile and a half round the town, and including within that distance several handsome mansions and the HAMLETS of Dillington, one mile N.W.; Dumpling Green, one mile S.E.; Etling Green, one-and-a-half mile E.; North-hall Green, one mile N.E.; South Green, half a mile S.; and Toftwood, one-and-a-half mile S. of Dereham. The Common was inclosed about the year 1810, when several allotments were awarded to the poor for fuel and pasturage. The landowners are the Crown, Capt. W. E. G. L. Bulwer, Barry Girling, Esq., Trustees of S. Bidwell, Esq., T. B. Evans, Esq., James Montague, Esq., Mrs. Gooch, W. D. Everington Esq., Messrs. W. G. Wigg and John Margaron, and several smaller proprietors. Her Majesty is lady of the manor of East Dereham of the Queen; and the owners of the other manors are—George Cooper, Esq., of Old-hall-with-Syrricks and Yaxham; the Rev. W. C. Wollaston, of the Rectory manor; and Mrs. Sally Gooch of Mowles or Collome's manor. The first named manor was so called in reference to Queen Elizabeth, who obtained it in exchange from the Bishop of Ely, in consequence of a violent threat, she swearing by her Maker she would soon “unfrock him,” if he refused her request. Old-hall manor was given by this Queen to her unfortunate favourite, the Earl of Essex. QUEBEC HOUSE, three quarters of a mile N. of the town, was built by the late Mr. Rash, who gave it the name it bears, in compliment to Lord Townshend, who was second in command at the siege of Quebec. It was originally small, but has been enlarged at various periods, and is now a handsome Gothic mansion, beautifully situated in a park-like and well-timbered lawn. It is the seat and property of Captain Bulwer.

EAST DEREHAM COUNTY COURT DISTRICT comprises the parishes of Bawdeswell, Beeston, Beetley, East Bilney, Billingford, Bintree, Brisley, Bylaugh, Cranworth, Colkirk, East Dereham, North Elmham, Elsing, Great and Little Fransham, Foxley, Garveston, Gateley, Gressenhall, Guist, Hockering, Hoe, Horningtoft, Kempstone, Letton, Litcham, Longham, Lyng, Mattishall, Mattishall Burgh, Mileham, Oxwick, Reymerstone, Scarning, Shipdham, Southburgh, Stanfield, Sparham, Swanton Morley, Thuxton, Tittleshall, East and North Tuddenham, Twyford, Weasenham All Saints and St. Peter's, Wellingham, Wendling, Westfield, Whinburgh, Whissonsett, Worthing, and Yaxham. The Court is held at the Assembly Room once a month. Thomas J. Birch, Esq., of Wretham Hall, is judge; Jonathan Townley, Esq., of Norwich, treasurer; George H. Cooper, Esq., registrar; Mr. Thos. Kerslake, high bailiff; and Chas. Rix, assistant bailiff.

The CHURCH (St. Nicholas) is an ancient and interesting cruciform structure, which has been restored and beautified at great expense. It comprises nave, aisles, south porch, transepts, large chancel, and a beautifully proportioned central tower, open to the top and having two arched galleries or arcades. The south porch is very handsome, and was built by Roger and Margaret Boton in the time of Henry VII. The windows in the chancel are all of painted glass by the best modern artists; the reredos, piscina and sedilia are painted and gilded in good taste; and the altar is properly vested. Adjoining the transepts are the chapels of St. John-the-Baptist and St. Thomas-a-Becket; in the former of which is a fine painted window in memory of the late Mr. Gridley, and in the latter is the resting place of the Poet Cowper, who died in this town. In the same chapel are monuments to Mrs. Unwin and Margaret Perowne, the poet's faithful and attached friends; and also a curious antique chest of carved oak, in which the parochial records are deposited, presented to the church in 1786, and said to have been dug from the ruins of Buckenham Castle. The figures on this chest are emblematical of the Cardinal Virtues, the centre panel represents the Nativity, and the lock, which is very curious, is protected by a figure of our Saviour bound with cords. The font, erected in 1468, is very lofty, and of octagonal form. Its panelled sides represent the crucifixion and the seven Romish Sacraments; and beneath are figures of the apostles and evangelists. Two brasses only remain of the many which the church formerly possessed. The lectern is an ancient eagle of brass gilt. In the church yard is a large campanile or bell tower, formerly called the “New Clocker,” situated about 20 yards from the chancel, and containing a fine peal of eight bells, removed in the 16th century from the church tower which was not considered sufficiently strong. The vicarage of East Dereham, with the curacy of Hoe annexed, is valued in K.B. at £17. 3s. 4d., but is now worth £480 per annum. Here is also a sinecure rectory, valued in K.B. at £41. 3s. 1½d., and now at £710. The Rev. Wm. Chas. Wollaston holds the rectory, by lease from the Crown, and is also patron of the vicarage, which is in the incumbency of the Rev. Benj. John Armstrong, M.A., who has a spacious red brick residence, surrounded by extensive grounds, and about 40 acres of glebe. In 1840 the rectorial tithes were commuted for £864, and the vicarial for £432 per annum.

CHAPELS.—The Baptist Chapel in High street was erected in 1859 at a cost of £1500, adjoining the old chapel which is now used as a school-room. The Rev. James Whitley is the minister. The Independent Chapel in Swan lane was built in 1812, and enlarged and improved in 1816 and 1861. It is under the ministry of the Rev. R. G. Williams. The Wesleyan Chapel is a small building in Theatre street, under the pastoral care of the Rev. J. R. Warburton. The Primitive Methodist Chapel in Russell place was erected in 1863, at a cost of nearly £1000. The Rev. Thomas Lowe is its minister. The Wesleyan Reform Chapel in Wellington road, was built in 1854 at a cost of £280.

The NATIONAL SCHOOL, attended by about 300 boys and girls, is endowed with 10A. of land, awarded at the enclosure in 1815. It is now held in a commodious building with master's house attached, erected in 1840, at a cost of more than £1000. It was further endowed in 1841, with £660 three per cent. consols, raised by subscription. The DISTRICT BRITISH AND INFANT SCHOOLS, in London road, for the education of about 250 poor children of East Dereham and the surrounding parishes, were built in 1841, and the master's house was finished in the following year. These buildings are ornamental to the town, and were erected at considerable expense, towards which liberal grants were obtained from Government.

Among the EMINENT PERSONAGES connected with East Dereham, was Wm. Cowper, Esq., the poet, who died here in 1806; and Lady Fenn, (relict of Sir John Fenn,) who died here in 1813, after a residence of several years. Under the feigned names of Mrs. Lovechild and Mrs. Teachwell, she wrote "The Child's Grammar," "The Mother's Grammar," "The Family Miscellany," and several other elementary works of considerable merit. Edmund Bonner, of sanguinary memory, was rector of this parish of 1534 to 1540, after which he became Bishop of London, and is said to have caused upwards of 200 persons to be burnt, for what he erroneously considered heresy. John Winter, a rector of more worthy memory, was author of "Spicilegium," published in 1664.

The CHURCH ESTATE, which has been vested in trust from an early period, consists of 61A. 20P. of land. The HEADBOROUGH ESTATE was conveyed to new feoffees, in the 9th of Henry VIII., in trust to pay the leet-fee of the manor, and certain sums for superstitious uses. It now consists of the Assembly Room, two cottages, and 21A. 2R. 1P. of land. After the payment of land tax, quit rents, and leet-fee, the residue is applied in keeping the fire-engines in repair, in paying half the organist's and organ blower's salaries; in paying the rent of the engine-house; in keeping four town pumps and a well in repair, and in other public works. The management of the estate is under two officers, called Headboroughs, who are elected annually by the parishioners.

The FUEL ALLOTMENTS, awarded at the enclosure in 1815, under an act of the 52nd of George III., consist of 48A. 1R. 29P. in Rush Meadow; 10A. 15P. in Potter's Fen; and 26A. 1R. 13P. in the Turf, or Fen Common. All the poor parishioners, not occupying more than the yearly value of £15, are allowed to cut turf, &c., for fuel, and to turn cattle on these allotments

They have also the benefit of the following BENEFACTIONS, which produce collectively about £162 per annum. From Henry Smith's charity, bequeathed to this and other parishes, in 1626, the churchwardens receive about £9. 19s. out of the rents of the Stoughton Estate, for distribution in coats, among the oldest poor men of the parish. In 1825, Wm. Taylor left £225 to Wm. Collison, Wm. Unthank, and the vicar, in trust to distribute the yearly proceeds thereof in bread, on the 21st of December, among the poor inhabitants. In 1613, Wm. MOWING charged his estate here, near Badley Moor, with the yearly payment of £14, for distribution among the poor of the 18 parishes of Mitford Hundred. From this charity the poor of East Dereham, receive £4. 18s. yearly. In 1634, Christian, widow of THOS. GOOCH, settled land for the poor of this and four other parishes, which was exchanged in 1831, for 51A. 1R. 6P., in Beetley. Pursuant to the donor's intention, £13. 10s. should be dispensed yearly as follows:—20s. for two sermons; and £9 to East Dereham, 35s. to Hoe, 15s. to North Elmham, 15s. to Beeston, and 5s. to Worthing, for the poor. After paying for repairs, &c., the surplus rent should be distributed among the poor of Hoe, but for a long period it has been usual for East Dereham to retain 36 fiftieth-parts of the clear income. In 1687, THOMAS MOORE bequeathed 12A. of land in this parish, for the distribution of 5s. each to as many poor parishioners as the rent would extend to, on St. Thomas's day; and 7A. 3R. 3P. in Hoe, to provide clothing for poor aged widows of East Dereham. The latter had an allotment of 1A. 3R. 21P. awarded to it at the enclosure. For apprenticing poor boys, AARON WILLIAMSON, in 1710, left a house and land here. Part of the above charities are added to the Christmas Distribution among the poor parishioners, as also are the following Yearly Doles, viz., 12s. left by Wm. Potter, in 1697; £2. 10s. from land at Yaxham, left in 1734, by Wm. Barker; £14 from a house and 6A. 23P. in Shipdham, left in 1721, by Edmund Williamson; £7 from 3A., in Scarning, left by Thos. Guyton, in 1774; £9, as the interest of £225, left by Mary Barnwell, in 1780, and now vested with the churchwardens; £16, as the interest of £400, left by Catherine Wilson and Theodosia Webster, in 1816 and 1820; and £4, from an acre of land, left by Wm. Taylor. The vicar, churchwardens, and overseers have the distribution of these charities, and also of the interest of £500 bequeathed in 1862 by the late Thos. Lee-Warner, Esq., to provide coals for the poor.

POST OFFICE at F. J. Smith's, Market Place. Letters arrive from all parts by mail cart, from Thetford at 6 a.m. and 4.20 p.m.; and are despatched at 6.30 p.m. Money Orders are granted and paid from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., and the Savings' Bank is open during the same hours. Foot messengers for the villages leave at 7 a.m.

GARVESTON, commonly called Garston, is a small village and parish on the Hingham road, near Thuxton railway station, 5 miles S.S.E. of East Dereham, comprising only 388 inhabitants, and about 802 acres of land. Edward Robert Grigson, Esq., is lord of the manor; but the soil belongs chiefly to the Rev. Henry E. Lombe, Grigson Heyhoe, and Geo. L. Press, Esqrs., and some smaller owners. "The right of lord of this manor was decided in the time of King Edward by the tenants in single combat." The Church (St. Margaret) comprises nave, chancel, south aisle, and square tower with four bells, and was partially restored and refitted with open benches, new pulpit, reading desk, &c., in 1856, at a cost of £450. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 16s., and now at £230, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Fras. Edw. Jackson Valpy, M.A., who has a good residence, built in 1846, at a cost of £2500, about 16a. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £243. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1812, comprises 7a. 2r., let for £14, which is distributed in coals. The parish has a house occupied by paupers, and land let for £3. 3s. 6d., which is carried to the poor rates. A farm at Yaxham, purchased with £100 left by Barbara Lock, in 1685, is let for £21, which is distributed among the poor, together with £6. 10s., arising from the following yearly doles, viz:—10s. from Mowting's charity (see page 937); 10s. left by John Rix, in 1639; £4. 10s. left by Wm. Blanchflower, in 1723; and 20s. left by Barnard Church (see page 238). From the latter charity this parish receives every fourth year 30s., of which 9s. 4d. is for the poor, and the rest for a sermon.

HARDINGHAM is a parish of scattered houses, extending from $1\frac{1}{2}$ to $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. by E. of Hingham, and containing 527 inhabitants, and 2422a. of land, of which 300a. were enclosed in 1821. Lord Wodehouse is lord of the manors of Camois, Gurneys, and Swathings; and the other chief land-owners are J. O. Taylor, Esq., Mrs. Edwards, and Captain Archer. The Church (St. Gregory), is a neat stone fabric of early-English architecture, comprising nave, chancel, and tower with one bell. It was restored and refitted in 1843. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15. 3s. 4d., is in the patronage of Clare Hall, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Challis Paroissien, M.A., who has a yearly rent-charge of £770, awarded in 1840 in lieu of tithes, and a commodious residence, which was rebuilt in 1834. White Hall, a large mansion here, formerly the seat of the Woodyear family, is now the residence of Henry Wm. Edwards, Esq. Sir Thomas Gresham, founder of the Royal Exchange, was born in this parish. The School, a handsome Tudor building, of brick and flint with stone dressings, will accommodate 200 children, and was built in 1862 at a cost of £1500, by Miss Edwards, who still supports it. Attached to it is a residence for the mistress. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, comprises 23A., let for £10, which is distributed in coals among the poor, who have also £2. 10s. yearly in bread from the bequests of W. Mowting, C. Adcock, and J. and T. Cushings. Here is a pillar letter box, which is cleared at 7.15 p.m. Post via Hingham.

HOCKERING village stands on a declivity of the Norwich road, near the Blackwater rivulet, 5 miles E. of East Dereham, and includes within its parish 387 inhabitants, and 1934 acres of land, mostly the property of Thomas Trench Berney, Esq., the lord of the manor; but the Rev. Hy. E. Lombe, Wm. Matthews, and George Hyde, Esqrs., and some smaller owners have estates here. The Church (St. Michael) comprises nave, chancel, north aisle, and handsome square tower with one bell. The reredos is of marble and Caen stone, the chancel arch of marble, and the pulpit, reading-desk, seats, and elegant screen are of beautifully carved oak. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7. 3s. 4d., is now worth £739 a year, with that of Mattishall-Burgh annexed, and is in the patronage of T. T. Berney, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Michael Jas. Anderson, M.A., who has 50A. of glebe and a good residence with tasteful pleasure grounds. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here, built in 1859. There are small schools in connection with the church and chapel. Hockering was the chief manor in the Barony of Rye, and was formerly held by the Mareschals, Roscelines, and Parkers. The Poor's and Town's Lands have been vested in feoffees from an early period, and were increased by allotments at the enclosure in 1826. The property now consists of the Cock Inn, let for £40; four cottages and gardens, let for about £11. 10s.; 2A. 3R. of land, let for £2. 2s. a year; a garden, of 14 perches, used by the schoolmistress; and 4A. 1R. 21P., let for £13 a year. Out of these rents about £15 are expended yearly in supplying the poor with coals, and the rest is applied with the church rates. The poor have also yearly doles of 9s. from Mowting's charity, and 20s., left by Ann Repps, in 1633, out of 3A., called Warner's Yard.

LETTON is a parish of scattered houses, 1½ mile E.S.E. of Shipdham, and 6 miles S. of East Dereham, containing 111 inhabitants, and 1263 acres of rich land, famous for milk and butter as early as the reign of Elizabeth, and all belonging to Brampton Gurdon, Esq., M.P., who resides at the HALL, a handsome quadrangular mansion of white brick, seated in an extensive and well-wooded park. He is patron of the rectory, which is valued in K.B. at £7. 14s. 7d., and was consolidated with Cranworth in the 38th of Henry VIII. The Rev. Philip Gurdon is the incumbent. The CHURCH (All Saints) was dilapidated many years ago, and its site is now marked by a plantation on the south side of the park. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1798, is 7A. 1R. 24P., let for £10 a year. The chief residents are—B. Gurdon, Esq., M.P., Hall; Edw. Stebbing, Filby Stebbing, and Jas. Goddard, farmers; and Wm. Stebbing, farm steward. Post via Thetford.

MATTISHALL is a large and well built village and parish, 5 miles E. by S. of East Dereham, and 11 miles W. of Norwich, comprising 971 inhabitants, and 2238 acres of land, of which about 900 acres were enclosed in 1801. It is in several MANORS: Mrs. Mary Grigson is lady of Whinburgh; Lord Wodehouse is lord of Thuxton Hall and Barnham-Broom; Rev. Hy. E. Lombe, of Thuxton-Waces; Lord Bayning, of East Tuddenham Cockfields; T. T. Berney, Esq., of Hockering and Mattishall-Tuddenham; Thomas B. Evans, Esq., of North Tuddenham, St Clere, and Bellhouse Hall; and G. Cooper, Esq., of Mountneys Manor; and the other chief land owners are the Rev. John Sparke and W. B. Donne, Esq. The Church (All Saints) stands on an eminence in the centre of the village, and is a large and handsome edifice of early-perpendicular architecture, comprising nave with aisles, chancel, and square tower. The latter contains six bells, and rises to the height of 90 feet. The lower panels of the chancel screen contain painted figures of apostles; and at the east end of the south aisle is the chapel of St. Thomas-a-Becket, which is separated from the aisle by a handsome carved oak screen. The pulpit is of the Jacobean period; and here are several monuments of the Carthew, Repps, Bodham, Smith, Wright, Donne, and other families. The building was restored and refitted with open benches in 1858; and in 1863 the vicar inserted three new windows. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7. 7s. 3½d., and now at £469, in the patronage of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, to which the great tithes belong. It is consolidated with the rectory of Pottesley, in the incumbency of the Rev. James Maurant Du Port, M.A., who has a good residence and 30 acres of glebe. The vicarage was augmented in 1738 with £200 of Q.A.B., and £200 given by the Rev. Edward Brook. Pottesley rectory was augmented with £400 of Q.A.B. in 1741 and 1744, and £200 given by the Bishop, in 1742. Pottesley is rated to the poor, &c., of Oxwick, in Launditch Hundred, but pays a modus of £8. 8s., in lieu of tithes, to the vicar of Mattishall. The £800 obtained as above stated for the augmentation of the joint vicarage and rectory, were laid out in the purchase of an estate of 73A. at Stanfield, and another of 32A. at Attleborough, now let for £150 per annum. In 1839, the tithes of Mattishall were commuted for the yearly payment of £488. 7s. to Gonville and Caius College, and £296. 6s. to the vicar. Here are two chapels belonging to the Independents, and one to the Primitive Methodists. The Friends' Meeting House, in this parish, is now seldom used. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1803, contains 61A. 1R. 7P., let for £81. 15s. a year, which is distributed in coals among the poor parishioners, who have also 17s. yearly from Mowting's charity. In 1689, Mary Thornton bequeathed for the poor of Mattishall and Mattishall-Burgh a house and 8A. of land, now let for £26 a year, which is divided equally between the two parishes. In 1558, Thomas Harlestone bequeathed to the poor, property which, with that derived from allotments at the enclosure, now comprises five tenements and 30A. of land, let for £87. 10s. a year, to which is added an annual rent-charge of £2. 5s., left by Robert Harlestone, in the 12th of Elizabeth. Out of this income, £1. 11s. are paid to the parish clerk, £1. 8s. 4d. to the poor of Mattishall-Burgh, and 10s. for a sermon; and the residue, after paying incidental expenses, is distributed among the poor of Mattishall. Before the introduction of machinery, Mattishall was largely engaged in the worsted manufacture. A pleasure fair is held here on the Tuesday in Rogation week.

MATTISHALL BURGH, 1 mile N.E. of Mattishall, and 12 miles W. of Norwich, is a parish of scattered houses, containing 191 inhabitants, and 604A. 1R. 16P. of land, lying in the manors of Whinburgh, Mattishall-Tuddenham, and Bellhouse-Hall, (See page 943,) but belonging chiefly to the Revs. J. H. Sparke and John Shulldham. The Church is a small early-English fabric, comprising nave, chancel, and north transept. A new window was inserted in 1859 by the present rector, whose predecessor gave the font. The rectory valued in K.B. at £3. 15s. 10d., is consolidated with Hockering, as noticed at page 942; and the tithes were commuted in 1839 for £200 per annum. The Church Land, 5A. 2R. 13P., is let for £9. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, in 1811, consists of 17A. 3R. 15P., let for about £25. 10s. a year, which is distributed in coals. The poor have also £7. 10s., from Mary Thornton's charity, as noticed with Mattishall, and £2. 4s. 4d. yearly from the charities of W. Mowting, Robt. Harlestone, and Mr. Barnham. The chief residents are—Charles Edwards, vict., Cross Keys; and Robert Bowman, Stephen Dunthorne, Fredk. Nelson Edwards, John Francis, Wm. Fuller, Hy. Hill, Robert Norton (& carpenter), James Sendall, Peter Tooley, John White and Thomas Wilkinson, farmers. Post from Thetford, via East Dereham.

REYMERSTONE, a small scattered village 3 miles N. of Hingham, has in its parish 321 inhabitants and 1624 acres of land. About half the soil belongs to Brampton Gurdon, Esq., M. P., the lord of the manor called Calvelly Hall; and the rest belongs to Wm. Latham Press, Esq., and the Staines, Clark, and other families. The Hall, a pleasantly situated brick building is the seat and property of Geo. Latham Press, Esq. The Church (St. Peter) is a neat fabric in the early-English style, consisting of nave with aisles, chancel, south porch and lofty square tower with five bells. The chancel stalls and the open benches of the nave have poppy heads, and both they and the pulpit and altar rails are of handsomely carved oak. The aisles are filled with closed pews, and at the west end of the nave is a gallery containing an organ. A three-light window in the chancel is decorated with ancient stained glass of great richness, representing Our Saviour, St. John, and St. Peter. Here are monuments of the Long, Brimstone, Grigson and Mann families. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £11. 3s. 6d., and now at £467 is in the patronage of the lord of the manor, and incumbency of the Rev. Philip Gurdon, M.A., of Cranworth, who has here 18A. 0R. 29P. of glebe. The Rectory House, a commodious residence near the church, is now occupied by the curate. The National School is a neat brick building erected in 1844 by the Gurdon family, and attended by 60 children. The Church Land, 11A. 1R. 16P., is let for £16. 10s. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1798, is 14A. 28P., let for £21. The old Poor's Land, about 2A., is let for £2. 10s. The poor have also 12s. a year, left by Wm. Mowling and an unknown donor.

SHIPDHAM is an extensive village, with many neat modern houses detached from each other and extending upwards of a mile in length, 5 miles S. by W. of East Dereham; but the parish extends within two miles of that town, and is 5 miles long, containing 4550 acres, and having increased its population since the year 1801, from 1250 to 1644 souls. The Bishop of Ely, who built a great hall here, obtained in the 29th of Henry III., a charter for a weekly market on Thursday, and a fair on St. Peter and St. Paul's day; but the former has long been obsolete, and the latter is now a stock fair, held on the 29th of June. The Cambridge University's manor of Caston Hall, and H. B. B. Mason, Esq.'s manors of Massingham and Bonnetts-and-Bayleys, extend into this parish; but Wyrley Birch, Esq., is lord of the manor of Shipdham, and Miss Bullock and T. T. Clark, Esq., have also estates here. The Church (All Saints) is a large and handsome fabric of the 15th century, comprising nave, north aisle, south porch, chancel, and square embattled tower, surmounted by a wooden cupola, and containing six bells. The old sanctus-bell and lectern still remain. In the parvise or chamber over the porch are two very antique chairs and a table; and a library of ancient and curious works, chiefly on Theology, left by a former rector. In the north aisle is a chapel dedicated to St. Thomas. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £27. 7s. 6d. is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Geo. Curling Bailey, M.A., who has a spacious residence, and a yearly rent-charge of £1240, awarded in 1840 in lieu of tithes. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Independents have each a chapel in the parish. The parish School was built in 1749, on part of the town land, and is endowed with a farm of 46A. 3R. 8P., bequeathed by Thomas Bullock, Esq., in 1735, for the support of a master, to teach reading, writing, and arithmetic, gratis, to the poor children of the parish. The farm is now let for £70 a year. There are about 80 scholars who pay from 1d. to 3d. each per week, none being free. Eight trustees are appointed by the Court of Chancery. The TOWN ESTATE consists of seven tenements, a barn, a house and garden, and about 28 acres of land in this parish, and a farm of 47A. at Reymerstone. let at rents amounting to about £120 per annum, which is applied in discharging the churchwardens' accounts, except about £7, which is distributed among the poor. That part of the estate in Shipdham, was acquired by gift or purchase, during the 16th century, for the general use of the parish, but the farm at Reymerstone was purchased in 1650, for £648, of which £60 were left to the poor by the Rev. William Hattersley and others. The FUEL ALLOTMENTS, awarded at the enclosure, in 1809, comprise 126A. 1R. 30P., let for about £120 per annum, which is distributed in coals among the poor parishioners, who have also the yearly doles of £2. 5s. from Mouting's Charity, (see page 937,) and £2 left by Thomas Masters, in 1716.

SOUTHBURGH, or Southbergh, commonly called Barrow, is a parish of scattered houses, near the Blackwater rivulet, 3 miles N.W. by N. of Hingham, and 15 miles W. by S. of Norwich; comprising 317 inhabitants, and 1211 acres of land, divided into two manors, of which Brampton Gurdon, Esq., M.P., and Major Richard Weyland, are lords and principal owners. The Church (St. Andrew) is a small stone fabric in the early-English style, having a low pitched roof, and comprising nave, chancel, and south porch. It has lost its tower, and the two bells are now hung in a thatched shed at the west end, within a yard of the ground. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 13s. 6d., and now at £249. It was augmented with £200 of Q.A.B. in 1795. B. Gurdon, Esq., is patron, and the Rev. Philip Gurdon, M.A., of Cranworth, incumbent. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1798, is 13A. 2R. 25P., let for £20. 5s. The poor parishioners have also 5s. yearly from Mowting's charity. The chief residents are—Edw. Rivett, sen., wheelwright; Edw. Rivett, jun., shopkeeper; John Wm. Rose, shoemaker; Wm. Sare, tailor and victualler, King's Head; and Jno. Barnard, Wm. Barnard, Matthew Brasnett, Edw. Eagling, John Eagling, Thomas Eagling, Susan Howard, Ezekial Johnson, Mountain Middleton, Ishmael Milk, Wm. Osborn, James Read, Wm. Sare, Wm. Stebbing, Wm. Webster, and John Wyer, farmers. Post via Thetford.

THUXTON, or Thurston parish, 3½ miles N. of Hingham, and 5½ miles S.S.E. of East Dereham, has only 131 inhabitants, a few scattered houses, and 1085A. 3R. 10P. of land, chiefly belonging to Lord Wodehouse and the Rev. H. E. Lombe, the former of whom is lord of the manor of Thuxton Hall, and the latter of that of Thuxton Waces. On Mr. Taylor's farm is one of the finest oaks in the county. The Church (St. Paul) is a small edifice, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and low square tower with octagonal belfry and one bell. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 6s. 2d., and now at £260, is in the patronage of John Oddin Taylor, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Hy. Wright, M.A., who has a pleasant residence on the Norwich road, built in 1850. The tithes were commuted in 1844 for £260 a year, out of which Lord Wodehouse receives £12 per annum, but by what right is unknown. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1811, is 2A., and the Poor's land, 3A. 16P., lets for £4. 10s., which is distributed in coals to the poor, who have also 5s. yearly from Mowting's charity. Here is a station on the Dereham branch of the Great Eastern Railway. The chief residents are—The Rev. Hy. Wright, M.A., Rectory; Mr. Wm. Palmer; Wm. Avey, station master; John Glasspoole, coal dealer; Wm. Hood, carpenter; and Palmer Holman, Wm. Holman, Alfred, Wm., and Stephen

TUDDENHAM (EAST) is a pleasant village of scattered houses, six miles E. of East Dereham, and 9 miles W. of Norwich; comprising in its parish 512 inhabitants, and 2066A. 12P. of land, forming the manors of Cockfields, Astleys, Berrys, and Aphaws, of which Lord Bayning is lord; but Stephen and John K. Gooch, and Geo. Vassar, Esqrs., and some smaller owners have estates here. The Church (All Saints), which comprises nave, chancel, and south porch, stands half a mile from the village, and is a neat structure, with a beautiful stained glass window, representing the Descent from the Cross, the Ascension, and several other devices, painted by the widow of a late vicar, the Rev. Edward Mellish, Dean of Hereford, who died in 1830, and was buried in the chancel, where there are several ancient and modern monuments of the Reed, Du Quesne, Mellish, and other families, and a mutilated effigy, supposed to represent Sir Edm. de Berry. The building was restored, resealed with open benches, and fitted with new pulpit, reading desk, altar rails, and reredos of carved oak, in 1850. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7. 6s., was augmented in 1723 with £200, given by F. Tilney, Esq., and £200 of Q.A.B. It is consolidated with that of Honingham, in the patronage and incumbency of the Right Hon. and Rev. Lord Bayning, M.A., of Honingham Hall, who is also impropiator of the great tithes. The National School, a neat cruciform building erected in 1840, and enlarged in 1859 by the patron, at a cost of £90, is attended by 105 children, and supported by subscription. East Tuddenham Town Lands, 16A. 1R., were given by John Proo, in the 19th of Henry VIII., to pay the common charges of the parish. To this property, an allotment of 6A. was awarded at the enclosure, and the whole is now let for £37. 10s. per annum, which is applied in aid of the poor rates. There are also five cottages, supposed to have been given by John Proo, and occupied by paupers. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1804, is 25A., let for about £40, which is distributed in coals among the poor. Frederick Tilney, in 1717, gave three tenements for the residence of poor parishioners, and they were taken down in 1859, when four neat cottages were erected on their site. Attached to them are 2R. 26P. of land, which were allotted at the enclosure. In 1705, the Rev. Jeremiah and Mary Revans gave 1½A. of land, called Seabornes, for distributions of bread every fortnight, and a yearly sermon. The former also gave for the same uses a yearly rent-charge of 39s., out of a farm now belonging to Mr. Balls. The poor have the following yearly doles, viz., 6s., from Mowting's Charity; 3s. from land left by an unknown donor; and £2. 8s. 6d. paid by Lord Bayning, as the gift of the Rev. T. R. Duquesne, who died about 1785. Post from Thetford, via Mattishall.

TUDDENHAM (NORTH) is a parish of scattered houses, extending from $2\frac{1}{2}$ to $4\frac{3}{4}$ miles E. of East Dereham, and comprising 437 inhabitants, and 2272A. of land, lying in the manors of St. Clere and Bellhouse Hall, of which Thos. B. Evans, Esq., is lord, but T. T. Berney, Robert Barry, and C. E. Browne, Esqrs., Miss Mann, Miss Gooch, and some smaller owners, have estates here. The Church (St. Mary) stands about 12 miles W. of Norwich, and has a square tower with one bell. The chancel has been restored and fitted with carved oak sittings, and some of the windows contain fragments of painted glass. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 5s. 5d. is in the patronage of Robert Barry, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Robert Barry, M.A., who has a yearly rent-charge of £700, awarded in 1839 in lieu of tithes, and a handsome brick residence of Elizabethan architecture, erected in 1852. The School is attended by about 40 children. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1765, is 24A., on which the poor cut furze and graze geese and cattle. In 1682, Fras. Skipp charged his estate here with the yearly payment of £15, to be distributed among the most needy poor of the parish. In 1720, £150 were recovered as arrears of this rent-charge, and are now invested at four per cent. interest. To three tenements and about 4A. of land, left to the poor by the Rev. John Smith, the Rev. Henry Young, and Dr. Norris, in the 17th century, 4A. 12P. were allotted at the enclosure, and the whole now lets for £24. 4s. a year, which is distributed with the following yearly doles, viz. :—10s. from Mowting's charity ; £2 left by Jno. Branch, in 1736 ; 6s. 8d. left by Richard Neeve ; 4s. out of Bell Close ; and £1. 14s. 10d. from £58 three per cent. consols, left by T. Ward, in 1806. Post via Thetford.

WESTFIELD, a small parish, 2 miles S. of East Dereham, has only 124 inhabitants, and 570 acres of land, mostly belonging to Lieut.-General Sir Wm. R. Clayton, Bart., Mr. J. P. Smith, and Mrs. Grigson, the latter of whom is lady of the manor, in which the fines are arbitrary. The Church (St. Andrew) is a small building in the early-English style, having a south porch, and low square tower with one bell. It was restored, newly roofed, and refitted with open seats in 1862 ; and contains mural tablets of the Waller and Barrett families. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 4s. 2d., is annexed to that of Whinburgh, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Grigson, M.A., whose father purchased the advowson of the two livings in 1838. Here are 20A. of glebe, and the tithes of Westfield were commuted in 1840 for £150 per annum. The common was enclosed in 1810, when 7A. of land were allotted to the poor, who have also 8s. a year from Mowting's charity. The chief residents are—Mr. James Deeker ; Robt. Ames, vict., Unicorn ; Chpr. Andrews, pig dealer ; George Gayton, shopkeeper ; Wm. Horneygold, thatcher ; Chas. Meachen, wheelwright ; Robert Stevenson, beerhouse ; and Geo. Fairweather, John Frost, John Rowing, Wm. Scales, John Porter Smith, and Robt. Wyatt, farmers. Post via Thetford.

WHINBURGH, or Whinbergh, is a scattered parish, on the Hingham road, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.S.E. of East Dereham, containing 220 inhabitants, and 1242 acres of land, mostly belonging to Lieut.-General Sir Wm. R. Clayton,

Bart., Major Marcon, and Geo. L. Press, Esq. Mrs. Grigson is lady of the manor, in which the fines are certain. The Church (St. Mary) is a small structure in the early-English style, and has been at various times much improved by the present rector. It consists of nave and chancel, with a square tower containing two bells, on the south side over the porch. It is fitted with carved open benches with poppies. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 18s. 6d., and now at £225 a year, with that of Westfield annexed is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. William Grigson, M.A., who has here a neat brick residence partly in the Elizabethan style, built in 1864, on the site of the former Rectory House, which was totally destroyed by fire in the previous year. About 500 acres, called Whinburgh Park, pays only a yearly modus of 20s., and the tithes of the rest of the parish were commuted in 1839, for £179. 12s. a year, of which £5. 5s. are payable to the rector of Yaxham. On the land called Manor yards, the foundations of a large mansion and a double moat are still visible. In the 15th of Edward I., Lord Bardolph claimed here view of frankpledge, a weekly market, and an annual fair. At the enclosure, in 1810, an allotment of 5A. was awarded to the poor, who have also £2. 12s. a year from Mowting's, Wood's and Darcy's charities, and 9s. 4d. every fourth year from B. Church's charity. (See page 238.) Post via Thetford.

WOODRISING is a small village and parish, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. by N. of Hingham, and contains only 97 inhabitants, and 1863A. of land. Richard Weyland, Esq., is lord of the manor and owner of the soil, and resides at Woodrising Hall, a neat modern mansion in a small park, near Scoulton-mere. The manor was formerly held by the Southwells, of which family was Sir Richard Southwell, chancellor to Edward VI. The Church (Saint Nicholas) is a small fabric, consisting of nave, chancel, south aisle, and the ruins of an ivy-mantled tower. On the north side of the chancel is a full sized figure of a knight in armour, supposed to represent Sir Robert Southwell, by whom Queen Elizabeth was entertained in her progress through Norfolk. On a flat stone is inscribed the name of Sir Francis Crane, who was ambassador to France in the time of Charles I., and revived the art of tapestry in this country, and established a large manufactory at Mortlake, near London. Here are also several tablets of the Weyland family; and at the west end is a small gallery containing an organ. Dr. Sutton, a former incumbent of this parish, was the author of several well-known works. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 18s. 4d., is in the gift of Richd. Weyland, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Arthur Roberts, M.A., who has a neat brick residence, erected in 1839, 17 acres of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £240, awarded in 1841 in lieu of tithes. The school was built by the late John Weyland, Esq., and the poor have 5s. a year from Mowting's charity. The chief residents are—The Rev. A. Roberts, M.A., Rectory; R. Weyland, Esq., Hall; Eliz. Pell, schoolmistress; John Sculfer, smith; and Benj. Baker and John Wm. Parlett, farmers. Post via Thetford.

YAXHAM, a village and parish on the Hingham road, 2 miles S.E. by S. of East Dereham, has 479 inhabitants, and 1600 acres of land. Lieut.-General Sir Wm. Robert Clayton, Bart., is lord of the manor, but the soil belongs chiefly to the Rev. Henry Collison, Major Marcon, and a few smaller owners. The Church (St. Peter) is a small structure in the early-English style, comprising nave, chancel, south aisle, and round tower with five bells. The roof is of timber, stained and panelled; the pulpit, reading desk, and screen are of carved oak; and the seats are open and of stained deal. Most of the windows are filled with stained glass, and some of them are in memory of the Heyhoe, Wigg, and Johnson families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Cowper Johnson, M.A., who has a good residence, built in 1820, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £515, and 36 acres of glebe. The National School, built here in 1843, is attended by about 70 children. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1812, comprises 20 acres. The Town Lands comprise about 9 acres, mostly vested with feoffees at an early period for discharging the common burdens of the parish. They are let for £20 a year, which is applied in the service of the church, except £2. 2s., which are distributed among the poor parishioners, who have also the following yearly doles, viz.:—26s. from Mowting's charity; 6s., called Burr's Gift; and 3s. 4d., left by one Hardy, out of land called Wren Park. Here is a station on the Dereham branch of the Great Eastern Railway.

LAUNDITCH HUNDRED

Is of an irregular, quadrangular figure, averaging about 12 miles in length and breadth, and bounded on the north by Gallow, on the east by Eynesford, on the south by Mitford and South Greenhoe, and on the west by Freebridge-Lynn Hundred. It is a highly cultivated district, rising in some places in bold and picturesque swells, with many thriving plantations and handsome mansions, and watered by the Wensum, the Nar, and several smaller streams, which rise within its limits. It takes its name from a long ditch and bank extending from Wendling-car to the low lands near Mileham, and supposed to have been made for the purpose of carrying off the drain water. At the point where this ditch crosses the Norwich road, the Hundred court was anciently held. Launditch, (with the exception of Colkirk,) forms the Deanery of Brisley, in the Archdeaconry of Norwich, and is all in Mitford and Launditch Union, which has its workhouse at Gressenhall (See p. 931.) The railways from Dereham to Lynn and Wells, skirt its southern and eastern sides. The Launditch Society for encouraging good conduct, industrious habits, &c., among servants and labourers, holds its annual meetings for awarding prizes, &c. at Litcham, in October. Petty Sessions for Launditch Hundred are held once a month, alternately at the Bull Inn, Litcham, and the King's Head, North Elmham. Charles Wright, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. This Hundred contains thirty-three parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent.

* DILLINGTON is a hamlet in East Dereham parish, but in Launditch Hundred.

+ Gressenhall return includes 267 persons in the Union Workhouse.

$ Beeston & Bittering Parva are ecclesiastically separate parishes, but united for the support of the poor.

BEESTON, or Beeston-next-Mileham, is a long village of detached houses, 8 miles E.N.E. of Swaffham, 7 miles W. of East Dereham, and 2 miles S. by E. of Litcham, supposed to have been once of much greater extent, as the foundations of houses have been found on both sides of the church, three-quarters of a mile west of the present village. It is united with Bittering Parva for the support of the poor, and the two parishes contain 645 inhabitants, and 2471 acres of land, of which only 30 souls and 398 acres are in Bittering Parva, which is ecclesiastically a separate parish. The Rev. C. B. Barnwell is lord of the manor of Beeston, in which the copyholds, on every death or alienation, are subject to a fine of 2s., or a ploughshare. The other chief landowners are—John Collison, Esq., Trustees of late C. Wallace, Esq., Miss Hoste, Rev. Wm. Millett, Douglas Lynes, Esq., Col. Mason, and Messrs Paul Bell, John Buscall, Wm. Francis, Thomas Chamberlain and Benj. Branford. The Church (St. Mary) is a neat structure, comprising nave, aisles, north porch, chancel, and square tower. The latter contains one bell, and is surmounted by a small wooden spire, which may be seen at a distance of many miles. The nave and chancel were re-roofed in 1846. Some of the windows contain portions of stained glass. Here are several monuments of the Nelson and other families, a rood screen, a piscina, and an ancient font with ornamental cover. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £13, has a yearly rent-charge of £550, awarded in 1841 in lieu of tithes, and is in the patronage of the Rev. C. B. Barnwell, and incumbency of Rev. John Nelson, M.A., who has 25a. of glebe and a spacious residence erected in 1793. The Wesleyan Reformers and Primitive Methodists have small chapels here. The Free School for 12 poor children, was founded in 1806, by the Rev. Wm. Barnwell, who gave the school house and large garden, and endowed it with £6 a year for the master, and £1 a year to provide bibles for the scholars. These annuities are charged on an estate called Miller's. The poor have the following yearly doles—viz., 36s., left by Thos. Gooch; £2, by Wm. Allee; £2. 8s., by John Halcot, in 1681; £6, by Thos. and Mary Huke; and 20s., paid by the rector, for a plantation enclosed from the waste, in 1766. The Rev. Chas. Barnwell, in 1773, left a cottage for the residence of a poor parishioner, and endowed it with 2½A. of land, now let for £4. The Fuel Allotment 20A., awarded at the enclosure in 1814, is let for £55. Post from Swaffham.

BEETLEY, a village and parish, 3 miles N. by W. of East Dereham, has 363 inhabitants and 1770 acres of land. The chief land owners are the Rev. Henry E. Lombe, lord of the manor, Lord Sondes, Ven. Archdeacon Hankinson, Captain Fitzroy, and Messrs. Wm. Clarke and John Francis. The decayed parish of Bittering Magna was divided many years ago between Beetley and Gressenhall. The Church (St. Mary Magdalen) is a small structure, comprising nave, chancel, south porch and massive square tower with five bells. The nave and chancel are separated by a lofty wooden screen. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 7s. 11d., is consolidated with that of East Bilney. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1775, is 20A., on which the poor turn asses and geese, and cut whins and turf. They have also £1. 12s. a year, left by Richard Farrar, out of land now belonging to Archdeacon Hankinson; and £2. 3s. 4d. yearly for distributions of bread, left by one Warner, out of land now the property of Lord Sondes. The chief residents are—Samuel Blyth, shopkeeper; Thos. Claxton, shoemaker; Richard Coe, gardener and vict., Punch Bowl; John Crown, beerhouse; Robt. Dunger and John Hewitt, bakers; Thos. Harman, carpenter; George Kerrison, tailor; Robert Smith, schoolmaster and shopkeeper; William Toplar, blacksmith; and the following farmers:—George Brighter, Ambrose Gathercole, Soames Green, (Manor House), Robert Harman, Chas. Keeler, Robert Lane, (Hall), Wm. Rix and Wm. Wells, (Old Hall). Post from Thetford.

BILNEY (EAST) is a scattered village and parish, 5 miles N.W. by N. of East Dereham, containing 198 inhabitants, and 544 acres of land mostly belonging to Sir Henry Dymoke, Bart., and Wm. Thos. Collison, Esq., and included in the manors of Gressenhall, Beetley, and Horningtoft. The Church (St. Mary), a small structure, with south porch, and low tower. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 14s. 2d., and now at £618 with that of Beetley annexed, was augmented in 1762 with £400; half being by subscription and the remainder from Q.A.B. It is in the patronage of William Thos. Collison, Esq., of Bilney Hall, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Henry Collison, M.A., who has a commodious Rectory House built in 1840, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £112, awarded in 1840. The Rev. Thos. Bilney, an amiable and learned Divine, burnt at Norwich in 1531; and the Rev. Andrew Perne, D.D., dean of Ely, and vice-chancellor of Cambridge, were both natives of this parish; and the latter is described as a bending willow, guilty of compliance, but not of cruelty, changing his religion four times from the last year of Henry VIII. to the first of Elizabeth. A neat Alms-house, for three poor aged couples of Launditch Hundred, was built here in 1838, by Rebecca Pearce, and endowed by William Pearce, Esq.

with a yearly rent-charge of £60 out of an estate at Shadwell St. Paul's, Middlesex. The Town Land, 5A. 5P., is let for £5. 15s., which is applied with the church and poor rates. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1814, is 6A., on which the poor cut turf, &c.

BITTERING PARVA, or Little Bittering, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. by N. of East Dereham, is a small parish, which keeps its poor conjointly with Beeston, and contains only 30 inhabitants, and 398 acres of land, all in one farm, occupied by Mr. Geo. Matthews Waters. The Church (St. Peter) is a small fabric, and the living is a rectory valued in K.B. at £2. 13s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., and now at £100. It was augmented from 1743 to 1792, with £800 of Queen Anne's bounty. Robert Leamon, Esq., is the patron, and owns the chief part of the parish, and the Rev. James Patrick Royle, of East Dereham, is the incumbent. Post from Swaffham.

BITTERING MAGNA was formerly a parish, lying between Gressenhall and Beetley, to which parishes it was annexed many years ago, after the dilapidation of its Church, of which no traces now remain. Like Little Bittering, it maintains its roads separately. Near Gressenhall village, are a number of scattered houses called Bittering Street.

BRISLEY is a straggling village on the Fakenham road, 6 miles N.N.W. of East Dereham, including within its parish 362 inhabitants, and upwards of 1201 acres of land, mostly the property of Lord Sondes and J. D. H. Hill, Esq., the lords of the manor; but Fras. Wm. Frohawk, and Geo. B. Butler, Esqrs., Executors of the late J. Garwood, Esq., Mrs. Billing, Mrs. Branford, and a few smaller owners, have estates here. Brisley Green is a fine open common of 170 acres. The Church (St. Bartholomew) is a large edifice, comprising nave, aisles, north porch, chancel, and lofty tower with four bells. The east window is filled with beautiful stained glass, representing the Crucifixion, given by the rector in memory of his first wife. Here are several brasses and a rood-screen. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 7s. 8d., and now at £490, with the vicarage of Gateley annexed, is in the patronage of Christ's College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. John Smith, B.D., who has here a yearly tithe rent-charge of £293, a good brick residence, and 22 acres of glebe. The National School is a neat brick building, erected in 1844, and attended by 40 children. Attached to it are a house and garden for the master. Brisley Hall is an ancient farm house, still nearly encompassed by a deep moat, and having some fine specimens of carved oak. Richd. Taverner, a pious layman, who died in 1575, in his 70th year, was a native of Brisley. To promote the Reformation, he published in 1539, a new translation of the Bible, for which he was committed to the tower; but he regained the favour of Henry VIII., when that monarch became himself a reformer. The Town Land, 4A. 1R. 30P., is let for £16. 15s. a year, which is applied with the church and poor rates. Post from Swaffham.

COLKIRK, a parish and village of detached houses on an eminence, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of Fakenham, has 473 inhabitants and 1482 acres of land, including a common of about 100 acres. The Marquis Townshend is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil; but Fredk. Manby, Esq., and the Ridgeway family have estates here. The tithes have been commuted for £788 per annum. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a structure of the 15th century, built on the site of an older church. It was well restored in 1848, and contains curious monuments of the Timporley family. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, and now at £959, with that of Stibbard annexed, is in the patronage of Henry Hoare, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. James Bradby Sweet, M.A., who has here a good residence, which was considerably improved by the late rector, the Rev. Ralph Tatham, D.D.; who in 1851 erected a small but neat School, now attended by about 60 children, and chiefly supported by the present incumbent. The poor have 8A. 2R. 15P. of land at Shereford, given by an unknown donor, and let for £8.3s.; and the Crown public-house and 2A. of land, let for £23, and purchased with £100, left by Samuel Collison in 1764; and £20 derived from the sale of land at Snettisham, left by John Holland in 1636. The public-house was rebuilt in 1827, at a cost of £324. The poor have also 52s. a year, left by Thomas Carryan in 1711, out of land at Great Massingham; and 3s. 4d. per annum from Dunham's Charity. DUNHAM (GREAT), 6 miles N.E. of Swaffham, and 2 miles S. by W. of Litcham, is a scattered village and parish, containing 493 inhabitants, and 1968 acres of land, belonging chiefly to Robert Blake Humfrey, Esq., lord of the manor; but Captain Davy, Rev. W. A. W. Keppel, and some smaller owners, have estates here, and the manors of East and West Lexham extend into this parish. Here were formerly two churches, dedicated to St. Mary and St. Andrew, and their advowsons, which had belonged to Castleacre Priory, were granted at the dissolution to the Duke of Norfolk. One of them appears to have been taken down about this time, and its foundations are yet discoverable in the rectory garden, where fragments of the ancient altar stone, and several capitals, mullions, &c., were found some years ago. The present Church is usually considered to be St. Andrew's, and exhibits many features of great interest. It consists of a nave and chancel with a square tower between them, and a porch on the south side. The chancel is poor perpendicular, but the nave and tower are of very early character, and are most probably of Saxon workmanship. The tower has long-and-short work at the angles, small round-headed windows, splayed inside and out, and belfry windows with a central shaft supporting a long stone but having Norman caps and bases. At the west end is a singular triangular canopy over a square-headed doorway, consisting of a fillet with the edges cut into a kind of square billet ornament, and shafts ornamented in a similar manner, having square imposts or caps. The south doorway is early-English, but the porch over it is plain perpendicular. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12. 1s. 10½d., was anciently in two medieties, and is in the patronage of R. B. Humfrey, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. William Francis Jex-Blake, who has 44A. 16P. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £562, awarded in 1840, and a neat residence, built in 1851, by the late rector, who also erected the National School, which is now attended by 60 children. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, have each a chapel in the parish. The Poor's Allotment, awarded in 1797, is 34A. 3R. 22P., let for £47. The poor have also an annuity of £5, left by Dalton Chamberlayne in 1806; and £1.12s. a year from Allee's Charity. Post from Swaffham.

DUNHAM (LITTLE), a village and parish, 1 mile S. of Great Dunham, and 5 miles N.E. of Swaffham, has 295 inhabitants, and 1835 acres of fertile land, mostly the property of George Copeman, Esq., the lord of the manor, who resides at Dunham Lodge, a neat mansion, erected by Edwd. Parry, Esq., in 1783, and standing on a commanding eminence, in a well-wooded lawn of 90 acres. Several smaller owners have estates in the parish. The Church (St. Margaret) is a neat ivy-clad structure, in the early-English style, comprising nave, chancel, north aisle, south porch, and massive square tower. It was restored, and re-seated with poppy-headed open benches, at a cost of £400, raised by subscription in 1862, when a handsemely carved pulpit and reading desk were given by the Rev. Edw. Montague Hare, M.A., the curate. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 16s., and now having 25A. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £500 awarded in 1840, in lieu of tithes, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. John Nelson, M.A., of Beeston. The Rectory House is occupied by the curate. The School is attended by 35 children. Here is a small Primitive Methodist chapel. The Poor's Allotment, awarded in 1726, contains 35A. 1R. 22P., let for £68, which is distributed in coals. The poor have also 10s. a year, left by Wm. Nelson in 1772; and a house in Lynn, left by Thomas Warne, at an early period, and now let for £12. Here is a station on the Lynn and Dereham branch of the Great Eastern Railway. The chief residents are—The Rev. E. M. Hare, M.A., curate, Rectory; Geo. Copeman, Esq., Lodge; John Jackson, sen. and jun., gentlemen; Mr. Wm. Trundle; Chas. Underhill, station master; Wm. Large and Thos. Thompson, farmers; Wm. Basham, shopkeeper and vict. Black Swan; Benjamin Duffield, beerhouse; Bartw. Becket and Francis Bird, shoemakers; John Chamberlain, blacksmith; John Durrant, baker; James Register, shopkeeper; John Small, farm bailiff; and Robert Tash, carpenter. Post from Swaffham.

ELMHAM (NORTH), once a city, and the seat of the Bishops of Norfolk from 673 to 1075, is now a large village and parish, pleasantly situated on the west bank of the river Wensum, 5 miles N. of East Dereham, and 18 miles N.W. by W. of Norwich. It contains 1251 inhabitants, and 4631A. of land. The Earl of Leicester owns 479A.; Christ's College, Cambridge, about 110A.; and nearly all the rest is the property of Lord Sondes. The parish is in two manors:—viz., Elmham-Nawer's, of which Lord Sondes is lord, and North Elmham, of which the Dean and Chapter of Norwich are lords. In the former the finēs are certain, and in the latter arbitrary. It is supposed that there was a ROMAN STATION here, in Broom close, where upwards of 100 urns, many coins, and other Roman antiquities were found, in 1711. Among the inscriptions on the coins were—" Vespasianvs Avg.," " Cæsar Divi F, Domitianvs Coss. VIII.," " Divæ Faustina," " Lvcilla Avgvsta Antonina Avgvsti Filia," and " G. Constantvs Nob. Cæsar." Bisus, the fourth Bishop of the East Angles, about the year 673, divided his diocese into two, when one bishop was appointed to reside here, where the first cathedral church was a wooden fabric. After the removal of the see to Thetford, about A.D. 1070, and finally to Norwich in 1096, Elmham still continued a favourite residence of the succeeding bishops. (See page 41.) In the 11th of Richard II., the warlike Bishop Spencer obtained a license to embattle and make a castle of his manor house at Elmham. This episcopal castle stood on an artificial mound on the hill above the village, surrounded by a broad and deep ditch, encompassing about five acres. The inner keep was also defended by a deep fosse, which enclosed nearly two acres. Some traces of the entrenchments and foundations of the building may still be seen, overgrown with briars and thorns. From the castle there was a vault underground to the church. The park, which belonged to it, now called the Old or Westfield Park, contains 370 acres, divided into farms, and is the property of the Earl of Leicester. Adjoining the east side of this is the extensive and well-wooded deer park of Elm Hall, one of the seats of the Right Hon. George John Milles, fourth Lord SONDES, who was born in 1794, and succeeded his brother in 1836. His son and heir, the Hon. George Watson Milles, was born in 1824. The hall is a large brick mansion, standing on an eminence, rising gently from the margin of a fine sheet of water, which abounds with pike and other fish, and is supplied by a small brook flowing through the park to the river Wensum. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a fine building of mixed architecture, founded by Bishop Herbert de Losinga, but altered at many subsequent periods. It comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, south and west porches, transept-chapels, chancel, and square west tower with eight bells. The nave is of six bays; the arches early-English, plain and bold; the pillars alternately round and octagonal, with moulded caps. The aisles are of the decorated period, and the clerestory has large and fine perpendicular windows. The north doorway is early-English, with a very singular corbel-table over it, supporting a horizontal projection. The south doorway is of the same date, with a plain decorated porch. The tower is early perpendicular, with an arch open to the church, and has a battlement and pinnacles. A small rich porch is introduced over the west door, between the buttresses, having the ribs of the vault and door arches encircled with flowers in hollow mouldings. The north transept-chapel is decorated; the south perpendicular, with a singular piscina. The chancel is early-English, late in the style, and partly transition to decorated. It contains the original sedilia and double piscina. The priest's door is singularly placed diagonally across the angle formed by the south wall of the chancel and the east wall of the aisle. There is an arch on each side of the chancel, near the chancel-arch, presenting a curious mixture of Norman and early-English, the piers on the east side being of the former, but those on the west of the latter style. The interior has many ancient carved seats, and two handsome marble monuments, in memory of Richard Warner and

Richard Milles, Esqrs., the former of whom built Elmham Hall, and died in 1757. From the latter the Elmham and other estates passed to their present owner (Lord Sondes), who assumed the name of Milles in lieu of his patronymic Watson, by sign-manual. In the church windows are several fragments of stained glass. The benefice is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £13. 15s. Lord Sondes is the patron and impropiator, and the Rev. Henry Edward Knatchbull is the incumbent, and has a spacious residence near the church. In 1838, the vicarial tithes were commuted for £463. 2s. 6d., and the rectorial tithes on those parts of the parish not belonging to the impropiator, for £291 per annum. There is a small Independent Chapel in the village. Petty Sessions are held at the King's Head Inn every alternate month, and Charles Wright, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. A large fair for cattle, sheep, and swine, is held yearly on April 6th, unless that day fall on Saturday or Sunday, when the fair is held on the following Monday. The National School for boys and girls was built by Richard Milles, Esq., the late lord of the manor, who endowed it in 1813, with a house for the master, a playground, and 13A. of the common. At the enclosure in 1831, it received an allotment of 2A. 2R. 15P., which, with the 13A., yields about £20 per annum. An infants' schoolroom was added in 1850. These schools are now attended by 50 boys, 60 girls, and 80 infants. The rent of the Church Lands, 74A. 20P., is applied towards the support of the church. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, is 50A. 21P. The poor have also the interest of £100, left by Peter Johnson in 1833; £1. 11s. 8d. yearly, left by Robert Shettles and John Culling; and 36s. a year from Gooch's Charity. Here are two water mills for grinding corn, and at the extreme south end of the village is a station on the Wells branch of the Great Eastern Railway, near which are several granaries and coal depôts.

FRANSHAM (LITTLE), a small village, on the Norwich and Lynn road, 6 miles E. by N. of Swaffham, and west of East Dereham, has in its parish 256 inhabitants, and 995a. 2r. of land, in the two manors of Barns-on-the-Moor, and Sparham and Wilcox; the former held by Wm. Butcher, Esq., and the latter by John Hudson, Esq.; besides whom Money Griggs, Esq., Mr. Jonathan Bear, and some smaller owners, have land here. The Old Hall has a room, in which it is said Queen Elizabeth slept one night, on her tour through Norfolk; and near it are some foundations of Roman brickwork. The Church (St. Mary) is an ancient structure originally in the early-English style, consisting of nave, chancel, and south porch, but having no tower. It contains several mural tablets, a piscina, and a curious antique font. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 8s. 4d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Augustus Wenman Langton, M.A., who has 38 acres of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £314, and a spacious residence with pleasant grounds. The School is attended by 30 children, and was built in 1843 by the rector, who still supports it. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1807, is 11a. 2r., let for £21. The chief residents are—The Rector; Mrs. Frances Sooley; Mrs. Mary Watts; Mr. Peter Powley; Herbert Flood, baker and confectioner; Jno. Lovett, grocer, draper, and wheelwright; Ts. Mace, blacksmith; Jas. Parker, shoemaker; Abraham Powley, victualler, Crown; Eliz. Doy, schoolmistress; Jas. Watson, basket maker; and Jonathan Bear, Thos. Bell, Thos. Cross, Caroline Doy, Edw. Fisher, and Money F. Griggs, Hall, farmers. Post from Thetford.

GATELEY parish, 7 miles N. by W. of East Dereham, has 134 inhabitants, and 1497 acres of land. Lord Sondes is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil, but Mr. Charles Elgar and some others have estates here. The Church (St. Helen) is a small structure, consisting of nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with three bells. Here is an old rood-screen, on the lower panels of which are nearly-obliterated paintings of four female saints, a Pope, Henry VI., a Bishop, and John Schorn. The latter is represented holding a boot, into which he has just "conjured the devil." The vicarage is consolidated with the rectory of Brisley (see p. 954). Here are 28A. 3R. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1840: the rectorial for £203, and the vicarial for £142 per annum. The former belong to Christ's College, Cambridge. The Town Land is 6A. 1R., and the poor have the rent of 2½ acres left by Robert King, in 1697. The chief residents are—Miss Mary Smith Case and Miss Susannah Ord Chambers, Hill House; Thos. Hawes, blacksmith and parish clerk; and Edw. Betts, Wm. Betts, Money Griggs (Manor House), and Wm. Howell, farmers. Post from Thetford.

GRESSENHALL, a village and parish on the Litcham road, 3 miles N.W. of East Dereham, had 991 inhabitants in 1861, including 267 in Mitford and Launditch Union Workhouse, which is already noticed at page 932. The parish contains 2541 acres of land, including 350A. 33P., which anciently formed part of the dissolved parish of Great Bittering (see page 954). The manors are North and South Soken and Rougholm, of which J. D. H. Hill, Esq., is lord; and Hareford's, of which A. C. Spurgeon, Esq., is lord; but part of the soil belongs to John Hastings, Esq., and some smaller proprietors. The Church, dedicated to the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin, is a large cruciform edifice, with a massive short central tower, formerly surmounted by a spire, which was taken down in 1698. The north transept is called Feraur's chantry, or chapel; and that on the south, Hastings' chapel. Here are inscriptions to the families of Estmond, LeStrange, Vessey, and Davy. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15. 13s. 4d., is in the patronage of King's College, Cambridge, and has been since 1807 in the incumbency of the Rev. Dennis Hill, who has 50 acres of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £750, awarded in 1842, and a good residence, built in 1813. In the reign of Henry VIII., Wm. de Stuteville founded a chapel, dedicated to St. Nicholas, in that part of the parish called Rougholm; but it was in ruins when Blomefield wrote, and was afterwards converted into a house. Two annual fairs for horses, cattle, &c., are held here on Dec. 6th, and the Tuesday before Whit-Sunday, and the former is numerously attended. The School, with master's house attached, was built by J. D. H. Hill, Esq., in 1842. It is attended by about 80 children. The Church Land is 2A. 1R. The Poor's Allotment, 7A. 3R. 34P., was awarded in 1810. The poor have also the rent of 6 acres, received at the enclosure, in exchange for 4 acres, left by John Curson, in 1667; and also 10s. 6d., paid yearly, for the right of setting stalls on the "Fairstead."

HOE, commonly called Hoo, is a small village and parish, 2 miles N.E. of East Dereham, containing 169 inhabitants, and 1400 acres of land. The Rev. Henry E. Lombe is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil; but Wm. Grounds, Esq., the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, and a few smaller owners, have estates here. The Church is a small building, comprising only a nave, with a low tower and one bell. The perpetual curacy, valued in K.B. at £8. 13s. 4d., is annexed to the vicarage of East Dereham. (See page 936). The Church Land, 12a. 1r., is let for £16. 10s. The Poor's Allotment, 12a., awarded in 1814, is let for £9. 10s. The poor have also £4. 4s. from Gooch's charity. (See p. 937). The chief residents are—Wm. Kitteringham, brick and tile maker; James Fenn, parish clerk; John Ottway, vict., Angel Inn; and James Blazy, Wm. Grounds (Hoe Hall), Jeremiah Jones, Samuel John Norton, Izrahiah Waters, and Geo. Willins (Gorgate Hall), farmers. Post from Thetford.

HORNINGTOFT, a parish of scattered houses, 5 miles S. by E. of Fakenham, has 248 inhabitants, and 1405 acres of land, including 100 acres of wood. Mrs. Ann Talbot is lady of the manor and chief owner of the soil; but the trustees of the late Mr. Winearls, and Messrs. N. Frohawk, R. Webster, and S. M. Hopson, have estates here. The Church (St. Edmund) was much injured by the fall of the steeple, in 1796; but was thoroughly repaired in the following year. It is a small building, comprising only a nave and chancel, separated by a carved screen. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 17s. 8d., and now at £335, is consolidated with that of Whissonsett. Here are 27 acres of glebe, and an Infants' School supported by the rector. The Parish Land consists of 2 acres, on which are two cottages. A number of curious earthworks were discovered in the Great Wood in this parish a few years ago. They consist of a bank and ditch enclosing a small circular space, with one of a somewhat larger size of a horse shoe form, adjoining it. Foundations of some regular building of rubble-work, and a well in a very perfect state, are within the enclosure; and tradition says there was once a great castle here. Post from Swaffham.

KEMPSTONE parish, 1½ mile S. of Litcham, has only 48 inhabitants, and 814 acres of land, nearly all the property of the Earl of Leicester, who is lord of the manor and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £4. 8s. 4d., and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. A. W. Langton, M.A., of Little Fransham, who has here 30 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £110, awarded in 1841. The Church (St. Paul) is a small ivy-mantled structure, with nave, chancel, square tower, and one bell. It contains a piscina, an ancient font, and several tablets of the Fitzroy family. Kempstone Lodge, a neat residence in a spacious lawn, is occupied by Mr. Wm. M. Farrer, who farms part of the parish; the rest of which is occupied by Mr. John Vincent Chamberlain. Post from Swaffham.

LEXHAM (EAST), 2 miles W. of Litcham, has in its parish 226 inhabitants, and 1190 acres of land, nearly all the property of the Rev. W. Arnold Walpole Keppel, B.A., rector of Hainford and lord of the manor, who resides occasionally at the Hall, a neat mansion pleasantly seated in a small park, within a mile of Litcham. The Church (St. Andrew) is a small structure, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and round ivy-mantled tower with one bell. It has a neat open timber roof; and contains a piscina and several tablets of the Keppel family. One of the windows was filled with stained glass by Mrs. Keppel in 1861, in memory of her husband and his brother. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 6s., is annexed to that of Litcham. The Poor's Allotments, awarded in 1797, comprise 26a., let for £26; and 2a., on which the poor turn geese and cattle. In 1629, Wm. Allee charged lands, now belonging to the lord of the manor, with the yearly payments of 40s. to each of the parishes of East and West Lexham, Great Dunham, Beeston-juxta-Mileham, Litcham, and Castleacre; and 20s. to Newton-by-Castleacre, for the poor. Here is a small National School, built by the late E. W. Keppel, Esq., attended by about 40 children, and supported by the lord of the manor. The chief residents are—The Rev. W. A. W. Keppel, B.A., Hall; Elizabeth Beck, schoolmistress; Samuel Bishop, bricklayer; Edward Burton, shoemaker; Fredk. Franklin, shoemaker; Wm. Smith, victualler, Chequers; Sarah Watts, shopkeeper; and John Turner Ashley, Frederick Bird, Henry Childs, and Charles Johnson, farmers. Here is a Pillar Letter Box, cleared at 4-30 p.m. Post from Brandon, via Swaffham.

LEXHAM (WEST), 3 miles W. of Litcham, is a parish with only 154 inhabitants, and 1155 acres of land, belonging to the Earl of Leicester and the Rev. W. A. W. Keppel, the lords of the manors. The Church (St. Nicholas) is a small structure, consisting of nave, south porch, chancel, and round tower with one bell. It formerly had a south aisle. Some fragments of very old stained glass were dug up on the north side of the church in 1861. The interior of the building has been much improved by the present rector. The chancel has a handsome open timber roof, and contains a piscina. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 11s. 8d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Nathaniel Davies, M.A., prebendary of St. David's, who has here 58a. of glebe, a commodious residence built in 1851, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £188. The poor have a wood of 5a. of oak stubs for fuel, and also £1. 12s. yearly from Allee's charity. The chief residents are—The Rector; Robt. Leeds, farmer; Thos. Bailey, vict., Red Lion; and John Coe, parish clerk. Post from Brandon, via Swaffham.

LITCHAM, formerly a market town, and now a large and well-built village, forming several streets, distant 8 miles N.E. by N. of Swaffham and N.W. of East Dereham, and 24 miles W. by N. of Norwich, includes within its parish 903 inhabitants, and 1932 acres of land, of which about 1300 acres belong to the Rev. W. A. W. Keppel. The rest belongs to a number of smaller proprietors, except 128 acres, which lie in two small commons, on which the inhabitants have right of pasturage and cutting fuel. In the 20th of Edward I., Robert de Felton had a grant of a weekly market at his manor of Litcham, and a fair yearly on the day and morrow of All Saints. The market has long been obsolete, but a fair is held on the 1st of November. On one of the commons there was formerly a hermitage, occupied by Thomas Cannon. The Church (All Saints) is a good building, consisting of nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, vestry, and square brick tower with 5 bells. The latter were recast by Matthew Halcott, who rebuilt the tower in the 17th century. In 1850, the church was restored and fitted with open seats. Two handsome stained glass windows were also inserted in the south aisle, by Mr. and Miss Lynes, in memory of their parents. Here is a finely carved chancel screen. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 2s., has that of East Lexham annexed, and is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Geo. Wm. Winter, M.A., who has 45a. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £441, and a handsome residence with pleasant grounds. The National School, built in 1845, is attended by more than 100 children. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. In the village is a small Alms-house for two poor aged people, founded in 1677, by John Halcott, who endowed it with a yearly rent-charge of £8, out of a farm at Beeston, called Barkhams. The poor parishioners have the following yearly doles :—£1. 12s. from Allee's Charity, (see p. 962); £3 left by Sir Thomas Wodehouse in 1634, out of the manor farm; £2, left by Martha Glover, in 1741, out of land called Minns; and 35s., left by Matthew Halcott, in 1673. The Poor's Land, 6A. 2R. 35P., partly purchased with £30 benefaction money, in 1709, and partly allotted at the enclosure, in 1765, is divided into garden plots, and let to poor persons at rents amounting to £17. 16s. 4d. per annum. Petty Sessions are held on the first Wednesday in each alternate month, at the Bull Inn, where the Launditch Societies, for encouraging industry and prosecuting felons, hold their meetings.

LONGHAM, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles W.N.W. of East Dereham, is a scattered village and parish, containing 320 inhabitants and 1304 acres of land, chiefly the property of the Earl of Leicester, the lord of the manor. The Church (St. Peter) is a neat structure in the perpendicular style, having nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. The roof is open timber; and here are a carved chancel screen and a small organ. The perpetual curacy, valued at £30, was augmented from 1756 to 1792, with £1000 of Q.A.B. It is now consolidated with the perpetual curacy of Wendling, and the joint livings are valued at £82 a year. The Lord Chancellor is patron, and the Rev. John Rushworth Pilling is the incumbent, and has 60A. of glebe at Potter Heigham. Here is a small school built by the Earl of Leicester in 1862.

MILEHAM is a long village of detached houses, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E.N.E. of Litcham, and 7 miles N.W. of East Dereham, including within its parish 546 inhabitants, and 2851 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Earl of Leicester, Capt. Davy, the Rev. C. B. Barnwell, Mrs. Barnwell and Mr. E. Sparkes. The former is lord of the manor of Burgh-wood; but the Rev. C. B. Barnwell is lord of the manors of Mileham and Beeston, and patron and incumbent of the rectory, which is valued in K.B. at £11. 1s. 10d., and now has $16\frac{1}{2}$ A. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £650, awarded in 1842. He resides at the Hall, a spacious red brick building near the church; the rectory house being in ruins. The Church (St. John the Baptist) is furnished with neat poppy-headed benches; and comprises nave, aisles, chancel, and square tower with four bells. The Church Land is 10A. 2R. 22A. Here was anciently a strong Castle, built, as Blomefield imagines, by Alan, son of Flaad, to whom the Conqueror gave the manor. Some traces of the ditch and entrenchments, which occupied an oval area of 12 acres, may still be seen. Mileham was the birth-place of that "oracle of the law," SIR EDWARD COKE, who was son of Robert Coke, Esq., and was born in 1550, in the old hall, long since pulled down. Having been bred to the law, as his father had previously been, he so distinguished himself, as to rise to its highest honours and emoluments. In the early part of his career, he was first made recorder of Norwich, and then of London. He was afterwards appointed solicitor-general to Queen Elizabeth, and speaker of the House of Commons; and subsequently became attorney-general, in which office he continued under King James, who successively appointed him Chief Justice of both benches. He died Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, Sept. 3rd, 1634, in the 83rd year of his age. The learning of this eminent lawyer was at once profound, excursive and curious; and when he applied his strong mind to the illustration of a legal question he wholly exhausted the subject, and rather than quit it would sometimes resort even to remote analogies. His works are still held in high esteem, and his commentary upon Littleton has become the "bible of the law." A sumptuous altar monument, bearing a Latin inscription, in the chancel of Tittleshall church, records his acquirements, honours, and virtues. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure, in 1812, is 26A. 3R. 6P. The poor cut turf upon it and let the herbage for about £20 a year, which is distributed in coals. The National School now attended by 70 children, was founded at an early period by Allen Elwyn, who gave the school room, the master's house and garden, and about 3A. 2R. of land. The present school was built in 1834. In 1743, the Rev. Chas. Ward left £200, in trust, to pay the interest of £50 to the schoolmaster, and to distribute the rest of the income, in six coats and gowns, among six poor parishioners. In 1773, the Rev. Charles Barnwell charged his house, and 12 acres of land here, with the yearly payment of £5, for schooling four poor children. Wm. Glover, in the reign of Edward IV., gave 4A. of land for the use of the church and poor. The latter have also the following yearly doles, viz., 3s. 4d., left by Richard Thurrold, in 1628, out of land belonging to Capt. Davy, (who generously distributes £5 yearly;) about £3 as the interest of £100, left by Mary Barnwell, in 1780; and £5, left by Sarah Fowell, in 1809, out of land now belonging to Mr. Beeston. OXWICK-CUM-PATTESLEY, 4 miles S. by W. of Fakenham, are two parishes, united for the support of their poor, and containing a few scattered houses, 76 inhabitants, and 1040 acres, of which 66 souls and 719 acres are in Oxwick, where the Church (All Saints) is situated. It is a small plain building of the late perpendicular period, and has a nave, chancel, and south porch. The interior was restored in 1857, and fitted with neat open seats and pulpit of pine, and a reading desk of oak. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 9s. 2d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Edmund Blake, M.A., of Bramerton, who has a yearly rent-charge of £231, awarded in 1842 in lieu of tithes. The soil belongs to the Marquis Townshend, Mr. Philip Westrup, Jas. Day, Esq., and a few smaller owners, the former of whom is lord of the manor. The poor have 5A. of land; the interest of £17, which arose from the sale of timber; and 3s. 4d. yearly from Dunham's charity. The farmers are—Edmund Beck (and auctioneer), Jas. Harrison, Wm. Riches, and Philip Westrup. Post from Fakenham.

PATTESLEY, 1 mile S. of Oxwick, has only 10 souls, and about 320 acres of land, in one farm, belonging to the Marquis Townshend and occupied by Mr. George Freeman. Its church was dilapidated many years ago, though some fragments of its walls may still be seen, at the east end of the farm-house. Though rated to the poor and church of Oxwick, its sinecure rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 18s. 9d., is consolidated with the vicarage of Mattishall. (See page 943.) Post from Rougham.

ROUGHAM is a small village, 14 miles E. of Lynn, and 8 miles N. of Swaffham. Its parish contains 407 inhabitants, and 2627 acres of land, belonging to Frederick North, Esq., M.P. for Hastings, whose ancestors were formerly seated here in a handsome hall, of which nothing now remains but some of the foundation walls, though the surrounding pastures still retain a park-like appearance, studded with many stately trees. Of this family was the eminent Lord Chief Justice North; and here was also seated a branch of the Yelvertons, afterwards Earls of Sussex, one of whom was Sir Wm. Yelverton, Lord Chief Justice, in the reign of Elizabeth. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel, north transept-chapel, south porch, and tower. The latter contains a handsome clock with three dials, given by Miss North in 1851. Here are several fine brasses, and a tablet to the memory of the Hon. Roger North. Over the west door is a mutilated carving of the Crucifixion, under a canopy. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £1. 8s. 6½d., and augmented in 1762-7 with £400 of Q.A.B., is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. John Overton, M.A., who has a yearly tithe rent-charge of £255, and a neat residence, built in 1847. The rectorial tithes belong to the owner of the soil, and the parish is entitled to send two boys to the school at Massingham. Post Office at Wm. M. Thomas's. Letters are despatched, via Swaffham, at 7.10 p.m. This is also a Money Order Office and Savings' Bank.

SCARNING is a fertile parish, extending from 1 to 3½ miles westward from East Dereham, on the Swaffham road, and having many scattered houses, 693 inhabitants, and 3470 acres of land, partly belonging to the Rev. Hy. E. Lombe, B.A., the lord of the manor, which is subject to arbitrary fines, and has a court baron yearly. Sir Willoughby Jones, Bart., Mrs. Girling, Capt. Adlington, Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart., Geo. Baker, Esq., and some smaller owners, have also estates here. The commons were enclosed in 1765 and 1811, except a small one for the use of the poor. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with five bells. It was restored and partly rebuilt in 1859, at a cost of £1000. The ancient and beautifully carved rood screen still remains, and upon it hangs the sanctus-bell. The building is mostly of the perpendicular period; but the south porch and doorway, and some other parts, are decorated. The tower arch is open to the nave, and the font is of very singular workmanship. In 1862-'3, four of the windows were filled with beautiful stained glass, in memory of members of the Aufrere and Warcop families. The present vestry appears to have been a chantry chapel, and still retains its piscina and aumbry. The church is fitted with neat open benches, and contains a handsome pulpit and reading desk of oak. The living, valued in K.B. at £9. 0s. 2d., and now at £500, is both rectorial and vicarial, the Rev. Thomas Carson, M.A., the incumbent, having half the rectorial tithes, and the Rev. H. E. Lombe, B.A., the patron, being impropiator of the other moiety. Here is a good Rectory House. The Free School was founded by Wm. Seeker, who endowed it in 1604 with 60A. of land, which has been since increased, at different enclosures, to 102A. 2R. 5P. The endowment now yields a clear yearly income of £170, and the school was handsomely rebuilt of brick in 1850, at a cost of £900. It is divided into compartments for boys and girls, and attached to it is a good residence for the master, who has a yearly salary of £100, out of which sum he provides coals and pays a schoolmistress. The residue is applied as a fund for repairing the premises, and providing for the arbitrary fines levied on the copyhold lands, on the admission of new trustees. The schoolmaster teaches reading, writing, arithmetic, and geography, to all the children of the parish above the age of five years who are sent to him; and he has generally about 120 pupils. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1766, is 14A.; the old poor's land comprises 6A. 2R.; and the poor also have 5A. 1R., called Whitebread meadow. The rents are distributed in doles of bread, together with a yearly rent-charge of 6s., left by one Burroughes, and 3s. 4d., called the rector's dole. Post from Thetford, via Dereham.

STANFIELD, on the Fakenham road, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. by N. of East Dereham, has in its parish 195 inhabitants, and 923 acres of land, belonging to the Venerable Archdeacon Hankinson, John Collison, Esq., Captain Davy, F. Manby, Esq., and a few smaller owners; but J. D. H. Hill, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Church (St. Margaret) is a neat building, consisting of nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with four bells. The interior is fitted with handsome open seats of oak, with carved poppy heads; and contains an ancient screen. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 14s. 2d., is in the patronage of the Rev. E. L. Davies, and incumbency of the Rev. James Royle, who has 20A. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £260, and a good residence, built in 1827 and enlarged in 1841. The Fuel Allotment, awarded about 1819, is 8A., on which the poor cut turf and let the herbage for £11. A cottage belonging to the parish, is occupied by a pauper. The chief residents are—The Rector; James Ashley, corn miller, Tuthill Mill; Wm. Bear, butcher; Wm. Cockett, carpenter; John Neal, victualler, King's Arms; Walton Peeling, shoemaker; Maria Pegg, shop-keeper; Wm. Turner, victualler, Maid's Head; Fras. Wakefield, blacksmith; and John Bayfield, Thos. Boyce, Martin and Samuel Buck, Jas. Cottrell, Robt. Daplyn (Dandy hall), David Dickason, Wm. Evans, Robt. Lavender, and Thos. Pallant, farmers. Post from Swaffham, via Litcham.

SWANTON-MORLEY is a considerable village of detached houses, nearly 4 miles N.E. of East Dereham, comprising in its parish 769 inhabitants, and 2714A. of land, belonging to the Rev. Henry E. Lombe, and Messrs W. J. Chambers, Wm. Grounds, Benj. Branford, T. Mack and J. Freeman; the former of whom is lord of the manor, which is on fine arbitrary and has a court baron in November. The ancient lords were the Beaufoes, Morleys, and Parkers. The Church (All Saints) stands on an eminence, and is a spacious structure, having a nave with aisles, chancel, and lofty square tower with five bells and a clock. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15. 10s. 2d., and now at £1065, with that of Worthing annexed, is in the patronage of the Rev. H. E. Lombe, and incumbency of the Rev. E. Lombe, B.A., who has a handsome residence, built in 1827. The National School is a neat brick building, erected in 1852 at a cost of £360, and attended by about 90 children. Thomas Barret bequeathed, many years ago, a yearly rent-charge of £24, for repairing the church and relieving the poor. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. The Town Lands, 52A., are let for £80 per annum, half of which is applied in the service of the church, and the remainder is distributed in blankets and calico among the poor. In 1654, Wm. Small charged his lands, called Eye Park, in Suffolk, with the yearly payment of £10, for schooling poor children of this parish. In 1792, Robert Freeman left an annuity of 21s. out of Woodgate farm, for a distribution of bread on Easter Sunday.

TITTLESHALL-CUM-GODWICK form a parish, with a neat village of the former name, 2 miles N. of Litcham, and 6 miles S. by W. of Fakenham. The parish contains 544 inhabitants, and 3,364A. of land, (including about 300A. of woods and wastes,) nearly all belonging to the Earl of Leicester, and forming the manors of Greynstones, or Caley, Coxford, Godwick hall, Peek-hall, and Newhall, and part of the manors of Whissonsett and Burghwood-hall. Sir William Foster, Bart., is steward for these manors, and holds the court leet and baron in October; but here are only few copyholders, and their fines are certain. The Church (St. Mary) is a neat structure of perpendicular architecture, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with four bells; and in 1853 was furnished with new open seats, pulpit and reading desk. The ancient screen still remains; and at the north side of the chancel is the vault of the Coke family. Here is a splendid marble monument to Sir Edward Coke, (vide page 964,) with his effigy in full length, erected at a cost of upwards of £400. Here are likewise several other handsome monuments to the Coke family, one of which has effigies of Sir Edward's wife, and eight children. The late venerable Earl of Leicester was interred in 1842 in this church, where there is a monument in memory of his first wife, (Mrs. Coke), which cost 3000 guineas, and was executed by Nollekens. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £9. 12s. 8d., was consolidated with those of Godwick and Wellingham, in 1630, and is in the patronage of the Earl of Leicester, and incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. Kenelm Henry Digby, M.A., who has about 53A. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £947, and a good residence which he has considerably enlarged. The National School was built in 1836 by the rector, who in 1863 also erected an Infants' School, which is used as a reading room every evening. The Baptists, Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. GODWICK, now only two farms, 1 mile N. of Tittleshall, was anciently a separate parish, but its church, of which the ruined tower still remains, was dilapidated more than two centuries ago. The Hall, now a farm house, was built by Sir Edward Coke. The Fuel Allotment, awarded more than 120 years ago, consists of 40A., on which all the parishioners, except the farmers, are allowed to turn cattle, for the yearly payment of 21s. per head. The money thus received (about £20 per annum,) is distributed in coals among the poor. The Poor's Wood is held by the Earl of Leicester, at the yearly rent of £2. 2s., and the poor have also the interest of £10, left by a Wm. Haylett.

WEASENHAM ALL SAINTS, or Upper Weasenhams, is a small scattered village and parish, 3½ miles N.W. of Litcham, and 8 miles S.W. by S. of Fakenham, containing 360 inhabitants and 1988 acres of land, including 167A. of plantations. It is nearly all the property of the Earl of Leicester, who is lord of the manor and lessee of the rectorial tithes. The Church is a small building, comprising only nave, north aisle, chancel, and south porch. The Vicarage, valued in K.B. at £15 10s., is consolidated with Weasenham St. Peter's. Here is a neat School of brick, in the Elizabethan style, with master's house attached, erected in 1859 at a cost of £900, on land given by the Earl of Leicester, and attended by 70 children. The Wesleyans have a small chapel in the parish, built in 1856. Here is a fair for toys, &c., on the 25th of January. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1809 to Weasenham All Saints and St. Peter, is 40A., on which the poor cut fuel. The poor of All Saints have 10s. a year, left by John Billing, in 1630, and the interest of £10 left by John Bailey. Post from Brandon.

WEASENHAM ST. PETER, or Lower Weasenham, is a small village and parish, 7 miles S.W. by S. of Fakenham, containing 320 inhabitants, and 1423 acres of land, nearly all the property of the Earl of Leicester, who is lord of the manor and lessee of the rectorial tithes. The Church is a neat structure, comprising nave, south aisle, north porch, and low tower. It contains an ancient font, and a handsome stained glass window inserted by the vicar in memory of his late wife. The Vicarage is consolidated with that of Weasenham All Saints; and the joint livings have been augmented with £600 of Q.A.B. since 1760, and are now valued at £375 per annum. The Lord Chancellor is patron, and the Rev. Chas. Campbell is the incumbent, and has here a good residence and about 19A. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The Fuel Allotment is noticed with All Saints parish. The Town Estate comprises two tenements and 2A. 2R. 15P. of land. For a weekly distribution of bread, the poor have an annuity of 53s. out of Nicholl's Close, left by Chas. Wilson, in 1729. In the reign of Edw. III., Sir John de Wesenham was the king's butler, and being a rich merchant of London, had the king's crown in pawn for money advanced for the wars in France.

WELLINGHAM, a small village and parish, 6 miles S.S.W. of Fakenham, has 145 inhabitants, and 1066 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Earl of Leicester, and partly to Mr. John Norton. The Earl is lord of the manor, and patron of the vicarage, which is consolidated with the rectory of Tittleshall-cum-Godwick, and valued in K.B. at £5. 8s. 6d. The Church (St. Andrew) is a small building, with a low square tower and one bell; and was partly reseatd in 1854, at the expense of the rector, who in the same year erected a small School. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1809, is 37A. 20P. The chief residents are—Philip Buck, miller and baker; Thos. Sidell, blacksmith and victualler, Plough; Eliz. Spalding, schoolmistress; Eliza Coe Withers, shopkeeper; James Withers, wheelwright; and John Norton and Jas. Rivett, farmers. Post from Brandon, via Weasenham.

WENDLING, on the Swaffham road, 4 miles W. by S. of East Dereham, is a parish of scattered houses, with 370 inhabitants, and 1436 acres of land, belonging to John Margarson, Esq., lord of the manor, Executors of the late J. Mason, Esq., Rev. Page Scott, Mrs. Skikelthorp and John Hudson, Cornell Fison, and Noah Claxton, Esqrs. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) comprises nave, chancel, south transept, porch, vestry, and square tower with three bells; and was thoroughly restored in 1858, and refitted with new open benches and pulpit of varnished deal, and a handsome carved oak reading desk. Three of the windows are filled with rich stained glass. The perpetual curacy has been augmented with £600 of Q.A.B. and is annexed to that of Longham. (See p. 963). Wendling Abbey, which stood near a small rivulet, was founded about the 52nd of Henry III., by Sir William de Wendling, for canons of the Præmonstratensian order, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary. It comprised nave, choir, north and south transepts, sacristy, refectory, chapter house, cloister, almonry, &c. It was suppressed by a bull of Pope Clement, before the general dissolution, and in 1528, granted to Cardinal Wolsey; its revenues being then valued at £55. 18s. 4d. per annum. The last remains of the ruins and foundations were used in repairing the roads many years ago, when three stone coffins were discovered. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1815, is 10A. The Poor's Stock, £400 three cent consols, was derived from the sale of a house and land in 1816. The dividends have for some years been improperly carried to the poor-rates. The Widows' Land, 6A. 1R. 36P., is let for £12 a year, which is divided among poor widows belonging to the parish. The Primitive Methodist Chapel was built in 1848. Here is a station on the Wells branch of the Great Eastern Railway. Post from Thetford, via Dereham.

WHISSONSETT, a village and parish, 5 miles S. of Fakenham, contains 692 inhabitants, and 1344 acres of land, mostly belonging to Colonel Jones, lord of the manor, Robert Campbell, Esq., and Mr. William Skinner. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a large structure, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and tower with four bells. It was partly reseated in 1851, and contains several inscriptions to the Bozoun, Hapton, Guybon, and other families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 3s. 4d., is consolidated with Horningtoft, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Curtis Kemp, M.A., who has 60A. 3R. 29P. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge, for both parishes, of £686, and a good residence, erected in 1830. The tithes of this parish have been commuted for £327; and the common was enclosed in 1812. The National School, with teacher's residence attached, was built by the present rector in 1857, and is attended by 50 children. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. In making a drain in the churchyard, in 1851, several silver coins of the reigns of Charles, Elizabeth, and the Edwards, were found; also two massive antique rings, one of gold and the other of silver. Nicholas Dunham, in 1591, left yearly rent-charges of 16s. 8d. to this parish, and 3s. 4d. each to Colkirk, Oxwick, and Horningtoft, for the poor.

WORTHING, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. of East Dereham, is a small parish on the banks of a rivulet which rises near Dereham, and flows northward to the Wensum. It comprises 170 inhabitants, and 690 acres of land, mostly the property of the Rev. Henry E. Lombe, the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which is consolidated with that of Swanton Morley. The joint livings are now worth £1065 per annum, and are in the incumbency of the Rev. Edward Lombe, B.A., who has a handsome residence at Swanton Morley. (See p. 967). The Church (St. Margaret) is a small fabric, comprising nave, south porch, and low round tower with one bell. "Henry de Rie, by will without date, gave to the monks of Castle-Acre, the mill of Worthing, with Thurston, the miller, his mother, and brothers, with all their substance!!!" The poor have 12s. a year from Gooch's Charity. The rent of the Town Land, 9a., is applied in the service of the church. The chief residents are—John Allsebrooke, tanner, and wool and timber merchant; John King, shopkeeper; George Neal, builder and victualler, Tanners' Arms; Robert Tombling, beerhouse; and John Archer, John Blomfield, and Mary Hart, farmers. Post from Thetford, via East Dereham.

GALLOW HUNDRED

Is a tract of rich soil and highly diversified country, extending 15 miles in length from east to west, and varying from 8 to 5 miles in breadth; being bounded on the north by Brothercross, North Greenhoe, and Holt Hundreds; on the east by Eynesford; on the south by Launditch; and on the west by Freebridge-Lynn and Smithdon Hundreds. It is crossed by the Wells branch of the Great Eastern Railway. The Wensum, and several brooks which form the source of that river, flow eastward through a fine vale, by East Rudham, Fakenham, Great Ryburgh, &c.; and from Little Snoring, Barsham, &c., another stream flows northward through the adjoining Hundred to the sea, near Stiffkey. Henry I. gave Gallow and Brothercross to the Earl of Warenne and Surrey, who then held Norwich Castle. Gallow is supposed to have derived its name from a hill near Dunton, where the Hundred Court was held. It contains 31 parishes, of which 18 are in Burnham Deanery, and 13 in Toftrees Deanery; the former in the Arch-deaconry of Norfolk, and the latter in that of Norwich. Petty Sessions are held at the Corn Hall, Fakenham, on the last Monday in every month, and J. F. Wright, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. Gallow is included in Little Walsingham County Court District. The following enumeration of the 31 parishes, shows their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent.

UNIONS:—All the above parishes are in Walsingham Union, except Bagthorpe, Barmer, Broomsthorpe, New Houghton, East and West Rudham, and Syderstone, which are in Docking Union.

ALTHORPE, or Alethorpe, one mile E. by N. of Fakenham, is an extra-parochial farm of 6 inhabitants and 239 acres of land, but pays tithes to Fakenham, and anciently had a Church (All Saints), and 50 houses. Sir Willoughby Jones, Bart., is the owner, and Miss Ann Riches, the farmer. Post from Fakenham.

BAGTHORPE parish, 9 miles W. by N. of Fakenham, and 16 miles N. E. by E. of Lynn, has only 69 inhabitants, and 750 acres, of which 113 acres are plantations and covers. The Rev. Stephen Reed Cattley is lord of the manor, owner of the soil, and patron of the Church (St. Mary), which was rebuilt in 1852, chiefly at his expense. It is a small fabric, comprising nave, chancel, porch, and turret with two bells. The east window is of stained glass; and the building is furnished with open benches of oak, with poppy heads. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 10s., is in the incumbency of the Rev. James Hadley, B.A., and was augmented in 1769 and 1788 with £400 of Q.A.B., laid out in the purchase of 8 acres of land at Harleston. The tithes were commuted in 1840 for £140 a year. The whole parish is farmed by Mr. James Ashley Rix, who resides at Mount Ida, a neat mansion on a conical eminence, surrounded by pleasant grounds, and formerly the seat of George Wm. Chad, Esq., who was a son of Sir George Chad, Bart., and died in 1849, after having passed 25 years in the diplomatic service of his country, and been ambassador at various foreign courts. Post from Lynn.

BARMER parish, 7 miles N.W. by W. of Fakenham, has only 62 inhabitants, and 890 acres of land, belonging to Thomas Kerslake, Esq., who resides at Barmer Hall, a neat mansion with pleasant grounds, and is lord of the manor, impropiator of the tithes, and patron of the Church (All Saints), which is a small building with a round tower, restored some years ago, and now only used as the burial place of the Kerslake family. The sinecure curacy, worth only £5 a year, is held by the Rev. E. J. Senkler, who is non-resident. The inhabitants attend Syderstone church. Mr. Jno. Martin is the only resident farmer, and is also a miller. Post from Lynn.

BARSHAM (EAST), a village and parish, in the picturesque valley of the small river Stiffkey, 3 miles N. of Fakenham, has 221 inhabitants, and 1167 acres of land, nearly all belonging to Lord Hastings, the lord of the manor, and patron of the living; but the Rev. G. F. Hall has an estate here. The Church (All Saints) is a small edifice, and formerly had a tower, the base of which is now the porch. In the interior is a sumptuous monument of alabaster and black marble, in memory of one of the Calthorpes, with the effigy of a female rising from her coffin, figures of angels, &c. The poor have two cottages, left by James Calthorpe in 1636. The west window is filled with coloured glass, in memory of Mrs. Sarah Astley; and here is a small gallery containing a harmonium. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £16. 13s. 4d., is endowed with the rectorial tithes, and consolidated with the rectory of Little Snoring. It was augmented with £200 of Q.A.B. in 1754. The joint benefices, now worth £679 a year, are in the incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. Deleval Loftus Astley, M.A., who has 6 acres of glebe, and a neat residence, enlarged in 1856 by the patron. He is brother and heir presumptive to Lord Hastings. The School, which is attended by 60 scholars, was erected in 1858 by the present vicar. The Hall, now a farm house, is a much admired specimen of ancient brick work, in the Tudor style, built in the latter end of the reign of Henry VII., and the beginning of that of Henry VIII., by Sir Wm. Fermor and afterwards the seat of the Calthorpes. It is ornamented with moulded brick, in bands of panels charged with various shields and heads, ogee canopies with crockets and finials, hollow mouldings filled with roses, octagonal and round turrets, and handsome chimneys enriched with fleur-de-lis and roses. Over the gateways are the royal arms, supported by the Greyhound and Griffin, with the portcullis in the corners. Near it is a large barn, in the walls of which are many large fragments of carved stones (one of them bearing the arms of England) supposed to have been either brought from Walsingham Abbey, or to have formed a part of the steeple of East Barsham church. The chief residents are—The Vicar; James Barnes, victualler, White Horse; John Leverett, blacksmith; Thomas Curtis and Wm. Skipping, shopkeepers; and Robert Faircloth and Saml. Thos. Kitton (Hall), farmers. Post from Fakenham.

BARSHAM (NORTH) is in the same deep valley as the above, 4 miles N. of Fakenham, and has in its parish 57 inhabitants, and 1015A. 2R. 30P. of land, belonging to the Earl of Orford, the lord of the manor and patron of the living. The Church (All Saints) is a small structure comprising nave, chancel, and bell turret. Here is a stone coffin, dug up some years ago in a field in the parish. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £6, is in the incumbency of the Rev. John Clethero Platten, M.A., who has 20A. of glebe, a good residence, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £330. 15s. The only farmers are John Salter and Stephen Leeds. Post from Fakenham.

BARSHAM (WEST) is a small parish, 3½ miles N. by W. of Fakenham, having 92 inhabitants, and 1571 acres of land, belonging to Major General Balders, lord of the manor and patron of the living. The Church, which is a small edifice in the early-English style, comprising nave, chancel, south porch and belfry, was restored in 1854, and fitted with neat open benches, new pulpit, &c. It formerly had a tower between the nave and chancel. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 12s. 1d., and now at £168, is in the incumbency of the Rev. John Aldworth, M.A., of Little Walsingham. The farmers are—John Ellis, William Ellis and John Wordingham. Post from Fakenham.

BROOMSTHORPE is a small churchless parish, 6 miles W. by S. of Fakenham, containing 16 inhabitants, and 340 acres of land, belonging to Joseph S. Scott Chad Esq., and occupied by Mr. Thos. W. Francis, whose house stands on the site of an ancient seat of the Walpoles. In 1863, some farm-labourers discovered in this parish, about 18 inches below the surface, several human skeletons. The Church was destroyed before the reign of Elizabeth, and its benefice abolished. It had a guild of St. John, to whom the church was probably dedicated. Post from Fakenham.

DUNTON AND DOUGHTON, 3 miles W. of Fakenham, form a parish of 126 inhabitants, and 1721 acres of land, on the north side of the vale of the Wensum. The Earl of Leicester is owner of the soil and lord of the manor, which was given by Henry VIII., to Ralph de Hauville, to be held by the service of keeping the King's falcons; but in the reign of Elizabeth it passed to Chief Justice Coke. Dunton Church (St. Peter), comprising nave, chancel and south porch, is in the perpendicular style, and was re-roofed in 1854 and restored in 1859, when it was furnished with neat open benches, new lectern and reading desk, &c. In the chancel is a fine brass representing Clere Talbot and his two wives; and a long inscription to Matthew Lancaster, who was "descended from John Lancaster, the first of that race in England, and first founder of Lancaster." The east window is about to be filled with stained glass by the guardians of Walsingham Union, as a mark of esteem for their late chairman, C. M. Feltom, Esq.; and in the south side of the chancel are two painted windows, one of which is in memory of Mrs. Frere. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., and now at £177, is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Wm. Dowell, B.A. who has a neat residence built in 1855. The parish is farmed by Mr. Edward Kent, jun., and Mr. Feltom's Executors. Post from Fakenham.

FAKENHAM is a flourishing well-built market town, pleasantly seated upon a bold acclivity, on the north side of the river Wensum, 109 miles N.E. of London, 9 miles S. of Wells, 25 miles N.W. by W. of Norwich, 23 miles E.N.E. of Lynn, 12 miles from Holt and East Dereham, and 16 miles N.N.E. of Swaffham. It has a station on that branch of the Great Eastern Railway which extends from Wymondham to Wells; and its PARISH has increased its population since the year 1801, from 1236 to 2456 souls, and comprises 2208A. of land, including about 140A. of heath, on which the parishioners have commonright and cut furze and whins. A small portion of it forms the rectorial manor, (fines arbitrary;) and the rest is in the Manor of Fakenham-Lancaster, (fines mostly certain,) so called from its being granted out from the Crown, as parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster, and now held by Sir Willoughby Jones, Bart.; but a great part of the soil belongs to Lord Hastings, Revs. J. and H. J. Lee-Warner, G. Watson, Esq., R. Campbell, Esq., and several smaller freeholders and copyholders. The manor was held by King Harold, and passed from him to William the Conqueror. Henry I. gave it to Hugh Capel, and King John to the Earl of Arundel, with whom it did not long remain, for Henry III. granted it to the Countess of Provence. After her decease, it belonged to Queen Eleanor; but Edward II. granted it to Gilbert de Clare, the last Earl of Gloucester, who dying without issue, it devolved again to the Crown, and has since passed through various families to its present lord; but the advowson of the rectory was granted by Henry VIII. to Trinity College, Cambridge. By ancient custom, the inhabitants are exempt from serving on juries out of the parish; and by an inquisition, in the 38th of Edward III., it was found that they were not obliged to repair the causeway called the Brig-mill-dam, then broken down. In the 17th of James I., Fakenham-Mill and a parcel of land called Hulmore, with a warren, &c., were granted to Edmund Ferrers and Fras. Philips, subject to the annual rent of £5. 10s. This extensive corn-mill, which was rebuilt about 20 years ago, is now the property of Mr. Joseph Fyson, and is situated below the town, on the river Wensum, which is crossed by a handsome bridge of three arches, built in 1833, of white brick, with stone parapets and iron palisades. On a neighbouring hill was formerly held the sheriff's court for the whole county. On Aug. 4th 1738, the town was much injured by an accidental FIRE, which destroyed 26 houses. It has been greatly enlarged and improved of late years, by the erection of new houses, some of which are large and handsome. The Market-place is tolerably spacious, but is obstructed by a row of buildings in its centre. Both it and the streets leading from it are lined with good houses and well stocked shops; and on its south side is a small square of neat private residences. The CORN HALL is a large brick building with stone dressings, and was erected in 1855 at a cost of £3000, raised in £25 shares. It contains a spacious corn exchange, lighted by a glass dome, and occasionally used for concerts, lectures, &c; a magistrates' room, in which Petty Sessions are held on the last Monday in every month; a reading room, and a library of 3000 volumes. The CATTLE MARKET is situated between Whitehorse street and Bridge street, and was formed in 1857. The PIG MARKET is held in Wells road. The MARKET, held every Thursday, is well supplied with corn, sold by sample, being numerously attended by millers, maltsters, and merchants, from Norwich, Swaffham, East Dereham, Wells, Blakeney, Brancaster, &c.; and there is also a good supply of cattle, sheep, and swine. Two fairs are held on the heath, in Hempton parish, on the opposite side of the river, on Whit-Tuesday and Nov. 22nd, the latter of which is remarkable for its extensive shew of cattle. The GAS WORKS in Hempton road were established by a company of shareholders in 1846, and were enlarged in 1856. Gas is supplied at the rate of 8s. per 1000 cubic feet. The SAVINGS' BANK in Oak street was established in 1829, and is open every Thursday from 12 to 1. Its deposits in Nov. 1863 amounted to £34,413. 18s. 3d., and Mr. F. B. Middleton is the actuary. The 10th Norfolk or Fakenham, company of RIFLE VOLUNTEERS comprises about 60 men. R. N. Hamond, Esq., is captain; and Arthur Palmer, Esq., lieutenant.

The CHURCH (St. Peter) is a large and handsome edifice, standing on the angular point of the acclivity above the market place. It consists of nave with aisles and clerestory south porch, chancel, and a lofty embattled tower, having pinnacles, and containing eight bells and a clock. Its architecture is mostly late-decorated, and transition from decorated, but the tower and south porch are perpendicular. The fine western doorway has over it a magnificent six-light transomed window; on each side of the door is a canopied niche, and above it are symbols representing the dedication of the church to the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, and the initial letter of the Duchy of Lancaster. The nave is of six bays, with plain arches on octagonal pillars with moulded caps. At the east ends of the aisles were formerly parclose chapels, enclosed with screens and dedicated to St. Mary and St. Thomas-the-Martyr. The sedilia and piscina are fine transition from decorated to perpendicular; with ogee arches, crockets, and finials running into a straight horizontal moulding above. The chancel arch is lofty and well-proportioned, and has also a good screen across it. In the south aisle is a decorated piscina across the sill of a window. The font is a fine octagonal one of the perpendicular period, panelled, and having the emblems of the evangelists, of the Trinity, and of the passion in the upper panels, and shields of arms with the letter L crowned in the lower ones. In 1864, the church was thoroughly restored by subscription; the unsightly galleries were removed, and the nave and aisles were re-roofed and re-seated with open benches. The rector restored the chancel at his own expense, furnished it with new oak stalls, re-glazed the windows with cathedral glass enriched with coloured borders, and erected a new carved reredos of Caen stone. The porch bears the date 1497, and in 1602 was used as a powder magazine for the Hundred of Gallow. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £35. 6s. 8d., and now at £900, has 83A. 1R. 14P. of glebe, and a good residence. It is in the patronage of Trinity College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Michael Angelo Atkinson, M.A. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £765, per annum. The Cemetery, which is pleasantly situated near the church, was formed in 1856, and covers about 4 acres of land, neatly enclosed. Part of it is consecrated for the use of members of the established church; and the remainder is for dissenters and contains a neat mortuary chapel.

CHAPELS.—The Independent Chapel, in Chapel-street, is a handsome brick building, erected in 1819, for a congregation which originated in 1779, and formerly occupied the Methodist Chapel in Whitehorse-street, which is now under the ministry of the Rev. Joseph Glasson. The Primitive Methodist Chapel, in Oak-street, was opened in 1825, and enlarged in 1861. The Revs. Thos. Mackill and Wm. Hammond are its ministers. The Baptist Chapel in Swan-street, was erected in 1808, and is now under the pastoral care of the Rev. S. B. Gooch.

SCHOOLS.—The National School for boys, in Church lane, is a brick building erected in 1839, and attended by 120 scholars; that for girls and infants, in Wells road, built in 1848, of brick with stone dressings, in the Elizabethan style, is attended by above 100 children. The British School in Holt road was built in 1844 with room for 200 boys and 100 girls. The Institution for Training girls to Household service, was established in 1858 by Mrs. R. N. Hamond. Girls of all ages are admitted on payment of 3s. 6d. each per week, and Mrs. Marshall is the matron.

CHARITIES.—Lady Mary Townshend, wife of Baron Townshend, by will in 1662, bequeathed £100 to be laid out in land, the rents thereof to be applied, every year, in apprenticing poor fatherless or motherless children of Fakenham to good trades,—“one year a boy, and the next year a girl, and so by course for ever.” The estate now belonging to this charity consists of a house, outbuildings, and 12A. of land, in Stibbard. Out of the rents, premiums of £15 and £20 are given with the boys; and sometimes a girl is apprenticed with a premium of £10. The poor have a house left by Robert Sheldrake in 1719, and 3A. of land left by Thomas Salmon, in consideration of benefaction money which he had borrowed. A yearly rent-charge of 20s., left by a Mr. Wortley, for the poor and repairing his tomb, is paid by Caius College, Cambridge. In 1794, ANN HARRISON bequeathed £1666. 13s. 4d. three per cent. Consols, and in accordance with her will, the yearly dividends are applied as follows:—£12 to the boys' and £11 to the girls' school, and the remainder (except what is required for the expenses of the trustees,) in a distribution of blankets, &c.

FULMODESTON-WITH-CROXTON, 5 miles E. by N. of Fakenham, are scattered villages and united parishes, containing 400 inhabitants, and 2333A. 2R. 14P. of land, of which 1330A. are arable, 628A. pasture, 280A. woodland, and 60A. whin cover. The Earl of Leicester is lord of the manor (anciently held by the Grancourts), and owns about 1500 acres of the soil, including the extensive woods of Fulmodeston (214A.), filled with beautiful oak timber. Lord Hastings, Isaac Jackson, and Arthur Heatland, Esqrs., have estates here. The Hall, formerly a seat of the Brownes, is the seat and property of Isaac Jackson, Esq.; and Clipston House, within the bounds of Croxton, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S.W. of Fulmodeston, is the pleasant residence of Mr. Thomas William Applegate, and commands an extensive prospect. Fulmodeston Church (St. Mary) is an ancient structure, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell; and contains some handsome monuments of the Browne family. At Croxton is a small thatched chapel dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, is in the gift of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Greene, B.D., who has a good residence, 65A. 2R. 23P. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £575, awarded in lieu of tithes. About 600 acres were enclosed in 1808, when a Fuel Allotment of 29 acres was awarded to the poor, and is now let for £50 to Lord Hastings, who sub-lets it to labourers. The poor parishioners have also £47. 18s. 6d. yearly, from the dividends of £1000 three per cent. consols, and £513. 3s. 10d. new $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cents., left by Mrs. Ann Birchem, in 1814. The School, established in 1836 by the present rector, is attended by 30 children. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. Post via Thetford.

HELHOUGHTON, a pleasant village in a valley, 5 miles S.W. by W. of Fakenham, has in its parish 346 inhabitants, and 1637A. of land, mostly the property of the Marquis Townshend, the lord of the manor, impropiator of the great tithes, and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and is consolidated with the rectory of South Rainham. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, and square tower with one bell; and contains a piscina, and a fine brass to Robert Stapleton and his wife. The patron pays £6. 14s. 8d. per annum, to the parishes of Helhoughton and West Rainham alternately, for apprenticing poor children, as left by Lady Mary Townshend, in 1662. The poor of Helhoughton have £3. 6s. 8d. a year, left by Lady Jane Berkeley, in 1617; and 20 acres of wet peaty land, allotted at the enclosure in 1821, when 1A. 3R. were awarded to the church. The School, with teacher's house attached, was erected in 1854 by the Marquis Townshend. It is attended by 70 children, and supported by the vicar. Here is a small chapel belonging to the Primitive Methodists.

HEMPTON, a small parish and scattered village, half a mile S. of Fakenham, on the opposite side of the river Wensum, has 459 inhabitants and 560 acres of land, inclusive of a common of 68 acres. It is mostly the property of the Marquis Townshend, who is lord of the manor and impropiator of the tithes, which have been commuted for £97. Messrs. Robert Leamon and Joseph Fyson have small estates here. Hempton Priory, which stood on the Abbey farm, was founded in the reign of Henry I. for Augustine canons, to whom King John granted a fair; and in the 14th of Edward I. the prior claimed a market on Tuesday, but the latter has long been obsolete, and no vestiges of the priory now remain. In a tumulus on the adjoining heath, an urn was dug up many years ago. The ancient parish Church (St. Andrew) was dilapidated on the foundation of the priory, to which a chapel was attached, but some of its ruins were standing in the 12th of Henry VII. The priory ceased on the suppression of the smaller religious houses, and although the population increased considerably, the parish was left without a church till 1856, when the present Church (Holy Trinity) was opened. The new church is only partially built, the chancel alone being completed. It is in the early-English style, and all its windows are filled with stained glass of a plain pattern, that at the east end, which is of three lights surmounted by three quatrefoils, containing the emblem of the Trinity. The west window is in memory of Guybon Damant; and a small mural monument, forming the base of one of the side windows, is in memory of the family of Moxon. The perpetual curacy, worth £27 a year, is in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Christopher St. Denys Moxon, who has a good residence of plain Tudor architecture, built in 1858, at a cost of £800. The School occupies part of the Parsonage House, and is attended by about 45 children. Two large fairs held here on Whit-Tuesday and November 22nd, are noted for Scotch cattle; and a third is held in September for the sale of sheep. The poor have a cottage and 4A. 2R. 12P. of land in the parish of Shereford. Post from Fakenham.

HOUGHTON (NEW), Houghton-in-the-Brake, or Houghton-juxta-Harpley, a parish and village, 13 miles N.E. by E. of Lynn, and 10 miles W. of Fakenham, contains 227 inhabitants, and 1495 acres of land, of which 100 acres are wood, and 800 acres in the park of HOUGHTON HALL, one of the seats of the owner and lord of the manor, the Marquis Cholmondeley, whose other residence is Cholmondeley Castle, Cheshire. The stately mansion of Houghton Hall was begun in 1722, by the celebrated Sir Robert Walpole, and finished in 1731, during which period the founder continued prime minister of state. It is a noble freestone structure, having two principal fronts, ornamented at each corner with a cupola and lantern. The west front has in its centre four lofty Ionic columns, supporting an entablature and pediment. The wings, which contain the offices, are connected with the house by handsome balustraded colonnades. The extent of the principal front is 166 feet, and including the colonnades, 450 feet. The interior contains numerous apartments, fitted up with great taste and in the most sumptuous manner. The great hall is a cube of 40 feet, having a stone gallery running three-quarters round it, and a beautiful ceiling and cornice, on the frieze of which are Cupids with festoons of flowers, and bas-reliefs of Sir Robert Walpole and Catherine, his first Lady, and of Robert, Lord

Walpole, their eldest son, and Margaret Rolle, his wife. The figures over the great door, and the Cupids over the lesser doors, are by Rysbrack. The floor is of mosaic. In this room are several statues and bronzes, including the Laocoon, a fine cast in bronze by Girardon. The saloon, had it been proportional, would have been the finest room in the kingdom; it is 40 feet long, 30 broad, and 40 high, and the ceiling is a painting by Kent, representing Phæton with the Chariot of the Sun. At the foot of the grand staircase is a fine bronze of the Fighting Gladiator. Most of the rooms are magnificently furnished and adorned with statues, bronzes, and fine pictures by the best masters; but that large and celebrated collection of pictures, placed here by the founder at a vast expense, was sold in 1779 by George, Earl of Orford, to Catherine, Empress of Russia, for £40,555, but not removed till 1782. The hall stands low, and the park is generally flat, but ornamented with beautiful gardens and extensive plantations, and with some fine old beech and other large trees, which formerly adorned the ancient mansion that occupied nearly the same site. In the prosperity of its founder, it was visited yearly by all the great officers of state and foreign ministers; and this annual meeting, which usually lasted a fortnight, was called the Congress. In 1835, about 300 of the deer were killed, and part of the park converted into a farm. Sir Robert Walpole, K.G., the celebrated Secretary at War to Queen Anne, and Prime Minister to George I. and II., was born here in 1676. After his father's death, he inherited the family estate of somewhat more than £2000 a year, and was elected M.P. for Castle Rising, for which he sat in the last two years of the reign of William III., and became an active member of the Whig party. In 1711, he was voted by the House, guilty of a breach of trust and notorious corruption in his office of Secretary at War, and it was resolved that he should be committed to the Tower and expelled the House; but all the Whigs considered him as a martyr to their cause; the borough of Lynn re-elected him in 1714, and on the accession of George I., he rose again to office, but after a long and stormy reign as Prime Minister, he was driven from his throne by the opposition in 1742, in which year he was created Viscount Walpole in Norfolk, and Earl of Orford in Suffolk. The rest of his life he spent in tranquillity at Houghton. He died in London in 1745, but was buried here. No minister ever aimed more sincerely at the real prosperity of his country, or went more wisely to work to secure it, had not the violence of opposition often prevented him from doing as he wished. He was succeeded by his son Robert, who in 1723 had been created Baron Walpole of Walpole. The latter died in 1751, and was succeeded by his son George, who dying without male issue in 1791, was succeeded by his uncle, Horace Walpole, the youngest son of the first earl, of whom, writing to a friend, he said, "How wise a man, and how weak! for what has he built Houghton? For his grandson to annihilate, or for his son to mourn over!" Horace Walpole died in 1797 without issue, and bequeathed the Houghton estate to the late Marquis Cholmondeley. The title of Earl of Orford then became extinct; but it was revived again in 1806, in the person of Horatio Lord Walpole, of Wolterton, and is still held by that branch of the family.

Houghton Church (St. Martin,) was restored by the great Sir Robert Walpole, after he had completed the hall. It stands in the park, and has a nave, chancel, side aisles, and small tower. It contains several memorials of the Walpoles, and an ancient monument in the form of a coffin, on the lid of which is carved the figure of a prior, or abbot, supposed to have been executed in the reign of Edward I., and brought from Broomsthorpe priory after the dissolution of that house. In 1824, Peter Baron left £100 three per cent. Consols, and directed the dividends to be applied yearly—£1 in repairing his tomb, and £2 in a distribution of bread among the poor. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5, and now at £108, is in the incumbency of the Rev. John Henry Broome who occupies part of the Hall. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £300 per annum. The Most Hon. George Horatio, 2nd MARQUIS CHOLMONDELEY, is the patron, and also impropiator of the great tithes. His other titles are, Earl Cholmondeley, Earl of Rock-savage, Viscount Malpas, Baron Cholmondeley, Baron Newburgh. and Viscount Cholmondeley. He was born in 1792, and succeeded his father in the marquise in 1827, but had previously been summoned to the house of peers in 1821 as Baron Newburgh. He is joint hereditary great chamberlain of England, and became a privy-councillor in 1830. His brother, Lord William Henry Hugh Cholmondeley, who was born in 1800, is the heir presumptive. The National School is a plain brick building, erected in 1845, and attended by 64 children. The chief residents in the parish are—The Vicar; Mrs. Mary Ann Goulder; Wm. Stanton, farmer and land agent; Fredk. Christopher Goulder, farmer, Park farm; Wharton Forster, veterinary surgeon; Wm. Johnson, shopkeeper; Geo. Groom, schoolmaster; Henry Collison, woodman; and John Woodrow, gamekeeper. POST OFFICE at Edw. Doughty's. Letters desp. to Brandon, via Rougham, at 5.5 p.m.

KETTLESTONE, 3 miles E.N.E. of Fakenham, has in its parish 223 inhabitants, and 1168 acres of land, belonging to J. S. Scott Chad, Esq., lord of the manor, Sir Willoughby Jones, Bart., the Earl of Leicester, and Miss Kiddle. The Church (All Saints) which formerly had a guild of St. Erasmus, comprises nave, chancel, north aisle, south porch, and octagonal tower with one bell. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Edgar Montagu, M.A., who has a good residence, 40A. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £300 awarded in 1839. A farm of 100A., belonging to Miss Kiddle, is charged with the schooling of two poor children, by the will of John Schuldham, dated 1713. The poor have the following yearly doles, for distributions of bread, viz:—£2. 10s. out of Great Marl Pit Close, left by Blanche Schuldham, in 1738; £17. 10s. from £500 three per cent. Stock, left by Wm. Newman, in 1827; £3. 10s. from 2A. of land, left by the Rev. John Howes, in 1721; and 25s. from a cottage and garden, left by the Rev. John Branthwayt, in 1766. The Fuel Allotment, 25A., was allotted at the enclosure, in 1827, when 8A. (now let for £6) were awarded in respect of three Almshouses, occupied by paupers, and one of which was given by Fras. Schuldham, in 1776. The chief residents are—The Rector; Thos. Colman, beerhouse; Warner Hill, tailor; Robt. Reader, shopkeeper; and Wm. Loades (and blacksmith), Watts Olley, Michael Reader, and Henry Wright (Kettlestone House), farmers. Post from Fakenham.

PENSTHORPE parish, 2 miles E. of Fakenham, has only 12 inhabitants, and 753 acres of land in one farm, belonging to the trustees of the late Rev. R. Hamond, and occupied by Mr. Edward Tolver Gwyn. The Church was desecrated many years ago, and its remains now form a cattle shed. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, and now at £170, is in the gift of certain trustees, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Henry Dugmore, of Beachamwell. Post from Fakenham.

PUDDING NORTON, 1½ mile S. of Fakenham, has in its parish only 17 inhabitants, and 840 acres of land, belonging to the trustees of the late John Morse, Esq., who are also lords of the manor and patrons of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £6, and is now a sinecure worth £50, in the incumbency of the Rev. C. St. Denys Moxon, B.C.L., of Hempton. The Church (St. Margaret) was dilapidated many years ago, and a portion of the tower is all that remains. The Hall and farm are occupied by Mr. John Spurrell. Post from Fakenham.

RAINHAM, (EAST) or Rainham St. Mary, is a parish with a small village on the Swaffham road, nearly 4 miles S.W. by S. of Fakenham; and contains 139 inhabitants, and 1635 acres of land, including 212A. of wood, which, with 821A. of lawn, &c., form the extensive and beautiful park of RAYNHAM HALL, one of the seats of the Most Honourable John Villiers Stuart Townshend, 5th MARQUIS TOWNSHEND. This mansion, ranking in splendour as the third house in Norfolk, was built near the site of an ancient moated hall, in 1630, by Sir Roger Townshend, Bart., under the direction of the celebrated architect—Inigo Jones; but it was enlarged and beautified by Charles, second Viscount Townshend, (many years secretary of state to George I. and II.,) who added a wing, excavated a lake, and altered the principal apartments, under the inspection of Mr. Kent; and further improvements were made by the first Marquis Townshend, who increased the park to its present magnitude. It is a large and handsome mansion of brick and stone, standing on an eminence commanding delightful views of the rich and highly cultivated demesne and the thick woods of the finely undulated park, which contains an extensive lake well-stocked with pike, carp, and other fish. The house contains a number of valuable paintings; among which is the famous picture of Belisarius, by Salvator Rosa, presented to the second viscount by the King of Prussia, and valued at ten thousand guineas. Here is also a very fine portrait of Mary de Medicis, by Rubens. The Townshend family is of great antiquity, their name occurring soon after the Conquest. Sir Roger was created a baronet in 1617. Sir Horatio was created Baron Townshend of Lynn Regis, in 1661, and Viscount Townshend, of Rainham, in 1682. His son Charles, the second viscount, succeeded to the family honours in 1697, and became one of the most eminent ministers in the kingdom, holding many great offices of state, and advocating the Tory interest until the close of Queen Anne's reign, when he gradually became a Whig and the ally of the celebrated prime minister—Walpole, with whom, however, he at length quarrelled; and though brothers-in-law, they changed from sincere friends to bitter enemies. After retiring from office, he spent the remainder of his life at Rainham, where he died in 1738. To this nobleman the kingdom is indebted for the general cultivation of turnips, which had previously been grown only in gardens. Observing their advantages while in attendance upon George I., at Hanover, he brought the seed and practice into England. His grandson, George, the fourth viscount, was created Marquis Townshend of Rainham, in 1786. The present Marquis was born in 1831, and was M.P., for Tamworth, from Jan. 1856, till the death of his father in September 1863. His other seats are Tamworth Castle, and Ball's Park, Herts. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave with aisles, north and south porches, chancel, and square tower with a clock and one bell. It contains several memorials of the Townshend and Loftus families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £13. 6s. 8d., is consolidated with West Rainham. The tithes of East Rainham were commuted in 1839, for £359. 10s. per annum. The Church Land is 4A.; and the poor have £5 a year, left by Lady Berkeley, in 1617. The chief residents are—The Rev. Ambrose J. Johnson, curate of Helhoughton; Richard Flowerdew, steward and land agent; Robert Gates Beart, farmer and horse dealer; Henry J. Gayford, farmer; Robert Burton, blacksmith; John Jarvis, gamekeeper; William Wilkin, gardener; and Sarah Jackson, schoolmistress. Post from Brandon, via Rougham.

RAINHAM (SOUTH), or Raynham St. Martin, is a parish and scattered village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. by S. of Fakenham, having 129 inhabitants, and 1040 acres of land, all belonging to the Marquis Townshend, the lord of the manor, impropiator, and patron of the vicarage, which was augmented in 1860 with £200 of Q.A.B., and valued in K.B. at £6. It is now worth £290 a year, with Helhoughton annexed, in the incumbency of the Rev. Henry Thomas Lee, M.A., who has here a commodious residence.

The Church (St. Martin) is a handsome structure, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. It was restored at a cost of £400 in 1860, when the nave was re-roofed, and the chancel was reseated, and floored with encaustic tiles. The poor have £3. 6s. 8d., yearly from Lady Berkeley's charity. The chief residents are—The Vicar; John Norton farmer; William Mason, vict., Three Horse Shoes; John Harper, cow-keeper; Robert Gates, farm bailiff, and James Mason, shopkeeper. Post from Brandon, via Rougham.

RAINHAM (WEST) or West Raynham, is a village and parish adjoining Raynham park, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. of Fakenham and N.E. of Rougham. It contains 369 inhabitants and 1376 acres of land, of which 127A. belong to the Earl of Leicester, and the remainder to the Marquis Townshend, who is lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which is valued in K.B. at £18. 13s. 4d., and now worth £749 per annum with that of East Rainham annexed. The Rev. Richard Phayre, M.A., is the incumbent, and has here 154A. 2R. 39P. of glebe, a neat residence built in 1822, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £346. The Church (St. Margaret) has long been dilapidated, but is still an interesting ivy-clad ruin. The inhabitants of both parishes now use St. Mary's church, in the park at East Rainham. The commons of Rainham and Helhoughton were enclosed in 1821. The Rev. Thomas Dunham Whitaker, LL.D., F.R.S., and F.S.A., the celebrated topographer and antiquary, was born here, at the rectory house, in 1759, and died vicar of Blackburn, Lancashire, Dec. 18th, 1821, having spent most of his life in that county and Yorkshire. In 1666, Peter Stringer left for the relief of the poor and for apprenticing poor children of West Rainham £200, which were laid out in 1797 in the purchase of £400 three per cent. Consols. The yearly dividends are mostly distributed in clothing. For distribution among the poor, the Marquis Townshend pays £6. 14s. 8d. every alternate year, pursuant to the will of Lady Mary Townshend, dated 1662; and £3. 6s. 8d. yearly, left by Lady Berkeley in 1617. The present rector has vested £600 consols with the Charity Commissioners, in trust to apply the dividends for educational purposes, in accordance with the principles of the Church of England. The National School, a neat Elizabethan building of brick, erected in 1854 by the late Marquis Townshend, is attended by 70 girls, and supported by the Marchioness Townshend. The chief residents are—The Rector; Sarah Broom, victualler, Greyhound; John Parker, baker; William Segon, shoemaker; James Scott, tailor, draper, and grocer; and Richd. Smith (and butcher), Richd. Doggett, Wm. Francis (Packsfield), and Samuel Southgate, farmers. Post from Brandon, via Rougham.

RUDHAM (EAST) is a considerable village, on the Lynn road, 7 miles W. of Fakenham, celebrated for two large annual fairs for cattle and merchandise, held on May 17th and October 14th, under a charter granted by King John to the ancient and honourable family of Belet, who long held this parish, and founded in it Coxford Priory, on the banks of a rivulet, nearly 2 miles E. of the village, adjacent to Tattersett. This extensive priory, of which but little is known, had a boundary wall enclosing about 30 acres; and two large pieces of it, with a noble arch, are still standing. It was granted at the dissolution to Thomas, Duke of Norfolk. A small pot of Roman coins was dug up among the ruins, in 1719. East Rudham has increased its population since 1801, from 572 to 940 souls in 1861, and has in its parish 3891 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Marquis Townshend, the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 6s. 8d., and is now consolidated with that of West Rudham, in the incumbency of the Rev. Francis Pye Willington, M.A., who has here a spacious residence built in 1861, and about an acre of glebe. The tithes of the two parishes were commuted, in 1839, for £560 to the vicar and £995 to the impropiator. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, aisles, south porch, transept, and low square tower with three bells. The chancel was partially restored in 1860, and contains a small organ. In the south transept is a mural tablet to the Manby family. The National School is a neat Elizabethan building of brick, erected by subscription in 1859, at a cost of £800, and attended by about 75 children. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. The Fuel Allotment, 20A., was awarded in 1821, and the poor have £5 a year from Lady Berkeley's charity, left in 1617.

RUDHAM (WEST), a parish and village, adjoining the above, 8 miles W. by S. of Fakenham, has 487 inhabitants and 2835 acres of land. A small brook, which runs through the village, gives rise to the river Wensum. The soil belongs to the Marquis Townshend, the Marquis Cholmondeley, Rev. Henry Dugmore, and J. S. Scott Chad and Money Curtis, Esqrs.; and lies in the manors of Houghton, Castleacre, and Northall or St. Faith's. The Church (St. Peter) has a nave, south aisle, chancel, and a low square tower with three bells. The chancel contains a piscina and harmonium. A chapel dedicated to All Saints was standing in the churchyard in 1493. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7. 6s. 8d., is now consolidated with that of East Rudham. (See page 984.) Here is a chapel belonging to the New Connexion Methodists. The chief residents are—Mrs. Sophia Rodwell; Geo. Barrett and Henry Howard, shopkeepers; Annison Cannell, highway surveyor and tax collector; Richard Colman, shoemaker; William Colman, beerhouse and shopkeeper; Thomas Cooper, blacksmith and watchmaker; John Jackson, joiner and wheelwright; Thos. Riches, draper, grocer, and tailor; Thomas Sharpen, gardener; John Toll, shoemaker and victualler, Duke's Head; and John Baker, Moses Dawson, Edward Rathborn, John Savory (Grange), and Thomas Roberson Tingey (Hall), farmers. Post from Brandon, via Rougham.

RYBURGH MAGNA, a large village on the western bank of the Wensum, 4 miles S.E. of Fakenham, has a station on the Wells branch of the Great Eastern Railway, and contains in its parish 556 inhabitants, and 1170 acres of land, belonging to the Trustees of the late J. Morse, Esq., who are also lords of the manor, and owners of Sennowe Lodge and Ryburgh Hall, the latter of which is situated in the village, and the former about two miles south of it, but both are now unoccupied. The Church (St. Andrew) is a perfect cruciform structure of the 15th century, except the western tower, which is of the late Saxon period. It comprises nave, chancel, north and south transepts, and round tower with octagonal belfry. It contains a good organ, and was thoroughly restored in 1860, and furnished with handsome open benches, pulpit, lectern and reading desk, of carved oak, at a cost of £1100. The east window has been filled with beautiful stained glass, and the open timber roofs enriched with colouring and gilding. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £14. 6s. 10d., and now at £569, with the vicarage of Ryburgh Parva annexed, is in the patronage of M. Tatham, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. George Edmund Tatham, M.A., who has here a spacious residence, erected in 1824, and 270 acres of glebe, allotted at the enclosure in 1808 in lieu of tithes. Here is a National School, attended by 50 children. The Fuel Allotment, 29A. 13P., is let for £13. 4s., and the Church Land, 8A. 2R. 3P., is let for £15. 6s. a year.

RYBURGH PARVA, 3 miles E.S.E. of Fakenham, on the east side of the Wensum, has in its parish 97 inhabitants, and 740 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Trustees of the late J. Morse, Esq., who are also improPRIATORS, and patrons of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £7.13s.4d., and augmented with £200 given by the Rev. F. Burton in 1749, and £400 of Q.A.B. in 1747-'50. It is consolidated with the rectory of Ryburgh Magna, and at the enclosure in 1808 received 66 acres in lieu of the vicarial tithes. The Church (All Saints) is an ivy-mantled ruin. Little Clipstone Farm belongs to the Rev. Philip Francis, of Stibbard, by whom it is occupied. The chief residents are—John Platten, farmer, Hill House; Chas. Mitchell, cooper; Robert Stamp, bricklayer; and Charles Watson, beerhouse and blacksmith. Post from Brandon, via Fakenham.

SCULTHORPE, a large scattered village, 2 miles N.W. of Fakenham, has in its parish 680 inhabitants, and 2055 acres of land, mostly belonging to Sir Willoughby Jones, Bart., lord of the manor, who resides at Cranmer Hall, a large brick mansion in a well-wooded park; but Lord Hastings, J. S. Scott Chad, Esq., and some smaller owners have estates here. The Church (St. Mary and All Saints) was built by Sir Robert Knowles in the reign of Edward III., and has a remarkably well-proportioned tower of that date. The chancel, which had long been in ruins, was rebuilt in 1847 by the lord of the manor, as a memorial of his brother, the late Sir Laurence

Jones, Bart, who was murdered by brigands in Turkey, in 1845, and whose remains are buried beneath it. The remainder of the church was thoroughly restored, enlarged, and mostly rebuilt, in 1861, at the joint expense of the lord of the manor and the rector. It contains a very fine font of the early-Norman period, several ancient brasses, and some beautiful stained glass. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £16, is in the patronage of Sir Willoughby Jones, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Herbert Walsingham Jones, M.A., who has a good residence, 71A. 21P. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £550, awarded in 1831. Here is a National and Infants' School, the former erected in 1840, and attended by 120 children. The Fuel Allotment, 30 acres, was awarded to the poor at the enclosure in 1830. Here is also an almshouse for four poor widows, erected in 1859 by Lady Jones, on the site of two cottages, which, with 5 acres of land, were left by Francis Barkham, in 1687. The Baptists have a small chapel here. In the village is a pillar letter box, which is cleared at 4.45 p.m. Post from Fakenham.

SHEREFORD, or Sheringford parish, on the Wensum, 3 miles W. of Fakenham, has only 126 inhabitants, and 842 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Marquis Townshend, the lord of the manor. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £9, and now worth £280 per annum, is in the patronage of Wm. Hotson, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. James Handford, who has 58½ acres of glebe. The Church (St. Nicholas) is a small structure, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and round tower with one bell. The poor have a cottage and a yearly rent-charge of 17s., left by the Rev. John Branthwayt, in 1765; and one acre of land, in Fakenham parish, given by an unknown donor. The chief residents are—Thos. Cubitt Baldwin, South Mills, and George Riches, Manor House, farmers; and William Capes, tailor. Post from Fakenham.

SNORING (LITTLE) is a village and parish, 3 miles E.N.E. of Fakenham, containing 311 inhabitants, and 1524 acres of land, mostly belonging to Lord Hastings, the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which is valued in K.B. at £12, and consolidated with East Barshan. (See p. 973.) Here are 59A. 3R. of glebe. The Church (St. Andrew) is a very singular and interesting little fabric, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and round tower. The latter contains one bell, and is detached about five feet from the church, on the south side of the west end. It has small windows with trefoil heads; and its eastern side is flat in the lower part, and has a large round-headed recessed arch with plain Norman imposts, which has evidently been the tower arch of a previous church. The chancel is transitional-Norman, and has two lancet windows at the east end, and a blocked-up Norman doorway on the north side. The nave has two small Norman windows near the west end, but the west window is decorated, and the other windows are late and modernised. It has two Norman doorways; that on the south side is of a curious transitional-Norman character, having a stilted horse-shoe arch, under which is a pointed one, ornamented with zigzags, and under this again the round arch of the door with shafts in the jambs, having sculptured capitals. The south porch is decorated. In the south wall long-and-short work is introduced to strengthen the flint work, and the lancet windows at the east end have similar work in their jambs. The font is late Norman, enriched with sculptured foliage. The Fuel Allotment, awarded in 1806, is 17 acres. The poor have also two cottages, and 8A. 3R. 5P. of land, let for £19, and derived from the bequests of J. Chappell and other donors. Here was a house of lepers, founded in 1638. The Primitive Methodist Chapel was built in 1860. The chief residents are—Maria Howell, vict., Bell; Frederic Shaw, vict., Green Man; Chas. Nickalls, wheelwright; Thos. Parker, Nicholas Powell, Robt. Sheringham (and miller), Wm. Stimpson, and John Tuck, farmers; and John Barnes, Wm. Baynard (and shopkeeper), Chas. Hill, John and Thos. Parker, and W. Tuddenham (and grocer and baker), shoemakers. Post from Fakenham.

STIBBARD, a scattered village, 4 miles E. of Fakenham, has in its parish 451 inhabitants, and 1468 acres of land, rising in bold undulations, and partly the property of the trustees of the late J. Morse, Esq., the lords of the manor; but some of it is in W. B. Gill, Esq.'s, manor of Stibbard Docking; and the rector has also a manor here. The Rev. Philip Francis, Wm. Francis, Thos. Kearslake, and Hugh Rump, Esqs., Mr. James Emery, Lord Hastings, Dr. England, and Mrs. King have estates in the parish. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, north aisle, south porch, and square tower with one bell; and was thoroughly restored in 1862, when the aisle was re-roofed, the porch erected, the entire building re-seated with open benches, and a new reading-desk, altar rails, &c., provided, at a total cost of £667, raised by subscription, the patron being the largest contributor. Here is a handsome octagonal font of Derbyshire stone. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £11. 13s. 4d., is consolidated with Colkirk (see page 955), and here are 23A. 2R. 23P. of glebe. The National School, erected in 1858, at a cost of £300, on land given by the rector, is attended by about 40 children. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here. The Fuel Allotment, 22A. 3R. 19P., let for £46, was awarded at the enclosure in 1808, when the Town Land was exchanged for 6A. 1R. 33P. The poor have also 6s. 8d. yearly, left by one Pearce. Post from Thetford, via Guist.

SYDERSTONE, a village on an acclivity, 6 miles W.N.W. of Fakenham, has in its parish 528 inhabitants, and 2520 acres of land, belonging to the Marquis Cholmondeley, the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £13. 13s. 4d., and is now worth £572 per annum, in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Henry Tudor, M.A., who has 45 acres of glebe and a good residence, rebuilt in 1846. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel, and round tower with one bell; and had formerly aisles, which were taken down about 1784. It was restored and furnished with open benches, and a new pulpit, of oak, in 1859, at a cost of about £600. The roof is of open woodwork, panelled, and the east window is a good specimen of the decorated style. In the chancel are mural tablets to the Jacomb and Kerslake families. The National School, a neat building with teacher's residence, was erected in 1847 by the patron, and is attended by about 70 children. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a small chapel here. In the 12th of Henry VII., the Earl of Suffolk granted this manor to the Robserts, one of whom was the unfortunate Ann, Countess of Leicester, who figures in Sir Walter Scott's novel of Kenilworth, under the name of Amy Robsart.

TATTERFORD, a small parish in the vale of the Wensum, four miles W.S.W. of Fakenham, has 70 inhabitants, and 959 acres of land, belonging to J. S. Scott Chad, Esq., the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £11. 1s. 8d., and is now worth £685 per annum, with that of Tattersett annexed, in the incumbency of the Rev. Edward Howard Morton, M.A., who has here 47 acres of glebe and a commodious residence. The Church (St. Margaret) was entirely rebuilt in 1862, and is a neat early-English edifice, comprising only a nave and chancel; but a spire will be erected near the north-west angle, as soon as the necessary funds can be procured. The east window is of three lancet lights, separated internally by single columns of Purbeck marble, with white stone caps and bases. The west window consists of a large circular light surrounded by smaller ones, and has a novel but pleasing appearance. The flooring is of encaustic tiles, and the benches in the nave, the stalls in the chancel, and the roofs, are of varnished pine. The altar rail is of oak, supported by brass pillars. The lectern is also of brass, and here is a good harmonium. The poor have two cottages, left by Diana Drury in 1747. The chief residents are—The Rector; Samuel Alcock, farmer; William Langley, parish clerk; Henry Starling, farm bailiff; and William Read, gamekeeper. Post from Brandon, via Rougham.

TATTERSETT, or Gatesend parish, on the banks of the Tat rivulet, 6 miles W. of Fakenham, has 205 inhabitants, and 1759 acres of land, belonging to J. S. Scott-Chad, Esq., the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 6s. 8d., and is now consolidated with that of Tatterford. The Church (All Saints) is a small fabric, comprising nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. The School, a neat brick and flint building, with teacher's residence attached, was erected in 1857 at a cost of £700, and is attended by about thirty children. Pinkney Hall, an ancient mansion, formerly a seat of the Drurys, is now a farm house. The poor have two cottages, left by Diana Drury; £2. 12s. a year, left by John Tinkler in 1713; and the interest of £50, left by Samuel Nutt in 1762. The chief residents are—Thomas Bone, farm bailiff; Chas. Phillippo, parish clerk and beerhouse; Wm. Tuck, gamekeeper; and Arthur Palmer (Brazen Hall), Geo. Riches, jun., Geo. Tingey (Manor House), and Elizabeth Hunter (Pinkney Hall), farmers. Post from Rougham.

TESTERTON, a small parish, 3 miles S.E. by S. of Fakenham, has only 12 inhabitants, 612 acres of land, and three dwellings, one of which is Testerton House, a handsome modern mansion, erected in 1802 by Philip Mallett Case, Esq., who was distinguished for genuine English hospitality. He died in 1834, when the estate, comprising the whole parish and a small portion of Great Ryburgh and Oxwick, devolved to Mary, the wife of Thos. Wythe, Esq., of Middleton, from whom it passed by purchase to the trustees of the late J. Morse, Esq., who are lords of the manor, owners of the soil, and patrons of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £5, and is now only worth £13 per annum, though it is still continued as a sinecure in the incumbency of the Rev. R. T. Branson, of Bushey, Herts. The Church (St. Remigius) has been long in ruins, and only a part of its ivy-mantled tower now remains. The family of Case flourished for nearly two centuries at Great Fransham; and one of them, the late Philip Case, Esq., of Stradsett Hall, was more than 30 years clerk of the peace for Norfolk, and left several daughters married into the families of Browne, Hamond, and Bagge. Mr. Thomas Henry Case farms the parish, and resides at Testerton House, which stands on a pleasant eminence, commanding an extensive prospect. Post from Fakenham.

TOFTREES, near Rainham Park, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. of Fakenham, has in its parish only 64 inhabitants, and 1184 acres of land, belonging to the Marquis Townshend, who is impropiator of the great tithes and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £7. 18s. 6d., and is now worth £160 per annum, having been augmented in 1778, '86, and '88, with £600 of Q.A.B., with which 25 acres of land were purchased, besides which there are here 8 acres of glebe. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and low tower with one bell, and was partially restored and refitted with new open benches, pulpit, &c., in 1863. It is mostly in the early-English style, and has a very narrow priest's doorway in the chancel. The font is a singular specimen of Norman workmanship, of square form, resting on five columns with cushion capitals, and having intricate Norman knots and interlacing concentric circles on its sides, and lions' heads at its upper corners. The Rev. Wm. Barlow, M.A., is the vicar, and has a good residence, built in 1851. The parish is called Tofsas, or Toftes, in Domesday Book, and gives name to a deanery. The chief residents are—The Vicar; Robert Towshend, gamekeeper; and Isaac Bale, Robert Butcher, Charles Case, and William Wright, farmers. Here is a pillar letter box, which is cleared at 4.40 p.m. Post from Fakenham.

SMITHDON HUNDRED

Is a fine agricultural district, forming the most north-western division of Norfolk, averaging about ten miles in length and breadth, and bounded on the north and west by the Ocean and the Wash, on the south by Freebridge-Lynn, and on the east by Gallow and Brothercross Hundreds. Its western side is traversed by the Lynn and Hunstanton Railway; and a line from Heacham across the centre of the hundred, through Docking to Burnham and Wells, is also in contemplation. The surface is in many places picturesquely undulated; and the soil being mostly a deep rich clay, is naturally fertile, except in some of the higher grounds, where a light sand prevails. It was formerly in large open fields, most of which have been enclosed since 1761, when 5000 acres of waste, near Snettisham, were fenced and allotted by act of Parliament. The lands near the shore are chiefly salt marshes, which are often inundated at spring tides; and a strong gale from the north-west has sometimes brought in the water with such force and rapidity, that whole flocks of sheep and herds of cattle have been lost. At the Domesday survey, this division was in two Hundreds, called Smithdon and Docking. Petty Sessions are held at Snettisham on the second, and at Docking on the fourth Monday of every month. Anthony Blyth, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. This Hundred belongs to a great number of freeholders and copyholders; but Hamon Styleman Le Strange, Esq., is lord of nearly half the manors. It is divided into 18 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent:—

* Docking includes Southmere, a decayed parish, and 127 persons in the Union Workhouse.
 † Choseley, an extra-parochial liberty of 650 acres and 7 souls, is included with Great Ringstead.

‡ Hunstanton parish includes Ringstead Parva.

BARWICK-IN-THE-BRAKES is a parish, 2 miles E. of Docking, and 10 miles N.W. by W. of Fakenham, containing only 26 inhabitants, and 1278 acres of land, forming the two manors and estates of Great and Little Barwick; the former belonging to the Trustees of the late Mr. J. Savory, and the latter to Rear-Admiral George Henry Seymour, C.B., of Barwick House, a good brick mansion, with a well-wooded lawn of about 100 acres, on the verge of which stood the parish Church, which was dilapidated many years ago and has entirely disappeared. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6, and now consolidated with the rectory of Stanhoe, was augmented in 1737 and 1763 with £400, laid out in land now worth £30 a year, besides which the incumbent has a yearly modus of £10 from the owner of Great Barwick. The tithes of this parish have been commuted for £154 a year. Mr. Edmund Savory, of Great Barwick, is the only farmer. Post from Lynn, via Stanhoe.

BIRCHAM (GREAT) a village and parish, on the Burnham road, 14 miles N.E. of Lynn, has 489 inhabitants, and 3606 acres of land, of which a part is sheep walk, and 476a. are in woods and plantations. The Marquis Cholmondeley is owner of the soil and lord of the manor. The Church (St. Mary) is a handsome structure in the perpendicular style, comprising a nave with aisles and chancel, a large north porch, and a square tower at the west end of the south aisle, containing five bells and surmounted by a small wooden spire. The nave is of four bays, and the arches opening to the aisles are finely pointed and rest on quatrefoil columns. The rood screen and staircase still exist, and in the chancel are remains of the sedilia and a piscina. There is another piscina in the south aisle, and a holy water stoup in the porch. The doorway leading from the south aisle to the tower is a fine specimen of the transitional Norman style. The rectory valued in K.B. at £22, has about 70 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £585. Anthony Hamond, Esq., is patron, and the Rev. Wm. Pratt, B.A. of Harpley, incumbent. The Rectory House is occupied by the curate. In 1740, an Act of Parliament was passed for confirming and establishing an exchange between the lord of the manor and the rector, and for enclosing the commons. A Free School, for the poor children of the three Bircham parishes, was built in 1842 by the Marquis Cholmondeley, who partly clothes the scholars and added an Infants' School in 1857. The average attendance is 50 boys, 70 girls, and 40 infants.

BIRCHAM-NEWTON parish has a hamlet 1 mile N. of Great Bircham, and 15 miles N.E. of Lynn; and contains 118 inhabitants, and 1128A. of land, belonging to the Marquis Cholmondeley, the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £14. 6s. 8d., and is now consolidated with that of Bircham-Tofts, in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Berry, B.A., who has here 47½A. of glebe, a good residence, and a tithe rent-charge of £227. 12s. per annum. The Church is a small plain structure, apparently of the early decorated period, and has a nave, chancel, and square tower with one bell. The interior is covered with whitewash, and was re-pewed in a very rough manner in 1858, at a cost of £50. The chancel contains a piscina and a full length effigy of a priest in his robes. About 30 years ago, during some alterations, the remains of a man and a child were found beneath this effigy, but whether they had any connection with the monument or not, it is impossible to say. The only farmers are Philip Jarrett and Maria Blyth Lancaster. Post from Lynn.

BIRCHAM-TOFTS lies a mile S.E. of the above, and is a small village and parish, with 169 inhabitants, and 1431 acres of land. The Marquis Cholmondeley is owner, lord of the manor, and patron of the Church (St. Andrew), which is a small plain structure, consisting only of a nave and a square tower containing one bell and surmounted by a small wooden spire. The entrance is now at the west end, through the tower, the old north and south doorways being walled up. There was originally a chancel, the site of which may be distinctly traced. The only window in the body of the church is an ugly round-headed one, inserted in the east wall of the nave. The discharged rectory is consolidated with that of Bircham Newton, and the rector has here 32A. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £221. 16s. The chief residents are—Robert Taylor, basket maker; Isaac Bone, parish clerk; and John Kitton Howlett, and John Daniel Nurse, farmers. Post from Lynn.

BRANCASTER, 4½ miles W.N.W. of Burnham Market, is a large scattered village, with a Staitth or Quay, where the tide rises nine feet in a commodious creek which crosses the salt marshes to that part of the ocean called Brancaster Bay. The parish has increased its population since 1801, from 563 to 1002 souls, and contains 3672 acres of land. In the salt marsh, there have been dug up, near the beach, oak and chestnut trees and the antlers of deer. Here was a large Roman station called Branodunum, garrisoned with the Dalmatian cavalry, under a General who was designated from the nature of his appointment, Count of the Saxon Shore, this part of the coast lying much exposed to the attacks of the Saxons. The castle and entrenchment occupied a square area of about six acres of ground above the marsh, where part of the ditch is still visible, with many stones on the north side; but all the other walls and foundation stones were cleared away many years ago, and partly used in the erection of a malt-house, at that time said to be the largest in England, being 312 feet long by 31 broad, and capable of wetting 420 quarters of barley per week; but now unoccupied. Numerous urns, coins, &c., found here, are preserved in the cabinets of the curious; and knives and styles with handles exquisitely wrought, about the size of clasp knives, have also been discovered. One of the coins was inscribed "Janus Bifrons," and another, "Ti. Clavdivs Caes. Avg." A Roman road, afterwards called the Jew's Way, passed from Brancaster along the coast, to the other great Roman station at Caister-next-Yarmouth. Mrs. Mary Reeve, lady of the manor and chief owner of the soil, resides at the Hall, a handsome brick mansion standing on an eminence commanding a fine view of the ocean; and Mrs. Fisher, H. J. Lee Warner, Esq., Simms Reeve, Esq., Peter Cator, Esq., Messrs. Samuel Sharpe, William Middleton, and some smaller owners, have estates here. The Church (Virgin Mary) consists of nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and lofty square tower with one bell. It contains several tablets of the Terry and Foley families. The whole building is much in need of a thorough restoration, as most of the windows have lost their mullions, the walls and pillars are thickly coated with plaster. The nave is filled with high pews, and the chancel has a very low roof. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £24, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Ottiwell Sadler, M.A., who has 8a. of glebe, a spacious residence, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £824. The advowson formerly belonged to the Dukes of Beaufort. The Church Land is one acre, let for £2. 2s. Here is an Alms-house for four poor parishioners, and also a Free School for the poor children of Brancaster, Titchwell, Thornham, and Burnham Deepdale: both founded in 1596 by Robert Smith, who endowed them with land, now consisting of 68a. 18p., (as set out under the enclosure act in 1755,) and let for £94 per annum. Out of this income, £40 are paid yearly to the schoolmaster, for teaching 25 boys,—13 from Brancaster, and four from each of the other three parishes. Pursuant to the founder's will, the four almspeople have each 20s. and a ton of coals annually. Hamon Styleman LeStrange, Esq., is the trustee. A new and handsome Gothic school-room was erected and the master's house was repaired, in 1862, at a cost of £800. Besides the 25 free boys there are about 30 other scholars. In 1651, Fras. Brampton left a yearly rent-charge of 40s., for weekly distributions of bread, at the church. In 1725, the Rev. Fras. Bell left £50 to be laid out in land—the rents thereof to be applied in repairing his tomb, and in distributions to the poorest people of Brancaster, not receiving parochial relief. The land purchased with this legacy is 10a., at Ringstead, let for £18 a year, which is applied towards the support of the Girls' School, which is held in a neat building erected in 1861 at a cost of £450, and attended by 55 girls. Here is a small Wesleyan Chapel, built in 1851. In the following Directory those marked * are at the Staith.

CHOSELEY, 6 miles W. by S. of Burnham Market, is an extra-parochial farm of 650 acres, belonging to C. F. N. Rolfe, Esq., of Heacham, and occupied by Merrick B. Bircham, Esq., of Fakenham, who keeps a pack of harriers here. Its county rates and taxes are paid with Ringstead; but the inhabitants attend Titchwell church, for which privilege the rector has an acre of land here. Post from Lynn.

DOCKING, which gives name to an extensive Union and Police Division, is a large village, pleasantly situated 6 miles S.W. of Burnham, and 17 miles N.E. of Lynn. Its parish, which includes Southmere, increased its inhabitants from 777 in 1801, to 1625 in 1861, and comprises 6228A. of land, of which 1190A. are in Southmere manor, which is 1½ mile W. of Docking, and belongs to Major H. J. Hare, of Docking Hall, a fine old Elizabethan mansion, which has just been handsomely restored, and stands in well-wooded pleasure grounds. The rectorial tithes are held on lease from Eton College, by Mrs. B. Hare. Sir W. H. Folkes, Bart., owns part of the parish, and is lord of the manor of Docking or Zouches, in which the fines are arbitrary. Rear-Admiral Seymour, John Calthrop, Esq., and several smaller proprietors, have also estates in the parish. Southmere, commonly called Summerfield, is in one farm (with 100A. of wood), occupied by Mr. John Freeman. It was formerly a separate parish, and had a Church (All Saints), of which no vestiges are now extant, though its benefice is still continued as a sinecure rectory, in the gift of Eton College, and incumbency of the Rev. Richard Battiscombe, M.A., of Upminster, Essex, who has here a yearly tithe rent-charge of £320. Docking Church (St. Mary) is a neat structure, consisting of a spacious nave, chancel, south porch (now closed), and a lofty square tower with one bell. The tower, and the windows of the nave are in the perpendicular style; but the chancel is of the decorated period, and contains some tablets of the Hare family, one of whom, Mrs. Winifred Hare, gave the sacramental plate. The east window is of five lights, with reticulated or net-like tracery. The tower was repaired and the bell rehung, in 1861, at a cost of £140. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £13. 6s. 8d. Eton College presents, on the nomination of the Bishop of Norwich; and the Rev. Horatio Bolton, M.A., of Ashby-with-Oby, is the incumbent. The Vicarage House is occupied by the curate. The yearly rent-charges, now paid in lieu of tithes, are £1100 to the lessee of the rectory, and £570 to the vicar. In the charter of the endowment of Eton College, mention is made of the "alien Priory of Dokyng." The public well here is 73 yards deep, and a man is constantly employed in drawing water, which is sold at a farthing a pailful. Here are also two other wells, each about 67 yards deep, belonging to private individuals. Petty Sessions are held at the Hare Inn, on the last Monday of each month (see p. 991). The National School, a handsome building with master's house attached, was erected in 1859 at a cost of £1127, on land given by Major Hare, and is attended by about 120 children. The County Police Station was built in 1854, and contains two cells, and residences for a superintendent and two constables. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. A pig and cattle market is held on Saturdays at the Plough Inn. The poor have 8 acres of land, awarded at the enclosure in 1862. Half of it is used as a recreation ground, and the remainder is let in 16 garden allotments.

DOCKING UNION, formed in 1835, comprises all the 18 parishes of Smithdon Hundred; the 9 parishes of Brothercross Hundred; the parishes of Anmer and Dersingham, in Freebridge-Lynn; and those of Bagthorpe, Barmer, Broomsthorpe, Houghton, Syderstone, East Rudham, and West Rudham, in Gallow Hundred. The 36 parishes of this Union, comprise an area of 128 square miles, and had 17,596 inhabitants in 1861. Their average annual expenditure on the poor, &c., from 1832 to 1835, was £16,840; but in 1838 it was only £9033; and it is now about £8000. The Union Workhouse is at Docking, nearly in the centre of the Union, and is an extensive range of brick building, erected in 1836, at a cost of about £9000, including the furniture, &c. It was opened in December, 1836, and has room for 513 paupers, but in summer it has seldom more than 100. Alfred Spanton, Esq., of Hunstanton, is union clerk and superintendent registrar; and Mr. John Isaacs Livock is registrar of marriages. The registrars of births and deaths are Mr. J. I. Livock, of Docking, for Docking District; Mr. A. V. Dennis, of Burnham Westgate, for Burnham District; and Mr. William Groom, of Ringstead, for Snettisham District. The latter and Mr. John B. Copeman, of Burnham Westgate, are the relieving officers. Messrs. A. V. Dennis, Geo. Parry, Fredk. Manby, and Rowland Flockton, are the surgeons. Mr. John Wilson is master; Miss Eleanor Maudesley, matron; and the Rev. H. J. Hare, M.A., chaplain of the Workhouse.

FRING, or Frenge, is a parish, with a small village, seated in a deep valley with woody acclivities, between Snettisham and Docking, 14 miles N.E. by N. of Lynn ; containing 173 inhabitants, and 1710 acres of land, mostly belonging to Abm. Richard Dugate, Esq., the lord of the manor ; who resides generally in France. The Hall, a good brick mansion, with extensive gardens and pleasure-grounds, upon a commanding eminence, is occupied by his sister Mrs. A. M. Locke. The Church (All Saints) stands on the western acclivity, and has nave, chancel, south porch and square tower with one bell. It is in the decorated style, but the interior is very plain and filled with high pews. Near the chancel arch is a niche for a saint and some partially obliterated mural paintings. Part of the rood staircase remains, and in the chancel are sedilia and a piscina. The building was re-roofed in 1846, at a cost of £200. The tithes, which have been commuted for £402, and the glebe, 48A. 1R., belong with the advowson to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, having been granted by Bishop Herbert, in 1001, to the monks of Norwich priory, who had a cell here, of which the foundations may still be traced. This appropriation was confirmed by Bishop Bateman, on condition that the profits should be applied to find the monks shoes. The perpetual curacy, now valued at £103, was augmented from 1790 to 1816 with £700 of royal bounty, and in the latter year with £200, given by the late Rev. R. Bacon, LL.D. Of these augmentations, £400 are invested in land, and £500 in the funds. The Rev. Septimus Wigan, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good Parsonage House. The other chief residents are—Mrs. Anne Maria Locke, Hall ; Mrs Alice Wright ; John Burgis, and Exors. of late Wm. Wright, farmers ; John Barrett, bricklayer ; Chas. Kemp, shopkeeper, and Thos. Kemp, parish clerk. Post from Lynn via Docking.

HEACHAM, 14 miles N.N.E. of Lynn, is a large and scattered village, on the sea-coast, sheltered behind by a bold acclivity, at the foot of which a small rivulet flows across the salt-marsh to the flat beach, where there is no harbour for shipping, though coal vessels and other small craft unlade their cargoes on the sands. It has a station on the Lynn and Hunstanton Railway, whence a line is projected to Wells through Docking and Burnham. The parish has increased its population since 1801 from 524 to 990 souls, and contains 3553 acres of land. The principal owners of the soil are Hamon Styleman Le Strange, Esq., lord of the manor ; C. F. N. Rolfe, Esq., patron of the living ; and Caius College, Cambridge. The two first named are also impropiators of the great tithes, and Mr. Rolfe resides at the Hall, a handsome red brick mansion in a well-wooded park. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., was augmented in 1779 with £200 of Q.A.B., and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Wm. Charlesworth, B.A., who has a yearly rent-charge of £263, awarded in 1839 in lieu of tithes. The Church (St. Mary) is a spacious building, originally in the form of a cross ; but the transepts are gone. It now comprises nave with aisles and clere-story, chancel, south porch and massive square central tower with two bells. The present windows are all perpendicular, except the western one, which is a splendid specimen of the decorated style ; the original east window has been filled up, and a miserable square-headed one now occupies its place. Many of the windows are enriched with stained glass, but the nave and aisles are filled with high pews, and the roof is hidden by a low ceiling which cuts off the whole of the arch of the fine west window. The south doorway is a beautiful specimen of early-English work, and in the porch are the remains of a holy-water stoup. The Church contains numerous tablets of the Rolfe, Redmayne, Elsdon and other families. One of the Rolfes sailed with Sir Walter Raleigh, in his voyages of discovery, and married the princess Pocahontas, daughter of one of the most celebrated Indian chiefs, which greatly facilitated the friendly intercourse between the natives and the English. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel in the parish. The Parochial School, built in 1838, by the late incumbent, is attended by about 100 children. The Poor's Land, 6A. 3R. 15P., with a cottage, is let for £13. 10s., and has been vested in trust, from an early period, but was partly exchanged at the enclosure in 1781. The poor have also two yearly rent-charges of 10s. each, left by unknown donors; and the dividends of £500 three per cent Consols, left by Mrs. Frances Rolfe, in 1837, to be distributed in clothing. Heacham had a cell of Cluniac monks, under Lewes Abbey, to which this parish was given by Wm. de Warenne, Earl of Surrey, in the reign of Wm. Rufus. After the dissolution, the manor and rectory were given to Thomas, Duke of Norfolk.

HOLME-NEXT-THE-SEA is a parish and small village, betwixt Hunstanton and Brancaster Bay, 9 miles W. of Burnham Market, containing 305 inhabitants and 1607 acres of land, including 413 acres of salt marsh, enclosed in 1859. It lies in several manors, viz.:—Hunstanton-with Mustrells, Ringstead-with-Holme, and Northhall, otherwise Barnards, of which Hamon Styleman Le Strange, Esq., is lord; and Holkham, Berry's, and Hood's, of which Anthony Blyth, Esq., who has a neat residence here, is lord. Mattw. Nelson, Esq., of Lynn, also has an estate in the parish. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave and chancel, with a remarkably fine perpendicular tower at the south-west angle, containing five bells. At the east end of the nave is a curious brass with figures of Henry Netyngdon, an itinerant judge in the time of Henry IV., and his wife, and an inscription stating that they built the steeple and choir, and also furnished the bells and vestments. The nave was rebuilt on a smaller scale in 1778, when the south aisle was destroyed. Both it and the chancel are debased, but the latter contains sedilia and a double piscina of very early date, and a monument dated 1607, bearing kneeling figures of R. Stone, his wife, and 13 children. The nave is filled with large pews. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., is consolidated with that of Thornham (see p. 1007), and was augmented in 1762 with £200 of Q.A.B. The tithes of Holme were commuted in 1844 for yearly payments of £283 to the impropiator (H. S. Le Strange, Esq.), and £170 to the vicar, who also has here 22a. of glebe. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a small chapel here. The National School, attended by 35 children, was built in 1848 by the vicar, who still supports it. In Dec., 1626, a large whale was cast ashore here, and the profit made of it was £217. In 1861, some fragments of Roman pottery were found in the parish, near the supposed course of the Peddar's way, and they are now in the possession of the Misses Nelson. The Poor's Allotment, 11a. 2r. 35p., let for £24, was awarded at the enclosure in 1827, in lieu of the old poor's land, part of which was purchased with £20, left by Benjamin Holley, in 1699.

HUNSTANTON is a pleasantly situated village and sea-bathing place, on an eminence with a declivity to the east, opening into a fine valley, and terminated on the north-east by that lofty sea cliff called the Gore, or St. Edmund's Point. It is distant 10 miles W. of Burnham Market, and 17 miles N. by E. of Lynn, and with the latter place it is connected by a branch railway, opened in 1862, and constructed at a cost of £80,000. Commanding an extensive view of the ocean, and having a firm sandy beach, with much beautiful scenery in its vicinity, it offers many temptations as a bathing place, and since the opening of the railway has been rapidly improving. It now possesses above 30 commodious lodging and boarding houses and three first-class hotels; and many villas, shops, and private residences are in course of erection. The sands are very extensive, and upon them are about 20 bathing-machines and several pleasure boats. The parish contains 490 inhabitants, and 1499 acres of land, including the decayed parish of Barret Ringstead, and belonging to Hamon Styleman Le Strange, Esq., the lord of the manor, who, as lord paramount of Smithdon Hundred, claims all royalties appertaining to the sea and shore. He occasionally resides at HUNSTANTON HALL, a fine Elizabethan mansion, which stands in a beautiful park, and has for many ages been the seat of the distinguished family of Le Strange. About the end of the 11th century, Roland Le Strange obtained Hunstanton in marriage with Matilda Le Brun, daughter and sole heiress of Ralph Fitz-Herluin and Helewisa de Plaiz, who were respectively the children of Herluin and Hugh de Plaiz, the original Saxon possessors of the soil; and in his direct posterity the manor has continued to the present time. The more immediate ancestor of Le Strange of Hunstanton was Sir Hamon, third son of John, fifth Baron Strange of Knokyn, in Shropshire. This Hamon was enfeoffed of Hunstanton by his eldest brother John, sixth Baron Strange, in 1309-'10. The condition of his tenure was the payment of a white rose yearly. He married Margaret, daughter of Ralph Vernon and co-heir of Richard Vernon, of Mottram, in Cheshire, and died in 1317. His son and successor, Hamon Le Strange, Esq., married Katherine, daughter and heir of Lord Camois, and founded the present parish church. Sir Roger Le Strange, Knight, who was born in 1616, espoused the Royal cause in the civil wars of Charles I.; and in 1644 he intended to surprise the town of Lynn; but his plans being divulged by two of his associates, he was seized, tried, and condemned to death; but this punishment was commuted for imprisonment in Newgate, whence he escaped in 1648, and fled to the continent. After the Restoration, he became a great political writer, and established a newspaper called "The Public Intelligencer and the News," but this was given up to make room for the London Gazette, commenced Feb., 1666. By way of compensation, Sir Roger was appointed "licenser of the press," a post at that time of some trust and profit; but he was not knighted till the accession of James II., whose queen anagrammed his name into "Strange lying Roger." He died in 1704, in his 88th year. The most ancient portion of Hunstanton Hall now remaining is the north-west angle, and though there is nothing in its present appearance to mark its antiquity, there can be no doubt that it dates back as far as the reign of Edward IV. at least. The Gatehouse on the east side of the building was erected by Sir Roger Le Strange, who died in 1509, and was "Esquire of the body" to Henry VII. It was originally quite distinct from the rest of the edifice, but in 1623 Sir Hamon Le Strange added the two wings, together with the north and south sides of the inner quadrangle, and thus united it with the inhabited part of the Hall. He also built the embattled wall round the outer court, as well as the gateway to it, and the deerkeeper's lodge in the park. The room over Sir Roger's Gatehouse, now used as a library, is still called the "Priest's Room." The Hall was well restored by the late Henry Styleman Le Strange, Esq., in 1836; but an accidental fire in 1853 entirely destroyed the ancient baronial dining-hall, with about 18 other principal rooms.

HUNSTANTON CLIFF, which rises to the height of 65 feet above the beach, is commonly called St. Edmund's Point, from a tradition that Edmund the martyr landed here, when he was brought from Germany to be crowned King of East Anglia. He is said to have built a tower here, in which he resided while he committed to memory the whole book of Psalms, in compliance with a previous vow. Some remains of an old chapel on the cliff, dedicated to St. Edmund, probably gave rise to this story. A well in the parish also bears the name of the Royal martyr; but is sometimes called the seven springs. The LIGHT HOUSE, which was built on the cliff by the late Edward Everard, Esq., was a wooden structure, but has given place to a larger and more durable edifice, completed in 1840 by the Brethern of the Trinity House, London, and rising 49 feet to the focus of the light, which, by means of splendid cata-dioptric lenses put up in 1863, casts a powerful white light across the broad Wash, except to the west, where it throws a red glare on a dangerous sand bank 8 miles off, called the "Loring Middle." The cliff on which it stands commands an extensive view of the ocean and the Lincolnshire coast, as far as the floating light and Boston church. The sea comes up against it with great force, and is said to have gained upon it more than 15 yards during the last 80 years, though its stratification consists chiefly of white chalk, hard red clunch, dirty yellow coloured stones, with an exceedingly hard rock of iron-coloured carr-stone at the base. On certain great refluxes of the tides, called a dead neap, about the end of September, persons may walk or ride about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile down the sands to a place called the oyster sea, where, in the season, are caught skate, oysters, lobsters, turbot, breddocks, sandlings, soles, maids, plaice, salmon, trout, hornpikes, and occasionally smelts. The coast, on each side of the cliff, is secured against the incursions of the ocean, by immense sand heaps, called meales, and abounding in rabbits. Here is no harbour, but coal vessels unlade their cargoes on the beach. The coast guard consists of a chief boatman and four men.

There was no CHURCH in Hunstanton at the time of the Domesday survey, but the Norman font which is still in perfect preservation, shews that a church must have been built here early in the 12th century, probably by Roger Le Strange and Matilda Le Brun. The present Church (Virgin Mary) is in the early decorated style, and was founded by Hamon Le Strange, Esq., in the first half of the 14th century. It comprises a spacious nave with aisles and clerestory, a very fine south porch, a chancel, and a square tower at the north-west angle of the nave, containing one bell. The nave is of five bays, and has a magnificent high-pitched roof of oak, resting on stone corbels representing the twelve apostles. The east and west windows are each of five lights, and that at the east end of the south aisle contains stained glass representing Moses and the prophets. Near the latter is an early-English piscina; and on the south side of the chancel are some remains of the sedilia, and another piscina with a lateral opening. The founder's tomb is in the nave near the south pillar of the chancel arch, and in the chancel are many monuments of the Le Stranges. The earliest of these is an altar tomb in a small chantry chapel in the north wall, supposed to have been erected to Sir Henry and Lady Katherine Le Strange, by their son, Sir Roger, who died in 1509, and whose altar tomb, with its fine and perfect brass, stands in the centre of the chancel. In 1857, the nave and aisles were thoroughly restored, re-roofed, paved with encaustic tiles, and fitted with open seats of oak, at a cost of about £700 raised by subscription. The late H. S. Le Strange, Esq., was a liberal contributor to the fund, and also gave the oak for the roof; and the chancel is about to be restored in a similar manner as a memorial to him. Of the church plate, the chalice and paten now in use are those mentioned in the "Inventory of church goods" taken by the Royal Commissioners in the 6th of Edward VI., 1553. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £15. 6s. 8d., has the rectory of Little Ringstead annexed, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Montagu Higginson Church, who has a good residence, built in 1846. The glebe is 18 acres, and the vicarial tithes of this parish are commuted for £160, and the rectorial tithes of Ringstead for £100 per annum. H. S. Le Strange, Esq., is patron of the living, and also impropiator of the great tithes of Hunstanton, which have been commuted for £303 per annum. A NEW CHURCH is shortly to be erected about a mile from the present church at Hunstanton St. Edmunds, near the railway station, where the chief increase in buildings and population has taken place. The FREE SCHOOL was built in 1842 at a cost of £524, of which £300 were bequeathed by Henry Stocking in 1826, but not received till the termination of a long suit in Chancery. It has an endowment of £33 a year given by the same benefactor, and is attended by 40 boys. A GIRLS' SCHOOL was erected near it in 1849, by the late Mr. Le Strange. It is now attended by 70 girls, and supported by the patron, who also annually clothes 10 boys and 10 girls. Pursuant to an agreement made in 1707, the lord of the manor of Hunstanton, for the use of 16a. of land left by Robert Gibson, in 1591, pays yearly the value of ten coombs of barley, one half for the use of the church, and the other for the relief of the poor.

INGOLDISTHORPE, on the Hunstanton road, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S.E. of Snettisham Station, and 10 miles N.N.E. of Lynn, is a small scattered village, seated in a picturesque vale, finely clothed with wood and watered by a small rivulet, which flows westward across the salt marshes to the Wash, after forming a beautiful cascade at the new bridge, near Snettisham. The parish contains 372 inhabitants, and 1395 acres of land, mostly belonging to John Bellamy, Esq., of Wisbech, the lord of the manor, who has an ancient brick mansion here, now occupied by the Rev. Edw. Bellamy, M.A. On an eminence commanding an extensive view of the ocean and the adjacent country, is Mount Amelia, the delightful seat of Captain John Davy, R.N., built by John Davy, Esq., in 1745. The Old Hall, an Elizabethan house with remains of a moat, is now a farm house. In the reign of King John, John Chamberlain sued Henry de Patesle and Thomas de Ingoldisthorpe, for the murder of his brother Drugo, and both being convicted, the former was banished to Jerusalem for seven years to serve God for the soul of Drugo, and the latter was to find a priest for the same purpose and to pay Drugo's parents the sum of forty marks. The Church (St. Michael) is a handsome structure, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and square tower with two bells. The ancient screen remains, and at the east end of the south aisle is a piscina. The east and west windows, and the south windows of the chancel have been filled with stained glass by the rector. That at the east end is to the memory of the late T. Beckett, Esq., and his wife, and represents the Nativity, Crucifixion, Ascension, and Descent of the Spirit. The building was thoroughly restored, re-roofed, paved with tiles, and fitted with open poppy-headed benches, in 1857, at a cost of £2000, chiefly contributed by the rector and Capt. Davy. The new roof is of high pitch, and the spandrels rest on richly carved stone corbels. Opposite the south porch stands an ancient cross; and over the entrance is a figure of the patron saint. In the north aisle lies interred Richard Gardiner, Esq., commonly called "Dick Merry Fellow," who died after a short residence at Mount Amelia, in 1781. He was a busy partisan at elections, and left behind him a great variety of jeu d'esprit, songs, and inscriptions, full of wit and humour. Here are also several tablets of the Davy and Hoste families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Thos. Beckett, M.A., who has 45a. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £300, awarded in 1839; and a handsome Elizabethan residence, built in 1856-8, at a cost of £2000. The School, with teacher's house adjoining, was built in 1858 by the rector, who still supports it; and it is attended by 50 children. The sum of £15 left to the church and poor by Agnes Bigge, was laid out in the purchase of about 3a. of land, now let for £4, most of which is given to the poor. The common of 200a., was enclosed in 1858, when 30a. were allotted to the poor for fuel, 16a. for garden plots, and 3a. as a recreation ground.

RINGSTEAD (GREAT) is a pleasant village, in a fertile valley, 2 miles S.E. of Hunstanton, and 8 miles W. by S. of Burnham Market, comprising in its parish 522 inhabitants, and 2714 acres of land, mostly belonging to Hamon Styleman Le Strange, Esq., the lord of the manor and patron of the living. Here were formerly two parish Churches (St. Peter and St. Andrew), but the former was taken down in 1771, except its circular tower, and the materials were used in repairing St. Andrew's. The two discharged rectories were at the same time consolidated, and were valued in K.B. at £20. 6s. 8d., but are now worth £630 a year. The Rev. Wm. Law Hussey, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence, which was enlarged in 1840. St. Andrew's church comprises nave, south porch, chancel, and square tower with one bell ; and was originally of decorated architecture, but all the windows are perpendicular insertions. There is a fine decorated piscina with a lateral opening in the chancel, and at the south west end of the nave there is another but plainer one. The building was thoroughly restored, refitted with open benches, and enlarged by the addition of a north aisle, in 1864, at a cost of about £1800. Here are marble tablets of the Styleman, North, and Fysh families. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the parish, built in 1842. The National School, a neat Gothic building, erected in 1852, is attended by 50 children and supported by subscription. The Fuel Allotment, 53A. 1R. 18P., was awarded at the enclosure in 1782, and is let for £26 a year. The poor have also the following yearly doles, viz :—10s. left by the Rev. Timothy Swift, in 1719 ; 28s. 6d. from £28. 10s. left by L. Hockwell and other donors ; and 20s. left by a Mr. Reed.

RINGSTEAD PARVA, or Barret-Ringstead, is a decayed parish, now comprising only one farm, belonging to H. S. Le Strange, Esq., and united with the parish of Hunstanton, from which it is distant 2 miles south. Its church has been long in ruins, though its rectory, valued in K.B. at £3. 6s. 8d., and now at £100, is annexed to the vicarage of Hunstanton. The farm is occupied by Martin Dodman, of Hunstanton. Near to New Hunstanton, but in this parish, is a chalybeate spring, the water of which is clear and pleasant to the taste when fresh, and strongly impregnated with iron.

SEDFORD, a parish and scattered village, in the vale of a small rivulet, between Heacham and Docking, 13 miles N.N.E. of Lynn, has 742 inhabitants, and 4124 acres of land, of which 2053 acres, with the manor and great tithes, are held of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, by C. F. N. Rolfe, Esq., who also owns part of the parish, including the Hall, a good brick mansion, now occupied by Jas. W. Howlett, Esq. H. S. Le Strange, Esq., Capt. Davy, and some smaller owners, also have estates here. The Dean and Chapter are also patrons of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £8, and is now in the incumbency of the Rev. Ambrose Ogle, M.A., who has $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres of glebe and a handsome residence, which he considerably enlarged in 1859, at a cost of £1600. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for £385, and the vicarial for £330 per annum. The Church (Saint Mary) is a large edifice of the decorated period, but most of the windows are perpendicular insertions. It comprises a spacious and lofty nave, with aisles and clerestory, large north and south porches, south transept, chancel, and short tower with octagonal belfry and three bells. The nave has six fine decorated arches on each side opening to the aisles. The chancel appears to be much smaller than the original one. The old rood screen still exists, and in the transept is a piscina with a lateral opening. The font is Norman, and the pulpit is richly carved. An organ was purchased by subscription in 1862. The east window contains some beautiful stained glass; and the west window is about to be similarly decorated by the parishioners as a memorial of their love for Mrs. Rolfe, who died in 1863. The Wesleyans and the Primitive and New Connexion Methodists have each a chapel in the parish. The National School, built in 1838, is attended by about 80 children, and supported chiefly by Mr. Rolfe. The Fuel Allotment, 30A.10P., awarded at the enclosure, was exchanged in 1856 for 9 acres of arable land, now let for £20 a year; besides which the poor have a yearly rent-charge of 10s., left by one Mason, and the dividends of £500, 3 per cent. consols, left by Mrs. F. Rolfe, in 1837, for distributions of clothing. Here was anciently a hamlet called Gnatyngdon, or Nettington, held by Godwin Halden, one of the few Saxons who was allowed by the Norman conqueror to keep his land. It is now known as Eaton. A Library of 1400 vols. was given to the parishioners by the late Mrs. Rolfe, in 1843, in memory of her son Edmond, whose name it bears.

SHERNBOURNE, or Sharnbourne, a small village in a deep valley, near the source of the Ingold rivulet, $11\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. by N. of Lynn, has in its parish 144 inhabitants, and 1305 acres of land, in two farms, one belonging to Henry W. Coldham, Esq., and the other, with the ancient Hall, to the Master and Fellows of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, who are also lords of the manor, which for six centuries was possessed by an ancient family of its own name, the last of whom was Francis Sharnborne, Esq., who died during the Commonwealth. Their ancient hall, now a farm house, has been a large moated Elizabethan mansion of brick, but one wing has been destroyed, and the moat is partially filled up. The Church (St. Peter) is said to have been the second Christian church founded in East Anglia by Felix the Burgundian, who came over to convert the Anglo-Saxons, and is supposed to have founded the first church at Babingley, where he landed; but no part of the original edifice now remains. The present building comprises only a small nave, surmounted by a bell-cot with one bell. It formerly had a chancel, and the arches opening to an aisle, which once existed on the south side, may still be traced. At the east end is a fine brass, with effigies of a knight in armour and a lady, probably some of the Sharnborne family. The font is massive and curiously carved; it is very ancient, probably Saxon. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8, and now at £120, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Leech, M.A., of Flitcham, who has here 65A. of glebe. The tithes were all commuted at the enclosure in 1767, for allotments of land, and 14A. were at the same time awarded to the poor for fuel. The School, held in the old vicarage house, is attended by 20 children, and chiefly supported by H. W. Coldham, Esq. The chief residents are—William Cater, victualler, Bull; Wm. Grief, parish clerk; Mariette Mordy, schoolmistress; Francis Marsters, Hall farm; and J. Williamson, Coldham farm. Post from Lynn.

SNETTISHAM, a considerable village, said to have been a market town, is seated on rising ground, sheltered on the N.E. by a high range of hills, and having on the west a fine champaign tract, extending to the beach, from which it is distant 2 miles, being on the Lynn and Hunstanton Railway, which has a station here, 11 miles N.N.E. of Lynn. Its parish contains 1173 inhabitants, 5580 acres of land, and the scattered hamlet of Southgate, distant half a mile to the south, in the vale of the Ingold rivulet. The commons were enclosed under acts passed in 1761 and 1800. H. S. Le Strange, Esq., is lord of the manor, and chief owner of the soil; and Jacob Curl, Lynn Corporation, Trustees of the late R. F. G. Dalton, Esq., and others, have estates here. This large manor was given, with many others, by the Conqueror, to William de Albini, and was afterwards held by the Bedingfelds, of Oxburgh. In the parish are three quarries of excellent carr-stone, of an iron colour, and so soft when first dug up as to be easily squared; but after exposure to the air, it becomes hard and durable, and is much used in building houses and cottages in this neighbourhood. On the beach, which adjoins the Lynn channel, is an extensive bed of shingle; immense quantities of which are taken in vessels to Lincolnshire, &c., for the reparation of the roads, paying to the lord of the manor 10d. per ton. The Hall, a spacious Elizabethan mansion of brick, surrounded by well-wooded grounds, belongs to the lord of the manor, but is occupied by Capt. Wm. Chas. Jas. Campbell. The Lodge is the pleasant seat of Miss Davy. Snettisham Park contains a fine old Elizabethan house, which has been recently restored, and was formerly known as Ingoldisthorpe Hall. It is now occupied by Mr. Henry Barnard, and the park, which covers about 150A., is well-wooded. The Church (St. Mary) is a beautiful fabric of the 14th century, and was originally in the form of a cross; but the chancel and north transept have been destroyed, though part of the former is still an ivy-mantled ruin. It now comprises a lofty nave with aisles and clerestory, a south transept, a large groined porch at the west end, and a central tower containing five bells, and surmounted by a finely-proportioned spire, rising to a height of 175 feet. The nave is of five bays, and the arches are supported on lofty and elegant quatrefoil pillars, with broad bases forming seats. The six-light west window is a fine example of the flamboyant style, and is filled with stained glass representing twelve scriptural subjects, given by Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Styleman. Three other windows are similarly enriched in memory of Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Bridgewater, and Mr. J. Dawes. The north transept contains a piscina, and the pulpit has some curious paintings of saints on its panels. Here are several tablets of the Stylemans, Hamiltons, and others; a brass of the Cremer family; and a marble monument with the effigy of Sir Wymond Carye, who died in 1612. The interior of the church was handsomely restored, and refitted with open benches, new reading desk, &c., in 1856, at a cost of £1400, raised by subscription and rate. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., and now at £110, was augmented with £200, given by Nicholas Styleman in 1728, and £500 of royal bounty, obtained in 1729 and 1819. These sums were laid out in the purchase of 34A. of land in Marshland, to which 32A. in this parish were added at the enclosure, when the lord of the manor, as improPRIATOR, received an allotment in lieu of the great tithes. H. S. Le Strange, Esq., is patron, and the Rev. John Coldham, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have each a chapel here. The Town Land, 6A. 18P., on which is the parish chalk-pit, was awarded at the enclosure in 1766, and is let for £9, which is applied with the church rates. Petty Sessions are held at the Compasses Inn, as noticed at page 991. The Free Grammar School was established in 1804, under the will of Anthony Hall, who, in 1708, left for its endowment the reversion of an estate of nearly 50 acres, now let for about £120 a year, besides which, the master has a dwelling-house and garden. The school is free for instruction in reading, writing, arithmetic, and Latin, to 20 boys of Snettisham, whose parents are not possessed of £400, or property worth £20 a year. In 1854 new regulations were made, so as to enable such of the pupils as desire it to be instructed in mathematics, mensuration, chemistry, &c. The school and house were considerably enlarged in 1859 at a cost of £500, and there is now accommodation for about 30 boarders. Mr. Robt. Lubbock is the master. Here is also an excellent boarding school for young ladies, conducted by Miss Santy. The Smithdon, or 17th company of Rifle Volunteers, has its head quarters here, and comprises about 70 men. Capt. W. C. J. Campbell is captain; J. de Courcy Hamilton, Esq., lieutenant; Charles Preedy, Esq., ensign; R. Flockton, Esq., surgeon; and Rev. H. H. Bridgwater, M.A., chaplain. The rifle range (900 yards) is at Hunstanton. There is also a cadet company at the Grammar School. The Fuel Allotment was awarded in 1766. The Parochial School, which is chiefly supported by Mrs. Styleman and family, is held in a building erected in 1818, and attended by 100 boys and girls. The interest of £18, left by James Pretty in 1823, is applied in repairing his tomb and the church.

STANHOE, a scattered village, 2 miles E. of Docking, and 4 miles S.S.W. of Burnham Market, has in its fertile and well cultivated parish 468 inhabitants, and 1489 acres of land, mostly the property of John Calthrop, Esq., and Rear-Admiral Seymour, the latter of whom is lord of the manor; and the former resides at Stanhoe Hall, a neat mansion with pleasant grounds. Here are the remains of an ancient cross, and in Chapel-field are traces of the foundations of a religious house. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, aisles, chancel, and tower. The latter is at the south side of the building, over the porch. The north aisle is in the perpendicular style, but the rest of the edifice is of the early-decorated period. The chancel contains three elegant sedilia and a piscina. In 1853, the Misses Everard, in memory of their parents, gave a handsomely carved pulpit, a reading-desk, and new altar rails, of oak, and also a beautiful stone font; and in 1856, the church was re-roofed, paved with tiles, and fitted with neat open benches, at a cost of £766. The organ was purchased in 1863 for £75. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £16, and now at £525, with the vicarage of Barwick annexed, is in the patronage of Admiral Seymour, and incumbency of the Rev. Augustus Wm. Noel, M.A., who has here a yearly tithe rent-charge of £485, and a handsome residence in the Venetian-Gothic style, built in 1862 at a cost of £2400. The School, built by subscription in 1854, is attended by 35 children. The Wesleyan Chapel was erected in 1827. John Wright, in 1802, left 3A. of land, exchanged in 1861 for 4½A., now let for £7. 10s. a year, which is applied in support of the school.

THORNHAM is a large village, pleasantly situated near the salt marshes, on the Hunstanton road, 6 miles W. by N. of Burnham Market. About half a mile north of the village is a warehouse, at the head of a small creek from Brancaster Bay, navigable for small vessels which bring in coals and take out corn. The parish extends to the beach, and has 728 inhabitants, and 2154 acres of land, mostly belonging to Miss Edith Hogge, the lessee of the lands and rectorial tithes under the Bishop of Norwich, who has the larger manor. The Dean and Chapter have a small manor here; and the Hall is the property and occasional residence of Mrs. Margaret Hogge, of Lynn. The Church is a spacious building, having a lofty nave with aisles and clerestory, a chancel, a large south porch, and a massive square tower, which only rises to the height of the roof of the nave, its further progress having probably been stopped by the civil war in the time of Charles I., and never resumed. The bell still hangs in a wooden frame in the churchyard, where it appears to have been placed during the building of the tower, which, as well as the nave, is in the perpendicular style, but the chancel and south doorway are early-English. The nave is of five bays, and has a fine open timber roof. The lower part of the screen remains, and has upon its panels 16 well-painted figures, supposed to be prophets. The chancel contains a piscina with a lateral opening, some portions of the sedilia, a tablet to the late G. Hogge, Esq., and a handsome five-light lancet window, inserted in 1850. Some of the old open seats still exist, but the aisles and chancel are disfigured by large square pews, and the whole church is much in need of restoration. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £10, and now at £420, with that of Holme-next-the-Sea annexed, is in the alternate patronage of the Bishop and T. Ewen, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Nichls. Jno. Raven, M.A., who has here 14A. of glebe and a handsome residence, built in 1848 at a cost of £2000. He has also a yearly tithe rent-charge of £250, besides £20 out of the greattithes, which have been commuted for £480 per annum. The National School, a handsome decorated Gothic building, with rooms for boys and girls, and a master's house, was built in 1857 by the late William Hogge, Esq. It is attended by 120 children, and chiefly supported by Mrs. Hogge. In 1857, the vicar built here a commodious room for evening lectures, &c. The Church Land, 7A. 3R., is let for £17 a year. The Fuel Allotment is about 16A., awarded at the enclosure in 1794. The poor cut furze and whins upon it. In 1720, Walter Walterston left £100 to be laid out in land—two-thirds for the poor of Thornham, and one-third for the poor of Titchwell. The land purchased was exchanged at the enclosure for 12A. 2R. 12P., let for £24 per annum. The poor of Thornham have also £2 a year, as the gift of Edward Robinson and Mr. Reed, and the interest of £400 three per cents., bequeathed by G. Hogge, Esq., in 1847; and the parish has the right of sending four boys to the Free School at Brancaster.

TITCHWELL, 5 miles W. by N. of Burnham-Market, is a small village overlooking the salt-marshes and Brancaster Bay. Its parish has 146 inhabitants, and 1444 acres of land, a great part of which, with the manor, belongs to Magdalen College, Oxford, but is held on lease by George Low-ther Thompson, Esq., who has also a small freehold here. Mr. Martin Dodman owns part of the parish. At the enclosure in 1786, about 220A. of salt-marsh were embanked from the influx of the tides, which formerly flowed nearly up to the Rectory-house. The Church (St. Mary) is a small building, with nave, chancel, south porch, and a round Norman tower, containing one bell and surmounted by a short spire. The windows are all perpendicular insertions, and the south doorway is of the decorated style. The rood-screen still remains. The building was slated, repaved, and fitted with open seats, about 20 years ago; and in 1859 new altar rails of wrought-iron and brass were put up. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12, is in the patronage of Eton College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Seymour Stocker, M.A., who has 17A. of glebe, a good residence, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £413, awarded in 1839, in lieu of tithes. The shaft of an ancient cross, which is very perfect and of great length, still remains at the cross roads. The Church Land, 8A. 2R., is let for £23. For weekly doles of bread, the poor have a yearly rent-charge of £1. 14s. 8d., left by James Dalling in 1640. They have also one-third of Walterson's Charity, as noticed with Thornham; and the parish has the privilege of sending four boys to the Free School at Brancaster. The chief residents are—The Rector; Thomas Farmer, parish clerk; Robt. Oake, yeoman; John Temple, farmer and victualler, Horse Shoes; Susannah Youngs, shopkeeper; Wm. Browne, farmer, Manor House; and Martin Dodman, farmer and merchant. Post OFFICE at S. Youngs'. Letters despatched to Lynn, at 3.50 p.m.

BROTHERCROSS HUNDRED

Is one of the smallest divisions of Norfolk, being of an oblong figure, only eight miles in length from north to south, and five miles in breadth. It is bounded on the east by North Greenhoe, on the south by Gallow, on the west by Smithdon Hundred, and on the north by the Ocean; where it is terminated by an insulated ridge of sand hills called the Scald Heads, occupied only by rabbits, and having near it a prolific bed of excellent oysters. This Hundred is generally a fertile and picturesque country, and forms, with 18 parishes in Gallow Hundred, the Deanery of Burnham. It contains only nine PARISHES, viz.:—the six Burnhams, North and South Creake, and Waterden, which are in Docking Union (see page 995), and comprise 4614 inhabitants, and 19,356 acres of land, assessed to the County rate, in 1843, at the annual value of £25,876. Petty Sessions are held at Burnham-Westgate, on the last Saturday of every month; and Mr. Thos. Garwood is clerk to the magistrates. Brothercross and Gallow Hundreds were possessed by the Crown, till Henry I. gave them to William, Earl of Warenne and Surrey, to be held of the castle of Norwich, paying two marks yearly.

BURNHAM DEEPPDALE is a small village, seated on a gentle acclivity above the salt marshes, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. of Burnham Market, and sheltered on the south by a range of lofty hills, finely clothed with wood. Its parish contains 81 inhabitants, and 1024 acres of land, of which 300 are marsh, enclosed under an act passed in 1821, for draining, embanking, and improving about 700A. of salt marshes, in this and the adjacent parishes of Burnham Norton and Burnham Overy. The trustees of the late Hy. Blyth, Esq., are owners of the soil, lords of the manor, and patrons of the Church, (St. Mary), which consists of nave, chancel and round Norman tower with one bell. There was formerly a north aisle. The font is square and very massive, and is supposed to be of Saxon work and of a period prior to the Christian era, as it contains no mark or symbol relating to religion. On three of its sides are round-headed panels, in which are rudely sculptured 12 figures engaged in various works of husbandry, corresponding to the months of the year, the Latin names of which are boldly carved over their heads. It is supported on 4 shafts which do not appear to have been designed for the purpose, and are of much more recent date. On the fourth side is merely a little ornamental leaf work. In 1855, the church was well restored, re-roofed, paved with encaustic tiles, and furnished with new pews, pulpit and reading desk, at a cost of £300. At the same time the east window, which is a decorated one of three lights, was filled with stained glass in memory of the Rev. E. G. Blyth, a late rector; and one on the south side of the chancel was similarly enriched in memory of John and Elizabeth Overman. Here are several marble tablets of the Blyth, Rodwell and Lane families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £11, is in the incumbency of the Rev. Edward Kerslake Blyth, B.A., who has 42A. of glebe; a yearly tithe rent-charge of £240. 12s., awarded in 1845; and a handsome Elizabethan residence built in 1839. The School, erected in 1844 by the late Rev. E. G. Blyth, is supported by the rector and attended by 20 children. The chief residents are—The Rector; John Bunkle, vict., Plough; Hannah Fiddaman, schoolmistress; William Smith, parish clerk; Robins Cook, brick and tile maker, farmer and lime burner; and Henry Cook, farmer at North Creak. Post from Lynn.

BURNHAM NORTON, 1 mile N. of Burnham Market, is a parish, with a small village in a gentle ascent above the marshes, comprising 172 inhabitants, and 1260 acres of land, belonging to the Earl of Orford, the lord of the manor. The Church (St. Margaret) is above half a mile south of the village, on the western acclivity of a fertile valley. It is a spacious building, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, north porch, and round tower with one bell. Almost all the windows are in the perpendicular style, except those of the chancel, which are decorated. The east window is filled up, and the aisles have been lately screened off from the nave, as the church is much too large for the present inhabitants of the parish. The pulpit is dated 1450, and supposed to be unique. It is hexagonal, and was the gift of J. Golding and his wife, who are portrayed on two of its panels. The other panels bear paintings of the four doctors of the church. The whole of these figures have lately been well restored. The ancient screen still remains, and is ornamented with paintings of six saints; and also of John Groom and his wife, by whom it was erected in 1458. The south aisle contains memorials of the ancestors of the late Lord Chancellor Thurlow. The rectory is in two equal medieties, consolidated respectively with Burnham Westgate and Burnham Sutton. The tithes have been commuted for £256; and here are 32 acres of rectorial glebe, and 4 acres of Church Land. A priory of white friars, founded here about 1240, was granted at the dissolution, to Wm. Lord Cobham; and several remains of its buildings and walls, may still be seen, as well as a fine western gateway with a gabled chamber above it, which was restored by the late Earl of Orford in 1849. The chief residents are—John Brown, joiner; Ann Glanfield, schoolmistress; Charles Green, parish clerk; Wm. Loose, beerhouse and shopkeeper; Robt. Priest, coal dealer; and Robert Claxton, and George Wiseman (Norton house), farmers. Post from Lynn.

BURNHAM OVERY parish has 650 inhabitants and 1880 acres of land, and includes the large village of Burnham Overy Staith, situated nearly 2 miles N.N.E. of Burnham Market, on a rivulet or creek, which crosses the salt marshes by two channels to the ocean, and is navigable for vessels of 60 or 80 tons up to the Staith, where the spring-tides rise 9 or 10 feet. The Earl of Orford is lord of the manor, impropiator of the great tithes, and chief owner of the soil; but the Earl of Leicester has an estate here. The Church (St. Clement) stands on a bold eminence, a mile south of the staith, and is a very plain edifice, originally built in the form of a cross, but now consisting only of nave, south aisle and porch, chancel, and low square tower. The latter is surmounted by a turret containing one bell. The transepts and north aisle are entirely gone, but three arches, which once opened into an aisle or chapel and rest on massive circular pillars, may still be seen on the south side of the chancel. The building was probably erected in the 13th century, but has been much mutilated, and sadly needs restoration. It is filled with unsightly pews, and many of the windows are common domestic ones. On the north wall of the nave is a painting of St. Christopher. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8, is consolidated with the rectory of Burnham Sutton. The tithes have been commuted for £244 to the impropiator and £157 to the vicar. The Church Land is 4A. 37P. Peterstone-house, with its farm, at the south-east end of the parish, is the site of a hospital and chapel, called St. Peter de Patra, and anciently belonging to a religious community, who had a free chantry or oratory, granted them by the priory of Walsingham. At the dissolution, its site was granted to the Bishop of Norwich, and is now held of the See by the Earl of Leicester. There is a neat Primitive Methodist Chapel at the Staith, built about four years ago. Post from Lynn.

BURNHAM-THORPE, a considerable village and parish, pleasantly seated in the vale of a small rivulet, about a mile E. by S. of Burnham-Market, has 427 inhabitants, and 2327 acres of land, of which the Earl of Orford is principal owner, and lord of the manor; but Christ's College, Cambridge, and some smaller owners have land here. The manor is mostly on arbitrary fines, and with the whole of the Earl of Orford's estate in this parish was purchased by Peter Lombard, Esq., in 1755, and passed from him to the Earl's ancestor, Horatio Lord Walpole, of Wolterton. The manor house, now a farm house, has remains of a moat. Burnham-Thorpe formerly had a weekly market on Saturday, and will ever be memorable in the annals of fame, for having been the birth-place of the celebrated Admiral Lord Nelson, whose father was many years rector of this parish, and also of Burnham Sutton. A brief memoir of this illustrious hero is already inserted at page 363, with the history of Yarmouth, where an elegant Naval Pillar has been raised to his memory. (See page 343.) The Church (St. Peter) comprises a lofty nave of four bays, north aisle, clerestory, chancel, north porch, and square tower with one bell. There was a south aisle, and the arches which opened to it may still be seen in the wall. The present windows are mostly perpendicular, though the original style appears to have been decorated. In the chancel are a piscina and three sedilia with richly-sculptured canopies. The east window contains some stained glass. Here are several tablets of the Nelson and Everard families, and a fine brass, dated 1420, representing Sir Willis Calthrop, Knt., in armour. In 1862, some handsome open seats of oak were presented by S. H. Hodgson, Esq., and it is intended ultimately to furnish the church throughout in the same style. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £19. 10s., is in the patronage of the Earl of Orford, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Browne Everard, M.A., who has 29A.2R.23P. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £712. 15s., and a spacious residence, built in 1815, near the site of that in which Nelson was born. In the 41st of Elizabeth, Richard Bunting gave a chamber over a malthouse to be used as a School, and charged his lands and the manor of Gyrres-cum-Patin, in Barwick and Barmer, with the yearly payment of £12 to the schoolmaster. The school was not established till 1704, and the rent charge was not paid till 1797, when, after paying the costs of a suit in Chancery, the remaining part of the arrears, £219, was laid out in the purchase of £448 three per cent. Consols, which have since been increased by unapplied dividends, &c., to £1075 of the same stock. In 1797, Lord Walpole, against whom the chancery suit had been instituted, gave in exchange for the old school a good dwellinghouse and school, with about an acre of land. The Earl of Orford is one of the trustees, and keeps the school premises in repair. The endowment now yields £44. 5s. a year, and the master teaches reading, writing, and arithmetic to children recommended by the trustees. The poor parishioners have three yearly doles, viz. :—16s. from Ward's Charity (see Thursford), 16s. left by Thomas Taylor, and 5s. left by an unknown donor. Post from Lynn.

BURNHAM ULPH AND SUTTON now form one parish, with a number of houses adjoining the east end and forming part of the town of Burnham Westgate. They contain 380 inhabitants, and 1456 acres of land, chiefly lying in two farms, one belonging to the Earl of Leicester, and the other called Muckleton, the property of the Earl of Orford. Sutton Church (St. Ethelbert) has long been a venerable ruin, consisting only of the tower and part of the north wall of the nave. Ulph Church (All Saints) is a small edifice, comprising nave, south porch, chancel, and small bell-cot with one bell on the western gable. It is much in need of restoration, the nave being filled with unsightly pews, the west window blocked up by a gallery, the east window partly hidden by a low ceiling, and the walls covered with whitewash. The rectory of Burnham Sutton was valued in K.B. at £17.10s., and is now worth £704 per annum, with the vicarage of Burnham Overy and medieties of the rectories of Burnham Norton and Ulph annexed. It is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. George Goodenough Hayter, M.A., who has 30A. of glebe, and a good residence, purchased in 1859. The other medieties of Norton and Ulph are annexed to Burnham-Westgate. Here is a small Wesleyan Chapel, built in 1828.

BURNHAM WESTGATE, or BURNHAM MARKET, is a small but neat town, mostly built around a spacious market place, where the market was formerly held, 22 miles N.E. by N. of Lynn, 9 miles W.N.W. of Walsingham, 32 miles N.W. of Norwich, and 118 miles N.N.E. of London. The parish contains 1094 inhabitants, and 2997 acres of land, of which about 250 acres are attached to the Hall, (a handsome white brick mansion near the church,) which was the seat of Sir Roger Martin, Bart., who died in 1854, and left this estate to his nephew, Wm. Bulkley Glasse, Esq., Q.C., subject to the life interest of Mrs. Mary Anne Clarke, who resides at the Hall and is lady of the manor. Part of the parish is in the Earl of Orford's manor of Burnham Thorpe. Sussex farm, an estate of about 1100 acres, with a neat white brick mansion surrounded by pleasant grounds, in a valley $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N.W. of the town, belongs partly to Caius and Christ's Colleges, Cambridge, and partly to the Trustees of the late Henry Blyth, Esq., and is occupied by Henry Etheridge Blyth, Esq. Cradle Hall estate, about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile W. of the town, belongs to John Calthrop, Esq.; and several smaller proprietors have land in the parish. The town is about 2 miles S. of the harbour of Burnham Overy, and has holiday fairs on Easter Monday and Tuesday, and August 1st; but the market, formerly held on Saturday, has long been obsolete. Petty Sessions are held at the Hoste Arms, on the last Saturday in every month, and Thomas Garwood, Esq., of Wells, is clerk to the magistrates. The country around the town is agreeably diversified with hill and dale, and the air is highly salubrious. The sea coast is nearly 2 miles to the north, and Holkham park, 2 miles to the east. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and square tower with four bells and a clock. On the battlements of the tower are panels containing bas-reliefs representing scenes from the life of our Saviour. The south aisle was reroofed in 1858 at a cost of £20; and the rest of the building needs restoration, the nave being filled with pews, and the mullions and tracery of many of the windows being gone. The clerestory is of the perpendicular period, and evidently later than the rest of the church. The chancel, which is covered by a very plain old roof, has three sedilia, a curious stone effigy without date or name, and a marble tablet of the Thornhill family. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £20. 16s. 8d., and now at £768 a year, with medieties of the rectories of Burnham Norton and Ulph annexed, is in the patronage of Christ's College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Bates, D.D., who has 100A. of glebe, and a handsome Elizabethan residence, built in 1853 at a cost of £1800, on an eminence half a mile west of the church. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. In 1771, John Willmot left £100 for the education of poor children, and it was suffered to accumulate till 1833, when it amounted to £237, now vested with the Charity Commissioners. The interest, £11. 17s., is applied with the interest of £100 left by the Rev. E. J. Blyth in 1838, towards the support of the National School, which is now held in a building erected in 1850 at a cost of £1200, including the teachers' residences. This school is attended by about 60 boys and girls, belonging to the parishes of Burnham Westgate, Overy, and Norton; and the Infants' School, built in 1842, is supported by subscription and attended by 50 children. The poor parishioners have a yearly rent charge of 50s. out of a farm at Pulham Saint Mary Magdalen, left by Ann Wilders in 1770; the interest of £100 left by Henry Blyth, Esq., in 1831; and the interest of £100 left by the Rev. E. J. Blyth in 1838, to be distributed in blankets.

NORTH CREAKE, a parish and large village on the Fakenham road, 3 miles S. by E. of Burnham Market, has 708 inhabitants, and 3584 acres of land. Earl Spencer and the Fellows of Christ's College, Cambridge, are the principal owners and lords of the manors. Creak Abbey, in an open vale at the north end of the parish, was first founded for a master, four chaplains, and thirteen lay brethren, by Sir Robert de Narford and Alice his wife, about the year 1206; but they were afterwards made an abbot and canons of the Augustine order, and had a church dedicated to St. Bartholomew. After the dissolution, this abbey, with all the lands belonging to it, was granted by Margaret, Countess of Richmond, to Christ's College; and the estate, which comprises 620 acres, is now held on lease by Mr. S. R. Crisp. A great part of the abbey walls still remains and forms a highly interesting and venerable ruin; the choir of the church is perfectly distinguishable, and several of its pointed arches and lofty pillars are still entire, but the nave is gone, except those parts of its materials which may be observed in the adjacent farm-house. About 2000 Roman coins were dug up near the village, in 1799. The parish Church (Virgin Mary), stands near the south end of the village, and is a fine building with lofty nave, north aisle and clerestory, chancel, south porch, and massive square tower with six bells. The nave is of four bays, and has a fine open timber roof with figures of angels on the spandrils and at the intersections of the rafters. It is lighted by windows of the perpendicular period ; but the chancel is in the decorated style, and has a beautiful east window of five lights. The piscina and three sedilia still remain ; and on the north side of the chancel is the lady chapel, now used as a vestry, which also contains a piscina. On the floor is a fine brass representing an ecclesiastic bearing the model of a church ; and over the chancel arch are remains of a fresco painting. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £33. 6s. 8d., is in the alternate patronage of Earl Spencer and the Bishop of Norwich, and in the incumbency of the Venerable Robert Edwards Hankinson, M.A., Archdeacon of Norwich, who has 187A. of glebe ; a handsome Elizabethan residence, built in 1845 at a cost of £3500 ; and a yearly rent-charge of £1081, awarded in 1839 in lieu of tithes. Archdeacon Bathurst, who died in 1844, was rector of North Creake for 35 years. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a small chapel in the parish. The National School is a handsome building, erected in 1849 at a cost of £450, by Earl Spencer, who also gave the site. It is chiefly supported by subscription. Here are four Alms-houses for four poor widows, founded by Richard Mansaur, in 1592, and endowed with £4. 3s. a year out of land belonging to Earl Spencer. The poor have 10s. a year out of 3A. of land bequeathed by the Rev. Samuel Pancke, in 1680.

CREAKE, (SOUTH) a large village and parish, pleasantly situated in a fertile vale, on the Fakenham road, 4 miles S. of Burnham Market, has 1058 inhabitants, and 4065 acres of land, belonging to the Marquis Townshend, Davy T. Belding, Esq., and some smaller proprietors. The Earl of Leicester owns the large farm called Leicester Square (800A.) distant a mile south of the village. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a spacious structure, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, south porch, and short square tower with five bells. It is mostly in the perpendicular style, but the fine west window is of transitional decorated character, and the windows at the ends of the aisles are of the decorated period and contain some ancient stained glass. The rood screen is still preserved, and in the chancel are remains of the sedilia and piscina. There are also piscinæ at the east ends of the aisles, where there were formerly chapels. The nave has a fine open timber roof with full-length figures of angels on the spandrels. The discharged vicarage was certified at £35, and is in the patronage of the Marquis Townshend, who is also impropiator of the great tithes, which have been commuted for £675. The Rev. J. Ridsdale, M.A., is the non-resident incumbent, and has a yearly tithe rent-charge of £440, and a good vicarage house, now occupied by the curate. The Independents have a neat chapel here, with a residence for the minister. About half a mile S.W. of the church is a remarkable Danish entrenchment, the road to which is still called Bloodgate, from a tradition that a great battle was fought there between the Saxons and Danes. In 1640, Dorothy Woodhouse left 20s. a year to the minister, and 30s. to the poor, charged on 8½A. of land. In consequence of the non-payment of these rent-charges, the trustees obtained possession of the land in 1692, and it is now let for £20 per annum, which, after the above named payments have been made, is applied towards the support of the National School, as also are £12, the rent of 10A. 20P. of land, called old poor's land, given by unknown donors. Two legacies of £100, left by Isaac Lane, in 1669, and Elizabeth Pell, in 1730, were laid out in the purchase of 14A. of land in this parish, and 8A. in Terrington St. John, now yielding together a clear yearly income of £55, of which £15 are given to the National School, and the remainder is distributed amongst the poor in blankets, coals, and bread. The Town House is an old building occupied by poor widows. In 1860, 700 acres of open land were enclosed, and 23A. were allotted to the poor, and are now let for £30 per annum, which is distributed in coals. The National School was rebuilt in 1859-'60, at a cost of about £200, and is attended by 90 children.

WATERDEN parish, 5 miles S.S.E. of Burnham Market, has only 44 inhabitants, and 763 acres of land, in one farm, belonging to the Earl of Leicester, and occupied by Mr. Miles Hamond. The Church (All Saints) is a small edifice embowered in trees, and comprising nave, chancel, and north porch, with some remains of a tower. It formerly had a south aisle, and the arches which opened to it are now built up. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5. 6s. 8d., is annexed to that of Egmere, and has 23 acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £194. 10s. Here is also a good Elizabethan Rectory House of brick, built by the Earl of Leicester, in 1850, at a cost of £700, and occupied by the curate, the Rev. Charles Stephenson M.A. Post from Fakenham.

NORTH GREENHOE HUNDRED

Is of an irregular oblong figure, extending nine miles in length along the sea-coast, and averaging seven miles in breadth from north to south, being bounded on the east by Holt Hundred, on the south by Gallow, and on the west by Brothercross. It is crossed by the Wells branch of the Great Eastern Railway; and another line from Wells, through Burnham and Docking to the Hunstanton railway at Heacham, is in contemplation. The soil is generally light, but well cultivated, and the face of the country is beautifully diversified, and seen to great advantage from Great Snoring church, where the prospect to the north is highly picturesque, and is terminated by the ocean. A substratum of fine marl is found in almost every part of it, and the whole district abounds in all sorts of game. It is watered by the river which flows through a fertile vale from Snoring to the ocean, near Stiffkey. Its name is supposed to be derived from a green hill, on which the Hundred court was formerly held. The royalties of the whole Hundred, with the lordship of Wighton, were possessed by the Crown in the reigns of Edward the Confessor and William the Conqueror, but were subsequently granted in fee to various families, though a Court of the Queen's Duchy of Lancaster is still held at Wighton. Petty Sessions are held at the Shire hall, Little Walsingham, on the first and third Mondays of every month; and Thos. Garwood, Esq., of Wells, is clerk to the magistrates. The whole Hundred, except Cockthorpe and Field-Dalling, is in the Deanery of Walsingham, and comprises 18 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their land and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent.

WALSINGHAM UNION comprises all the 18 parishes in North Greenhoe Hundred, 25 parishes in Gallow Hundred, and 10 parishes in Holt Hundred. These 53 parishes extend over an area of 121 square miles, and had 21,118 inhabitants in 1861. Their average annual expenditure from 1832 to 1835 was £21,497; but since the formation of the Union it has been reduced to about half that sum. The UNION WORKHOUSE is at Great Snoring, and was finished in 1838 at a cost of £5903. It has room for 350 inmates, but had only 130 in 1861 when the census was taken. Mr. John F. Wright, of Fakenham, is union clerk and superintendent registrar; and the registrars of births, deaths, and marriages are Mr. Richd. Horsley, for Fakenham District; Mr. J. W. Watts, for Walsingham District; and Mr. Patrick Vincent, for Wells District. The two first are also the relieving officers. Mr. John and Mrs. Emily Gray are master and matron of the Workhouse, and the Rev. Robert Leeder, B.A., is chaplain. Messrs. John T. Scrimshire, M.D., of Holt; Thos. W. Damant, and Alfred Drew, of Fakenham; Peter Hudson, and Fredk. Bayes, of Little Walsingham; and Patrick Vincent, of Wells, are the surgeons.

BARNEY, or Berney, at the source of the Stiffkey rivulet, 6 miles E.N.E. of Fakenham, is a village and parish, containing 283 souls, and 1389 acres of land, of which 410 acres are tithe free, having been held by Binham Priory. It took its name from the well-known Norfolk family of Berney, who came from Normandy at the Conquest; and is in two manors, viz.:—Wighton-Lancaster, of which the Earl of Leicester is lord; and Barney-on- the-part-of-Barney, of which Lord Hastings is lord. The copyholds in the latter are on the tenure called Smockhold, from the wife having an equal claim with the husband, and should he die intestate, she has one-half of his estate. This singular tenure exists only in two other Norfolk manors, viz.:—Binham and Shipdham. Lord Hastings owns most of the soil, and is impropriator of the great tithes and patron of the living; but J. S. Scott Chad and W. S. Phillippo, Esqrs., and some smaller owners have estates here. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., is in the incumbency of the Rev. Robert Reeve Rackham, M.A., who has 38½ acres of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £108, and a neat brick residence, built in 1848, at a cost of £500. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for £168. The Church (St. Mary), is a small ancient structure, comprising nave, chancel, south transept and porch, and square tower with one bell; and was appropriated to Binham Priory in the reign of Edward III. The doorway and south windows are of the early-English period, but all the other windows are perpendicular insertions. The tower arch is open to the church, but the nave is disfigured by square pews, and the fine roof and the few old seats which remain are much mutilated. The piscina and some portions of the sedilia still exist in the chancel. The School was built in 1864 by Lord Hastings. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel here. A curious pavement and several brass coins were many years ago dug up on the hills east of the village, where traces of entrenchments may still be seen. They are now in the possession of Wm. Skinner Phillippo, Esq., who has a good collection of Roman and British coins, and is author of "Thoughts on Fox Hunting," "The Game Laws Considered," and other works. The rent of two tenements and 2A. of land, given by an unknown donor, is carried to the poor rates; and that of 4A., allotted at the enclosure in 1811, is carried to the Surveyor's rates.

BINHAM, 5 miles S.E. by E. of Wells, and 3 miles N.E. by E. of Walsingham, is a parish and large village, with 512 inhabitants and 2242 acres of land. Thomas Truesdale Clarke, Esq., of Uxbridge, is principal owner and lord of the manor, in which the copyholds are on the tenure called "Smockhold," noticed above. Binham had a charter from Henry I., for a weekly market on Wednesday, and a fair on the Vigil of St. Mary and three following days; and the latter is still continued on July 26th. This village is noted for the extensive ruins of its once splendid PRIORY, forming a highly interesting and picturesque object, in the vale of the river Stiffkey, and founded towards the end of the 11th century by Peter Lord Valoines, (a nephew of the Norman Conqueror,) and Albreda, his wife, for a prior and eight monks of the Benedictine order, as a cell to the abbey of St. Albans, but subject only to the yearly visitations of the abbot, and the yearly payment of a mark of silver. The priory was not finished till the beginning of the reign of Henry I., when Roger, the son of the founder, confirmed what his father had given, and was himself a considerable benefactor. Others of the same family contributed to support and augment the establishment, which was granted at the dissolution to Thomas Paston, Esq., fifth son of Sir William Paston, Kt. In the reign of John, Robert Fitzwalter claimed the patronage of this priory, and besieged it, in order to reinstate Thomas the prior, who had improperly been deposed by the Abbot of St. Albans; but he was frustrated in his design by the forces which the King had sent to oppose him. The ruins of the priory are still very considerable, but are gradually mouldering away. Scarcely anything of the domestic buildings remains, though the foundations may still be traced; and of the once spacious conventual Church (St. Mary) only the nave, with the chief part of the grand western front, and fragments of the aisles, transepts, central tower, and chancel remain. Excepting the west façade, the whole is in the early Norman style of architecture, and doubtless constituted part of the original structure. The nave has probably always been appropriated as the parish church, and to this circumstance may be ascribed its preservation. It consists of seven bays, with massive square piers having shafts in the nooks at the angles; the outer arch moulded, the inner plain. The triforium arches are the same as the lower ones; and the clerestory windows have each small arches on the sides with bold detached shafts; the centre arch stilted with small shafts in the angles on the caps of the large ones. Some few of the westernmost arches of the triforium and clerestory are, however, of the early-English period. The west front is an elegant specimen of early-English architecture, its lower portion having a rich arcade with perforated panels in the spandrels and under the side arches, and a grand central doorway with fine mouldings and varieties of the enriched tooth ornament. Over this arcade is a magnificent window, now mostly bricked up, but originally consisting of two principal lights and a foliated circle in the head, each light subdivided in a similar manner. There are also lateral doorways in the ends of the aisles, with tall two-light windows over them, singularly divided at about a third of their height by transoms and sub-arches, and having quatrefoils in their heads. On the gable is a small bell-cot containing one bell. The font is of the perpendicular period and much mutilated, but its upper panels appear to have contained representations of the seven Romish sacraments and the Trinity, and its lower ones, single figures of saints in niches. Some of the old seats remain, with poppies and perforated backs, but the church is mostly filled with pews. There are also a few good perpendicular stalls. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., was augmented with £800 of royal bounty, from 1767 to 1800, and £200 given by T. T. Clarke, Esq., the patron and impropiator, in the latter year. These sums were laid out in the purchase of 36 acres of land at Bodham. In 1839, the rectorial tithes were commuted for £200, and the vicarial for £100 per annum. The National School, with master's house attached, was built in 1815, and is attended by 60 children. At the east end of the village, is the lofty shaft of an ancient cross, where the market was formerly held. The Town Estate comprises two cottages, the Chequers public house, and 16A. 3R. 26P. of land, mostly received at the enclosure, in exchange for land given by two maiden ladies. The rents amounting to £41. 5s. a year are applied in apprenticing poor children and in a distribution of 7 chaldrons of coal. The rent of 7A. 2R. 30P. of land, in Hindringham, left by Natl. Hooke, in 1693, and now let for £10. 10s., is distributed in cloth, for coats and waistcoats, among poor married labourers. Twenty poor widows have £7 yearly, as the rent of 3A. 2R. 23P. of land, left by Christopher Ringer, in 1678.

COCKTHORPE, a small parish and hamlet, 6 miles W.N.W. of Holt, has only 42 inhabitants, a few cottages, and two farms containing 511 acres, occupied by Messrs. Wightman Sooby and Henry Ramm, and belonging to Lord Calthorpe, the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, valued in K.B. at £5, and consolidated with Blakeney rectory, Little Langham vicarage, and Glanford curacy, in the incumbency of the Rev. Rich. Hy. Tillard, of Blakeney, who has here 26A. of glebe. The joint livings are now valued at £506 per annum. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, south aisle and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and square tower with one bell. The windows are in the perpendicular style, but the walls are of older date, and the church was once larger, as appears from some ruins at the east end. Several of the old open seats remain, but the nave is mostly filled with square pews. The aisle contains an altar tomb, a piscina, and a tablet to Sir John Calthorpe and his lady, the latter of whom lived to see 193 of her descendants. Cockthorpe is supposed to have given birth to those three valiant admirals of the 17th century—Sir Cloudesley Shovel, Sir John Narborough, and Sir Christopher Minns; but some authors say the first was a native of Cley, and the last, the son of an honest shoemaker of London, though both spent the early part of their lives at Cockthorpe. The old parish whipping post still exists. Post from Wells.

EGMERE parish, 3 miles W. of Walsingham, has only 56 inhabitants, and 1150 acres of land, nearly all occupied by Mr. Robert Overman, and belonging to the Earl of Leicester, the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £8, and is now worth £218 a year, with that of Waterden annexed, in the incumbency of the Rev. A. Napier, vicar of Holkham. Egmere Church (St. Edmund) has been long in ruins, and was first desecrated by Sir Nicholas Bacon, who turned it into a barn. The tower only remains, and is in a tolerably perfect state. Post from Brandon.

FIELD DALLING, a village and parish, 5 miles W. of Holt, has 342 inhabitants, and 1535 acres of land, belonging to the Rev. J. H. Sparke, John Sayers, (lord of the manor), Thomas Manning, and Francis Rix, Esqrs., and several smaller owners. The Church (St. Andrew) comprises nave, north aisle with clerestory, south porch, chancel, and square tower with five bells. All the windows of the chancel are filled with beautiful stained glass; and the piscina and rood staircase still remain. There was formerly a chapel on the north side of the chancel, and the arch which opened to it may be seen in the wall. The interior of the building was restored and fitted with new open seats at a cost of £120 in 1861, when a mural painting of St. Christopher was discovered. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £5. 8s. 1d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Hy. Spencer, M.A., for whom a good residence is about to be built. Here are 26 acres of glebe, and in 1839 the tithes were commuted for £159 to the vicar and £354 to the impropriator, Wm. Rippingall, Esq. Here was an alien Priory, or cell, the site of which is a small manor, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich. The Fuel Allotment, awarded at the enclosure in 1808, is 23A. let for £22. The poor have also 2A. 2R. 26P. of land, left by Christopher Ringer in 1678, and now let for £3. 15s. Post from Thetford.

HINDRINGHAM, a parish and large scattered village, 3 miles E. of Walsingham, has 731 inhabitants, and 3313 acres of land, belonging to a number of proprietors; among whom are—J. S. Scott Chad, Wm. G. Waters, and R. England, Esqrs., and the Dean and Chapter of Norwich. The latter are lords of the manor, appropriators of the great tithes, patrons of the living, and owners of Hindringham Hall, an ancient moated mansion, now occupied by labourers, and held on lease, with the rectorial tithes, by Mr. E. P. Middleton. The Church (St. Martin) comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and lofty square tower with five bells. There is also a small chapel on the north side of the chancel, containing a piscina, and now used as a vestry. The windows are mostly of the perpendicular period; but the east window is a decorated one of five lights, and has recently been filled with rich stained glass. At the east end of the south aisle are a piscina and hagiocope. The font is octagonal and bears the evangelistic symbols and the royal arms. Some of the old open seats remain, but here are many ugly square pews. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £9 was augmented in 1762 with £200 of Q.A.B., and £200 given by the Dean and Chapter. These sums were expended in the purchase of 18A. of land at Walpole St. Peter, besides which the vicar has 2A. of glebe, and the tithes of 40 acres. The Rev. John Maurice Dorset Owen, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a spacious residence built in 1845. The tithes were commuted in 1844, the vicarial for £322, and the rectorial for £800. 5s. In 1678, Christopher Ringer left 3A. 29P. of land, now let for £7. 10s. which is distributed in duffel. For distributions of bread among the poor, Gregory Smith gave 20A. 2R. 26P. of land at Great Snoring, which were exchanged in 1860 for a house and £20A. of land, now let for £55 a year. The Fuel Allotment, 24A. 2R. 15P. awarded at the enclosure in 1815, is let for about £30, which is distributed in coals. The poor parishioners have also the following yearly rent charges, viz., 13s. 4d. left by Thomas May, and 12s. by Samuel May, in 1681. The Bell Rope Land, 4A. 6P., is let for £12, which is carried to the churchwardens' account. The National School was built in 1845, and is attended by about 50 children. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel in the parish.

HOLKHAM, a parish with a pleasant village of neat cottages, &c., on a gentle acclivity above the salt marshes, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. of Burnham Market, 2 miles W. of Wells Railway Station, and 32 miles N.W. of Norwich, has 603 inhabitants, and about 5208 acres of land, of which nearly 1000 acres are woods and plantations, enclosed with 1600 acres of lawn, meadows, &c., in the beautiful park of HOLKHAM HOUSE, the splendid seat of the Rt. Hon. Thos. Wm. Coke, EARL of LEICESTER, and Viscount Coke, whose late venerable father—Thos. Wm. Coke, Esq., was long known as one of the wealthiest commoners and greatest agriculturists in England; but was raised to the peerage in 1837, and died in 1842, in his 89th year. For a period of 57 years, he was one of the representatives of Norfolk in Parliament; and until his elevation to the peerage, he was known under the popular appellation of “Coke of Norfolk.” When he succeeded to the Holkham estate, about the year 1778, the rental was then only about £2200; but it has since been enormously enhanced by cultivation and increased by purchase. Holkham is said to have been one of the country seats of Anna, King of the East Angles. It was evidently a port of some consequence in the 4th of Edward II., who charged it and Burnham Deepdale with the expense of finding one ship to assist in transporting his army from Dublin to Scotland. Henry III. granted it a weekly market on Monday, and a fair on the decolation of St. John the Baptist, but both have long been obsolete, and no traffic is now carried on at the Staith. The manor of Holkham-with-Burgh-hall was held by the Boleyns till 1504, when it passed to Lady Ann Gresham, who had two flocks of sheep, viz., the Holkham-burgh flock, containing 457, and the South-house flock, containing 460. A capital messuage at Holkham Staith, with lands in Holkham, and the East Marsh Fouldcourse, were for many generations held by the ancestors of Robert Newgate, who had a grant from Charles I. of the salt marshes in Holkham, with power to enclose the same, for £150 paid to the King; and to hold them of the manor of East Greenwich, by fealty only, in fee and common socage. In 1659, Edmund Newgate, for £3400, sold all his property to John Coke, Esq., fourth son of the famous Lord Chief Justice, Sir Edward Coke (see p. 964), who had previously purchased the manor and all the other land in the parish, of Lord Berkeley, Sir William Withipol, and the Earl of Desmond. He enclosed from the sea, 350A. of salt marshes; and 400A. more called the New Marshes, were embanked from the ocean in 1722 by his successor, Thomas Coke, who, in 1728, was created Baron Lovel, of Minster-Lovel, Oxfordshire; and in 1744, Viscount Coke, of Holkham, and Earl of Leicester; but dying without issue in 1759, his titles became extinct. This Earl converted the barren heath of Holkham into an earthly paradise, as is recorded by an inscription over the door of the entrance hall of HOLKHAM HOUSE, which states that—“This Seat, on an open barren estate, was planned, planted, built, decorated, and inhabited in the middle of the 18th century, by Thomas Coke, Earl of Leicester.” He commenced the erection of the mansion in 1734, and it was finished by his widow in 1760. The central part of the spacious and elegant mansion, built of white brick, is accompanied by four wings, or pavilions, which are connected with it by rectilinear corridors, or galleries; each of the two fronts, therefore, displays a centre and two wings. The south front (344 feet in length), presents an air of lightness and elegance, arising from the justness of its proportions. In the centre is a bold portico, with its entablature supported by 8 Corinthian columns. The north front, which is also 344 feet in length, is the grand or principal entrance, and exhibits different though handsome features. The central part measures 114 feet by 62, and contains the principal apartments. Each wing has its respective destination. One contains the kitchens, servants’ hall, and some sleeping rooms. In the chapel wing is the dairy and more sleeping rooms. Another contains a suite of family apartments; and the fourth, called the strangers’ wing, is appropriated to visitors. This grand residence is rendered superior to most other great houses in the kingdom, by its convenient and appropriate arrangement, said to have been borrowed from Palladio's plan of a villa designed for the Cavalier Leonardo Mocenigo, upon the Brenta, with some trifling deviations. The entrance hall, which measures 46 feet by 70, and 43 feet in height, is decorated with statuary, casts from the antique, alto and bas-reliefs, &c.; and has a gallery round it supported by twenty-four fluted Ionic columns. Next is the saloon, on each side of which is a drawing-room; and connected with this is the state dressing-room and bedchamber. Another drawing-room communicates with the statue gallery, which connects a number of apartments in a most admirable manner; for one octagon opens into the private wing; and the other into the strangers' wing on one side, and into the dining-room on the other. From the recess in the dining-room a door opens on the staircase, which immediately leads to the offices; and in the centre of the wings by the saloon door, are invisible staircases, which lead to all the rooms and respective offices. Thus there are four general suites of apartments, all perfectly distinct from each other, with no reciprocal thoroughfares. These severally open into what may be called common rooms—the hall, statue gallery, and saloon, all which communicate with the dining-room. There may be houses larger and more magnificent, and in some more uniformity and justness of proportion may be visible; but human genius could not contrive anything in which convenience could be more apparent than it is in this. The fitting up of the interior is in the most splendid style, and in numerous instances with the most elegant taste. The ceilings of many of the rooms are of curious gilt, fret, and mosaic work; and the Venetian windows are ornamented with handsome pillars, and profusely gilded. The marble chimney pieces are all handsome; but three are peculiarly deserving attention for their exquisite sculpture. Two are in the dining-room: one ornamented with a sow and pigs, and a wolf; the other has a bear and beehive, finely sculptured in white marble. A third, in the state room, representing two pelicans, is exceedingly chaste and beautiful. The marble side-boards, agate tables, rich tapestry, silk furniture, beds, &c., are all in the same sumptuous style of elegance. The Statue Gallery consists of a central part and two octagonal ends or tribunes. The first is 70 feet long by 21 feet wide, and each octagon, of 21 feet in diameter, opens to the centre by a handsome arch. One end is furnished with books, and the other with statues, &c. Among the latter, the figure of Diana is extremely fine. A Venus, clothed with wet drapery, is considered exquisite. The Library is rich in printed books, and contains an extensive and curious collection of manuscripts, which were renovated under the judicious superintendence of the celebrated Wm. Roscoe, Esq., in 1814. The Saloon is 40 feet long, 28 feet wide, and 32 in height. This room, appropriated for paintings, contains many by the most eminent masters, and there is a vast number of others, equally valuable, distributed through the other apartments; but a description of them would furnish matter for a volume. Few, if any, collections in the kingdom contain so many paintings by that inimitable artist—Claude Lorraine; and here are masterpieces of art from the pencils of Titian, Poussin, Salvator Rosa, Holbein, Kneller, Lely, and others. In a brief statement, it is impossible to give a just and adequate delineation of this princely seat of taste and hospitality, and the beautiful and extensive pleasure grounds, park, and plantations, which surround it. Within the park is an enchanting ride of seven miles in the midst of a belt of fir and other trees, evergreens, and shrubs, whose foliage exhibits a pleasing variety of tints; whilst the interior of the park presents clumps of flourishing trees, gentle hills, corn-waving vales, an extensive lake, 1056 yards long, with three small islands, and a finely-wooded shore; the parish church, and other picturesque objects. The principal entrance is by the southern lodge, through a triumphal arch of the Doric order, from which a fine broad vista leads to an obelisk, on a woody eminence, at the distance of a mile and a half. Passing through the obelisk wood, the road branches off to the left, leaving a fine expanse of lawn on the south front of the house, which is here seen to the greatest advantage, with the splendid column erected to the late Earl of Leicester in the back ground; and through several charming vistas may be seen the east and west lodges, (both of simple elegance), the town of Wells, and Holkham Staith. The gardens, conservatory, hot-houses, &c., are extensive, and the pleasure grounds on the east side of the house are tastefully laid out; and a fine gravel walk, winding through clumps of trees and shrubs of various kinds, interspersed with flowers of every hue, forms a charming promenade. The terraces which now surround the house and add so much to its beauty, were commenced in 1849 by the present Earl, and completed in 1857. They are laid out in parterres, connected by stone steps and angular grass slopes, and decorated with vases and other ornaments; and in front of the south portico is an oval basin, in the centre of which is an elegant fountain representing St. George and the Dragon.

The FAMILY OF COKE is very ancient, as we find that one of them, William Coke, of Doddington, held several manors in this county in 1206. The late Rt. Hon. Thos. Wm. Coke, who was created Earl of Leicester and Viscount Coke in 1837, was born in 1754; and was the son of Wenman Roberts, Esq., who assumed the name of Coke on succeeding to the estates of his maternal uncle, Thomas Coke, Earl of Leicester, who founded Holkham House, as already noticed. He married the daughter of Lord Sherborne, by whom he had three daughters; and in 1822 he espoused Lady Anne Amelia Keppel, third daughter of the fourth Earl of Albemarle, by whom he left four sons and one daughter. He died at Longford Hall, Derbyshire, June 30th, 1842, and in the church there an elegant monument has been erected to his memory. A lofty fluted column, surmounted by a colossal wheat sheaf, and rising to a height of 120 feet, has also been erected in the park, as a memorial of his worth. This costly monument was commenced in 1845 and finished in 1848. At the four corners of the pedestal of the column are figures of a Devon Ox, a Southdown Sheep, a Plough, and a Drill, with mottoes under each. On three sides of the pedestal are bas-reliefs, representing the late Earl granting a Lease to a Tenant, the Holkham Sheep Shearing, and Irrigation. The fourth side is occupied by an INSCRIPTION from the pen of W. B. Donne, Esq., as follows:—

This column in memory of
THOMAS WILLIAM COKE, EARL OF LEICESTER,

For more than half a century the faithful Representative of this County in the House of Commons, erected by subscription

Originating with the Yeomanry and supported by the Noblemen and Gentlemen of all parties,

Records a Life devoted to the welfare of his Friends, Neighbours and Tenants.

Of such a man

Contemporaries needed no memorial; his Deeds were before them; his Praises in their hearts;

But it imports Posterity to know that he pre-eminently combined Public Services with Private Worth; affording an illustrious example of birth and station actuated by Duty and inspired by Benevolence.

Integrity and Independence marked his political career;
Love, Honour, and Regret attend the Father, Friend, and Landlord;

the Arts lament in him a liberal and fostering Patron; and Agriculture, to which from early manhood to the close of life he dedicated Time, Energy, Science, and Wealth, crowning his Cenotaph with her emblems, cherishes the precedent and commends the practice of her great Promoter and Benefactor.

To the spirited exertions and liberality of this great man, Norfolk is chiefly indebted for many of its agricultural improvements, as has been seen at page 60. In 1788, he celebrated the centenary of the glorious Revolution by a grand fête, ball, supper, display of fireworks, &c. He afterwards entertained many royal and distinguished personages; and, in September, 1835, the late Duchess of Kent and the Princess Victoria (now Queen) visited him, on their return from their northern tour. His Countess died July 22nd, 1844, and bequeathed her estate of Longford Hall, Derbyshire, to her second son, the Hon. Edward Wentworth Keppel Coke, who now resides there. The present Earl was born Dec. 26th, 1822, and married Juliana, daughter of Samuel Whitbread, Esq.; and his son and heir, Thomas William, Viscount Coke, was born in 1848. His other brothers are—the Hon. Henry John Coke, author of “Vienna in 1848”; and the Hon. Wenman Clarence Walpole Coke, M.P. for East Norfolk and Lieut.-Colonel of the Scots Fusilier Guards.

Holkham Church (St. Withburga) stands west of the village, and about half a mile north of the hall, upon an artificial hill, supposed to have been thrown up by the Saxons; and near it is a large tumulus, in which human bones and a piece of iron armour have been found. The church is a noted sea-mark, standing high above the salt-marshes, and comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, and square tower near at the south-west angle, containing one bell. The nave is in the decorated style, but most of the windows are filled up. The chancel is of the perpendicular period, and has north and south chapels, in the latter of which is a large monument with kneeling figures of Wm. Wheatley and his wife, and John Coke and his wife. The whole building is much in need of restoration, the roof being hidden by a low ceiling, and the interior in a state of dilapidation. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8. 13s. 4d., was augmented in 1792 and 1816 with £400 of Q.A.B., vested in land at Wells, since exchanged for 18 acres in this parish. It is in the patronage of the Earl of Leicester, and incumbency of the Rev. Alexander Napier, M.A., who is also rector of Egmore with Waterden, and has here an annual tithe rent-charge of £200, and a good Elizabethan residence, built in 1849 at a cost of £1400. SCHOOLS for boys and girls were erected in 1821 by the late Earl. They are now attended by 60 children, and are supported by the present Earl, who has also established an Infants' School. In 1757, the Countess Dowager of Leicester built and endowed, and in 1763 further endowed, Alms-houses in the village, for the reception of three men and three women, to have 6s. a week each, a chaldron of coals each yearly, and clothing once in two years; the inmates to be elected by the possessor of Holkham House, out of some parish in which the estates thereto belonging lie. The building, furnishing, and endowing of the six dwellings cost her ladyship about £2300; and the endowment consists of a yearly rent of £50, out of a farm at Holkham Staith, and a farm of 97A. at Weasenham, now let for £140 per annum. New Holkham, a small village of cottages, is about two miles south of the hall; and near it is Longlands, where are the residences of the agent, clerk of the works, farm bailiff, &c.; and Brant Hill, an extensive farm. The Victoria Hotel is on the north-east side of the park. Post from Wells.

HOUGHTON-IN-THE-DALE, or Houghton St. Giles, is a parish and small village, one mile S.S.W. of Walsingham, and four miles N.N.E. of Fakenham, containing 191 inhabitants, and 978 acres of land, belonging to Henry James Lee Warner, Esq., who is lord of the manor, impropiator of the great tithes, and patron of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £8, and is now worth about £150 a year, having been augmented in 1755 and 1787 with £400 of Q.A.B., invested in land at Fulmodeston. The Rev. Septimus Henry Lee Warner, of Little Walsingham, is the incumbent, and has here 4A. 3R. 12P. of old glebe, and a good Elizabethan residence, built in 1862 at a cost of £900, and now occupied by the curate. The Church, (St. Giles) is a very plain edifice, comprising nave, south porch, chancel, and low square tower with three bells. The windows are all perpendicular insertions in walls of earlier date. The remains of the sedilia and piscina are plastered up, and the interior of the church is much disfigured by white-wash. Some of the old open seats still exist, and on the lower panels of the ancient screen are figures of six male and six female saints, richly painted and gilt. The School was built in 1859, and is attended by 30 children. On the west side of the dale is a beautiful little chapel, now used as a barn, but still in tolerable preservation. It was probably built about 1380, and is an elegant specimen of the transition from the decorated to the perpendicular style. The rent of 3A. of land, allotted at the enclosure, is applied in repairing the highways, except the distribution of 2 loads of coal amongst the poor. The chief residents are—The Rev. William Claro Collins, curate Vicarage; Miles Brown, Robt. Butler (and land agent), and Nicholas Frowhawk, farmers; Matthew Clarke, blacksmith; Susannah Frost, schoolmistress; John Gent, carpenter; Thos. Large, parish clerk; Chas. Twiddy, shoemaker and victualler, Buck; and Robert Howard, woodman. Post from Fakenham.

QUARLES, a small parish, 3 miles S.S.W. of Wells, has only 30 inhabitants, and 600 acres of land, held of Christ's College, Cambridge, by the Earl of Leicester, on a 21 years' lease, renewable every seven. Part of the plantations and the triumphal arch at the entrance to Holkham Park are in this manor, which had anciently a church, which was in ruins in 1571, and no traces of it now remain. It was subject to Creake Abbey, and was given by the Countess of Richmond, mother of Henry VII., to the above-named college. The farm is occupied by Thomas Goldsmith Hudson.

SNORING (GREAT) a parish and considerable village, 2 miles S. of Walsingham, and 3½ miles N.E. by N. of Fakenham, had 594 inhabitants in 1861, including 130 in Walsingham Union Workhouse, which is noticed at page 1016. It contains 1645 acres of land, chiefly belonging to H. J. Lee Warner and John Dugmore, Esqrs., the latter of whom is lord of the manor, in which the copyholds are subject to arbitrary fines. The ancient lords were the Burgolyons, Sheltons, and Richardsons. The Church (Virgin Mary) is a large edifice, comprising nave, south aisle and clerestory, porch, chancel, and square western tower with one bell. The east window is in the decorated style; but all the others are perpendicular insertions, and the chancel-arch, tower, and porch, are of the same period. The arches of the nave and the south doorway are early-English; and the sedilia and piscina, which are much mutilated, are decorated. The roof is a modern one of low pitch, and the fine tower arch is blocked up and hides the west window. At the east end of the aisle are several niches for saints, a piscina, and a squint. The chancel formerly contained enamelled brasses of Sir Ralph Shelton and his lady, but that of the knight has disappeared. Here are also marble tablets of the Leeke, Stannard, Fawcett, and Fenn families, and a monument with kneeling figures of the Rev. R. West and his wife. The font is Norman. The Sheltons built the rectory-house, which is a fine specimen of ornamental brickwork of the time of Henry VIII., and contains a curious carved oak bedstead, said to have come from Fotheringhay Castle, and to be the one on which Mary Queen of Scots passed the last night of her life. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £24, is consolidated with Thursford, in the patronage of St. John's College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. George Hy. Marsh, B.D., who resides abroad, and is lord of a small manor here called Snorings, in which the fines are certain. The tithes were commuted in 1840 for £839 per annum, and the glebe is 36 acres. The Church Land, 2A. 8P., is let for £3, and the site of the old poor's house and yard is let for £1. The National School, built in 1859, at a cost of £230, is attended by about 100 children, and chiefly supported by the rector. In 1688, John Pearson, bishop of Chester, left for the poor £20, which were laid out with £20 left by the Rev. Robert West, in 1676, in the purchase of land now consisting of 6A. 3R. 36P., let for £14. The poor have also the dividends of £209. 18s. three per cents., purchased with £200 left by John Alvis in 1823.

STIFFKEY, 3 miles E. of Wells, is a fine rural village, seated in a deep, romantic, and well-wooded dale, on the banks of a small river, which discharges itself into the ocean, about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile to the north-east, and formerly had a quay and harbour. The parish contains 513 inhabitants, and 2237 acres, of which about 600 are salt marsh on the north side of the village, extending to the beach. The Marquis Townshend owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which is valued in K.B. at £25, and now consolidated with Morston, in the incumbency of the Rev. Randle Robert Brereton, M.A., who has a good residence and 66 acres of glebe. The tithes of Stiffkey have been commuted for £423, and those of Morston for £280 per annum. Here were formerly two Churches (both rectorial) in one enclosure, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and St. Mary; but the former is gone, and the other is a venerable pile, comprising nave, chancel, north porch, and square tower with one bell. The nave is filled with square pews, and the roof hidden by a low ceiling. The windows are perpendicular insertions. The chancel, which contains a piscina, is in the decorated style, and was restored by the rector in 1848, when its old roof was replaced by a handsome open one of high pitch. Warborough House, a neat mansion of white brick, built about 30 years ago, is now occupied by Geo. Hy. Wilson, Esq. The Hall, now occupied by a farmer, and partly in ruins, was built by Sir Nicholas Bacon, lord keeper of the privy seal to Queen Elizabeth, and was a large mansion with circular towers at the angles. To the west of the village, near the Wells road, is a promontory, called Warborough Hill, on which are visible remains of circular entrenchments; and one mile to the east of it, is a green knoll, called Camping Hill, supposed to have been also entrenched. These hills overlook a tract of salt marshes, 20 miles long, and about one broad, bounded on the north by the ocean, which has thrown up against them a range of sand hills, called meales, inhabited only by rabbits. The common was enclosed in 1793. A National School was built here, in 1845, at a cost of £200. It is attended by about 60 children, and supported by the rector.

THURSFORD is a parish and scattered village, 5 miles N.E. by E. of Fakenham, comprising 322 inhabitants, and 1350 acres, of which Joseph Stonehewer Scott Chad, Esq., is chief owner and lord of the manor. His seat, Thursford Hall, is a fine Elizabethan mansion of red brick with stone dressings, presenting a long embattled front, broken by three projecting bay windows to the height of two stories, and the intervening space occupied by mullioned windows. It is surrounded by tasteful pleasure grounds; and has been enlarged by the addition of a wing on the west side, and much improved and beautified by the present possessor. It was formerly the seat of the Guybons, who sold it, in 1753, to George Chad, Esq., recorder of Lynn, who was created a baronet in 1791. The Church (St. Andrew) comprises nave, south aisle, north porch, chancel with north chapel, and square tower with two bells. In 1863, the nave was restored, the aisle re-built, and new open seats and an organ provided, at the cost of J. S. Scott Chad, Esq., who is also about to re-build the chancel and to fill the east window with beautiful stained glass. The octagonal font is ornamented with the evangelistic symbols, and was the gift of Mrs. Chad. In the church are several tablets of the Guybon and Chad families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8, is consolidated with that of Great Snoring (see p. 1026); and the Rectory house, which was built here in 1853, is occupied by the curate. A Mr. Curzon left two annuities, viz:—20s. for the poor, and 10s. for a sermon. The poor have a yearly rent of 20s., left by Robt. Ward, in 1794. They cut fuel on an Allotment of 20 acres, awarded at the enclosure. The School was established in 1862 by the lord of the manor, who still supports it; and it is attended by above 50 children. WALSINGHAM (GREAT), or Old Walsingham, is a large parish and village, in the vale of the Stiffkey rivulet, one mile N. of the town of New Walsingham, containing 512 inhabitants, and 2380 acres of land, belonging to Henry James Lee Warner, Esq., the Rev. Canon Brooke, and a number of smaller proprietors. The first-named is lord of the manor, in which the fines are arbitrary; he is also patron of the living, which is a donative annexed to Little Walsingham. The Church (St. Peter) is a fine edifice, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, and square tower with three bells. The chancel has long been in ruins. The roof, porch, and font are perpendicular, but the rest of the church is of the decorated period. The aisles have good windows with flowing tracery, and the clerestory windows are quatrefoils. There is a piscina at the east end of each aisle; and many of the old open seats with good poppies and perforated backs still remain. Here was formerly another church, dedicated to All Saints, and standing a little north of St. Peter's, but no vestiges of it now remain. Berry Hall, an ancient mansion in the vale below the church, belongs to the Rev. Canon Brooke, but is occupied by J. J. Wynniatt, Esq. In a field near the village were dug up, in 1658, from 40 to 50 Roman urns, some containing burnt bones and fragments of various ornaments. Near them were found coals and incinerated substances, which led to the conjecture that the bodies had been burnt there. The School is attended by 50 children, and supported by subscription. In 1674, Robert Ward charged his estate, now belonging to J. S. S. Chad, Esq., with the yearly payment of 20s. to each of the parishes of Great Walsingham and Thursford, for the poor. The poor of this parish have also a yearly rent-charge of 20s., left by Henry Graye, in 1601; and a Fuel Allotment of 12A. 1R. 7P., awarded at the enclosure in 1810, and now let for £20 a year. WALSINGHAM (LITTLE), or New Walsingham, is, notwithstanding its appellation, more populous and equally as ancient as its neighbour, Old Walsingham; being a small town with 1069 inhabitants, pleasantly seated in the picturesque valley of the Stiffkey river, 5 miles S. by E. of Wells, 5½ miles N. by E. of Fakenham, 27 miles N.W. of Norwich, and 113 miles N.E. by N. of London. It has a station on the Wells branch of the Great Eastern Railway, and formerly had a market every Tuesday and Friday. It still has a cattle fair on the second Monday after Whit-Monday. Its parish contains only 868A. of land, of which 46A. are woodland. Henry Jas. Lee Warner, Esq., owns the greater part of the soil, and is lord of the manor, which, with Old Walsingham, was held by the Earls of Clare. About 1061, the widow of Richoldie de Favraches founded here a chapel in honour of the Virgin Mary, similar to the Sancta Casa at Nazareth. Her son, Geoffrey de Favraches, confirmed the endowment, and added to the foundation a PRIORY for Augustine canons, for whom he built a noble conventual church. This priory was afterwards enriched with many valuable benefactions, so that it ultimately became one of the richest in the world; and at the dissolution its revenues were valued at £446. 14s. 4d., and granted to Thomas Sydney, from whose family they passed by sale to the Lee-Warners, about 1650. A great part of its wealth was derived from the fame of its image of "Our Lady of Walsingham," to which foreigners of all nations and many Kings and Queens of England came on pilgrimage, guided, it was said, by the "milky way;" so that the number and quality of her devotees were equal to those of Our Lady of Loretto, in Italy. Spelman observes that it was said Henry VIII., in the second year of his reign, walked bare-foot from the village of Barsham to pay his devotions to this celebrated image, which he decorated with a gold necklace ; but he treated it with less respect at the dissolution, when his officers seized it, by his orders, and burnt it at Chelsea, taking care, no doubt, to preserve all its jewels and valuable trappings. The ruins of this once splendid and extensive priory are now very few, but exhibit every style of English architecture, and consist chiefly of a portal or west entrance gateway of perpendicular architecture, on the exterior of which is a grotesque head of a porter looking out of a small quatrefoil window ; part of the fine perpendicular east front, comprising two lofty stair-turrets covered with niches and canopies of beautiful tracery, and fine buttresses, connected by the arch and gable over the east window ; part of the refectory, containing a noble west window and a range of four early-decorated windows, with the staircase to the reading-pulpit in the wall ; a small transitional Norman doorway enriched with the tooth moulding, and once forming a portion of the original church ; some few remains of the cloisters ; a stone bath ; and two uncovered wells, called the Wishing Wells, from the devotees of the “Lady of Walsingham” being taught to believe that whoever had permission to drink of the waters could obtain, under certain restrictions, whatever they might wish for. These interesting ruins are now mostly included in the plantations and pleasure grounds of Walsingham Abbey, the handsome mansion of Henry Jas. Lee Warner, Esq., fronting the rivulet, which is here expanded into a lake, crossed by a modern bridge. In addition to this celebrated place of monastic splendour and human superstition, there was here a house of Grey Friars, founded by Lady Elizabeth de Burgh, Countess of Clare ; but its fame was eclipsed by the superior grandeur of the priory, and poverty kept it still further in the shade of obscurity. Many extensive fragments of its ruined walls still remain, consisting chiefly of portions of the domestic buildings, with buttresses and square-headed windows of late and poor perpendicular work, and the gable of the refectory. Here was likewise a Lepers’ Hospital, founded before the year 1400, but its site is now occupied by the police station. The inhabitants of Walsingham considered that the dissolution of their priory, and the loss of the pilgrimages to the Virgin, would, in a great measure, ruin the town ; they therefore assembled in a riotous mob to oppose the King’s officers, in 1537, but were soon dispersed. Henry Lee Warner, Esq., a late proprietor of the Abbey, was a fine specimen of the old school of English gentlemen, though remarkable for eccentricity : his custom being to sleep during a great part of the day, rise in the evening, breakfast at midnight, and dine at four or five in the morning. His dress was a gold-laced coat and waistcoat with slashed sleeves and richly embroidered buttons, a deep chitterlin of rich yellow lace, and curved-toed shoes with oblong buckles. With all his peculiarities he was charitable to a fault, allowing himself to be imposed upon, and permitting depredations to an almost incredible extent ; so much so, as to call out on one occasion to a trespasser who was mounted in a tree, “to be careful how he got down, for fear of hurting himself.” By such depredations he is said to have lost about £20,000. He died in 1804, and was buried with much pomp in the parish Church (St. Mary), which is a noble structure of the perpendicular period, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, south and west porches, transepts, chancel, and low west tower. The latter is surmounted by a slender shingle spire, and contains five bells. The south porch, which is now disused, has a fan tracery vault with a parvise above. The west doorway and small porch over it are very rich, and the outer arch is foliated. There has been a vestry on the north side of the chancel, but it has long been destroyed. The south transept contains a piscina, a carved screen, and the entrance to the rood-staircase ; and in the north transept is a fine marble monument, with full-length effigies in alabaster of Sir Henry Sydney and Lady Jane, his wife, dated 1612. Here are also several tablets of the Lee-Wainers, and some curious tombstones, brought from the abbey. The east window of the chancel is a fine example of the cruciform arrangement of tracery. The font is said to be the finest in England, and a restored model of it may be seen in the mediæval court of the Crystal Palace. It is of the perpendicular period, octagonal, and bearing on its upper panels richly sculptured representations of the seven Sacraments and the Crucifixion; and round the shaft the four Evangelists with their symbols, and other saints. It stands upon three steps, the upper one of which is in the form of a Maltese cross. The sedilia are formed in the sill of a window, and the space between the jambs is panelled in three compartments with a battlemented cornice. Some of the ancient open seats and stalls with misereres still remain. The whole building has been recently restored at a cost of more than £1700, and now has a very handsome appearance. The perpetual curacy, with the donative of Old Walsingham annexed, valued at £168 a year, is in the patronage of H. J. Lee Warner, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Septimus Henry Lee Warner, M.A., who has 9A. of glebe, and a handsome residence, built in 1839. In the parish are chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists, built respectively in 1798, 1840, and 1849. The SHIRE HALL is a plain old building, in which Petty Sessions are held on the first and third Mondays in each month. The COUNTY COURT is also held here once a month, for a District comprising the parishes of Alethorpe, Bale, Barney, East, West, and North Barsham; Binham, Briningham, Barwick, Bircham Great, Bircham Newton, Bircham Tofts, Bagthorpe, Barmer, Brancaster, Bromsthorpe, the Six Burnhams, Cockthorpe, North and South Creake, Dunton, Docking, Egmore, Fakenham, Field Dalling, Fulmodeston-with-Croxton, Fring, Gunthorpe, Helhoughton, Hempton, Hindringham, Holkham, Houghton-in-Dale, Houghton, Kettlestone, Pensthorpe, Pudding Norton, East, West, and South Rainham; Great and Little Ryburgh, East and West Rudham, Sculthorpe, Sharrington, Shereford, Great and Little Snoring, Stibbard, Stiffkey, Swanton Novers, Stanhoe, Syderstone, Tatterford, Tattersett, Testerton, Thursford, Toftrees, Thornham, Titchwell, Great and Little Walsingham, Warham, Waterden, Wells-next-the-Sea, and Wighton. Thos. Jacob Birch, Esq., of Wretham Hall, is judge; Geo. Watson, Esq., of Fakenham, registrar; Mr. Richard Cowburn, of Little Walsingham, clerk of the court; Mr. Thomas Kerslake, of East Dereham, high bailiff; and John Gamble, assistant bailiff. The COUNTY POLICE STATION occupies part of the old Bridewell, or County Prison, and contains a residence for the superintendent, and several cells for the temporary confinement of prisoners.

The FREE GRAMMAR SCHOOL, at Little Walsingham, was founded in 1639 by Richard Bond, who endowed it with £1040, which were laid out in the purchase of a farm of 85A. 2R. 20P., at Great Snoring, now let for £189 a year. This farm was vested in 1650, in trust, for the support of a master and usher, to teach freely 30 children of the "meaner parishioners." A NATIONAL SCHOOL was erected in 1842 by the Rev. J. Lee-Warner, and is attended by 70 boys and 50 girls. The above-named Richard Bond left for the poor parishioners £400, which were laid out in the purchase of 43A., now let for £90 a year, which is distributed in clothing and fuel, together with the rent of the Fuel Allotment, 13A. 2R. 9P., awarded at the enclosure, and now let for £26 a year; and most of the rent of 18A. 1R., called the Houghton and Sick-house Lands, now let for £77 a year. The Houghton land was purchased with £100, left by Philip Brown, in 1639, and is charged with the yearly payment of £2 for a sermon, and £2. 10s. for repairing the Alms-houses, which consist of eight tenements with gardens, given by the late Daniel Lee Warner, Esq., in exchange for some dilapidated houses, which stood near his mansion. The donor of the Sick-house land is unknown. Several buildings and 10A. 31P. of land, derived from the bequest of William Cleave, in 1665, are let for about £43. 10s. a year, which is distributed in cloth and coals among the poor parishioners, who have also 50s. a year in bread, left by Blanche Schuldham, in 1738, and paid by J. S. Scott Chad, Esq. Four poor widows have the dividends of £100 New 3½ per cent. Stock, left by James Straycock, in 1827. Lady Mary Townshend, in 1662, left £100 for apprenticing poor fatherless or motherless children of this parish, and it was laid out in the purchase of 6 acres of land, now let for £25 a year. In 1861, a new scheme was obtained from the Court of Chancery, vesting the management of the above charities in twelve trustees, who are empowered to distribute the funds in accordance with the donors' intentions, and to erect, as soon as circumstances will permit, a new Grammar School and master's house. The school is open to all boys of the parish who are able to read and are more than seven years of age, on payment of small sums not exceeding 4s. a quarter. They may remain until the age of 16, and are instructed in Greek and Latin, Algebra, and the usual branches of a sound English education.

WARHAM ALL SAINTS and ST. MARY MAGDALEN are two adjoining parishes, 4 miles N. of Walsingham, and 2½ miles E.S.E. of Wells, including a tract of salt marshes, extending northward to the ocean. The Earl of Leicester owns all St. Mary's and the greater part of All Saints; and is lord of the manors of Warham-Ducies and Warham-Hales, in which the copyholds are subject to a fine of 2s. per acre. The late Earl purchased these manors of the trustees of the late Sir J. Turner, and pulled down the old hall, near the site of which he erected a farm house. Mr. T. S. Moore, of the Chalk Farm, owns part of All Saints' parish, which contains 318 inhabitants, and 1174 acres, whilst St. Mary's has only 74 inhabitants, but 2045 acres of land. In the vale of the Stiffkey rivulet is a perfect specimen of a Danish camp, having a triple fosse, and covering a circular area of about nine acres. All Saints' Church is an ancient structure, and was originally much the finer as it is still the larger of the two, though it has been greatly dilapidated. It now comprises nave, transepts, chancel, and bell gable with one bell. It formerly had aisles, and seems to have been originally in the decorated style, but the present windows are perpendicular. The tower is in ruins, and the interior of the church is much disfigured by plaster, which spoils a really fine roof. The rectory, now consolidated with St. Mary's, was valued in K.B. at £16. St. Mary's Church comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and square tower with one bell. On the north side of chancel is a chapel containing the vault of the Turner family. The chancel windows and one of those in the nave are enriched with beautiful stained glass; but the nave is filled with high pews, and its roof is hidden by a low ceiling. The piscina still remains; and the old transitional Norman font is lying in the churchyard, having been replaced by a wretched modern circular one. Here was formerly another church (St. Mary the Virgin), and its rectory has long been consolidated with that of St. Mary Magdalen. The joint livings were valued in K.B. at £11. 6s. 8d., and since 1848 have had the rectory of All Saints' annexed to them. The Earl of Leicester is patron, and the Rev. Robert Collyer, M.A., is the incumbent, and has a good residence, 23½ acres of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £520. The chief residents in ST. MARY'S PARISH are—The Rev. Robt. Collyer, M.A., hon. canon of Norwich, Rectory; Joseph Fishbone, gamekeeper; Hy. Whisson, blacksmith; and Chas. Betts, John Blomfield (Northgate Hall), and Thos. Wm. Savory (Grove), farmers. Those in ALL SAINTS' PARISH are—Wm. Burcham, schoolmaster and parish clerk; Thomas Gooch, pork butcher; Edward Hall, grocer and draper; Richd. Ringwood, baker; Rd. Whisson, coach builder and vict., Three Tuns; Wm. Whittaker, joiner and wheelwright; Mary Whittaker, schoolmistress; Robt. Woolnough, vict., Three Horse Shoes; Robert Wordingham, cattle dealer; and Thomas Sewell Moore, farmer, Chalk Farm. Post from Wells.

WELLS, or Wells-next-the-Sea, is an irregularly built sea-port town, 5 miles N. by W. of Walsingham, 10 miles N. of Fakenham, 29 miles N.E. of Lynn, 32 miles N.W. of Norwich, and 118 miles N.N.E. of London, at the terminus of a branch of the Great Eastern Railway, which runs southward through Walsingham, Fakenham, and Dereham, to the main line at Wymondham. Its parish has increased its population since the year 1801, from 2316 to 3464 souls, and contains 2025 acres of land, lying in 4 manors, viz:—Wells-late-the-Duke's, Normans, and Walsingham Priory, of which the Earl of Leicester is lord; and Binham Priory, of which R. J. H. Harvey, Esq., is lessee lord, under the Bishop of Norwich. The common was enclosed in 1811. Wells had formerly a weekly market on Saturday, and races yearly; but both have long been discontinued, though the town is well supplied with provisions, and has still a fair on Shrove-Tuesday, for toys, sweetmeats, and pleasure. A new railway is about to be made from Wells station, through Burnham and Docking to the Hunstanton line at Heacham. Wells was formerly one of the most incommodious sea-ports in England, but in 1845-'6 the commission appointed to carry out the provisions of two acts of parliament obtained in 1844, borrowed £22,000, of which they expended £10,000 in erecting a substantial stone Quay 250 yards in length, and £9500 in paving, lighting, and improving the Town and Harbour. The Gas Works were erected in 1845, at a cost of £4000, and are leased to Mr. T. W. Howard. The tide rises in the harbour from 11 to 12 feet, and on the bar, to 20 feet, so that vessels of 150 to 200 tons can get up at high water; and some of that tonnage are built here. The number of registered vessels now belonging to the port is 152, and their tonnage is 10,876. In 1863, the number of vessels outwards was 282, and their tonnage 14,780, and inwards 493, tonnage, 24,700. Here are two steam tugs and about a dozen fishing boats; and in the offing are prolific beds of mussels. Corn is the chief export, and the imports are coal, timber, linseed cake, salt, and manure. The CUSTOM HOUSE is on the Quay; and Edward Bull, Esq., is collector; Mr. John Ramm, examining officer; Mr. John Smith, harbour master; and Rd. Smith, Barber Field, John Allen, and Wm. Green, pilots. The limits of the port extend about 5 miles east, and 13 miles west. Within these bounds are three coast-guard stations, of which Commander R. H. Roe is inspecting officer. The customs received here, amount only to about £160 per annum.

The CHURCH (St. Nicholas) is a spacious structure of perpendicular architecture, apparently built about the middle of the 15th century. It comprises a nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel with north chapel or vestry, and lofty square embattled tower with eight bells and a clock. The aisles extend considerably beyond the nave to nearly half the length of the chancel, and the spandrels of their roofs are filled with rich geometrical patterns, intricate tracery of foliage with small birds perched in it, &c. The roof of the nave has been very fine, but is now much decayed; the wallplate has two rows of Tudor leaves, and the flat space between the mouldings is relieved by angels with extended wings; the pendants are terminated by angels bearing shields, rows of small Tudor leaves run round the panels, and angels with shields cover the intersections of the ribs and principals, as well as the ridge piece. In the chancel is a beautiful doorway opening to the vestry, having in the hollow of its moulding an elegant design representing a flowing stem, on one side of which are vine leaves and fruit, and on the other, birds with extended wings picking the grapes. Over it is a brass to Thos. Bradley, rector (ob. 1499), who rebuilt the chancel. Here are also tablets of the Bloom, Robinson, Hill, Webber, and Cassidy families. The nave and aisles are filled with high pews and disfigured by galleries; and several of the windows are partially blocked up: indeed the whole structure needs a thorough restoration. The rood staircase and part of the bottom of the painted screen still remain; and there are some traces of mural paintings of flowers and other subjects. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £26. 13s. 4d. is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Edward Downing, M.A., who has a neat residence, 40A. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £550. Here are chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Independents; and also a Friends' Meeting House. The British School, with master's house attached, was built in 1838, chiefly at the expense of the late Countess of Leicester, and is attended by 80 boys, 30 girls, and 70 infants. In 1678, Christopher Ringer left two yearly sums of £16,—one for the maintenance of two poor widows for teaching 60 poor children, and the other for a monthly distribution of meal among the poor of the parish, mostly to those not receiving parochial relief. In satisfaction of these annuities, £600 were received in 1681, and laid out in the purchase of an estate, now consisting of a farm-house (rebuilt in 1828), two cottages, &c., and 88A. of land, in Barningham and Bassingham, let for £130 per annum, half of which, after payment of incidental expenses, is distributed in wheaten flour, and the remainder is paid to two respectable women, who each instruct about 30 children in reading, and the girls also in knitting and sewing. In the 17th century, the REV. MUNGO MORRAY left an estate of 126A. at Bale, to the rectory of Wells for ever, subject to the yearly payment of £18 to the poor. Part of this annuity is distributed in meal, and the rest in coals, with the rent of the Fuel Allotment, 10A., awarded at the enclosure, and now let for £30 a year to the Earl of Leicester. A yearly rent-charge of £5, left by Ann Tidd in 1762, is distributed in clothing among the poor, who have also the dividends of £388. 2s. 9d., New $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Stock, left by William Branch Elliott, in 1810. The rector and others are trustees.

WIGHTON, a parish and large village, 3 miles S. by E. of Wells, and 2 miles N. of Walsingham, has 612 inhabitants, and 2932 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Earl of Leicester, who is lessee of the manor of Wighton-on-the-part-of-Lancaster. Wm. Metcalf, Esq., has an estate of 170 acres in the parish. About $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile W. of the village, are some few traces of an entrenchment, called Crabbe's Castle, where several Roman coins have been found. The Church (All Saints) is a large edifice, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and square tower with one bell. The nave has six arches on each side, supported on lofty quatrefoil columns; and the windows are adorned with stained glass, representing the twelve apostles and Paul and Barnabas. The rood staircase is very perfect, but the screen is almost gone. The chancel contains a piscina, and at the north door is a holy water stoup. The east window is partly walled up, the nave is filled with pews, and the roof disfigured by whitewash. Under the east window, externally, are some ruins of a building, the use of which is unknown. This church was given by Henry II. to Norwich Cathedral, so that the Dean and Chapter are now appropriators of the great tithes and patrons of the vicarage, which was valued in K.B. at £11. 11s. 8d., and augmented in 1767 and 1807 with £400 of Q.A.B., laid out in 8a. of land at Sprowston, besides which here are $22\frac{1}{2}$ a. of glebe. The Rev. John Wm. Methold, B.A., is the incumbent, and in 1836 built a Vicarage House, in digging the foundations of which, a large quantity of human bones and ancient pikes were discovered, supposed to have been buried after a battle between the Saxons and Danes. The tithes were commuted in 1836 for £578 to the appropriators, and £232 to the vicar. On land occupied by Mr. Waters, are still some traces of a chapel of ease. The rent of 19a. 32p. of land at Great Snoring, let for £30 a year, and derived from the bequests of George Smith and Wm. Feke, about 1590, is distributed in weekly doles of bread amongst poor widows. The rent of 10 acres in Hindringham, left by Humphrey Bedingfeld, in 1672, and let for £12, is distributed among four poor men not receiving parochial relief. The yearly rent of £11, from 9a. given by Thomas Earl of Leicester, in 1759, and the dividends of £499. 2s. 4d. three per cent. consols, left by Christiana Bedingfeld, in 1800, are distributed in coals among the poor of the parish. All the poor widows have divided amongst them the dividends of £212. 13s. 2d. new $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. stock, left by Lucy Bircham, in 1803. Mrs. Sarah Charles, in 1790, charged an estate at Hindringham, now belonging to R. England, Esq., with the yearly payment of £6 for schooling 12 poor girls, and £8 for division among four poor aged men. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel in the parish. Here is a wall letter box, cleared at 2.10 p.m. Post from Fakenham.

HOLT HUNDRED

Is a highly diversified district, presenting some of the boldest scenery in Norfolk; though next the ocean it has a flat shore and a broad tract of low salt marshes. It is about nine miles in length and breadth, except at its southern extremity, where it is only about six miles broad; being bounded on the north by the sea, on the east by North and South Erpingham, on the south by Eynesford, and on the west by North Greenhoe. Many handsome residences have been built, during the present century, in various parts of this Hundred, which is intersected by the whole length of the small river Glaven, which passes, by a very circuitous course of more than 13 miles, to the ocean, near Cley. Holt Hundred contains 28 parishes, of which the following is an enumeration, shewing their population in 1861, the annual value of their lands and buildings, as assessed to the County Rate in 1843, and their territorial extent.

The 10 parishes marked thus* are in WALSINGHAM UNION. (See page 1016.) Melton Constable and Brinton support their poor under a local act, and the other 14 parishes are in ERPINGHAM UNION. (See page 638.)

BALE, or Bailthley, on a declivity, 5 miles W. by S. of Holt, has in its parish 227 inhabitants, and 1041 acres of land, all arable, except 200 acres of wood and pasture. Sir Willoughby Jones, Bart., is lord of the manor and owner of a great part of the soil, and the Rev. J. H. Sparke and some smaller owners, have estates here. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, north transept, south porch, and square embattled tower with five bells. The interior was restored in 1863, and fitted with new open seats, oak pulpit, and reading desk, &c. One of the windows contains some old stained glass, and in the chancel is a piscina. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10. 13s. 4d., is consolidated with that of Gunthorpe, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. J. H. Sparke, M.A., of Leverington, Cambridge. The glebe here is 21A. 39P., and the tithes of Bale were commuted, in 1839, for £311. 10s. per annum. The Church Land is 2 acres, let for £6. The sum of £16s. 10s., left to the poor by Chpr. Ringer, in 1678, was laid out in land, which was exchanged at the enclosure, in 1811, for 4A. 1R. 22P., now let for £7, which is given away in blankets. The chief residents are — Rev. Robert Beeby, curate; Robert Long, blacksmith; John Ramm, parish clerk and victualler, Angel and Oak; Rev. Wm. Scratton, M.A., curate of Gunthorpe; Rev. Hy. Spencer, vicar of Field Dalling; and Saml. Arnold, Jno. Hammond (and veterinary surgeon), James Long, Wm. Long, Benjn. Pearce, and Samuel Pell, farmers. Post from Thetford, via Briningham.

BAYFIELD, 2½ miles N.W. of Holt, is a small parish, united with Glandford for the support of the poor, and containing only 30 inhabitants, and 780 acres of land, belonging to Major Edward Jodrell, the lord of the manor and patron of the living, who resides at Bayfield Hall, a good brick mansion, which has a beautiful park, in the vale of the river Glaven, near the ivy-mantled ruins of the Church (St. Margaret), which is a secure rectory, valued in K.B. at £4, and now in the incumbency of the Rev. Bernard Moore, of Lancaster. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £168. 6s. per annum; and the inhabitants attend Letheringsett Church. Benjn. Fuller is the only farmer, and Edmd. Twiddy is the gamekeeper. Post from Thetford.

BLAKENEY, a small sea-port, 4½ miles N.W. by N. of Holt, and nearly a mile W. of Cley, has in its parish 960 inhabitants, and 1050 acres of land, mostly the property of Lord Calthorpe, the lord of the manor. It was anciently called Snitterley, and much frequented by German merchants. Henry III. granted it a market, which has long been obsolete, but it still enjoys a considerable trade in malt, corn, coal, cake, &c., and was once a noted fishing station. The town is above a mile from the beach, and consists mainly of one long narrow street. It has a good harbour or creek, which winds to the sea by a circuitous route of four miles, and was much improved under an act passed in 1817, so that vessels of 150 tons can now get up to the wharves, where the spring tides rise about ten feet. The harbour is under the management of a board of directors, who levy dues, appoint pilots, and keep the buoys and beacons in repair. The Custom House for the port of Blakeney and Cley is situated here, and is under the port of Wells. Mr. John Brown is chief officer and receiver of wreck, and his district extends from this port to Sparrow Gap, the northern extremity of the port of Yarmouth. During the year 1863, there arrived at this port 184 coasting vessels, registering 9502 tons, and 14 of various tonnage from the Baltic and Mediterranean ports. The number of vessels outwards in the same year was 120, registering 6613 tons. Here was a Friary of Carmelites, founded in the 24th of Edward I., by Richard and John Stormer and Thos. Thober, and granted at the dissolution to Wm. Rede. In this monastery was educated that eccentric character, John de Baconsthorpe. Some portions of the boundary wall of the Friary still remain, on a declivity south of the Church (St. Nicholas), which comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, chancel, north porch, and a lofty square tower which serves as a sea mark, and contains one bell. The chancel roof is groined, and over it is a chamber, the use of which is unknown. The nave has a fine open timber roof of lofty pitch, and the chancel contains sedilia, a piscina, and an organ. There is also a piscina at the east end of the south aisle. The font is octagonal, richly carved, and bearing the evangelistic symbols. At the north-east corner of the chancel is a high turret, said to have been formerly used as a lighthouse. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £26. 13s. 4d., and now at £506 a year with Cockthorpe rectory, Little Langham vicarage, and Glandford perpetual curacy annexed, is in the patronage of Lord Calthorpe, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Tillard, M.A., who has here a good residence, 7A. 1R. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £170. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists, have each a chapel here. The National School, built in 1825, is attended by 130 children. The Odd Fellows' Hall was built in 1855, and has a reading room attached. The Poor's Land, 3A., in Morston, let for £4, was given to this parish, in 1694, by Wm. Styleman, in satisfaction of a rent-charge of 20s., left by an unknown donor. A yearly rent-charge of 12s., for distributions of coal, left by Robert Bassett, in 1693, is paid out of Lord Calthorpe's estate. The interest of £24, left by Chpr. Ringer, is distributed in cloth or blankets. An old building, called the Guild Hall, with a vault capable of holding 60 chaldrons of coals, has belonged to the poor from an early period, and is now let for £4. 4s. a year.

BODHAM, near the source of the small river Glaven, 3 miles E. of Holt, has in its parish 316 inhabitants, and 1640 acres of land, belonging chiefly to John T. Mott, Esq., lord of the manor, and patron of the discharged rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £9, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. John Geo. Bidewell, M.A., who has a yearly tithe rent-charge of £375, and 12A. of glebe. A Rectory House is about to be built. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, south porch, and square embattled tower with one bell. The east window contains some beautiful stained glass, representing the Nativity, the Crucifixion, and the Ascension, inserted in 1859, by subscription, in memory of the late rector's wife. Outside the entrance door is a holy water stoup. The school is held in a cottage, and supported by the rector. The poor have 20s. a year, left by Thos. Franke, in 1669, out of Bodham heath, which was enclosed in 1808. The chief residents are—The Rector; Wm. Cletheroe, carpenter and vict., Red Hart; Thos. Douglas, machine maker, ironfounder, and smith; Robert Breese Cooper, butcher; Jph. Beckett, John Barnes, Saml. Bird, Sarah Everitt, Robt. Pardon, and Wm. Gladden Seely, farmers; Wm. West, gamekeeper; Robert Hunter, parish clerk; Elizabeth Hunter, school; and Wm. Fisher, shoemaker and shopkeeper. Post from Holt.

BRININGHAM is 4 miles S.W. by S. of Holt, and has in its parish 206 inhabitants, and 1138 acres of land, mostly belonging to Lord Hastings and the Marquis of Lothian, the former of whom is lord of the manor of Briningham-on-the-part-of-Thornage, (fines arbitrary,) and the latter of Briningham Chosells. Mr. J. G. Woodcock also has an estate here. On the north side of the parish is a tower about 60 feet high, called Belle Vue, as it commands extensive prospects. It is the property of Lord Hastings, and is occupied by his gamekeeper. The Church (St. Maurice) comprises nave, chancel, and south-west tower with one bell. The entrance is through the tower; and in the chancel is a piscina, and also a stained glass window representing the Resurrection and Ascension. One half of the nave is filled with open seats having poppies, and the rest contains closed pews. The church was partially restored in 1863. The perpetual curacy is in the patronage of Lord Hastings, and incumbency of the Rev. Shovel Brereton, M.A., who has a good residence, built in 1844. The tithes have been commuted for £353 per annum. The chief residents are—The Rev. S. Brereton, M.A., Parsonage; Wm. Colman, bricklayer; A. Crisp, parish clerk; Mr. Robt. Locksmith; John Maris, shopkeeper and vict., White Horse; Rt. Payne, tailor and grocer; Robt. Richmond, miller; Robt. Woods, gamekeeper; and Jas. Barwick (and cattle dealer); Robt. Edward Thompson; Robert May; Wm. Green; and Christopher Olley (and shopkeeper) farmers. POST OFFICE at Chas. West's. Letters despatched, via Thetford, at 4.40 p.m.

BRINTON, a neat village, 4 miles W.S.W. of Holt, has in its parish 177 inhabitants, and 615 acres of land, belonging to Lord Hastings and Mrs. A. E. Brereton, the former of whom is lord of the manor, and the latter has a handsome mansion here, which was rebuilt in 1822, and stands in a fine lawn with a small lake. The parish maintains its poor jointly with Melton Constable, under Gilbert's Act. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, north aisle and transept, south porch, chancel, and square tower with one bell. The roof is of high pitch, and many of the old open seats with carved poppies still remain. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £8. 11s. 4d., is consolidated with that of Thornage (which see), and the rector has here 20A. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £170, awarded in 1839. The Wesleyan Chapel was built in 1838. The Poor's Land, 2A. 33P., let for £3. 9s., was received in exchange at the enclosure, in 1837, in lieu of land purchased with £10, left by Nicholas Rogers, in 1693, and £15 subscribed. The chief residents are—Mrs. Ann Eliz. Brereton, and Mrs. Sarah Pearson Brereton, Hall; Capt. Shovel Hy. Brereton, Cottage; Mrs. Jane Burrell, Margaret Margeson, schoolmistress; Wm. Hawes, vict., Thatched Tavern; John Page, merchant, soap boiler, grocer, draper, and tallow chandler;

Mattw. Burrell, and John Jarvis, farmers ; Wm. Woodgett, draper and shop-keeper ; Mark Clark, blacksmith ; James Skipper Balls, gardener ; Wm. Rayner, shoemaker ; and John Ward, bricklayer. Post from Thetford.

BRISTON, a scattered parish, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. by W. of Holt, near one of the sources of the river Bure, contains 931 inhabitants, and 2757 acres of land, including 262A. of common, which is about to be enclosed. A swine market is held here every Tuesday, and a large cattle fair on the 26th of May, or on the following Monday, when that date falls on Saturday or Sunday. The parish feast is on the day after Old Michaelmas day. The soil belongs to the Rev. Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart., Messrs. J. H. Holley, J. G. Woodcock, J. Emery, and some smaller owners, and lies in several manors, of which the following are the names and lords, viz.:—Briston Hall, Melliors, and Chosells, Thomas Copeman, Esq.; Briston Mautbois, W. E. L. Bulwer, Esq.; Mikehall and Loundhall, J. H. Holley, Esq.; and Thornage-exparte-Briston, Lord Hastings. The Church (All Saints), comprises only nave and chancel, with small belfry at west end. It had a round tower, which was taken down in 1724. The sedilia and piscina still remain in the chancel. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £4. 9s. 9d., is in the patronage of Lord Hastings, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Norris, B.A., who has 40A. 3R. 31P. of glebe, and is about to have a residence built for him. The Feoffees of Greenaway's Charity at Wiveton are appropriators of the great tithes, commuted in 1844 for £444, and the vicarial for £234. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. The National School was built in 1844, at a cost of £250, and is attended by 138 children of this and the neighbouring parishes. Pursuant to the wills of Thomasine and James Scamler, in 1667 and 1687, the yearly sum of £8. 10s. 8d. is paid out of Hickling Priory farm to this parish, and dispensed as follows:—£4. 6s. 8d. to the vicar for sermons, 2s. to the clerk, £1. 3s. divided among the poor, and £2. 10s. applied in apprentice fees.

BURGH PARVA, 4 miles S.S.W. of Holt, is a decayed parish, which, from time immemorial, has been united with Melton-Constable. It contains only Burgh Hall, and 400 acres of land belonging to Lord Hastings, and occupied by his steward, Mr. John Gedney. The Church was dilapidated many centuries ago; but the tower and part of the walls of the nave and chancel still remain near the Hall. Post from Thetford.

CLEY-NEXT-THE-SEA is a small town and port, on the river Glaven, about a mile from the beach, 10 miles W. of Wells, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.W. of Holt, and 25 miles N.N.W. of Norwich. Its parish has increased its population from 547 souls in 1801 to 791 in 1861; and contains 2150 acres of land, a great part of which is salt marsh. W. H. C. Hardy, Esq., is lord of the manor and owner of most of the soil; but W. J. J. Bolding, Esq., and Lord Calthorpe have estates here. Cley had formerly a small market on Saturday, and has still a pleasure fair on the last Friday and Saturday in July. The Harbour is very narrow and shallow, but in its course to the sea it forms a junction with the Blakeney channel. It is now under the port of Wells, and the Custom House is at Blakeney. The exports are chiefly corn, and the imports coal, cake, &c. The Church (St. Margaret) is a handsome edifice, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch with parvise, and square embattled tower near the north-west angle containing one bell. The transepts and western porch are now in ruins. The chancel contains the sedilia and piscina, and near the west doorway is a holy water stoup. The interior is handsomely fitted with open seats having carved poppies, and contains an elegant oak pulpit. The font is octagonal, and bears carvings of the seven Romish sacraments. In the chancel is a brass, dated 1429, representing John Yslington, in a priest's habit. Here is also a fine brass, with representations of John Symonds, his wife, and eight children; and in the churchyard is the altar-tomb of Captain John Grieve, who assisted Sir Cloudesley Shovel in burning the ships in the port of Tripoli, in Barbary, in 1676. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £22. 13s. 4d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Thos. James Bewsher, M.A., who has 24A. of glebe, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £405, and a spacious Elizabethan residence, built in 1859 at a cost of £1300. Here are chapels belonging to the Primitive Methodists and Methodist Free Church; and a British School built in 1860 in the Elizabethan style, at a cost of £600, and attended by 130 children. In 1406, James, son of Robert Bruce, King of Scotland, and heir-apparent to the crown, being on a voyage to France, was driven by stress of weather on this coast, and detained by the mariners of Cley, who sent him prisoner to King Henry, who, learning from the Prince's protector, the Earl of Orkney, that he was going to France for his education, said, "my brother of Scotland might as well have sent him to me, for I can speak French;" and he forthwith sent the Prince and his guardian to prison, where they continued for seventeen years, till the third year of Henry the Sixth's reign, when they were released, and the prince immediately ascended the throne of Scotland.

EDGEFIELD, nearly 3 miles S. of Holt, is a large scattered parish, containing 624 inhabitants, and 2435 acres of land, including 350A. of heath and plantations, and lying mostly in the manors of Edgefield-with-Ellingham and Edgefield Bacons. Major Marcon is lord of the former, and Geo. Edward Frere, Esq., of the latter. The Marquis of Lothian, Mrs. Ballachey, and Messrs. Thos. Purdy, Timothy Winn, Samuel Bird, and Robert Kemp, have estates in the parish. The Mount, a neat house on a lofty eminence, from which about 30 churches can be seen, is the residence of Mrs. Ballachey. The Church (St. Peter and St. Paul) comprises nave, aisles, north and south porches, and octagonal tower with one bell; and is much in need of restoration. The rood stairs and part of the screen still remain, but the paintings which once adorned the latter are much defaced. There is a piscina in the chancel, and another in the south aisle. A harmonium was purchased by subscription in 1862. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £11. 6s. 8d., is in the patronage of Major Marcon, and incumbency of the Rev. Walter Marcon, B.A., S.C.L., who has a plain brick residence, a yearly tithe rent-charge of £574, and 16A. 3R. 25P. of glebe. The National School is attended by 60 children. Here is a Primitive Methodist Chapel. In 1738, Simon Woodrow charged his land here with the payment of 40s. to 5 poor widows, and 10s. to the church. The sum of £60, as the rent of 50A., allotted to the poor at the enclosure, in 1815, is distributed in coals to the poor. Post from Thetford, via Briningham.

Those marked 1, reside at the Cross roads; 2, Green; 3, Mount; 4, North-street; and 5, Ramsgate street.

GLANDFORD, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. of Holt, is a small parish, containing 74 souls and about 400 acres; but the parish of Bayfield is united with it for the support of the poor, and they contain together only 104 inhabitants and 1163 acres of land. Major Edward Jodrell is owner of Glandford and lord of the manor. The Church (St. Martin) has been long in ruins, but its tower is nearly entire, and the chancel is sufficiently perfect to admit of service being held in it every Sunday evening. The perpetual curacy is consolidated with Cockthorpe, Blakeney, and Little Langham (see p. 1039); and has 11A. 1R. of glebe. The tithes were commuted, in 1839, for £94. 9s. 5d. per annum. Mr. Wm. H. G. Buck, of Wiveton, farms part of the parish, and the rest is occupied by Mr. Robins Cooke, jun., who is also a corn miller. Post from Thetford.

GUNTHORPE, 5 miles W.S.W. of Holt, has in its parish 249 inhabitants, and 1087 acres of land, belonging partly to J. S. Scott Chad and T. Winn, Esqrs., and the Rev. Shovel Brereton; but mostly to the Rev. John Hy. Sparke, M.A., the lord of the manor, and patron and incumbent of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £13, and is now worth £628, with that of Bale annexed. He resides at Gunthorpe Hall, a handsome mansion, with a well-wooded lawn and small lake; and the Rectory House is occupied by a farmer. The tithes of this parish were commuted in 1839 for £317. 18s. a year, besides £2. 2s. from 6 acres titheable to Sharrington; and here are 23A. 25P. of glebe. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, north transept, chancel with north chapel, south porch, and square embattled tower with one bell. It was thoroughly restored by the rector in 1863-'4. The chancel is paved with encaustic tiles, and the reredos is of alabaster. Here are sedilia and a piscina; the altar cloth is richly embroidered; and in 1855 Mrs. Sparke filled the east window with stained glass in memory of her son, Henry Astley Sparke, who was killed in the memorable light cavalry charge at Balaclava. The font is a handsome octagonal one, bearing the evangelistic symbols. Here are several fine mural tablets of the Collyer family. The parochial School is chiefly supported by the rector, and occupies the old Primitive Methodist Chapel. The poor have 25s. a year out of Malt-house Pightle, left by John Towne in 1777. The chief residents are—Rev. J. H. Sparke, M.A., Hall; Edwd. Fitt, victualler, Cross Keys; Edwd. Fitt, sen., shoemaker; Charles Green, schoolmaster; Wm. Bridges, blacksmith and grocer; John Farrow, corn miller; Peter Payne, carpenter and wheelwright; Robt. Lynn, parish clerk; Chas. John Powell, thrashing machine owner; and Chpr. Goulder, Chamberlain Waller England, Thos. England, Jno. Starling Hiller, Francis High, Henry Fitt, and Chas. Powell, farmers. Post from Thetford, via Briningham.

HEMPSTEAD, 2 miles S.E. of Holt, has in its parish 280 inhabitants and 1756 acres of land, including 100A. of woods and plantations. Hudson Gurney, Esq., is lord of the manors of Hempstead, Netherhall, and Losehall, and owner of a great part of the soil; but the Marquis of Lothian, J. T. Mott, Hugh Rump, and Wm. Bircham, Esqrs., and some others, have estates here. The Church (All Saints) is a small fabric, comprising only a nave, a south porch, and a low brick tower, built in 1744. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £9. 6s. 8d., was augmented in 1792 with £200 of Q.A.B., laid out in land at Bodham, let for £28 a year. Here are 16A. of old glebe. The Rev. J. W. Methold, M.A., of Wighton, is incumbent; and the Dean and Chapter of Norwich are patrons and also appropriators of the great tithes, which are leased to the Marquis of Lothian, and were commuted for £289. 11s. 11d. in 1839, when the vicarial tithes were commuted for £150 a year. The Rev. John Custance Leak, of Plumstead, is the curate. Here is an Infants' School, supported by the lord of the manor. The chief residents are—Thos. Curson, victualler, Hare and Hounds; Saml. Fowell gamekeeper ; Alfred Graveling, blacksmith and shoemaker ; Jno. Neal, beer-house ; Sarah Neal, school ; Chas. Money, parish clerk ; and Charles Brighten, Wm. Bird (Hole House), Robt. Bond, Ellis Newstead Field, Frances Garwood, Ann Ling (Hall), Jno. Pearce, and Wm. Elden Rump, farmers. Post from Holt.

HOLT, which gives name to this Hundred, is a neat market town, pleasantly situated on rising ground at the junction of several public roads, 24 miles N.N.W. of Norwich, 12 miles N.W. by N. of Aylsham, 18 miles N. by E. of East Dereham, 4 miles S.S.E. of Blakeney and Cley, 10 miles W. by S. of Cromer, and 119 miles N.E. by N. of London. It has been much improved during the present century, and has increased its population from 1004 in 1801 to 1635 souls in 1861. From its high situation, it is remarkably clean and salubrious. The market-place and High street contain many spacious and well-stocked shops, and in the vicinity are numerous thriving plantations and several handsome seats, amongst which may be mentioned the Grove, the Lodge, the Woodlands, and the Hall. The latter is a large red brick mansion in the Tudor style, which was considerably enlarged and improved in 1864, at a cost of £2000, by its present owner and occupier, John Rogers, Esq. The streets are well paved and lighted with gas, from works erected in 1841 by the late Mr. John Randall, and now belonging to his widow, Mrs. A. M. Long. The Gas is sold at the rate of 9s. per thousand cubic feet. On May-day, 1708, a great part of the town was destroyed by an accidental fire, which burnt with such fury "that the butchers could not save the meat on their stalls." On Spout Common, on the south-west side of the town, a copious spring issues out of the gravel hill, and affords an ample supply of pure soft water, which is carried in carts to the town, where there are also three public pumps. The spring-head is walled round, and is visited by many as a natural curiosity, and for the purpose of enjoying the fine prospect which it commands over the romantic valley of the Glaven. The MARKET, held every Friday, is well supplied with corn, &c. ; and here are two annual stock fairs, on April 25th and November 25th. The CORN HALL is a brick and flint building, originally erected for a Baptist chapel, but converted to its present use in 1857. Petty Sessions are held on the fourth Saturday in every month, at the Shire Hall, where Quarter Sessions were formerly held. H. S. Ransom, Esq., is clerk to the magistrates. The COUNTY COURT is also held every alternate month for a district, comprising the parishes of Aldborough, Aylmerton, Baconsthorpe, Barningham Town, Barningham Northwood, East and West Beckham, Beeston Regis, Bessingham, Blakeney, Bodham, Brinton, Briston, Cley-next-the-Sea, Cromer, Edgefield, Felbrigg, Glandford-with-Bayfield, Gresham, Hempstead, Holt, Hunworth, Kelling, Langham, Letheringsett, Matlaske, Melton Constable with Burgh, Metton, Morston, Overstrand, Plumstead, Runton, Salthouse, Saxlingham, Sharlington, Stody, Sustead, Thurgarton, Thornage, Weybourne, and Wiveton. T. J. Birch, Esq., is judge ; J. Townley, Esq., treasurer ; G. Wilkinson, Esq., registrar ; Mr. T. Kerslake, high bailiff ; and Wm. Groom, assistant bailiff. The POLICE STATION, on Hempstead road, is a red brick edifice, erected in 1855, and containing two cells and residences for the inspector and one constable. The PARISH contains 2991A. of land, which is generally fertile and arable, but has some ancient woods and several extensive plantations upon the heath, which was enclosed by an Act passed in 1807, when 120A. were allotted to supply those parishioners with fuel who do not rent above £10 a year. The soil belongs to a number of proprietors, the largest of whom are the lords of the four manors, viz., Holt, Holt-Market, and Holt-Hales, belonging to Hudson Gurney, Esq. ; and Holt-Pereers, of which the Fishmongers' Company, in London, are owners, as trustees of the Grammar School. The two first are subject to arbitrary fines on admission, and the others to certain fines. A. Dalrymple, Esq., of Norwich, is steward for Mr. Gurney's manors; and W. H. Scott, Esq., of Aylsham, is steward for Holt-Pereers. A court leet is held on St. Thomas's day for the former; and on the Monday nearest June 21st for the latter. The other principal landowners are the Marquis of Lothian, John Rogers, Geo. Barker, V. D. Sheringham, and W. H. C. Hardy, Esqrs., Mr. Joseph Muskett, and the Executors of G. Legge and G. Chad, Esqrs. The HOLT RIFLE CORPS comprises about 35 men, and was established nearly three years ago. George Barker, Esq., is lieutenant, and George Wilkinson, Esq., ensign. Here are several friendly and benefit societies, and lodges of Oddfellows and Foresters. The LITERARY SOCIETY, in New street, was established in 1854, and has a well-supplied newsroom and a good library of more than 2000 volumes.

The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is an ancient structure in the early-English style, comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch (used as a vestry), chancel, and square tower with one bell and a clock. It was thoroughly restored in 1864, and fitted with new open seats, but there is still an old gallery in the north aisle. Many of the windows are enriched with beautiful stained glass, several of them at the expense of John Hales, Esq. The sedilia and piscina still remain in the chancel, and there is another piscina in the south aisle. Here are tablets of the Holmes, Hobart, Butler, Briggs, and other families. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £11. 17s. 3½d., is in the patronage of St. John's College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Brumell, B.D., who is also rural dean, and has 57A. of glebe and a handsome Rectory House, with pleasant grounds, commanding picturesque views. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £585 per annum. The Methodist Free Church, in High street, is an ornamental brick and flint building in the early-English style, erected in 1863 at a cost of £2000, and comprising a nave with aisles and clerestory, and a bell turret at the north-west angle. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists also have chapels here. The FREE GRAMMAR SCHOOL is an imposing pile of red brick buildings in the Elizabethan style, comprising a commodious and elegant school-room, 60 feet long, a class-room, and a house for the master. It was erected at a cost of more than £3000, in 1858, in lieu of the old manor-house of Holt Pereers, which was converted into a school, in 1554, by Sir J. Gresham, Knight, a native of Holt and an alderman and citizen of London, who endowed it with this manor and the Prior's Grove, and vested the management in the Fishmongers' Company for the education of 50 free scholars, to be chosen by them from the town of Holt and its neighbourhood, and instructed by a master and usher in reading, writing, arithmetic, English grammar, and the Latin and Greek languages. Attached to the school is an extensive play-ground, &c. The endowment at present produces about £500 per annum, and is gradually increasing in amount. The master has a yearly salary of £200, besides certain head moneys, and is allowed to take boarders. The usher has a salary of £80 per annum. Books and stationery are provided out of the funds for the use of the scholars. There is an exhibition of £20 for four years to any university in the United Kingdom. The Rev. C. A. Elton, B.D., is the present head master. Smith's fellowship and scholarship, with an exhibition of £12 per annum in Sydney Sussex College, Cambridge, belong to this school, together with a fellowship in the same college, founded by William Bennet, who gave £60 for that purpose. The Fishmongers' Company are governors of the school, and send visitors to inspect it. They appoint a steward and gamekeeper of Holt-Pereers manor. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was established in 1835, but the commodious building which it now occupies was not built till 1843. It is attended by 96 boys and girls, and 76 infants. The British School, in Withers street, is a neat flint building with red brick dressings, and was built by W. H. C. Hardy, Esq., in 1851, at a cost of £600. It is attended by 120 children. The poor have four yearly rent-charges, viz. :—£2. 10s., left by Blanche Schuldham, in 1738, for fortnightly doles of bread; 10s., left by Stephen Feake, in 1661; and two of 20s., left by Mr. Fitt and an unknown donor. For distributions of bread, they have the interest of £178, left by the Rev. Joshua Smith, in 1828. ALICE PEREERS, of the family which formerly held Holt-Pereers manor, was the celebrated mistress of Edward III., who, in his 47th year, granted her all the jewels of Philippa, his late queen, to whom she had been maid of honour. After the death of Edward, being obnoxious to the Duke of Lancaster and other great lords, she was attainted, and her estates and goods forfeited; but on her marriage with Sir Wm. de Wyndesore, in the third of Richard II., the King restored to her divers manors and lands. William Withers, Esq., of Holt, who died in 1848, was author of "A Memoir addressed to the Society of Arts on the planting and rearing of Forest Trees, demonstrating the necessity of Trenching," &c. For this production he received a silver medal. He afterwards published letters on the same subject to Sir Walter Scott and Sir H. Stuart, and a work on the Acacia tree. John Holmes, who was thirty years master of the Grammar School, died in 1760. He was author of "A New Grammar of the Latin Tongue," "A Greek Grammar," and several other elementary works of great merit. Thomas Girdlestone, M.D., was born here in 1758, and died in 1820, after acquiring a high reputation as a physician at Yarmouth, where he spent the last 20 years of his life. His medical writings are held in much estimation by the faculty, and in addition to them he published several views and descriptions of ancient buildings.

HUNWORTH, in the vale of the Glaven, nearly 2 miles S.S.W. of Holt, has in its parish 206 inhabitants, and 838 acres of land, belonging to the Marquis of Lothian, the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £4, and is now worth £389, with that of Stody annexed. The Rev. Jas. Bulwer, M.A., is the incumbent, and has here 27A. of glebe, a good brick residence in the Tudor style, built in 1849, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £152. 10s., awarded in 1841. The Church (St. Lawrence) is in the perpendicular style, and comprises nave, south transept and porch, chancel, and square embattled tower with one bell. There is a piscina in the transept. The chancel was rebuilt and the rest of the building restored and fitted with open poppy-headed benches in 1850. The National School, erected in 1850, is attended by 45 children, and chiefly supported by the rector. Here is a Primitive Methodist Chapel, and also a Girls' School, which has an endowment of £6 a year, left in 1688 by Wm. Symonds, and charged on Stody Hall farm. The chief residents are—The Rector; Mr. John Cooke; Edw. Ebdon, shopkeeper and butcher; Wm. Fox, gamekeeper; Robins Cooke, corn miller; Thos. Graveling, shoemaker; Priscilla King, schoolmistress; Thos. Peck, shopkeeper and carpenter; Jno. Welton, baker and vict., Blue Bell; Geo. Yallop, schoolmaster and parish clerk; and Wm. Bidwell Bassingthwaite (Beck House), James Burton and Jas. Moore, farmers. Post from Thetford, via Briningham.

KELLING, in a deep valley, 3 miles N. of Holt, has in its parish 211 inhabitants, and 2190 acres of land, including 800 acres of heath, which was mostly enclosed in 1781, when the poor received two allotments, viz., 147A. 2R. 30P., to cut fuel upon, and 28A. to supply them with pasturage for one cow each. Mrs. Mary Ann Girdlestone owns most of the soil, and is lady of the manor and patroness of the living; but Mrs. Jane Davy and Messrs. Wm. Purdy Davy, and John G. Woodcock, have estates here. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12, and now worth £557, with that of Salthouse annexed, is in the incumbency of the Rev. John Gay Girdlestone, who has here 14A. of glebe and a good residence. The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel, north transept, and square tower with one bell. The south transept is in ruins, the east window is bricked up, and the chancel contains a fine canopied piscina. The chief residents are—The Rector; Eliz. Gibbs and John Ebdon, shopkeepers; Jas. Nurse, parish clerk; Emanuel Larkman, carpenter; Thos. Lynes, gardener; Mrs. Jane Davy, James Riches, James Nurse (and miller), and Grandison Dixon, farmers. Post from Holt.

LANGHAM, 5 miles W.N.W. of Holt, has in its parish 399 inhabitants, and 1950 acres of land, mostly belonging to Wm. Rippingall, Esq., who resides at the Hall, a neat white brick mansion with pleasant grounds. Messrs. John Routh and Henry Wells also have estates here. Langham was formerly in two parishes, called Langham Magna and Parva; but the church of the latter was dilapidated several centuries ago, and its rectory, valued in K.B. at £3. 6s. 8d., and now having 49 acres of glebe, allotted at the enclosure in lieu of tithes, is consolidated with Cockthorpe and Blakeney. (See page 1039.) The Church of Langham Magna, or Langham Episcopi, is dedicated to St. Andrew and St. Mary, and comprises nave, chancel, south aisle, north porch, and square tower with five bells. It was restored and furnished with open poppy-headed benches in 1853. A new east window, filled with stained glass, representing the Last Supper and the Crucifixion, was inserted in 1860, by the lord of the manor, to the memory of his father, the Rev. S. F. Rippingall, who died in 1858. Here is an ancient octagonal font supported by six pillars, and at the east end of the aisle is a piscina. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £4. 10s., and now worth £190, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Norwich, and incumbency of the Rev. John Montagu Randall, who has here a handsome residence, erected in 1844; and 100 acres of glebe, allotted at the enclosure in 1817, in lieu of tithes. The National School was erected in 1850, by the late Rev. S. F. Rippingall, and is attended by 120 children. Captain Frederick Marryat, R.N., C.B., the well-known novelist, formerly resided here. At the enclosure, 2R. 27P. were allotted to the poor's cottages. The poor have also the interest of £25, left by Cphr. Ringer, in 1678, and a yearly rent-charge of 10s., left by an unknown donor.

LEATHERINGSETT, picturesquely seated in the well-wooded valley of the Glaven, 1½ mile W. of Holt, has in its parish 323 inhabitants, and 853 acres of land, mostly belonging to W. H. C. Hardy, Esq., who resides at the Hall, a handsome mansion of white brick and flint, with a Grecian portico, and beautiful gardens and plantations. His large brewery and malthouse are ornamental buildings, near the river, where a bridge was built by subscription, in 1818. The hall was erected and the grounds planted and laid out by the late W. Hardy, Esq. Mr. Peter E. Wrench and a few smaller owners have estates here. The Church (St. Andrew) comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch, chancel, and round tower with three bells; and was built soon after the conquest by the Earl of Buckingham. It contains several tablets of the Hardy and Jodrell families. The discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £12, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Hy. Brown, M.A., who has a good residence, 27A. of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £253, awarded in 1838. The chief residents are—The Rector; William Hardy Cozens Hardy, Esq., J.P., brewer and maltster, Hall; Mr. Thomas Cook Cobon gentleman, and Miss Rosamond Cobon; Mary White, victualler, King's Head; Mrs. Martha Watson; Mrs. Mary Purdy; Mr. Charles Miller; John Ainger, grocer and coachmaker; Jonas Gosling and Robt. Turner, blacksmiths; Thos. Gales, clerk; Edw. Hewitt, shoemaker; Jas. Tinker, carpenter; Wm. Howes, farmer and miller; and Jas. Rowland and Geo. Stimpson, farmers. POST OFFICE at J. Ainger's. MELTON-CONSTABLE-WITH-BURGH-PARVA forms a fertile parish of 2710 acres, extending from $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 miles S.W. by S. of Holt, and $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles E.N.E. of Fakenham. Burgh Parva contains 400 acres, as already described at page 1041; and about 800 acres of the parish of MELTON CONSTABLE are in the park and woods which encompass the handsome mansion of Lord Hastings, the owner of the parish and lord of the manor, which has been held by his family for many centuries, and was granted by the Norman Conqueror to the Bishop of Thetford, of whom it was held by Roger de Lyons, whose descendants assumed the name of Mealton, and sometimes signed themselves De Constable, from the office which they held under the bishop. The mansion, which has long been the seat of the Astleys, was erected or rebuilt by Sir Jacob Astley, in 1680; but has since undergone many additions and alterations. It is a noble square building of brick and stone, with four fronts; and the chapel, grand staircase, and many of the apartments, ceilings, &c., are highly finished. The paintings are numerous and valuable. The park, four miles in circuit, is well-stocked with deer, and has been greatly improved during the present century, by plantations and other embellishments. An aviary (in which is a fine collection of birds), the porters' lodges, and a tower called Belle-Vue, are seen to great advantage in various directions; and the latter contains several elegantly-furnished apartments, commanding an extensive prospect of the adjacent country and the ocean, though distant more than ten miles from the coast. The Church (St. Peter) stands half a mile from the house, and comprises nave, chancel, south porch, chapel, and low square tower between the nave and chancel, containing one bell. The south chapel, with the vault beneath it, was built by Sir Jacob Astley in 1681. The east window is filled with beautiful stained glass, representing the Crucifixion, inserted by Lord Hastings, to the memory of his father, who died in 1859. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6, is now worth £242, with that of Burgh Parva annexed, having been augmented in 1722-3, with £200 given by Sir Jacob Astley, and £200 of Q.A.B., invested in land at Briston. It is in the patronage of Lord Hastings, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Norris, B.A., who has here 35 acres of glebe, and is also vicar of Briston, where he resides. A small House of Industry was erected here many years ago, under Gilbert's Act, for the parishes of Melton Constable and Brinton, which are still incorporated and unconnected with any union; but it is now occupied by labourers, as there are seldom any poor chargeable to these parishes. The Astleys derived their name from a manor in Warwickshire. Thomas Lord Astley, who married the sister and co-heiress of Sir Robert Constable, was the great ancestor of this family, and was killed at the battle of Evesham, in the 49th of Henry III. Sir Jacob Astley, who died in 1651, was created Baron Astley of Reading, by Charles I., and was one of the first and last in the service of that monarch; but was totally defeated, with the remnant of the royal army, at Stowe, in 1645. This peerage became extinct on the death of the third Lord Astley, in 1688; but the baronetcy, created in 1660, still remains. Sir Jacob Henry Astley, the late baronet, who died in 1817, was many years M.P. for Norfolk; and his son, the late Lord Hastings, was for some years one of the representatives of the Western Division of the county; but in 1841 he succeeded to the ancient Barony of Hastings, which was created by writ in 1290, and was claimed and held by the first Marquis of Hastings, from 1809 till his death in 1826. His grandmother was eldest sister of the last Lord Delaval, whose valuable estate of Seaton-Delaval, Northumberland, passed to him in 1818. He died in 1859, and was succeeded by his eldest son, the Right Hon. Jacob Henry Delaval Astley, the present and 8th Lord Hastings, who was born in 1822. His brother, the Hon. and Rev. Delaval Loftus Astley, vicar of East Barsham, was born in 1825, and is the heir presumptive. Mr. Josiah Sherringham is the only farmer in the parish; and Thomas Morgan is huntsman; Thomas Tomlinson, gardener; and William Wright, gamekeeper. Post from Thetford.

MORSTON, on an acclivity overlooking the salt marshes, is about a mile from the sea beach, 6 miles E. of Wells, and 7 miles N.W. by W. of Holt. Its parish has 153 inhabitants, and 2110 acres of land, exclusive of a tract of 1715 acres of low marshes overflowed at spring tides, and intersected by the Blakeney harbour. The Marquis of Townshend is owner of most of the soil, lord of the manor, and patron of the living; but Mr. George and Mrs. Elizabeth Woods have estates here. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £18, is consolidated with that of Stiffkey. (See p. 1026). The Church (All Saints) comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, north and south porches, chancel, and embattled tower with one bell; and is much in need of restoration. The font bears the evangelistic symbols; and the lower part of the chancel screen remains, but the figures once painted on it are now nearly obliterated. The poor have half an acre of land, allotted at the enclosure in 1799, and the following yearly doles, viz., 20s., left by John Ringer in 1608; 26s., left by Christopher Ringer in 1678; and 40s., left by William Buck. A chief boatman and six men are stationed here as a coastguard. The principal residents are—Jas. Hurn, shopkeeper and victualler, Anchor; Nicholas Robins, victualler, Townshend's Arms; Wm. Kemp, chief boatman; John Park, parish clerk; and George Wood (Hall), Wm. George Wood (Lower farm), and Robert and John Cole, farmers. Post from Thetford, via Blakeney.

SALTHOUSE, a scattered village, on an acclivity above the salt marshes, half a mile from the beach, and 4 miles N. of Holt, has in its parish 268 inhabitants and 1614 acres of land, about 55 acres of which were a tract of swampy marshes frequented by wild fowl, till 1851, when it was drained, embanked, and converted into grazing land; but some of the embankments were swept away by the sea about two years ago, and have not since been replaced. The parish belongs mostly to Mrs. Ann Girdlestone, lady of the manor and patroness of the living, and to Messrs. Wm. Purdy and Wm. Johnson. The Church (St. Nicholas) is a fine structure, built by Sir Henry Heydon in the reign of Henry VII., and comprising nave with aisles and clerestory, north and south porches, chancel, and square tower with one bell. The font bears the evangelistic symbols, and in the chancel are sedilia and a piscina. There is another piscina in the south aisle. Some of the old open seats, with poppies, still remain. The discharged rectory is consolidated with Kelling (see p. 1049); and the rector has here 1½ acre of glebe, and a yearly tithe rent-charge of £220. At the enclosure in 1781, the poor received three allotments, comprising 349A. 3R. 6P. for fuel and pasturage. One of these, containing 121A. 3R. 35P., was part of Kelling Common. Here is a small School, attended by about 40 children, and supported by subscription. The chief residents are—Miss Eliz. Purdy; Mr. James Massingham; Wm. Johnson and Wm. Purdy, farmers; Jas. Fitt, shoemaker; Jno. Payne and Robert Matthews, blacksmiths; Martha Hancock, baker; Jno. Jarvis, corn miller; Wm. Lynn, bricklayer; John Moy, plumber; Wm. and Robt. Spence, wheelwrights; Peter Williams, joiner and victualler, Dun Cow; and Henry Lewis (schoolmaster) and Wm. Dew, grocers. Post from Holt.

SAXLINGHAM, on an eminence, 3 miles W. of Holt, has in its parish 156 inhabitants, and 1498 acres of land, belonging to the Rev. Sir Edward Repps Jodrell, Bart., lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £12. 17s. 3½d., and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Marsham, M.A., who has 20 acres of glebe, a good residence, and a yearly rent-charge of £426, awarded in 1845, in lieu of tithes. The Church (St. Margaret) comprises nave, north and south transepts, south porch, and square tower with one bell. Of the fine monument in memory of the wife of Sir Chpr. Heydon, nothing now remains but a small effigy of the lady in a niche over the arch of the north transept. The National School, erected by the late Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart., about nine years ago, is attended by 20 children. The poor have 16s. a year, left by Christopher Ringer, in 1679. The chief residents are—The Rector; Sarah Loads, schoolmistress; Hy. Parnell, shopkeeper; and John Cubitt, John Hammond (and veterinary surgeon), John Howes, — Furness, John Wm. Leeman, and John Sands, farmers. Post from Holt.

SHARRINGTON, 3 miles W.S.W. of Holt, has in its parish 257 inhabitants, and 863 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Rev. Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart., the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £10, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. James Radclyffe Dalling, M.A., who has 1½ acre of glebe, a good residence built in 1863, and a yearly rent-charge of £300, awarded in 1842, in lieu of tithes. The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, vestry, and square tower with one bell. The sedilia, piscina, and two brasses still remain in the chancel. The altar cloth of purple velvet, and the font of Caen stone, were given by the late Rev. Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart., who also built a good schoolroom in 1858, and left £100 to the poor. At the junction of three roads in this parish are the remains of an ancient cross. The common was enclosed in 1796. To £40 left by Chpr. Ringer and Mrs. Daubney, £15 were added by Wm. Arnold and Chpr. West; and with the interest, blankets are purchased for the poor. The chief residents are—The Rector; Robt. Carmer, shopkeeper; John Clarke, machine owner; William Abraham, shoemaker; John Goyle, vict., Swan Inn; Benj. Russell, harness maker and vict., Hastings' Arms; Wm. Turner, carpenter; Geo. Herring, schoolmaster; and Wm. Arnold, William Bangor, Thos. Woods (and wheelwright), Jonathan Moy, and Henry Mas-ingham, farmers. Post from Holt.

STODY, in a narrow dale, 3 miles S. by W. of Holt, has in its parish 160 inhabitants, and 1227 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Marquis of Lothian, the lord of the manor and patron of the rectory, which was valued in K.B. at £6. 13s. 4d., and is now worth £389 a year, with that of Hun-worth annexed. (See page 1049). The Church (St. Mary) comprises nave, chancel, transepts, south porch, and embattled round tower with one bell. Some of the windows contain fragments of ancient stained glass. The glebe is 32 acres, and the tithes of Stody were commuted in 1840 for £254. 5s. per annum. The common was enclosed in 1807, when 1A. 2R. were allotted for the use of the highways. The chief residents are—Robert Williams, gardener; Mrs. Eliz. Robins; Robert Ives, vict., King's Arms; John Guymer, vict., Horse Shoes; John Cushing, shopkeeper; Jacob Graveling, wheelwright; Robt. Fairburn, forester; and the following farmers:—John Emery (owner), Thos. Smith, jun., Hall Farm, Wm. Kendle (and spirit merchant and auctioneer), and John Stimpson. Post from Thetford, via Briningham.

SWANTON-NOVERS, a scattered village, 6 miles S.W. by S. of Holt, has in its parish 315 inhabitants, and 1315 acres of land, mostly belonging to Charles Atkinson, Esq.; but Lord Hastings is lord of the manor, as lessee of Christ's College, Oxford, to which the Hall farm belongs. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £4. 15s. 2d., is consolidated with that of Wood Norton. (See page 708). The Church (St. Edmund) stands on a commanding eminence, from which Norwich Cathedral may be seen; and comprises nave, chancel, north porch, and square tower with one bell. It contains a number of old open seats, an octagonal font bearing the evangelistic symbols, a small west gallery, and a mural tablet to the memory of John Dew, Esq. The glebe is 34A., and the tithes have been commuted for £230 a year. In the parish is a stratum of clay, of which bricks and coarse earthenware are made. The common was enclosed in 1811. Here is a School supported by subscription, and also a small Methodist Chapel. Post from Thetford.

THORNAGE, a pleasant village, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. of Holt, has in its parish 358 inhabitants, and 1266 acres of land, mostly belonging to Lord Hastings, who is lord of the manor and patron of the living; but Messrs John Groom and James Cooke have estates here. The Church comprises nave, chancel, north porch and square tower with one bell; and contains a piscina. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6. 18. 4d., and now worth £508 a year, with that of Brinton annexed, is in the incumbency of the Rev. Charles John Brereton, who has here 35A. 1r. 1p. of glebe, and a good residence. The tithes of Thornage were commuted in 1839 for £248. 10s. per annum. The communion plate is very ancient, and the cup is inscribed, "was the gyfte of John Butts (or Butes,) and Margaret, his wife—1456." His family were long possessed of the manor; and one of them Henry Butts, D.D., was vice-chancellor of Oxford University in 1629, but was found, soon afterwards, "hanging in his garters in his own chamber." He was son of Sir Wm. Butts, physician in ordinary to Henry VIII. About three-quarters of a mile N.E. of the village is a large water mill and a pleasant residence occupied by Mr. Robins Cooke; and in the parish is an extensive foundry, where machines are made by Mr. Alfred Abram. A piece of land, called the Bell Acre, was left about 300 years ago by an unknown donor, who, tradition reports, had lost his way during a snow storm, but recovered it through the ringing of the bell. It now lets for £1 a year, which is given towards the purchase of bell ropes. Post from Thetford, via Briningham.

WEYBOURNE, or Waborne, 4 miles N.E. of Holt, is a small village picturesquely seated on the sea coast, and sheltered on the other sides by a semicircular range of hills. Its parish has 285 inhabitants, and 1600 acres of land, mostly belonging to the Earl of Orford, the lord of the manor and patron of the living; and partly to Wm. J. J. Bolding, Esq., and Mr. Wm. Bird. Here are seven small fishing boats, a fish curing house, and a large brewery. The latter is occupied by Mr. Bolding, who in 1857 discovered a Romano-British potter's kiln in a chalk pit near the eastern boundary of the parish. On the high ground above the village are traces of an ancient road leading to Salthouse heath, and clusters of singular pits or bowl-shaped hollows, varying from 8 to 20 feet in diameter, and containing heaps of stones with which their sides appear to have once been lined. (See p. 39.) The Church (All Saints) comprises nave, chancel, south porch and square embattled tower. The latter contains one bell, and is said to be of Saxon workmanship. The sedilia and piscina still remain, and at the east end of the church, which was formerly much larger, are some of the remains of a priory which was founded here in the reign of Henry II. for Augustine canons, and granted at the dissolution to Richard Heyden. The benefice is a donative, in the incumbency of the Rev. Lethbridge Moore, M.A., of Sheringham, and valued at £50 a year. The parish is exempt from episcopal jurisdiction; and the tithes were commuted, in 1839, for £300 per annum. The submarine telegraph enters the water in this parish; and near the beach is a coast guard station.

WIVETON, or Wiverton, on the west side of the river Glaven, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. by N. of Holt, has in its parish 232 inhabitants and 1042 acres of land, extending northward to the shore between Blakeney and Cley. Major Jodrell is lord of the manor; but the greater part of the soil belongs to Lord Calthorpe and Messrs. Wm. Buck, Geo. Hudson, W. J. J. Bolding, and Wm. Johnson. The Church (Virgin Mary) comprises nave with aisles and clerestory, north and south porches, chancel, and square embattled tower. The latter is surmounted by pinnacles, and contains six bells purchased in 1809. The sedilia and piscina still remain. In 1849, the church was furnished with new open seats and pulpit of oak, and the building was thoroughly restored in 1864, at a cost of £700. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15, is in the patronage of B. B. Cabbell, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Anthony Thomas Hudson, M.A., who is non-resident; and the Rectory House is occupied by the curate. The tithes have been commuted for £221 a year, and here are 30 acres of glebe. The Rev. James Hackman, "the English Werter," whose extraordinary murder of the beautiful Miss Ray is detailed in a work entitled "Love and Madness," was inducted to this living in 1779. Ralph Greenaway, in 1558, left 200 marks to be invested in land, &c. for the relief of the poor and the repairs of the church. This benefaction was laid out in 1560, in the purchase of the impropriate rectory and parsonage of Briston, and the advowson of the vicarage. The advowson was sold in 1796 for £850, with which the trustees purchased £114l. 11s. 5d. three per cent. consols. The rectorial tithes of Briston have been commuted for £444 per annum, subject to the repairs of the chancel at Briston, parish rates, and other incidental expenses. The clear income of the charity is upwards of £450 per annum. Pursuant to a decree in Chancery, not more than one-sixth is to be applied to the use of Wiveton church, and the remainder in distributions of money, clothing, and bread, among the poor. The parish was enclosed and drained under acts passed in 1820 and '21. The chief residents are—The Rev. Everatt Bishop, B.A., curate, Rectory; Wm. Lee, blacksmith; Robert Jeary, parish clerk; Wm. Wegg, victualler, Bell; Henry Cooper, gentleman; Richd. Coe, shopkeeper; Stepn. Grimes, gardener; Thos. Girdlestone, herbalist; and Wm. Buck (Hall), John Bunn, John Hammond, Benj. Nash, and Jas. Ratcliffe, farmers. Post from Cley.
